"To Melt Hearts of Stone"

The Rev. H. L. Hellyer, of the Hebrew Christian Alliance, and Mr. O. R. Palmer, Home Director of the Africa Inland Mission, are in Ukraine, Russia, investigating conditions and distributing material relief in the famine and pestilence-stricken regions, the authorities placing facilities at their disposal.

There are six millions of people there in a state of starvation, many of whom must die before the winter is ended unless outside aid is given. They are Jews and Gentiles, including a large Christian community.

The brethren above-named write that the "conditions are enough to melt hearts of stone. We believe the gates opened to us will remain open for supplies to come in, and we plead for the cooperation and help of our brethren at home to make these things known."

We have confidence in Messrs. Hellyer and Palmer, and gladly publish this information. Send your contribution to Moody Bible Institute Monthly and we will place it where it will be converted into needed supplies of food and medicine.

In any event, read James 2:15,16, and 1 John 3:17.

You Should Honor These Christian Scholars Sunday, October 1st

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

IN a small room in the Bible House in New York, on October 4, 1872, there met a group of earnest Christian scholars called together for the purpose of giving the Christian world a modern, accurate, authentic translation of the Bible. Not that the most generally used and accepted version, that translated under the authority of King James, had outlived its usefulness—far from it—but that important discoveries had been made; that reverent, scientific, self-sacrificing research had shed much added light and had cleared up many uncertainties of language used in former versions.

Thirty-two of America's Foremost Biblical Scholars

These men, thirty-two in all, known as the American Committee of Revision, headed by the late Philip Schaff, D. D., LL. D., as President, approached their task with the peculiar enthusiasm of those whose only reward lies in the joy of a great achievement. They were peculiarly fortunate in having at their command for translation, for the first time, three sacred manuscripts of comparatively recent discovery—the Sinaitic, the Alexandrian, and the Vatican.

It has been left to time itself, perhaps, to give recognition to the work of this little band of American Scholars, but this recognition, found in the truly remarkable acceptance of the Holy Scriptures authorized under the name of the American Committee of Revision, has come at the hour when those who did the work are no longer with us.

Honor Yourselves by Honoring them

Thus it is that we, in this later generation have the privilege of commemorating in a fitting way, the splendid work of these men—American scholars, every one. The American Standard Bible is their monument. Shall we not therefore do honor to the memory of the men who have given us a translation of Holy Scripture which is in use by practically every periodical devoted to Bible study, in every College, University, Seminary, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., in an ever-increasing number of Pulpits?

No translation of the Bible has ever approached the American Standard in accuracy, clarity of language, beauty of diction, authenticity, rapidity of acceptance by the clergy, by scholars, institutions of learning and by Christians generally. In honoring the men who gave us this priceless Book of Books, we honor the Book itself and we do honor to ourselves.

Every Sunday School and Church should participate

The date of the nation-wide celebration is Wednesday, October 4, and for that event there has been prepared a program of historical interest and of inspiration. Every Sunday School and Church should set apart either that evening or a part of the Sunday service on October 1. Copies of this specially prepared program may be had on application to

EDITORIAL NOTES

"To be spiritual minded is life and peace."—Romans 8:6.

This is one of the Scripture phrases often quoted and often misapplied. To say that a person is "spiritually minded" is thought to be the "end of all controversy," but everything depends upon "what manner of spirit ye are of," for "many false spirits are gone out into the world."

Cut From The Loaf

To say that one is "spiritually minded" is not synonymous with saying that he is a devoted and intelligent Christian, or indeed, that he is a Christian at all. A worshiper of Buddha may be spiritually minded, and the same is true of a follower of Bahaism. Many Spiritists and Christian Scientists are spiritually minded, but none of these are people whom the inspired apostle has in mind. The context shows that he is thinking of those only in whom dwells "the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," the Holy Spirit by whom they have been regenerated and set apart to God forever. Such as these have life, eternal life, which is the gift of God, and they have peace because they are at peace with God. Moreover, in the measure in which they realize this fact do they come to enjoy the peace of God.

Spiritism is a new revelation according to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, hence it is in order to ask how the revelation came?

Conan Doyle's New Revelation

Through automatic writing, he tells us, where the hand of the human medium was controlled by an alleged dead human being, or through trance utterances or table-tilting.

We are not disposed to sneer at these things. Communications to men from an unseen world must come some way, and why not this way?

But has Conan Doyle compared the way in which this new revelation has come to him with the way in which the old revelation came to Moses, or Isaiah, or Paul, or any of the prophets of the Old and New Testaments? Is there no worth-while distinction between the things he reports and the awful sublimity of Mt. Sinai, the tongues of fire on the day of Pentecost, or the appearance of Jesus Christ to Saul on the Damascus road? If sources and origins have weight, can the new revelation at all compare with the old?

But he admits that if one comes to you with an account of life in some other world and has no credentials save his own assertion, it amounts to nothing.

What, then, are the credentials of Spiritism? Julia Ames told Mr. Stead things in her own earthly life of which he could not have cognizance. Raymond, the deceased son of Sir Oliver Lodge, tells of a photo, no copy of which had reached England at the time, but which afterward proved exactly as he described it. Arthur Hill received messages from folks of whom he never heard, and which he afterwards verified.

Very good. But Moses foretold the Babylonian captivity of the Jews 900 years before it came to pass. Ezekiel predicted that haughty Tyre should cease to be the throne of the waters, and become, as she afterwards did become, a bare rock on which the fishers spread their nets. Three hundred and thirty-three predictions, some of them uttered hundreds of years in advance, and some of them most contradictory in terms, found the minutest fulfilment in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ. If it comes to proofs as well as origins, which revelation has the advantage?

And these are serious questions, for Conan Doyle is not in America on a scientific raid, but a religious raid. He frankly says that. He is dealing with the continued life of the soul, the nature of that life, and how it is influenced by conduct at the present time. Men cannot afford to be led astray here.

Conan Doyle says that "the early church was saturated with Spiritism." But Sir William Ramsay in his great work, The Bearing of Recent Discovery on the Trustworthiness of the New Testament, takes direct issue with him by saying that "there was no class of opponents with whom the earliest Christians were brought into collision more frequently and whose antagonism was so obstinate and determined as Spiritists." He calls them magicians, and adds, "in such phenomena as those of Spiritism lay the power of such magicians." He had in mind such cases as those of Simon Magus at Samaria (Acts 8), Elymas, the sorcerer, at Paphos (Acts 13), the young woman possessed with the spirit of divination at Philippi (Acts 16), and the Diana worshipers at Ephesus (Acts 19).

Christianity and Spiritism

In the case of the young woman at Philippi, the inspired historian writes that the Apostle Paul was "sore troubled" with this perplexing masterpiece of the enemy, for she was masquerading as a witness for the salvation which he preached.

Paul saw that she was really possessed of a demon, and he charged the evil spirit in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her, and out of her he came. The damsel's owners thus lost their means of gain, and they raised a riot against Paul and caused him to be placed in jail (Acts 16).

Thus instead of the early church being "saturated with Spiritism," the truth is that paganism was saturated with it and the early church was combatting it at every point. There were but few cities in the Greek and Roman world that did not possess magicians, soothsayers, mediums and their ilk, who catered to a large part of ordinary society. The more thoughtful of the people believed them to be disreputable and evil, and warned young people against them, but this only proves their belief in the power they could exert.

There were opponents of Christianity in that day who were doing just what Conan Doyle is doing to-day, confounding the doings and the beliefs of Spiritism with Christ and His work and teachings. But there was this difference between the opponents in that day and their present successors. In that day they sought to dishonor the marvels of Christ and His disciples by reducing them to the level of their own unlawful arts; but in this day they are seeking to elevate their unlawful arts by putting them on the plane of Christ's holy religion.

The May issue of The Chosen People, a publication of the Williamsburg Mission to the Jews, said some very serious things about the spiritual declension of this great organization once so wondrously used of God in saving men's souls. It appears to have formed a New York committee to help raise a half million dollars for its work, on which committee are "at least five Jews who are unbelievers, besides several Catholics." One of these Jews presided at an anti-prohibition meeting, whereupon the head of the army demanded his removal from the committee, showing, according to the editor of The Chosen People, that in the estimation of the Army to deny our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ is an offense less heinous than to be on the other side of a political and social question of that character.

There is usually moral and spiritual danger to Christian organizations in becoming too big; in trying to do too many things, and to cover too much ground. The Y. M. C. A. began to weaken its testimony for Christ and to lose its evangelistic power at the point where it needed the money of worldly people, both Jews and Gentiles, to erect great buildings and operate great social enterprises. The Interchurch World Movement split on that rock, and for some years we think we have seen the Salvation Army headed in the same direction.

We are not surprised to have Miss Booth quoted in the New York Times as saying that the world is growing better, and that the army desires this half million to assist in its reconstruction. Such folly of utterance appeals to the world and gets the dollars, but what shall it profit the Salvation Army if it gains the whole world and loses its own soul?

A Curious Paradox

The North American (Philadelphia) recently contained an interesting and informing editorial on "A Cleavage in the Churches," as it termed it, covering the present doctrinal conflict between Evangelicalism on the one hand and Modernism on the other, in which it referred to "a curious paradox" which had developed, namely, that the Evangelicals or Fundamentalists, as they are sometimes called, are now regarded by many as the heretics while the Modernists or Rationalists who are the real heretics are coming to be regarded as the orthodox! Whether the attitude is acknowledged or not, the editorial goes on to say, "belief in the miraculous or supernatural aspect of Christianity is widely deemed a form of heresy, or at best, of sincere delusion."

We mention the matter not to deny it, for we believe it is coming to be a current opinion, and it is one for which we have been forewarned by the wise and discerning among God's saints. It is part of the deep laid scheme of the prince of darkness whose representative before long will be found seated in the temple of God giving out that he himself is God.

The powers of darkness are not having everything their own way, it is encouraging to know. The Berean Band is a movement to stimulate Christians everywhere, and of all ages, to learn one verse of the Bible each week. It originated in England, but its American representative is the Moody Bible Institute. One year ago the total number of men, women and children enrolled in the American section was 4,735, but to-day it has reached 13,534. Help push the good work along. It costs almost nothing. Write the Moody Bible Institute for particulars addressing a postal card to 153 Institute Place, Chicago. Write in the corner "Berean Band." Do it now.

The Lord Is Marching On

Rev. S. B. Rohold, writing recently from his watch tower on Mt. Carmel in the land of Palestine, has some hopeful and encouraging incidents to report amid much that is sad and disquieting indeed. He speaks of a young Jewess, who, when upbraided for her admiration of Jesus, said without fear: "I love Jesus more than all the Rabbis put together."

Hopeful Signs in Jewry

Once, in conversation with some young men, Mr. Rohold pointed out to them the terrible suffering they would have to go through, when one of them replied, "Now what better thing can we do than to die in the land where Jesus died?" This was spoken in the presence of a large crowd and there was no protest.

"If we consider the attitude of the Jews in other parts of the world," adds Mr. Rohold, "and their fearless expressions and open reading of the New Testament, we believe that a wonderful advance has been made in Jewish evangelization, and that the Spirit of God is undoubtedly working among the dry bones of the house of Israel. There is a most wonderful and unprecedented spirit of inquiry, especially among the thinking class of those who are forming the 'Returning Remnant.' We are coming into contact with them daily, and the readiness and wholeheartedness with which they enter into discussing the claims of our Messiah is amazing."

Between capital on the one hand and labor on the other, this country is being pushed into the government control of the railroads and the mines with scarcely a word of protest from people who a decade ago would have been aroused to the boiling point over such a likelihood. This is Socialism whether we like it or not, and there is no help for it. No help, because the gospel of Christ, than which no other remedy exists for the selfishness and lawlessness of men, is ignored by our leaders. Nor will government control halt at the railroads and the mines, but other public utilities will be put under its direction until by and by the government itself may need governing. Will a superman then appear to take hold of things, and shall he be one whom the god of this age has in readiness for the emergency? Oh, that men would repent before it is too late!

Government Control

We wonder how many of our subscribers read the inflammatory appeal which he addressed to the industrial unions last July from a Chicago sanitarium where he was "recuperating." This was the man that a compassionate government released from the penitentiary a few months previously on the ground that he was aging rapidly and afflicted with a serious complaint. He is sowing the seed of unrest and hate among the industrial workers of this country in preparation for a crop of violence and robbery unprecedented in our brief annals. Those in authority seem unable, or, it may be they are afraid, to prohibit his propaganda, but the children of this generation will pay dearly for the pusillanimity of their fathers.

Eugene V. Debs

We are grateful to a friend who called our attention to a "break" we made in our April issue in referring to the growing use of the words "the Christ" instead of simply "Christ." We said that the definite article was not used in the epistles except in certain instances which we named, but we omitted to explain that we were thinking of the English version only and not the original Greek. Doubtless most of those of our readers who are familiar with the Greek understood it in this way because of what we said about its use in the Gospels, but that does not excuse the omission, especially when we added that the use of the definite article is not Pauline.

A Correction

We are the more sorry that it occurred because some of the enemies of the truth may have supposed it was intentional and in order to find an argument for what followed, whereas all that followed stands on its own foundation just the same.

Modernism speaks of "the Christ" just as Bahaism does, and Christian Science and other semi-pagan cults where an "ideal" is in mind rather than the God-man who "died for our sins and rose again for our justification," and we have come to be suspicious of it.

It is in connection with that picture on page 1135 of our August issue entitled, "The Boston Commons." First, there is no such place. Bostonians are very careful to have it known as Boston "Common." Secondly, it was a picture of the Public Garden of Boston, and not the "Common" at all.

Caught Napping

Some of us who lived in Boston for years and reverence every nook and corner of it feel humiliated, but there is no use in crying over spilt milk.

Another Ninety-two

Editorial

THIS time last year editorial comment was going the rounds of the liberal religious press as to the effect of education upon efficiency. A very practical demonstration was said to have been obtained by an investigating committee which had discovered that the ministerial graduates of a certain rationalistic university were strongly evangelistic. Ninety-two ministers had been investigated who had received 11,000 people into their churches on confession of faith in five years, and those churches during the same period had averaged $2,000 a year for the various denominational benevolences.

On the other hand men from "a popular, short-course institution" were investigated who had averaged only five such admissions through five years, and raised only $200 a year on the average for benevolences. The committee resolved "never again to look to short-course men for the building up of strong spiritual churches with the missionary outlook."

These observations naturally interested us and we raised some inquiries about them.

For example, was the same number of men investigated in each case, ninety-two short-course men as well as ninety-two long-course?

Were the long-course men located in large cities with large opportunities for evangelism, and the others possibly in rural districts or on the frontiers?

What was the average size of their congregations in each case, did the one preach to hundreds and the other only to scores?

Did the long-course men have wealth in their congregations while the others preached to the comparatively poor?

Obviously such data were important in forming a correct judgment.

Receiving no replies to our inquiries we instituted an investigation ourselves covering the output of three or four Bible institutes whose graduates had been as long as five years in the ministry.

Limiting the questionnaire to ninety-two men selected almost at random, we found that instead of only five additions a year on conversion, they averaged twenty-three, and instead of only $200 a year for denominational benevolences they averaged $1,226, not so discouraging a result.

But as we said at the time, it is not a question as to whether a highly-trained ministry is preferred, the cause in which we are engaged is worthy of the best, but it is rather a question as to what is the best. We have just listened to a series of lectures on Christian philosophy by a man highly trained for the purpose, and who based all that he said on the writings of the fisherman Peter, a master philosopher whose faith did not stand in the wisdom of men.

There was one long-course man in the apostolic leadership, possibly two if we include Luke, or shall we say three, and add Apollos? But as our Lord neglected the wisdom of the schools in his own preparation, so he omitted it, as Dr. Christopher Hazard reminded us recently, from the curriculum of His twelve disciples, and yet they did a good piece of work.

We value a well-trained ministry, and not infrequently we counsel graduates of a Bible institute who missed their college course to try to get it before entering on their life work. We take pains to aid them in finding a college where their faith in Christ shall not be shaken by man's philosophy and empty deceit.

We have taken the same attitude toward the theological seminary. Many graduates of a Bible institute, following our advice, have taken a seminary course, and seminaries of different denominations in this country are pleased to witness that their entering classes have been materially increased as a result.

No, the question is not training, but the kind of training. The church needed Paul as well as Peter, but whether it was Paul or Peter, he must be a regenerated man, knowing the God of the Bible and filled with the Holy Ghost. Give us such men and we will stand by them whatever training they have had. And if they be pastors, whether long-course or short-course, they will build up "strong spiritual churches with a missionary outlook."

In the Dawn of a New Revival

By Rev. Joseph W. Kemp, Auckland, N. Z.

THE news of revival amongst the fisher folk of Lowestoff in England, and of the north of Scotland, has created throughout the Christian church a wistful expectancy of a widespread spiritual quickening. Already many centers have been strangely stirred and the movements in England, Scotland and many parts of Ireland, would make it appear that we are at the dawn of a new awakening. God grant that it may be so! We are "as they who watch for the morning." For years the coming revival has been discussed, but discussion has not brought it. There is a divine sovereignty in revivals and men may decree their character, form and purpose, but "the wind bloweth where it listeth," and the glorious gale is under no man's control.

While we have been debating, the masses have been drifting, and there is a growing conviction that the most urgent need of the hour is a God-given revival, in order that the drift may not be more aggravated.

The conviction is shared by statesmen. Lloyd George, said a little while ago to a small group of Free Church ministers: "It is necessary for the churches to stimulate the spiritual revival that is needed in order to improve the material conditions of the people."

Slowly, but surely, men are being driven to the conclusion that there is no hope in human resources. The sufficiency is of God.

A recognition of our need is the first step to betterment. Our teachers were telling us during the War, of the golden day that was sure to break once peace was restored, but instead, we find ourselves amid a veritable welter of evil. Our young people are almost delirious from pleasure and sport, with a corresponding weakening of the restraints of home and parental control. The picture houses are amongst the most popular resorts, while the house of the Lord is forsaken. Sin in its multifarious forms has flung its alluring mantle around the masses and the classes alike. People are finding it much easier to sin than formerly, for certain recognized moral barriers have been broken down and ethical standards lowered. The churches have for long been impotent, for they have been captured by materialism and mammon, and learning and wealth have been substituted for testimony and prayer.

It is as the Rev. Samuel Chadwick, put it: "Rationalism has ousted the supernatural. Every human device has been tried to accommodate religion to the level of the natural man. The church has been socialized, humanized, organized, popularized, vulgarized, to make it acceptable to the people. The result is one of humiliating failure. Demons chuckle and the world smiles." Satan will not cast out Satan.

Back to Pentecostal Methods

What is the remedy? It surely lies in a quickened spiritual life. Let us get back to Pentecostal methods, and we shall get Pentecostal results. So long as we have confidence in the flesh, we do not seek the power of the Spirit. Notwithstanding all our ingenious methods and complicated machinery, we are discovering the point where it is plain "with men this is impossible." We have gone a long way on the road when we are aware of our need. We welcome the discovery—a discovery which, thank God, is becoming general.

The church needs the baptism of fire. Dr. James Hope Moulton, said at one time, "Though religion in all our churches is manifestly at a temperature incomparably higher than in those dark days two hundred years ago, before Wesley came, it is also manifest that it is by no means at boiling point. And for purposes for which Christ ordained Christianity, nothing short of the boiling point will serve." Cold water drives no shafts and turns no pistons. The temperature must rise in the heart of every believer, and this can only come by the gracious working of the Spirit of God.

Too much of our religion is without fire—a morality without enthusiasm or soul. The fire is identified with the person of the Holy Ghost. He is the Spirit of fire, and we cannot be in communion with Him and remain cold or lukewarm. A revived church will be on fire. The members will have a burning passion for the souls of men, like Knox, who prayed in his garden at night fall, "O God, give me Scotland or I die."

"Oh, for a passionate passion for souls!
Oh, for a pity that yearns!
Oh, for a love that loves unto death!
Oh, for a fire that burns!
Oh, for a prayer power that prevails!
That pours itself out for the lost;
Victorious prayer in the conqueror's name;
Oh, for a Pentecost!"

To have our souls charged with the Spirit of God, will mean that we shall have a consuming zeal for the salvation of the lost. It is in evidence just now among the fisher-folk of Frazerburgh, Wick, Peterhead, Findochty and Eyemouth. The engineers and miners of Gateshead and Newcastle have caught it; the staid, equable, moral-living citizens of Norwich are possessed by it. In Scotland, England, Ireland, France and Holland, whole communities have been gripped by this "passion for souls," for a new revival has brought into its embrace whole communities touched by the fire of God.

Such a revival means a passionate earnestness in prayer. When touched by the Spirit of God, our prayers ascend like the smoke from the burning incense.

"I Feel It's Coming, Sir"

In a little village in England there was an old man who attended a chapel whose membership had dwindled to seven persons, all old folk. Sin held high carnival; his own son, a family man was amongst the unsaved. It was a bitter thought for the old man to take with him into the other world. So he prayed and prayed and prayed. What was to be done? Who will attack the Devil's stronghold? An evangelist of the old-fashioned type, well armed with gospel shot, was sent to the village, and the citadel of evil was shaken, and his son was among the saved.

In conversation with the evangelist, the old man said ,"I feel sure it's coming, sir. God told me so this morning at one o'clock, when I was praying by my bedside. I have spent the night in prayer. I couldn't help it, for I feel if there is not a revival soon my heart will break."

A revival works a wholesome cleansing in the soul. The plague of iniquity in the soul must be burned out by the fire of the Spirit. Like all fire, the fire of the Spirit has its destructive energy, and if a man cleaves to his evil, contact with it is destruction.

The revival is cleansing. Erstwhile blasphemers are now singing the praises of God, professing Christians held in the grip of paralyzing habits have been set free, and like the three Hebrew youths who were cast into the midst of the fiery furnace, now walk at liberty. Thus does the new revival move on, purifying, refining, consuming, inspiring, kindling, transforming. Though the signs indicated may not be very pronounced in some places, the promise of the morning is sure. The dawn is struggling with dense darkness, but the night is far spent and truly it is high time to awake out of sleep.

Spiritual Pacifism—Its Folly and Peril

A Sermon by Rev. Joseph Taylor Britan, D. D., Columbus, O.

TEXT: Jude 3:—"Beloved, while I was giving all diligence to write unto you of our common salvation, I was constrained to write unto you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints."

From the very first the Christian faith made its way against vigorous opponents. From the first Christians were forced to defend the gospel and to meet argument with argument and theory with fact.

Christ and His disciples were often found arguing for the faith and for the truth of His Messiahship. Our Lord vigorously defended His person, His mission, and His message against the Pharisees, the Scribes and the Sadducees. There is nothing more sublime, pictured in Scripture, than the courage of Christ as he contended with the unbelieving Jews.

Peter's historic sermon at Pentecost bristled with arguments which the Jews could neither refute nor answer. Peter proved that Christ whom the Jews and Romans crucified was the true Messiah, and so vigorous was his indictment that his opponents who could not answer his arguments, began to persecute the preacher.

Paul reasoned with the Jews in their synagogue. We read that he "entered the synagogue and spake boldly for the space of three months, reasoning and persuading as to the things concerning the kingdom of God," and so vigorous was he that under his preaching, some became "hardened and disobedient, speaking evil of the way before the multitude," so that "he departed from them and separated the disciples, reasoning daily in the school of Tyrannus."

How God Defends His Cause

The early Christians were always ready to "give a reason for the faith which was in them." The apostles exhorted the early Christians to realize that they were "set for the defense of the gospel," and they followed Jude's injunction, "to contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered."

And well it is that they did so, or the gospel in those early days would have perished from the face of the earth. When certain men "crept in privily" to destroy the doctrines of the gospel and of grace, "denying our only Master and Lord, Jesus Christ," then the great apologists and defenders of the faith appeared.

There is an idea abroad today that it is not a gracious, or gentlemanly, or a Christian thing to contend for the faith, to witness earnestly for the Lord Jesus Christ, in the face of His enemies. We are told that truth can take care of itself, that God will defend His cause, but all the history of the past indicates that He has defended His cause by raising up men and women to do the defending. He has never sent angels to do work which men could do, or work which Christ especially and distinctly commissioned the church to do, namely, to witness for Him before all men. We have, therefore, Christ's example and good apostolic authority "for contending earnestly for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints."

The Early "Modernists"

Our Lord declared the gospel would be a divisive factor in human life, dividing families and friends. Again and again in the Acts and the Epistles, Christians are exhorted to separate themselves from those who are hardened and believe not, but speak evil of the way.

All down through the ages since Christ, the church has been compelled to confront and refute false ideas of Christ, of His kingdom, and of the Word of God. In the first century, the Ebionites arose to teach that Christ was the great leader of all men. The Ebionites were the first Unitarians. In the second century the Gnostics arose who admitted the pre-existence of Christ, but denied His deity. In the fourth century the Arians troubled the church, according Christ a high place in the line of great men but refusing to admit His deity. In the sixteenth century the Socinians came forward with the theory that Jesus was born a man but by perfect submission to the will of God He became God. This theory is closely akin to the modern idea of those who teach the "divinity," instead of the deity, of Christ. There are many declaring today that Christ was divine in the sense that the Spirit of God dwelt in Him, and that He had more of divinity in Him than any of the rest of us because He more completely than any one else surrendered His life to God.

Camouflage Tactics

As we study the statements and conclusions of the modern liberal theologians, we are impressed with the fact that while they use Christian terms—words and phrases which the Christian church has ever used to describe its doctrines and faith—yet they use these terms with a very different meaning in mind from that which the true Christian has when using these same terms.

For instance, a recent statement declares, "We desire to emphasize the fact that in our judgment the Christian religion consists primarily in a belief in the fatherhood of God and in the divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the application of the teachings and principles of Christ to everyday life."

To very many this sounds like true Christian doctrine, but were you to ask the writers of these words exactly what they mean you would find that their teaching is as far removed from true Christian doctrine as the East is from the West.

Take, for instance, the radical theologian's teaching of the fatherhood of God. You ask him what he means by the phrase and he will say that "God is the Father of all men alike, all are naturally the children of God, none having any need of the new birth, and consequently no need of the regenerating action of the Holy Spirit." Of course there is a sense in which God is the Father of all men, having created all, but fatherhood in the highest sense includes far more than creation. There is a spiritual relationship implied in fatherhood which is not found in the lives of all men. Jesus said to certain men, "Ye are the children of your father the devil, and the works of your father will ye do." But modern theologians dispute Christ's word concerning the possibility of some men having Satan as their father. The beloved apostle, John, says that "as many as believed him, to them gave he the right to become the sons of God." God becomes a spiritual father to those who have received Christ as God and Saviour.

There is equal confusion and false teaching concerning the divinity of our Lord. Ask some of the modern teachers what they mean by the "divinity" of Christ, and their replies will show that they mean exactly what the unbelievers of old meant,—He was a man in whom dwelt the Spirit of God in large measure. Ask these modern teachers if they mean what the church always has meant when it speaks of the deity of Christ, that he was "very God of very God"; of the same "substance" as the father, pre-existent with God; the Creator, so that "without him was not anything made that has been made"; the Preserver of all things, so that "in him all things consist"; the Sovereign of earth and heaven, so that angels and men are subject to his command, as He intimated when he declared that He "shall send forth His angels and gather out all things that offend." When you ask many of the modern preachers whether this is their idea of Christ they will hedge and dodge and camouflage, and if you press your questions they will finally admit their disbelief in the deity of Christ. These are the men who, as Jude says, "crept in unawares and denied our only Lord God."

"Progressive" Christianity a Farce

A careful study of the teachings of the radical theologians today will prove to any one acquainted with church history, that the modern and progressive ideas in theology, are simply the old heresies against which the church has ever battled and which the church has always rejected. It is difficult to understand why these liberal churchmen should call themselves "progressive" when they occupy exactly the same doctrinal positions which the Jews held concerning Christ when He stood and contended with them in the streets of Jerusalem.

Reasons for Controversy

There are many reasons why the men of the church should contend for the faith "once for all delivered unto the saints."

1. In the first place, "truth is revealed by controversy, and by controversy only," says Dr. W. B. Greene in a recent issue of The Presbyterian. "Truth is purified in the fires of disputation. Truth does not disclose and propagate itself in a world under the dominion of sin and error. It is only by a rational affirmation and defense of truth that it can be revealed and disseminated."

Herein we discover the value of the discussion of the theory of evolution which is now nation-wide. So long as none arose to challenge the theory, so long as none appeared to champion the statements of the Bible which contradict the theory of evolution, its devotees had the floor and the field. But now scientists are being challenged and they will be compelled to give to the world as never before, the reasons for the faith which is in them concerning evolution. The foundation stones on which the theory is built will be laid bare before the discussion is ended and if evolution is a fact instead of a theory, Scripture will be found to harmonize with it, but if evolution is a theory, and a theory only, a theory which tends to atheism and unbelief, then these facts will emerge in the discussion and the race will be benefited.

So it is in the discussion of every religious question—the authorship of the Pentateuch, the inspiration of the Word, the fact of the Fall and the Flood, the Virgin Birth, and the method of salvation. All these subjects are being discussed by ministers and people as never before. Arguments for and against the modern and orthodox views of Scripture, and of salvation, are being set forth by ministers and others. The truth is bound to be revealed in these discussions for the bold statements of unbelief are being challenged by countless defenders of the truth.

There have arisen in the modern world great apologists for the Christian truth, through whom God is speaking His message to this age. And because unbelievers are so bold to propagate their theories no one should have patience with the theological pacifist, but should give all honor to the men who challenge unbelief and who prove the truth of the Christian faith.

2. The Christian should witness and contend for the faith also because of the consequences to the unbeliever himself if the enemies of the gospel are not opposed. If there was no one to arise in the present day in our city and land to contend for the faith, the unbelieving critics of God's Word would become unbearable. They would think of the Christians as cowards and the world at large would be led to believe that there is no such thing as Christian scholarship capable of refuting the false theories of unbelief and defending Christian truth. But when the Christian meets argument with argument, scholarship with scholarship, and shows the reasonableness of the Christian religion, he promotes true faith and piety, and he discredits the unbeliever.

3. But for the sake of a lost world, the Christian church must ever contend for the faith. No matter what unbelievers say, no matter what the higher critics teach, or what sinners may hope, the fact remains that eternal life is a gift from God in response to the faith of the individual in Christ as "very God of very God," and as man's substitute on the Cross. It is easy for the church to be at ease in Zion, to sneer at the rationalist and unbeliever and to say that his arguments are not worth answering, but meanwhile thousands are perishing who might be eternally saved if only the church had the courage to urge the gospel, not only upon the ignorant and the sinful, but upon the staunch opponents of Christ and His gospel, as well.

4. Again the Christian is encouraged to battle for the truth, because of the lawlessness which is abroad in the world today. The matters involved in modern theological battles are not only the truth of God and the souls of man, but the very life of nations as well. It matters greatly today whether people believe that the Bible is a hit or miss compilation of valuable maxims,—a result of "men's search after God," or whether they believe that it is in very truth the very Word of God revealed and delivered unto men from heaven. The world has dethroned many kings and kaisers and the Bible is practically the only remaining external authority outside of man himself; and when the authority of the Bible is destroyed, then every restraining influence outside of and external to man is gone.

Men need the high ideals and the rigid restraining influence of a fully inspired Bible, as the history of modern Germany and Russia proves. Whoever, therefore, is found destroying the foundations of faith, abolishing the Bible as authoritative, dethroning Christ and making the human conscience and human desires the standard and final arbiter of all things, that man is undermining the institutions of civilization.

5. Again, the faith for which Christians are to contend is the faith which was "once for all delivered." It is a faith which came down from heaven, not a faith which came up out of the conscience of the race. It is not a faith attained by the efforts of men, but a faith which was "delivered" from God by the hands of godly men who "spoke as they were moved (borne along) by the Holy Spirit."

A few days ago, my doorbell rang and a delivery boy handed me a package—carefully sealed, directed and wrapped. All I had to do was to put forth my hand and receive it. Such is the figure in our text. Faith was "delivered." Holy men spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. God delivered the truth of the gospel to the men who wrote the words which were given them. It is truth definitely given and "once for all delivered" which we are charged to keep and to transmit to others.

The Christian church is a steward of the mystery of the gospel of God's grace, and is culpable if it does not transmit in the face of all opponents and unbelievers the true faith, unimpaired to posterity.

This faith, once delivered is a body of revealed truth. It is not the intuitions of men. It is not the philosophical speculations of earth's wise ones, but it is a final and full revelation from God. It was delivered "once" indicating that it is a complete body of truth. All that man needs to know concerning God, duty, and destiny, is written in the Word. New light will break from the Bible from time to time, but all that men will ever need to guide them safely through this world of sin is written in that Book. New discoveries will be made in the old Book; but no new book will ever be given.

6. The true Christian is encouraged to witness for the faith also because the testimony of the unconverted man is ruled out of court as valueless by the Supreme Judge Himself. Our Lord has declared that "except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God"; that is, he cannot have any true perception of the kingdom, or of kingdom truth, and he can bear no testimony concerning the things of God which are worth considering by the seekers of truth.

Paul also witnessed to the same fact, saying "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned; but he that is spiritual judgeth all things." As the Holy Spirit is given in response to a true faith in Christ as God and Saviour, the unbeliever cannot have the Holy Spirit. Therefore he can have no supernatural assistance in the interpretaton of God's truth. Let no believer, therefore, ever quail before the assertions of those who reject the deity of Jesus Christ.

The Value of the Faith

This faith which the Christian church has ever preached, has always answered every need of the human soul. The Bible reveals man's high origin, also the origin of sin, and of death; it tells us of God's remedy for sin which is Jesus Christ; it proclaims the way of peace and victory, joy, assurance, and eternal life. It shows God at work in His world now redeeming the sinful. It reveals His plans for purifying the earth from the presence and power of sin, and it opens the gates of heaven for men to get a glimpse of the "home over there."

The faith, "once for all delivered" has survived all human crises, all human and diabolical attempts to overthrow the same and it will survive the shock of present day battles.

Those who contend for the faith find their own faith developed and strengthened. The man who battles for Jesus Christ has increasingly clarifying views of the Christ whom he defends.

And more than this, the modern Christian discovers that unless he contends earnestly for the faith which he has, he cannot even hold his place in the ranks of the faithful or be of value in witnessing for Jesus Christ. We are placed in a world where doubt insinuates and the Devil deceives and it is only in contending for our own individual faith that this faith grows and develops and we become absolutely sure of Christ and His salvation.

If this faith "delivered" to us means anything at all, it means everything; and if the faith which we have means everything to us it ought to mean the same to every individual in all the world. Therefore we cannot keep still and refuse to witness and "contend" while the world without the gospel is dying.

If it be true that the faith has really "once for all been delivered" unto us, then the surer we are of the truth for ourselves, the more zealous must we be to win the opponents of the gospel to Jesus Christ.

The Bible Conference in Baltimore

Through its Extension Department the Institute will conduct a Bible conference in Baltimore, Md., Oct. 1-8, under the auspices of a local committee, of which the Rev. T. Roland Philips of that city is chairman. The regular sessions will be held in the Northminster Presbyterian Church.

The dean and several members of the Institute faculty will participate, including Mr. Gosnell, assistant dean, and member of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. Glover, Director of the Missionary Course of the Institute, and Mr. Bittikofer of the Music Course. Others on the program are the Rev. John Timothy Stone, D. D., formerly pastor of the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church of Baltimore, and now pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago; the Rev. Robert Dick Wilson, D. D., professor of Semitic Philology in Princeton Theological Seminary; the Rev. J. L. Campbell, D. ARE YOU GETTING, OR GIVING?
By Rev. J. D. Kempster, Lyndon, Ill.

'Tis glorious to live
When you've learned how to give,
And with others your blessings to share;
Not getting, but giving,
Doth constitute living,
The precious old Book doth declare.

No doubt you have read
Of the sea that is dead,
And it takes but a moment to say,
It always is "getting"
But never once etting
A drop of its waters away.

Some receive with a lunge,
And act like a sponge;
(And though I may seem to be bold)
These folks you must "tease" them,
And finally "squeeze" them,
To get them to loosen their hold.

So isn't it better,
To have no such fetter
To hinder your fulness of joy?
When strong on the giving
'Tis grand to be living,
For nothing your peace can destroy.

Intercessory Prayer

By Rev. Robert H. Glover, M. D. Director of the Missionary Course of the Moody Bible Institute

(Scripture:—Luke 11:1-10)

THERE are two great phases of the Christian ministry: one is preaching, and the other prayer. They represent two God-given functions: the prophetic function and the priestly function. The one is standing before man for God, the other before God for man. The prevailing tendency is to place the prophetic function in advance of the priestly; to give larger place in thought and practice to preaching than to prayer; indeed, to regard prayer as a kind of adjunct, a mere aid to our work of preaching.

But the early apostles did not so regard it. We find in the sixth of Acts that when the multiplicity of duties pressed upon those apostles, and they saw the need for better organization and distribution of work, they proceeded under the guidance of the Holy Spirit to appoint deacons for secular departments and then added: "But we give ourselves to prayer, and the ministry of the Word."

Note the order—prayer first, and then preaching. And as we run through the Acts we find prayer on every page. They accomplish much by preaching, but more by praying. Every need of whatever sort they met by prayer. Things were accomplished, many and mighty things, because they gave prayer the primary place.

Jesus' Prayer Life

Jesus was a man of prayer. I should have said Jesus was the man of prayer. No Bible study could be more profitable than that of Jesus' prayer life. The parable we are to consider was spoken on the occasion of one of His seasons of prayer. It was the fact that He himself was praying that prompted the disciples' request, "Lord, teach us to pray." It was the force of His example that brought that request and stirred them to pray.

Our Lord responds first by giving them that model of prayer known as the Lord's prayer. Perhaps it might more properly be called the disciples' prayer, for the real Lord's prayer is in the seventeenth of John. This prayer that Jesus taught His disciples constitutes a perpetual model of prayer, beginning as it does with worship and adoration, then putting the interests of God's kingdom before all personal requests, and ending with an ascription of honor and glory to Him.

A Prayer Parable

Immediately following, comes this Parable of the Importunate Friend. It brings to view three persons, of whom one becomes the connecting link between the other two. There is first the man in his journey—the man in need. Then, at the other end the man whose resources supplied this need. And then the man in the middle who appealed for the one and to the other.

These are the three actors, and it is clear what each stands for. The man in need represents the world. The man who supplied the loaves represents God. The third man represents the Christian intercessor, standing between the world and God, pleading for the one and getting from the other.

The teaching of this parable centers in the fact that the man in the center is related by friendship to both of the others. Observe how he addresses the one to whom he goes: "Friend, lend me three loaves," and how he says concerning the other: "A friend of mine in his journey is come to me."

Let us consider a few features of this parable of great importance in their bearing upon our ministry of intercession.

1. We must be friends of souls. We must have a genuine interest in men, we must love them as our friends, before we can pray for them as we should. Let your little one become dangerously ill. There is no longer any question about getting time to pray. Everything else is pushed aside, and you take time to pray.

Why do we not pray for the world like this? I fear it is because we do not love the world enough. I am persuaded that as our preaching ministry is rendered comparatively ineffective through its not being impelled by divine love, so our praying ministry is rendered ineffective for the same reason.

There is so much professionalism in the Christian ministry. Perhaps a casual observer may not detect the difference, but there is a vital difference between the hireling and the shepherd. When the crucial moment of risk or danger comes "the hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling and careth not for the sheep." But, in contrast, "the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Just so in praying, the lack of real love for souls is largely responsible for our lack or feebleness of prayer for souls. Let us ask God to supply to us this divine love which we lack, and to give us a heart that breaks for sinners.

2. We must be friends of God. This is as important as that we be friends of souls. Our effective approach to God as intercessors depends upon our relation to God. And friendship implies more than a passing knowledge; it is an intimate acquaintance, and such acquaintance requires time to effect.

Observe the names by which some of the greatest intercessors were called: Abraham "the friend of God," Moses "the servant of God," Elijah "the man of God," Daniel "greatly beloved of God." We see that godly character and a close and sustained relationship to God underlay their prayer power and achievement.

3. We must have a sense of utter need. The man in this parable said: "A friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him." If he had been able to scrape up an apology for a meal he would not have put himself to the trouble of going to his neighbor to wake him up and get the loaves. But he had nothing, and the realization of that fact drove him to his neighbor as his only resource.

Are we not reminded here of how many times we resort to mere makeshifts, human expedients, second-rate measures in trying to meet men's needs? We ministers are tempted to rely upon our sermon-making as a substitute for prayer, and a powerless ministry is the result. It is only when we are brought to a sense of utter strengthlessness and realize that we have not merely a little, but nothing of our own to set before hungry souls, that we are driven to God for His mighty and sufficient help. As Dr. A. C. Dixon put it: "When we depend upon organization, we get what organization can do; when we depend upon education, we get what education can do; when we depend upon man, we get what man can do; but when we depend upon prayer, we get what God can do." That and nothing less is what we need; shall we not determine to get it?

4. We must be willing to sacrifice ourselves. The help secured for the man in this parable was not without its cost to the one who sought it for him. He had to make an unselfish sacrifice. He had to give up his comfort, bestir himself, make a trip through the street at an unseasonable hour, at inconvenience, and perhaps embarrassment also—all to get bread for another man. The lesson is on the surface, prayer that gets things from God costs.

Intercessory prayer is no pastime. Jesus Christ could not save both Himself and others. No more can we. We may not be called upon to give our lives literally upon the cross as He gave His, but we are called upon to manifest the same spirit of self-sacrifice that He manifested in His death. The life of a faithful minister of Christ, and pre-eminently that of a true and effective intercessor, is a sacrificial life. Are we willing to pay its price?

5. We must be importunate. This is the last feature of this parable I would mention, and its focal and culminating point. We are told that even though the seeker of loaves might not obtain them on the ground of friendship, yet because of his importunity he was assured of getting "as many as he needeth." It was when the man on the inside considered the lengths to which the man on the outside was ready to go in determination and unwearying perseverance to obtain the needed bread for the hungry traveller, that he felt he could not deny his request.

The parable, of course, has its limitations, like all parables, in setting forth the truth it seeks to illustrate. I need hardly remind you that God is not to be thought of as pre-occupied or reluctant to grant our requests. But He does see fit at times to withhold the answer that He may more fully try our faith, and draw out the most there is in us. He has other purposes in view than merely our getting the things we seek for those for whom we intercede. He wants to develop us in the process, and in this prayer ministry lies one of the greatest means to our spiritual development, our growth in grace and in the knowledge and likeness of Christ.

God has always sought intercessors. Never did He seek them, never did He need them more than today. Nothing but a mighty, God-sent revival can meet the desperate need of the present hour, within the church, in the world at large, in the mission fields—everywhere. All efforts to meet the need in any other way are worse than useless, they are a farce and a mockery. "O that thou wouldst rend the heavens, that thou wouldst come down, that the mountains might flow down with thy presence!" Prayer—believing, persistent, importunate prayer—and nothing less, will bring Him down. Therefore, "Lord, teach us to pray."

The Habit of Devotional Bible Reading

By Margaret C. Worthington, Charlestown, W. Va.

BIBLES are numerous. The number of editions an ordinary book passes through will very rightly indicate the number of its probable readers, but the multitude of Bibles in our land by no means represents the number of those who really read it as it should be read. Many who may see these lines can truly say, "I read it in faith and love," and to them no word of suggestion is offered here.

But there are many professing Christians who read the Bible very little, and many others who do not read it intelligently.

Our Lord in replying to the tempter in the wilderness used the very words He had commanded His ancient people in the book of Deuteronomy, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." To us who have also the New Testament, "God hath spoken—by His Son—therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard"! We, on whom the ends of the ages have come; we, surrounded with the world's Babel voices, talking out their "problems" in the world's wisdom; we, with an adversary able to raise up at last his own great representative—the "man of sin."

And let us note that no Antichrist was to come in Old Testament times. That apostasy of which the apostle prophesied was for the age in which the fullest revelation has been given, and when the Holy Spirit has come to teach the written Word to the heart of the believer. In what danger then are those of us who leave the Bible unstudied in these times!

A Mother's Bible

Some days ago, the writer took up a letter, yellow with age, written by a mother's hand and placed between the leaves of a birthday gift of a beautiful first Bible. The ink was faint in the message, but not the faith.

That Bible was read very much from force of example and duty, but it was read more or less usually, and when the light of salvation came at last, none will know till "that day" how much the mere surface knowledge of its contents may have been used to answer that mother's prayers. For God's Word is not as man's and He especially commands that children shall hear His Word.

A lady visitor was sitting in a home reading the Scriptures, when the mother said, "If I could only turn to the places like you do, when I want to find something!"

The visitor replied that it could not be done till she read the Bible straight through, as it is written.

The daughter, a school girl, standing by, was asked if she could find things mentioned in her book of history after studying it, and she confidently said that she could. History is never taught by reading selections here and there without regard to chronology or sequence of events. Yet it is the way Holy Writ is often handled. Clear and balanced views of God's truth are the result of studying His whole written revelation, accepting all in humble faith.

George Mueller and J. Hudson Taylor

Mr. George Mueller, of the Bristol Orphanages, gives somewhere his method of reading both Old and New Testament through at the same time. He placed two marks in his Bible, one where he left off reading in the Old, and another where he left off in the New; opening at these places alternately, he would continue right on. Distinguished men of God have often been led to, and sustained in, their life-work, by just listening directly to the Spirit's guidance through the Word, as they would read it day by day at devotional times.

The Rev. J. Hudson Taylor wrote of one day in China when everything looked dark and despairing for his work there, reading the seventh chapter of Numbers because that chapter came in order for his devotional Bible hour. And right in that portion he found the very encouragement he so sorely needed.

One who heard him years afterwards addressing a gathering of fellow-missionaries in the little church in Chinkiang, has carried away in memory his unhesitating hold on the words "Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper," as in his quiet gentle way, the veteran missionary spoke on the man who delights and meditates in the law of the Lord, as found in the first Psalm.

The Promise Under Her Finger

A Christian worker in New York City, when she had been called to walk through a particularly wicked street, said she used to slip her finger in her Bible as she walked along, and hold it on a certain verse, pleading in her heart God's protection promised there under her finger.

But the ordinary reader may say, "I do not work in China, nor the slums." And many seem to think that ministers, teachers and missionaries should know the Bible well, but avoid any responsibility in the matter themselves. Yet there are express messages to children and slaves in the profoundest epistles, and the introduction to Revelation says, "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy." That is, whosoever reads or whosoever hears.

The predictive parts of Scripture are among those most usually avoided in the unwarrantable discrimination against portions of it. A consequence is that many have either a fear of misinterpretation of what they know so little about, and avoid prophetic studies; or are led entirely by others when they should have some discernment themselves, to give balance to what they accept.

The Apostle Peter tells all (not some only) of those who have obtained "precious faith" in the Saviour, that prophecy is a shining lamp for them in "a dark place"; and a lamp gives light to all who will come near and avail themselves of its illumination.

Why She Joined the Adventists

Those who were best acquainted with a very active Christian mother, now with the Lord, who lived the greater part of her life in a secluded country home in one of our southern states, and where the parish church was poorly served, could not but know the deep spiritual insight she obtained by personal study of her Bible, alone with her God. The premillennial hope was hers, when no one else in her neighborhood would have known anything about it.

Accurate knowledge of the Word is the weapon too, ready for the false teachers who go about with "perverse things" to teach." An Adventist said her mother has left an evangelical denomination to join them because of their supposed explanation of prophecy. One may ask, "Did she have the advantage of any true and proper views of prophecy before she went over to them?"

Belshazzar said he had heard Daniel was able to "dissolve doubts." That is just what the Holy Spirit does when we believe His Words. He brings our doubts to naught. For truth is reality, and untruth finds no place beside it.

A young believer was once suddenly assailed by doubt as to everlasting punishment. In an instant that doubt had swept through her soul seeming to shake all she could rest on for eternity. This continued, till going to her room, she took her Bible, and fervently asking God to give some distinct message to rescue her from spiritual peril and pain, opened the Book, and enabled to believe, received from its page an immediate removal of doubt through the words which met her eyes.

The Value of a Good Breakfast

It is almost unnecessary to say that the morning is the best time for most of us to feed on the Word in preparation for the day.

A doctor observed, of a lady who lived to unusual age, that she always had a very elaborate breakfast, even when she cared for little or nothing else the rest of the day. If also you and I have an ample portion of spiritual food in the morning it will strengthen us all day.

God has divided our time into days. A day's work in a day is all He requires of us. But these days are precious gifts from Him; let us not waste them, but pray with Moses the man of God, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." If we are prepared for common days, we are also prepared for uncommon ones. Crises come in our lives, what we are will determine how we will meet them.

God has a personal service for each one of his servants, and communicates His will to us by His words. Our blessed Lord as part of His work for us, when He was about to finish it, said to the Father, "I have given them the words which thou gaveth me."

"If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater," and we do constantly receive the witness of men, and act on it in secular affairs. If we act on what God says to us, faith will be strengthened by experience, so we will joy in reading it more.

Teach me Thy way, O Lord!
Teach me Thy way!

Long as my life shall last,
Teach me Thy way!

Opposition to Premillennialism

By Rev. H. Bonnema, Grand Rapids, Mich.

THE Holy Spirit was sent to lead the disciples of Jesus into all truth. It is very evident that in these last days He leads them in particular into the comforting truth of the Lord's second coming.

As already observed in past issues of the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY, this truth is ignored, denied and, at times vehemently attacked by the church at large. A great stir has been created by those opposed, and much written against it in the official organs of the various denominations.

The debate within the last few years has invaded the Reformed churches. In one of the branches of this church, the Christian Reformed, one of the most conservative of the churches in this country premillennialism has aroused great opposition.

Some time since one of the Christian Reformed ministers, Rev. H. Buttema of Muskegon, Mich., published a book in the Holland language entitled, Maranatha, which set forth the premillennial coming of Christ as the teaching of the New Testament. He pointed out the distinction between Israel and the church, and laid special emphasis on Christ as the Head of the Church and the King of Israel.

Because of maintaining these two points as being biblical, he was deposed as a minister of the gospel by said church which judged his teaching not by the standard of the Word of God, but by their confessional standards. The great majority of his large congregation sided with their pastor and reorganized themselves under the name of Berean Reformed.

Since that time there has been almost a continual agitation from the pulpit and in the press against premillennialism. In nearly every issue of the two official church papers something is written against it. Institutes like the Moody and the Bible School in Los Angeles, and staunch defenders of the faith like Drs. Haldeman and Campbell Morgan are constantly warned against. One young man, now a minister of the gospel, was expelled from the denominational college because he met with a few of his friends on Sunday afternoons to study the Word of God with respect to the coming of the Lord.

But His truth is marching on. Many conscientious members are severing their affiliation with that body and joining other churches. In several places premillennial Reformed congregations have already been organized which have banded themselves together to form a denomination.

Those who left could no longer be edified by ministers who systematically denied one of the fundamental teachings of Holy Writ. Others still prefer to stay awhile to testify against it. Some of the ministers and leaders are premillennially inclined but are afraid to take a stand.

May the Lord give courage and may He open the eyes of many to see the comfort of the coming of the Prince of Peace.

A CONSUMPTIVE'S PRAYER

By Peter H. Van Wynen

Lord, may the weakness of my flesh
  But make my love to Thee the stronger;
The shortness of my days on earth
  But make my stay with Thee the longer;
The heaviness of this poor frame
  But make my spirit's movement lighter;
The dimness of my hopes below
  But make my hope of heaven brighter.

ACCOMPLISHMENT

By Rev. Christopher G. Hazard, D. D.

Could we look down upon the azure deep
And confidently step from star to star,
Our names would not a larger meaning keep,
We would not then be greater than we are;
For, yet so much related to the clod,
Already we are called the sons of God.

Evolution Leads to Sodom

By R. J. Alderman, Alcolu, S. C.

IN the day that God created man He made them male and female, —Genesis, 5:1, 2.

The first Adam was not, therefore, of a woman (I Cor. 11:8), and if not of a woman, he must have been of beasts or from God.

Beasts could bring forth only "after their kind" (Gen. 1:21, 24, 25). All flesh is not the same flesh. There is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes and another of birds (I Cor. 15:39).

If the evolutionists are right that beasts can bring forth men, then men can bring forth beasts, and fishes can bring forth birds, and a bird-fish can bring forth a bird-fish-beast, and a bird-fish-beast can bring forth a bird-fish-beast-man. And this would be worse than hell itself could be.

Let us thank God that no beast or reptile produced Adam, as his flesh was of "another kind," and they could bring forth only "after their kind." If man was not of woman or of beasts, he must have been of God.

If the evolutionist is correct, there is a break between God and Adam, and Luke is wrong in his genealogy of Christ in 3:38, which reads, ". . . the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God."

If the evolutionist is correct this should read somewhat as follows: "Jesus . . . the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of a monkey, which was the son of an ass, which was the son of a vulture, which was the son of a scorpion, which was the son of a lizard, which was the son of a bumble bee, which was the son of a bug, which was the son of a tadpole, which was the son of God! !"

Luke's Genealogy Correct

But we know that Luke is right for Adam was made after the similitude of God Himself (James 3:9). Adam was made after God's kind (Gen. 1:26, 27), not by natural propagation, but by divine fiat. Adam could not have evolved sexually as there was no female of his flesh prior to Eve who was the mother of all living (Gen. 3:20).

The beasts were formed out of the ground, male and female (Gen. 2:19), but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him (Gen. 2:20). Eve was not formed out of the dust of the ground like Adam. Her creation was supernatural in a very special and different way. She was taken out of Adam after God had breathed his Spirit into Adam (Gen. 2:23). God took a rib from Adam's side and the rib which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman (Gen. 2:22). The woman did not evolve out of the rib. God made the rib a woman with the same power that he made the water wine and the dead alive.

The man was formed of the dust of the ground (Gen. 2:7), not of beasts. The woman was formed of the man, not of beasts. And both were made on the same day (Gen. 5:1, 2), which was the sixth day (Gen. 1: 27, 31).

And we know it was a day of twenty four hours because it says the evening and the morning were the sixth day. "The evening and the morning" make a day of twenty four hours, and this was true in the case of the creation week, for God said, "Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs and for seasons and for days and for years. The greater light (the sun) to rule the day and the lesser light (the moon) to rule the night" (Gen. 1:14-16).

Man was made a little lower than the angels (Heb. 2:7). He was not evolved a little higher than the beasts.

Jesus was made a little lower than the angels (Heb. 2:9). "For it became him, for whom are all things and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." "That through death he might destroy him that has the power of death, that is, the devil " (Heb. 2:14).

The Devil Lives

As long as people die we may be sure the Devil lives. Death is the last enemy of man to be destroyed. Death and the Devil are destroyed simultaneously (Rev. 20:10, 14).

"We wrestle not against flesh and blood but against spiritual wickedness in the heavenly places." The conflict is, as it were, a race between God and Satan for the control of the universe.

God has said, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent" (Gen. 3:15).

Satan has said, "I will exalt my throne above the stars of God, . . . I will be like the Most High" (Isa. 14:12-14).

And God has said, "Thou (Satan) shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit" (Isa. 14:15).

The Devil works through human nature and along natural lines with supernatural power, and were it possible to have produced, in this way, a hybrid race through the transmutation of the species, he surely would have done so long ago, and thus prevented the first advent of Christ, who had to be born of a woman.

Satan's first attempt to thwart God's purpose that the seed of a woman is to bruise his head was to incarnate himself into the human race, using fallen angels who kept not their first estate but left their own habitation (Jude 6), and took to themselves wives of all which they chose of the daughters of men (Gen. 6:2), hoping thereby to produce a race that would be satanic in character and power (Gen. 6:4), and also flesh (Gen. 6:3). And had not God destroyed this hybrid people at the flood, Satan would have succeeded and thus prevented the fulfilment of the prophecy that the seed of the woman is to bruise his head.

Satan later attempted the destruction of the human race in a two-fold way, beginning at Sodom and Gomorrah. He caused the women of that time to become so low in morals and so masculine in manner and habits that men would have nothing to do with them. Men burned for men. In this way the race would have soon become extinct.

His other method was to cause the people to go after strange (other) flesh (Jude 7), and thus produce an unspeakably repulsive hybrid which, being unable to propagate itself, would soon die off. The Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven (Gen. 19:24), and Satan was again defeated in his attempt to destroy the seed of the woman.

Our Lord while on the earth warned us that Satan will attempt both of these things again. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed (Luke 17:26).

The lot of the unfortunate dupes of the teachers of evolution will be bad enough, but woe be unto the teachers themselves. It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for them (Matt. 11:24).

If beasts evolved themselves into men, it ought to be easy for men to evolve themselves into angels. Man was made only a little lower than the angels, and this is the easy and right thing to do if the evolutionist is right. It would do away with the Scriptures, the Cross and every other fundamental of the Christian faith, it is true. But what is that to the evolutionist?

The doctrine of evolution is the spiritual path that leads to Sodom. The Sodomites practiced it, going after flesh of another kind. The people in the days of Noah, before the flood, practiced it with fallen angels, and the Lord says they will be at it again when he returns.

"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ" (Col. 2:8).

He who would lead his people to a choice of God must first himself wholly and unreservedly choose God.

Marriage Laxity Perils America, Churchmen Find

By Rev. N. B. Norton in The Chicago Tribune

BIRTH control is condemned, while the barring from marriage of the criminal, feeble minded, and morally vicious, and the presentation of health certificates as a pre-requisite to marriage are commended in a report prepared by a commission of the Episcopal church to be presented to the Episcopal general convention which meets, September 6, at Portland, Ore.

Parental Control Vital

Lack of parental control, the absence of instruction concerning the purpose of marriage which, the report says, is "the perpetuation of the race, involving the begetting and education of children," indiscriminate marriages, and especially the neglect of family religion and the church for the sake of pleasure seeking and material gain, are named as factors in the present situation.

"This commission heartily indorses the warning uttered by the great Lambeth conference of bishops, gathered from all over the world in London in 1920," the report reads, "against the practice of means for the avoidance of conception as involving grave dangers to physical health as well as moral innocence, and threatening the future of the human race. We make our own the words of the conference committee, as applying in particular to the United States—namely:

"Where family life is dishonored, wedded unfaithfulness lightly regarded, parental responsibility neglected, filial respect slighted, there, we may be sure, society is rotten at the core. We tremble for the future of a state or nation for, where lax theories concerning domestic life gain ground, even laxer practice will prevail.

Marriage Holy Vocation

"Boys and girls must be taught as early as possible that the chief purpose of marriage is the perpetuation of the race, involving the begetting and education of children for the work of the world. Marriage is a high and holy vocation, because the married pair are co-operating with the Creator in the continuation of the human race. Marriage is not to be regarded solely or chiefly as a means for happiness or physical pleasure. It is not an end in itself, but the divinely appointed agency whereby God's will may be fulfilled in giving life, protection, and proper rearing to the young of the human species.

"It is a holy thing and must be made a stable thing. Prostituted as it is in the United States to a mere means of physical union, a legalized form of concubinage, it will produce the result of increasing sterility, as it has always done in the past.

Divorce Called Peril

"This malignant cancer of easy divorce, resulting in race suicide, is today powerfully eating into the heart of the domestic life of the American people, and the only remedy is the plain, positive, continuous training of the people in the nature and obligations of Christian marriage.

"There should be careful teaching with regard to the qualifications, economic, social, and moral, which conduce to successful unions. It is not too early to begin such instruction in the confirmation class.

"The growing insistence upon health certificates as a pre-requisite to marriage should be seriously considered by the church. The movement has already been favorably acted on by various states. Not only the criminal, but the feeble minded and morally vicious ought to be prevented from propagating their kind, and insistence on health certificates as an antecedent to marriage would materially assist the movement.

Uniform Laws Needed

"No small part of the problem of the family depends upon the enactment of a national law providing for uniform marriage and divorce throughout the United States. A bill now before congress provides for a nation-wide law, which, while it would bring into line states whose laws are lax, would permit individual commonwealths to raise the bars against divorce still higher than the national standard, if they so desired. This matter is seriously commended to the convention."

The report strongly condemns child labor, demanding that it be abolished or rigidly controlled. The employment of expectant mothers or forcing them back into work before they are physically fit, also is condemned. The request points out the dangers to girls in industry working at wages so low that they are tempted into immorality. It also warns against men receiving so low a wage that they cannot marry and rear a family and hence are tempted into a vicious course "which sows the seeds of frightful race poisons."

The Eagles Mere Bible Conference

By Mrs. M. A. Martin

THIS conference, directed by Mr. E. B. Buckalew, covered eight most helpful days.

Bishop Harry D. Mitchell, pastor of the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., preached the conference sermon, his theme being "Christ and Christianity," based on Colossians 2:9.

He spoke of the controversy that is now well nigh universal in the field of government, politics, economics, social life and religion. He said that the sword had been unsheathed by the radicals and that the battle is on. While we should dread controversy, it would be criminal to shut our eyes to facts and to live by a false optimism. He was profoundly grateful that the imperative needs of the present moment were being met by the Bible conferences held all over the country. The present exigency demands courageous witnessing to the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. It is not a question of whether the Fundamentalists or the Liberalists win, we are absolutely certain that the truth will win. Civilization is but a by-product of Christianity. There have been great achievements of science, but knowledge does not keep people from sin.

Bishop Mitchell gave two other addresses, "Christ and the Present Age," and "Christ as King."

Bible study through the medium of the Sunday-school was presented in a very practical way by Walter E. Myers of Erie, Pa., Adult Division Superintendent of Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, who gave four very interesting lectures during the conference. Among other things he said:

"Some men think that after they are twenty-one years of age their time for Bible study in the Sunday-school is over. They prefer to read the papers or magazines on Sunday instead of the Bible. They drift away from the church and never open their Bibles. They have no religious training in the home, no grace at table, no family prayers. Women have no time for reading the Bible, yet they read the Ladies Home Journal and the short stories in the daily papers and magazines. Thousands of children are brought up in homes where there is no evidence of Christian training visible. Is it any wonder that boys and girls go astray?"

Dr. James M. Gray, dean of the Moody Bible Institute, gave several addresses, the more notable of which were one, entitled, "Why Contend for the Faith?" and another "How the Bible Answers Conan Doyle."

The first was an exposition of the New Testament epistle of Jude, which, he said, was written especially for these times. Jude first explained what the faith was by showing that a true Christian was one who was "called," "beloved in God the Father" and "kept for Jesus Christ." He had started to write about the faith when, as he says, he was "constrained" supernaturally, to do something else, that is, to exhort the saints to "earnestly contend for the faith" which had thus been delivered unto them "once for all." The necessity for this contention was that false teachers had crept in "unawares" denying the Lord who bought them.

Dr. Gray spoke of the false teachers so multiplied today, who had gotten into the church through the false teaching of our universities and colleges before the great body of the orthodox laity had been aware of it. They were denying the Lord who bought them in the sense that they were denying the deity of Christ, His miraculous birth and life, His atoning death and resurrection and His ascension at the right hand of God.

This faith, he emphasized, had been delivered, revealed to the "saints," not to the colleges and universities, not even to the visible church as an organization, and therefore it was no wonder that only the saints were charged with its defense against the opposition with which it was now meeting on the part of the evolutionists of all classes and grades.

Dr. Gray takes Sir Arthur Conan Doyle very seriously, and agrees with him that the cult for which he speaks cannot be dismissed with the "all rot" formula. The scientists Sir Arthur quotes have found something which they cannot explain, but which the Bible perfectly explains.

In other words, the Bible answers Conan Doyle by revealing the source or origin of Spiritism, which is Satan, or the Devil; who is described in the Bible as just the kind of person who would be behind the phenomena to which Conan Doyle refers. It also answers him by revealing the scheme of operation in Spiritism which is through the media of demons. Demons are objects of human worship and in all the centuries they have possessed and used certain persons just as they are doing now in some cases. The Bible answers Conan Doyle in the third place, by definitely and absolutely prohibiting intercourse with spirits, or talking with the dead, or using divination, clairvoyance, palmistry and related occultisms, all of which are "abominations" in the sight of God and expose their votaries to his displeasure and punishment.

Conan Doyle puts forth a challenge which the Bible fully and clearly meets. He asks whether this thing (Spiritism) is lunacy or a new revelation, and the Bible says that it is neither. It is a fulfilment of prophecy which marks the ending of this present age.

The Rev. Gordon Watt, a minister of the Church of Scotland, was present throughout the conference, and gave deeply devotional messages each day centering in Christ, the Cross and spiritual life. This was Dr. Watt's first appearance at a Bible Conference in this country. He was accompanied by Mrs. Watt, who spoke at the women's meeting on Sunday afternoon, in the parlors of the Lakeside hotel.

Another new conference speaker was Rev. Dr. J. Ritchie Smith, professor of Homiletics, Princeton Theological Seminary. Dr. Smith gave four exceptionally interesting studies in the First Epistle of John. He expressed his great pleasure in being present in the conference and being permitted to open up the Scripture to those attending.

A most enjoyable feature of the conference was the music rendered by the "Hurlburt Quartette" named for Dr. Hurlburt, president of the African Inland Mission. It is composed of the following members: W. M. Clark, South Orange, N. J.; W. H. Williams, Wilkesbarre, Pa.; E. M. Hungerford, Albany, N. Y.; and E. B. Buckalew, Harrisburg, Pa.

Christian patriotism was injected into the conference session on the evening of July Fourth, when the Hon. Wm. D. B. Ainey, LL. D., L. H. D., chairman of the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania, delivered an address on "The Challenge of the Age."

Baptist Evangelical Rally

At the Moody Bible Institute, June 21, 22

THE Northern Baptist Convention was held at Indianapolis, Ind., in June, and the Moody Bible Institute invited some of its members to stop at Chicago on their return east for a two days evangelical rally. The invitation was accepted by Rev. Frank M. Goodchild, D. D., pastor, Central Baptist Church, New York City; Rev. J. C. Massee, D. D., pastor, Tremont Temple, Boston; and Rev. Curtis Lee Laws, D. D., editor, Watchman-Examiner, New York and Boston. Meetings were held on Wednesday and Thursday, June 21 and 22, when three times each day, beginning at 9:00 a. m., the large Auditorium of the Institute was occupied by eager listeners to deep and stirring addresses by the brethren named. A stenographic report of one address from each follows, and others will appear in later issues.

The occasion was a memorable one because of the marked power of the Holy Spirit on the speakers, the earnestness in prayer, and the stirring, joyous singing of the great congregations.

The solid scriptural teaching of the addresses from day to day prepared the way for a stimulating appeal from Dr. Massee at the closing session, which led scores, if indeed not hundreds, of young lives to dedicate themselves to go all the way with their Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.—Editors.

Fundamentalism From the Baptist Viewpoint

By Rev. Curtis Lee Laws, D.D.

I AM embarrassed lest my address should not prove quite proper to this audience. It was prepared for our own people at Indianapolis, and therefore, references in it may not be of interest to you. But I understand there is a great group of Baptists here and I shall address myself to them particularly and let the rest of you be "listeners-in." Yet I am remembering that these same problems are harassing all the denominations, and that our problems are common problems. So after all I am less embarrassed than I thought.

Need for Fundamentalism

There is nothing for which I thank God more profoundly than for fundamentalism. For a quarter of a century teachers in our schools and preachers in our pulpits have been carrying on a propaganda of rationalism which, in robbing Christianity of its supernatural content, is undermining the very foundations of our holy religion. Despite the fact that rationalism is distasteful to the rank and file of our people, it has grown amazingly, for false teaching is like leaven in its permeating power.

Everywhere the matter has elicited discussion but everywhere the discussion has ended with this question: How can a movement so powerful and so subtle be met in such a denomination as the Baptist? Everybody's business is nobody's business. Everybody felt that something ought to be done, but nobody knew what ought to be done.

How It Started

In the spring of 1920 a group of twenty-five pastors met in New York for conference and prayer. That group decided that at least one thing could be done. A larger group could be called together on the day before the meeting of the Northern Convention in Buffalo to consider the situation.

They requested seven of their number to arrange for such a meeting. These seven asked others to join them in calling a conference on Baptist fundamentals at Buffalo. The call carried the names of 150 honored and respected ministers and laymen.

Fully 3,000 Baptists gathered for that Buffalo conference, and what a conference it was! It authorized the calling of the Des Moines conference, and that one authorized the calling of the Indianapolis one, and the Indianapolis authorized another such conference next year at Washington, and so the Baptist fundamentals movement has been launched and it is going on until we win the victory all along the line.

Origin of the Term

The word "Fundamentalist" came into being on July 1, 1920, a week after our Buffalo conference. For good or ill the responsibility rests upon the editor of the Watchman-Examiner, for on his way home from Buffalo he wrote, and in the Watchman-Examiner of July 1 he published these paragraphs:

"All through Convention week this question was constantly asked: What do these premillennialists want anyhow? We repeat the question to remove a false impression. The movement so evident in the convention which could easily be traced back to the conference, was in no sense a premillennialist movement, but in every sense a conservative movement. Premillennialists were much in evidence because premillennialists are always sound on the fundamentals, but eschatological questions did not enter into any of the Buffalo controversies. Standing solidly together in the battle for the reenthronement of the fundamentals of our holy faith were premillennialists, postmillennialists, promillennialists and no-millennialists. Fortunately the conservative group contains no one who repudiates the blessed doctrine of the second coming of our Lord, but the group does contain those who differ radically with one another concerning the whole millennial question. We here and now move that a new word be adopted to describe the men among us who insist that the landmarks shall not be removed. 'Conservatives' is too closely allied with reactionary forces in all walks of life. 'Premillennialists' is too closely allied with a single doctrine and not sufficiently inclusive. 'Land markers' has an historical disadvantage and connotes a particular group of radical conservatives. We suggest that those who still cling to the great fundamentals and who mean to do battle royal for the fundamentals shall be called 'Fundamentalists.' By that name the editor of the Watchman-Examiner is willing to be called."

Other names given to us are "literalists," "dogmatists," "separatists," "medievalists," "cranks," "ignoramuses," and "ku-kluxes." Whether we are called fundamentalists, conservatives, premillennialists, landmarkers, literalists, separatists, medievalists, cranks or ignoramuses or ku-kluxes, unafraid and undismayed we shall be present at every roll call in life to stand for the things that we believe.

Good Old Baptists, Too

But lest the oft-repeated fiction of the rationalists that the Baptist fundamentalists are not Baptists at all, but really starting a new denomination, gain currency, let me say that we are simply good old Baptists of the Francis Wayland, Ebenezer Dodge, Martin B. Anderson, Alvah Hovey, Henry G. Weston, John A. Broadus type; and it is for their interpretation of Christianity, the interpretation accepted by Baptists always and everywhere, that we are contending. Baptists we are, Baptists we are proud to be, and Baptists we shall always be; but that we may be distinguished from modernists and rationalists we are perfectly willing, because of the fundamentals which we are seeking to safeguard, to be called "fundamentalists."

What Is Fundamentalism?

It is a protest against that rationalistic interpretation of Christianity which seeks to discredit supernaturalism. This rationalism, when full-grown, scorns the miracles of the Old Testament, sets aside the virgin birth of our Lord as unbelievable, laughs at the credulity of those who accept many of the New Testament miracles, reduces the resurrection of our Lord to the fact that death did not end His existence, and sweeps away the promises of His second coming as the idle dream of men under the influence of Jewish apocalypticism.

I will give you the proof of one man, who, because of the sweetness of his disposition and his ability in moving men has been highly respected among those who have held to the evangelical faith, but who has aligned himself to thorough-going rationalism, Harry Emerson Fosdick, a Baptist minister. I have before me a stenographic report of his utterances in the lecture room, and can vouch for the correctness of the words I am about to read:

A Rationalist

"We know the cosmic order. We know that science has made miracles unreliable. A long process of tradition lies behind Mark. Wherever Matthew and Luke take from Mark they always stretch something. As for the turning of water into wine, is it not extraordinary that Mark, Matthew and Luke never heard of that miracle? Some of them heard nothing of the raising of Lazarus. The further away the more remarkable the miracle becomes. The modern age does not miss miracles a little bit. The Bible idea of miracles is gone. Do you wish to be reactionary or progressive? Put away all the miracles and you have lost nothing."

These are the words of a man who has written almost innumerable devotional books that are scattered over the world.

Let who will deny it, the fact remains that many men of prominence in our schools and in our pulpits are rationalists—infant rationalists, half-grown rationalists or full-grown rationalists. They are bold enough to resent the names, but not brave enough to deny the fact.

And the sad part of it all is that they are unconscious of the harm they are doing. Indeed they boast that they are strengthening the foundations and making Christianity more rational and more acceptable to thoughtful people. Christianity is rooted and grounded in supernaturalism and when robbed of supernaturalism it ceases to be a religion and becomes an exalted system of ethics, provided an exalted system of ethics can originate with an impostor, which Jesus was unless he was supernatural, for he said, "I and my Father are one."

Rationalism Is Unitarianism

This present-day rationalistic movement is but a rebirth of the liberal movement which one hundred years ago split Congregationalism and gave to the world the Unitarian denomination. Unitarianism by eliminating supernaturalism felt that it was making Christianity more rational and more acceptable to thoughtful people, but a century of history has proved that Unitarianism lacks the dynamic of genuine Christianity. The editor of the Christian Register evidently felt that the Baptist denomination was about to make large contributions to Unitarianism, and so when he heard of fundamentalism he became as a raving maniac. He knows that rationalism and Unitarianism are one and the same thing.

But fundamentalism does not expect to save editor Dieffenbach nor straighten out the whole world. Its primary purpose is to raise the danger signal and to plead with the fundamentalists in denominations everywhere to contend earnestly for the faith delivered once for all to the saints.

Five Things Baptist Fundamentalists Stand For

I shall have time to mention only such doctrines and policies as have come more or less into the realm of controversy. All Baptists hold much in common and that is why we have Baptist churches and a Baptist denomination. Among Baptists there are rationalists and fundamentalists and also a great central group not definitely lined up with either the rationalists or the fundamentalists.

The fundamentalists feel that they are unofficially representing this great central group, for we know that in the main our doctrinal positions are acceptable to this group. They may not like our methods, nor see the necessity for our organized protest, nor have very much confidence in our leadership, but they believe the things which we believe.

We have many men of many minds among fundamentalists. We are together not because we agree about everything, but because we are going in the same general direction.

I am going to speak of some of the things for which Baptist fundamentalists stand, and you will bear in mind that these are not the things for which rationalistic Baptists stand. The Baptists of the great central group are free to choose their own alignment. They can line up with the fundamentalists if they choose, or with the rationalists if they prefer; or they can stay out of the dust of battle, if they think that the heroic thing to do, and applaud the side with which they sympathize. For my part I have no sympathy with the people who are not willing to take steps in a great struggle like this.

The Baptist fundamentalists invite these people from the great center group to come in with us, adopt and control the movement, washing out the impurities and ironing out the wrinkles, and protesting against the action of the rationalists.

(1.) The fundamentalists believe the Bible to be God's Word that it was written by men divinely inspired and that it has supreme authority in all matters of faith and conduct. We believe its history, its miracles, its doctrines, and its prophecies.

(2.) We believe that Jesus Christ the Saviour of the world, was conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary. Others may feel that the miraculous element in our Saviour's birth is not essential to His absolute deity, but we accept as true the plain and unmistakable teaching of a passage which the rationalists have cut out of their Bible because it contradicts their theories.

(3.) We believe with the Apostle Peter that Jesus Christ "bore our sins in his own body on the tree," and with the Apostle Paul that "by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin. But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference; for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood." In other words, we believe profoundly in the vicarious, substitutionary theory of the atonement, which is the explanation of the efficacy of Christ's death made by the apostles, who were divinely inspired.

(4.) We believe in the resurrection of the Christ from the dead. This does not mean to us merely that Christ's death on the cross did not put an end to His existence. We believe that on the third day after His crucifixion "Christ arose from the dead," in the same body in which He suffered, with which He also ascended into heaven.

(5.) We believe in the visible return of our Lord to this world according to His promise. We repudiate as a shameful reflection upon our Lord the charge made by rationalists that He spoke of His return in good faith, but was influenced by the crude notions of the untutored people among whom He lived and was therefore mistaken. We repudiate as a shameful reflection on human intelligence the alternate interpretation proposed by rationalists and near-rationalists that the promises of Christ's second advent are fulfilled in the great events of history, which mark moral progress, and in the gradual spread of Christianity. The straightout declaration that our Lord and his apostles were ignorant of the future is preferable to the legerdemain that seeks to explain away language as plain and unmistakable as has ever been spoken or written. Nowhere does rationalism fall into such straits as in its pitiful effort to explain away our Lord's coming.

Co-operation in Church Work

Some denominational questions arise about which some of you may not be interested, but the Baptists are. Baptist fundamentalists are thorough-going denominationalists, at least this fundamentalist is.

Recognizing the local church as absolutely independent and as the only authoritative Christian body, we believe heartily in the co-operation of these churches in philanthropic, educational and missionary work. Our great missionary organizations are the outgrowth of the voluntary co-operation of the churches.

The early co-operation of the churches was very simple and sometimes rather tentative. The churches were slow in entering co-operative work lest their independence should be interfered with.

Protest Against Over-lordship

This is not true merely among the Baptists but everywhere, for these central organizations have developed in nearly all of the churches.

The sense of independence has lately given place to a sense of interdependence, and with the coming of this interdependence great central organizations have developed an over-lordship that has attempted to dictate the policies, methods and obligations of our local church life.

Against this over-lordship the churches, irrespective of their doctrinal alignments are now in a state of protest.

The fundamentalists are the loudest of the protesters. The fundamentalists believe that the whole Baptist New World Movement was established on a false premise. The marching orders of the church were not, "Go ye into all the world and establish a Christian civilization," but "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The establishment of a Christian civilization, if there really can be such a thing in a land composed of Christians, Jews, unbelievers and atheists, was not the primary thing for which Christ suffered and died.

But no battle was waged on the New World Movement because of this unfortunate beginning, for everybody recognized that it was a great co-operative movement through which our Convention agencies would attempt to do their promotional work. Despite the fact that the speaker urged the Convention to go slow in creating this octopus-like organization, he felt that it was best to support it with all heartiness after it had been created. We are all hoping that the difficulties may be ironed out so that it may be a very good movement forward.

Supporting Baptist Colleges

Fundamentalists contend that our schools ought never to have been in our budgets. This is not to be interpreted that we have little or no interest in our schools. They are our choicest possessions. They were founded by Baptists who believed the very things for which fundamentalists are contending. Our schools were put in for 31 per cent of this $100,000,000.

Now it happened that among our schools there were some that many of our Baptist people have no confidence in, but all the schools were included in this, whether they needed money or not. But fundamentalists claim that no Baptist ought to be co-erced into giving to a school in whose teachings he does not believe.

When our schools of every variety and every grade of wealth were grouped together irrespective of their needs, as beneficiaries under the united budget, it appeared to be the cleverest popularity scheme ever invented by the genius of man, but it was this very scheme that wrecked the New World Movement. I drove but yesterday through the matchless grounds of the University of Chicago. What a magnificent, unapproachable group of buildings! Yet the University of Chicago was included in our united budget and was to receive a part of the 31 per cent!

Such a protest went up that the University of Chicago said it would not receive any funds. But we have others just as objectionable as that one which are still on the budget.

The claim of the fundamentalists is that the schools ought to be separated from this missionary budget, and that every school ought to make an independent campaign for its own current expenses and endowment. This will put every school on its own merits and will enable us to give to the schools that we approve, and to refuse support to those that we do not approve.

Purging the Schools

But this is a small matter compared with the obligation that rests on fundamentalists to use the utmost of their influence and power to purge their schools of un-christian and rationalistic teaching. The school is the fountain-head of our religious life. What the schools teach today our people will believe twenty-five years from now. Without casting suspicions on schools and teachers standing for the faith, it is our duty, through reiterated protests to the boards of trustees of our institutions, to free those institutions of teachers who through their spirit or the subject-matter of their teaching are injuring the cause of Christ. If protests to trustees are unavailing, our appeal should be made to the denomination, to whom the trustees are morally responsible. And when the people speak the trustees will hear.

Need of the True Missionary Message

It is said that fundamentalism is already beginning to play havoc in the foreign mission fields.

Take this with a grain of caution, but remember that fundamentalists are bound to have a say in foreign missionary work because a fundamentalist is by necessity an ardent believer in foreign missions. We believe that the atonement of Christ is as necessary to the salvation of a Chinaman as to the salvation of an American. When millions of men are going into eternity every year without the saving knowledge of Christ, how terribly urgent is the need of sending the gospel to non-Christian lands the world around. We feel the primary duty of the missionary is to preach Christ as Saviour and to urge lost men to accept Him. When many modernist missionaries seem to have no gospel message to proclaim and no passion for the salvation of lost men, is it to be wondered at that sharp differences are arising between them and some of the battle scarred veterans who have been long on the firing line?

I have a daughter and a grandson in China. I want my daughter and grandson to have the privileges and joys and opportunities that I appreciate here in America, all the uplifting civilization about them, but when I have said that I still maintain that it is quite possible for our missionaries to spend their time and energy on things that are non-essential. Louis XVI spent his time working at a forge on locks and keys while his kingdom was on the crater of a seething volcano. Locksmiths are not to be despised, but it was despicable for the king thus to spend his time and energy. We insist that our missionaries should put first things first.

Emphasizing the Fundamentals Practically

Does such constantly reiterated insistence on fundamental doctrines distract our mind and divert our attention from the ever widening tasks of Christianity?

Exactly the opposite is true in my case. A wide outlook demands a firm footing. It is only when a mountain climber's feet are on a firm rock that he can afford to look up and around.

We cannot insist too strongly that those who are interested in the preservation and promotion of the fundamentals must not abandon the implements of toil for the weapons of war. If swords are to be found at our sides, trowels must be found in our hands. It is essential that we safeguard the principles of Christianity, but it is likewise essential that we carry the message of saving grace and redeeming power to the earth's remotest bounds.

We bring discredit if we allow any man to out-distance us in sacrificial service for the great cause of Jesus Christ, who suffered and died. Contenders for the faith who are not promoters of the cause of Christ are a dead weight to be carried by true evangelicals and contenders for the faith. I declare to you we will tremendously discount our protest against error unless our lives are hid in God. As Ian Maclaren said, "It is vain to expatiate upon the excellency of the machinery if the article milled does not come up to the standard." Of what use is it to talk about the efficacy of the blood of Jesus Christ to save from sin, unless it saves us from sins?

Can We Believe the Miracles?

By Rev. F. M. Goodchild, D.D., Pastor, Central Baptist Church, New York

ONE hundred years ago miracles occupied a very different place in Christian thinking from that which they occupy today. At the end of the eighteenth century William Paley won renown by a book on the "Evidences of Christianity," the main argument of which was that Christ fulfilled prophecy, was able to work miracles, and therefore must be divine.

If I had time this afternoon I could show you that Paley's method of argument was a valid one, much as men declaim against it today, but I have not time for that just now.

Of course, if you are an atheist you do not believe in miracles, for according to your opinion there is no God in the universe by whose power a miracle could be wrought. If you are a pantheist you do not believe in miracles, for a pantheist believes that all nature is God and in that case there is no supernatural power by which miracles could be performed. If you are a deist you do not believe in miracles, for a deist places God altogether outside of creation. God simply made the world and let it go and now Creator and creation are so far apart they never could be brought together again.

Miracles in the Gospel Story

There is no reason why a Christian should do away with miracles. But the malady of unbelief is subtle and crafty, and so we have professedly Christian preachers in our pulpits, and professedly Christian teachers in our class-rooms, disparaging miracles.

Some who believe in miracles are putting them away because they believe that truth today makes a stronger appeal than if the miraculous factor of the work of Christ is made prominent. I have absolutely no sympathy with any such opinion as that. At any rate the miracles are in the New Testament. They have come to stay. If we reject one part of the story of the Saviour's love, it forces us to reject the other parts. Cut out the miracles, and the arguments based on the miracles and you have very little indeed of the Bible left.

We can have no doubt that the Gospel writers felt that the miracles contributed a great deal to the arguments for Christ's Messiahship, and that they helped Him in the favor of the people. John tells us that so great a man as Nicodemus came to Christ and said, "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher sent from God because no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him." Peter, on the day of Pentecost, addressing the man of Israel, said, "Jesus of Nazareth, a man proved among you by miracles and signs and wonders which God did by him in the midst of you, as you yourselves know."

Evidently, too, the Lord Jesus Himself felt that miracles ought to be convincing with men. In His denunciation of the cities of Galilee, He said, "If the mighty works done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon they would have repented long ago." And on the last night of His life He seemed to think that His miracles were really the bulwark of the apostles' faith, strong enough to withstand even the shame of His ignominious death, for He said, that if the truth of His teaching, and the marvelous character of His words did not convince them, then they ought to believe Him for His very works' sake. That should end it all.

If we only wish to prove He had a divine mission His death and miracles are sufficient credentials. He said, "The works my father gave me to finish, the same works that I do bear witness of me, that my father has sent me," and He distinctly says that if it had not been for the miracles the Jews could have not been blamed for rejecting Him, but that having seen the miracles they were blameworthy.

No one, then, in Christ's day seems to have disputed the fact that He was a miracle-worker. His friends rejoiced in it. His enemies acknowledged the power and put a vicious explanation on it, saying He got His power from the Devil. The Jewish Talmud acknowledges His miraculous gifts. The first writer against Christianity, Celsus, who lived about 150 years after Christ, confessed Christ's miraculous powers but attributed them to magic.

God, Master in His Own Universe

A fellow of Oxford University told us at the end of a series of lectures on miracles delivered there, "Well, gentlemen, if you believe in miracles you will be nothing better, and if you do not believe in miracles you will be nothing worse." Oh, how can one finally assume such an attitude of indifference to the testimony of the New Testament as that. Those who declare that miracles are impossible put fetters on God in the mastery of His own universe. If this be true God cannot be the God whom Jesus Christ presented, for the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is as much at home in the universe as any man is in his own household, and as able to stretch out His hand and help His children as any earthly father is to put his arms about the child that needs his support.

To reject miracles—I have no hesitation in saying it—is to reject Christianity. The miracles cannot be taken out of the New Testament and the credibility and authority of the New Testament still be maintained. Now while I say this, there are good people who profess not to believe in miracles who yet accept the New Testament as one of the best of books and sincerely love the Lord Jesus Christ. All I have to say to them is that they have not thought this thing through to the end, and happily their living is better than their thinking.

Counterfeit Miracles

It is easy to see why miracles have fallen into disrepute. There are so many counterfeits, that all have a compromising reputation. The stories of the marvelous are common. In Brewer's Dictionary of the Miraculous there are 600 pages of miracles. If you read it you would marvel at man's credulity. But as men do not say all money is worthless because there are many counterfeits, so they are not warranted in saying there is no such thing as a miracle because a hoax has been perpetrated, if they cannot at once detect the difference between spurious miracles and the miracles at the hand of Jesus Christ.

The Pebble on the Shore

A miracle is looked upon by the average scientific man as an interruption of orderly processes. Science was much disposed to look upon miracles in the past as impossible and the very suggestion of them to a few men was regarded as impertinent.

I remember when a certain professor once spoke on the infallibility of nature, he undertook to tell about a pebble swept up on the shore by the wave of a stormy day. Then he dwelt on the changes in nature necessary to set that pebble a foot farther up on the shore. He said the wave must have been of greater volume, and the wind that drove the wave must have been at a greater force; he said the atmosphere which caused the wind must also have been different, and the conditions giving rise to that state of atmosphere must in their turn have been different. There was no stopping place in the argument. Before making a change in the movement of the pebble conditions in Africa, where the wind arose, must be changed, and all the air currents affecting the globe must be changed and the changes could not stop until they had been pushed back to the beginning of the age and the remotest age of the universe. Everything everywhere was in the grip of law he said, each unable for a moment to relax its hold.

Finally, the philosopher Mansell suggested a way out of the difficulty. "Let us imagine," he said, "that after the winds and waves have done their utmost with the pebble, I go down to the beach, and lifting the pebble from its place, deposit it a foot farther up on the sand?"

The answer is plain. Very few, indeed, would argue that human thought and will are under the control of physical forces as that pebble is. Only the strongest materialism you know would say that. Every view meets in that, for there is no doubt that man is a free power in the universe. God is sovereign, but man is free none the less. Old Dr. St. John, when the arguments were against him, used to stamp his foot, and say, "We know we are free and there's an end to it." Mr. Mansell, one of the best philosophers in America, calls man's will the greatest first cause. He means that his will is not under the domination of nature, but takes that pebble and sets it a foot farther up on the shore.

Nature of Miracles

That shows the nature of a miracle. You do not need to believe that God interferes with a law of nature to work His beneficent will for His children. As Lord Abbott said, "Miracles are supernatural—above nature, not contra-natural—that is against nature."

You can easily multiply illustrations of how we change the course of nature. We do it every day, every hour. Every spring some of you go a hundred miles out of the city into the country. The land is plowed and then harrowed. The forces of nature are at work all the time you know. The warm spring rain falls; the sun shines. Something is doing in that ground, far more than we can see, but left to itself you know nature would never bring forth what would be useful to men.

So you interfere with the process of nature, and before long you have a harvest of corn, peas, beans, etc. Left to itself for a million years that plot of ground would not bring forth those products. A superior power, man's will, comes in and directs nature's forces so they will work to beneficent ends. Do you mean to tell me that man can work in that fashion and manipulate the forces of nature to bring about desirable ends according to law, and the God of all nature must sit with hands folded in the midst of the universe that He created? There could not possibly be a sillier suggestion.

Wells says the question as to whether a miracle is possible simply means a query as to whether there is a living God who has created this world. Another says, "To raise the question whether God can perform miracles is to raise the question as to whether God is." The Psalmist expresses astonishment because Israel thought God's power was limited, and they said, "Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?" And we are guilty not only of folly, but impiety as well, when we say that man can so use nature's laws as to make them his servants, but a living God must sit helpless while the laws He has made work on.

Miracles and Scientists

Never let any one lead you into believing that the New Testament and science are in conflict in the matter of miracles, or the Old Testament and science either. There doubtless are individual scientists who will tell you that miracles are not believable and that the stories of miracles are nothing but fables, but that is not the thoughts of science itself. Science once may have been dogmatic, but science of our day is more modest. So many mistakes have been made in the name of science that men (scientific men) are cautious today about saying anything.

A certain scientist said not many years ago that it was impossible to know the chemical constitution of the heavenly bodies or suns—that they were a compressed mass; but new discoveries have been made and now we can analyze the light of the stars, and know what materials the sun and the stars are made of. Science was mistaken, that is all.

Another said that it was impossible for stones to fall on this earth from the heavens, but every child who has visited the museum of natural history knows that he was mistaken. So scientific men may speak with dogmatism, but be mistaken none the less.

Men thought Professor Morse was crazy when he said he could talk fifty miles over a wire. We do not need even the wire today. Nobody will venture to say what is possible or impossible in the realm of the telegraph or telephone in the future. We are doing hundreds of things today that fifty years ago men would have regarded as vagaries of a crazy man if they had even prophesied them.

Hume, the great historian and deist, once said, "No evidence could prove a miracle wrought 1500 years ago, but some of the theological seminaries did not know it." J. S. Mills gave Hume his quietus and Mills has been dead a good many years now. Mills said, "No kind of evidence can prove a miracle to a man who did not believe in a Being who had supernatural power, but to one who does believe, that is full proof that the Creator of our being could interfere with the laws of nature to produce a miracle."

Of course, as I have said, we know an atheist does not believe in miracles because an atheist believes nothing outside the carnal. Of course no one can place God on the same level with man and still believe that He can perform a miracle. Men accept nothing today without first weighing the evidence. The men who reject the miracles are those who either have not weighed the evidence fairly or have taken sides without investigation, that a miracle is impossible.

We have men in pulpits who deny the miracles. They are men who put a low estimate on the character of Jesus Christ. Those two things always go together, and that leads me to say that when we know what sort of a person Jesus Christ was it is easy to believe that He could work miracles.

Miracles Natural to Christ

He was so great, that great things were natural to Him. His thoughts and His personality are in close relation. The greatest man does the greatest things; a divine man does divine things. He Himself is the greatest miracle of all. That He did mighty works does not rest on the mere testimony of men, however unanswerable that testimony may be. His character is the best proof of His ability to do wonderful things. In Him was the remarkable quality of life. "In Him dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." He made all things, John says, and then for fear we should not get it he said it over again in different form, "and without Him was not anything made that hath been made." His miracles are an appropriate offering of an inspirational life.

The question then is not whether Jesus Christ could work miracles but whether He could keep from working miracles. He did miracles because His was a miraculous character. There is a reality about His miracles that you do not find anywhere else. There was never any sense of jugglery about them; no muttering of incantations over them. He never made any show of His great ability; never called attention to Himself. Often He bade the man benefited by the miracles not to tell about it, or the help he had received; and He never worked a miracle for Himself. His wonderful deeds were always the outcome of the passion of His great heart. They were a revelation of the gracious character of God Whom He came into the world to make known to men.

The Culminating Miracle

Of course the culmination of the wonderful things that the Master did was in His resurrection from the dead. He laid down His life voluntarily and took it again voluntarily. He said He would do so. It was an assertion of His own power. That is the supreme miracle of all. The miracle of the resurrection carries the other miracles along with it.

That the apostles believed He arose from the dead does not admit of question for a moment. That Paul believed it nobody can doubt. Those men sealed their faith in the supreme miracle by laying down their lives for it, and men do not die for a lie. The evidence that they died for a great truth is sufficient if it means anything at all.

Conscience and Conversion

Now there are things connected with our life here which cannot be explained, except as we believe God has interposed in the world's affairs. No one can explain how life began in the world.

A young man said to me some time ago, "Pastor, we will get it. We will know by chemical processes how life came, by and by."

"But," I said, "I have found it. I do not need to see. God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life." Men have tried to guess it but they have made mighty poor attempts. The voice of science still says as clearly as ever before that life comes only from life. Human life comes from life.

The only rational explanation of the presence of life in the world is that of a living God who created us. How did men ever get to feel themselves morally responsible? Nobody can say much to a problem like that. There is absolutely no answer to it except by believing that God put that sense of accountability within a man's bosom, and thus made him different from the life below him.

Who can explain that supreme change in a man's nature that we call conversion except to say that it is a miracle? I have had conversions in my church in New York City as marvelous to me as any conversion in the New Testament. The converted man calls himself properly a miracle of grace. He is. It is so great a change that the New Testament properly calls it a "new birth"—an entire making over of the man.

That such changes are wrought nobody who is fair can deny, and the only rational explanation is that the Saviour whose power opened the eyes of the blind and the ears of the deaf, gave cleansing to the leper, and brought the dead back to life 1900 years ago, is in the world today and still working. We have felt the touch of that hand ourselves and we know that what it did once it still does. He who fed the hungry souls 1900 years ago can do it still. He can still our unquiet lives as he stilled Tiberias. He can make an impure man in these days, pure. He can hold onto us as He rescued Peter when sinking into the sea. He will not leave us if we are in His work; and He will keep us unto the end.

God's Three-fold Warning Applied to Modernism

By Rev. J. C. Massee, D. D., Tremont Temple, Boston

"NOW the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said to the woman, Yea, hath God said, ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

"And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

"And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die; for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Gods knowing good and evil.

"And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat" (Gen. 3:1-6).

Every doctrine of God's word is contained embryonically in Genesis. For instance, in Genesis you have two parallel lines of revelation, and these run throughout the book, for God always reveals Himself to man individually and in community life.

Revelation in Genesis to the man individually is seven-fold; the beginning of the human family, the beginning of sin, of religion, of worship, of civilization, of faith and of the Messianic hope.

The revelation of God concerning man in a community life is also seven-fold in this book. A chosen seed, Seth; a chosen race, Shem; a chosen family, Abraham; a chosen man, Jacob; a chosen nation, Israel; a chosen tribe, Judah, and the Messianic kingdom, "For the scepter shall not depart from Judah until he come to Shiloh." You have the whole book unfolded in these two parallel revelations.

Every great warning which God gives to men is also found here, and every great exhortation, and doctrine.

I read these few words from the third chapter of Genesis in order that I might put before you: (1) The warning of God against the acceptance of the plausible; (2) the warning of God to believe the Word of God; and (3) the warning of God to choose the way of the cross.

Beware the Plausible

What do I mean by that? I mean beware of that which is evidently true; so perfectly apparent that everybody sees it, that it can be demonstrated by way of the eye.

I have no doubt that Satan demonstrated to the woman the fallacy of God's statement. He walked over to the tree, pulled down a limb, picked the fruit, ate it in her presence, and then said, "See, I have shown you."

The woman looked at him and saw he did not die, but she did not discern that what he, being inherently evil, could do, she could not do without dying. Oh the plausible things men believe because they are demonstrated.

This very hour God is warning men against accepting plausible philosophies for religion, and for salvation. This world with all its philosophies and religions has never discovered more than three or four substitutes for the truth, and have tried to say again and again that these will substitute. What are they?

First, they are reiterating that to have a good man we must provide him with a perfect environment, that righteous character is dependent upon environment. Is that true? God said in the beginning it was not. He gave man a perfect environment. There were flowers without thorns and fruits without thistles in Eden. Not a single snake in the garden, and yet in there Satan crawled his slimy way, and caused the woman to sin against God, and our first parents were driven out from the presence of God. There is no place in the world where Satan will not come.

I have a friend in the Northwest who told me he had traveled up and down that great Canadian country, over mile upon mile of prairie land, and where man never came he had never seen a thistle in the ground. Grass grows there, the flowers grow, but the hour that man comes, thorns and weeds spring up. Man may go his way again, his houses may drop down and the land return waste, but the thorns and thistles remain.

It is not environment that makes the man but man that makes the environment, because there is sin in man's heart and the curse of sin is not only upon man but upon the world in which he lives.

All the environment of this world will not make a man righteous. I declare that from the conviction of my heart. Today men are going up and down this land preaching a social gospel. It will never do the business.

Beware the "Social Order" Idea

The next great error of Modernism, next to infidelity, is, that you can make men righteous and retain righteousness in them, by giving them a perfect social order.

I remind you that in the early time it was said, "Enoch walked with God and was not, for God took him." What happened to his sons?

If it had been possible to have righteousness by perfect social order Enoch would have established it. Enoch lived three hundred years and had sons and daughters, and walked with God. But when he was through living, his children married the sons and daughters of Cain. Man is not able to maintain righteousness simply by a perfect social order.

Neither can man be maintained in righteousness by a perfect religious system.

We have two men coming to an altar. Abel laid a bloody victim on it. Cain brought the best results of his toil. God rejected Cain and then the man who had refused a bloody sacrifice went out and bathed his hands in the blood of his brother. I say to you that from that hour to this the blood of life has been shed by men who reject the bloody sacrifice of Jesus Christ.

I have a conviction that the day has come in the Christian church for those who believe in salvation through the blood of Christ to part company forever with those who reject that atonement. I do not want divisions save when God makes them, but we cannot walk in holy fellowship with men who reject the Christ of this book.

No Common Platform

A while ago, in Brooklyn, before a meeting of Baptist ministers, a Jewish Rabbi was invited to speak. Rabbi Silverman was of charming personality and glowing eloquence. For an hour he pleaded with us to do away with the prejudice against his people, and strive with them to help bear the burden of a troubled world. He said, "Men and brethren, let us lay aside our differences; let us lay our hands to the common task and take on our shoulders the common burden; for after all, the only thing that separates Baptists and Jews is a theological dogma, not an essential evil."

My brethren in the ministry applauded him. But when he sat down, and some of them said words of appreciation, I stood up and said, "Rabbi Silverman, I accord you every courtesy of this hour. I have listened with pleasure to your appeal as you pictured the tragedy of the earth, and had you been content to ask us to share with you the burden of the world, I would have said 'Yes,' gladly, but when you say the only difference between you and me is 'a theological dogma, and not an essential evil,' I must remind you that that difference put Christ on the cross, and in my heart it put Christ on the throne. That is the difference, a difference for time and eternity."

There is no common religious platform possible for me. They invited us to come on a certain day with all other citizens in the community and hold a great religious service; to put social service above everything else, and I moved that we reject the invitation on the ground that we could not have one common religious platform.

They went away and said I would not sit on the same platform with a Jew. I would sit on the same platform with a Jew, but what I said was, "I wouldn't stand on the same platform with any man who denies the deity of Christ." Sitting on the platform as a mere matter of physical juxtaposition means nothing, but to stand on the same platform I simply would not. I know of one Christ, the Christ of this book; the Christ of the supernatural birth, the sinless life, the vicarious death, the triumphant resurrection, the glorious ascension, and the glorious consummation of the church of God. But I believe there is no common religion possible to man, one of whom crowns him and the other crucifies him!

A Chicago University professor once said to me that there was no difference in experience; the only difference was in explanation.

I replied, "Doctor, let me understand you. Do you mean to say there is no difference in the experience of men, one of whom believes Jesus Christ was the Son of God and the other believes him to be the bastard son of Mary and Joseph?"

"Not a particle of difference, only in explanation," he replied.

God deliver us from that sort of infidelity.

Perfect social order, perfect religious system, perfect environment! God swept the earth clean and then God chose out one again. Noah came out of the ark into the world with perfect social order and a perfect religious system, the old altar rebuilt. What did he do? With a perfect social order, and religious system, he got drunk.

Then God went down to Ur and called out one man, out of a poor environment, and said to him as he walked in the midst of it, "Look up, Abraham, look up and believe God." His personality responded to the personality of God and of a living faith, and that is where the gospel of Christ brings us, where the other lines leave us.

Believe the Word of God

The word of God is believable, trustworthy; try it out.

It was said to me when I went to Boston, "Massee, you are one hundred years behind the times. You are an old fogy. Do you think Boston will stand for the old stuff you are preaching here?"

"I do not know whether Boston will stand for it, but I am going to stand on that Word, and if I go down it will be when that Word goes down under me. I shall never have another gospel."

And then the man said, "Massee, do you think you will ever catch up?"

"That depends altogether on which way you are going. If you are going to perdition we never will."

Believe the Word. I want to say to you who are going out to preach and teach, whether you are in a little country church, or a great metropolitan church, men with hungry hearts respond to the preaching of the old gospel. In God's name never preach anything else. The Bible is the most scientifically correct book this world has ever had. Science will never be able to shake the divine order of creation in the first chapter of Genesis.

A young school girl came home and said, "Father is the moon made out of green cheese? The teacher down at school said the moon was made out of green cheese. I don't know whether she was being funny or telling the truth."

Her father said, "I can't tell you. Maybe the Bible would."

"Oh, you think the Bible will settle anything?"

"Yes, I think it will."

"Then I will spend this afternoon finding out if the Bible has anything to say about the moon and green cheese."

Coming down stairs about half an hour later, as happy as could be, she said, "It's all right, dad. I know the moon isn't made out of green cheese!"

"How did you find it out?"

"Found it in the first chapter of Genesis!"

"Why, I never saw anything about that there."

"But, dad, you didn't know how to apply the scientific method! I have found that the moon was made on the fourth day, and cows were made on the sixth day. You can't have cheese without cows. It's the perfect scientific method."

Standard Oil in Egypt

Today, in Egypt, they are mining oil and that oil is being sold in America, and you buy it to run your automobiles.

How did it come about? One day a Standard Oil official found a Bible and began to read. He turned to Exodus and read of the most famous baby in the world. His mother hid him as long as she could, and then she made a crib for him and daubed it inside and out with pitch.

He read that over, "pitch," "pitch." And then he thought if there is pitch there must be oil there. And if there were pitch and oil there 5,000 years ago they are there now, for nobody ever has bothered it. He went there and found the pitch where Moses said it was, and the oil under the pitch. Now it is being sent back to you and to all the world.

O, young people, I want to urge you to preach this book.

Calvin Thomas went down to preach in Kentucky, and took the text, "The wicked shall be turned into hell," and when he got through an old friend came up and said, "Oh, what a fool you have been! Don't you know that there is no such place as hell? Modernism did away with that theory. Take it from me and don't go on preaching that any more."

Thomas picked up the Bible, found the chapter and verse, and said, "Old fellow, it is still there!"

Then his friend went on to argue and tried to prove that there could not be a hell.

Again Mr. Thomas found the verse and put it in the lawyer's hands and said, "It is still there."

He went up in the air and for five full minutes tried to prove that there was not any hell.

Once more Thomas showed him the verse. The lawyer, thoroughly disgusted, walked out. But he came back to hear him preach again, when a second time Thomas proclaimed the condition of those without Christ. The lawyer this time accepted Christ, and as he came down the aisle he took Thomas by the hand and said, "Calvin, you're the only man that I have ever seen who had sense enough to preach to a fool."

O, young men, believe the Word of God, and never cease to proclaim it.

Choose the Way of the Cross

The hour is twelve but I want just three or four minutes for a last thought. Beware the plausible, believe the Word, and choose the way of the Cross.

You say to me, "Mr. Massee is the cross in Genesis?"

Yes, it is everywhere. God wrote the Cross into human experience from the beginning. When man and God came to the parting of the ways, when our first parents' eyes were opened, when the Devil tempted them and they sinned, and their sin cried out against the whole world, God set up a place where man who had walked away from Him might come back to him.

When the Lord Jesus Christ was asked to explain the way of eternal life He said, "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."

What did He mean? He denied Himself and gave up all for His brother man.

I once heard a preacher urging that this was to be done by serving others. I do not believe this comes within a thousand miles of what Jesus said. Here is what He said, and He who said it was He who took on Himself our sins and who died in our place: "If any man will come after me, let him put away self, put self on the cross, self-life denied, self-life repudiated, self emptied of self, that God might be within him."

My will against God's will? I yield my will. My way against God's way? I yield my way. My life against God's life? I yield my life. I enthrone the will of God. I choose the way of God. I accept the life of God. That is life. The other way from that place of parting is death.

The Lord Jesus Christ embraced the cross that He might save the world, that man might through death find life. And I say to you today, in His name, the only way to life is through the cross.

If you go into one of the smaller galleries of Venice you will find a picture of a young woman facing a figure which is the artist's conception of Christ, and holding in her hand a crown. Underneath is written, "Who's Head?"

I say to you that this is the supreme question. On whose head will you put the crown of your life, your vision, your service? Who's head, yours or Christ's? May God help you to make the right choice.

NEWS OF MORMONISM

Utah Mormonism reports officially for 1921, 22,779 net increase, of which 7,113 were converts, the rest natural growth. The total number of the Utah faith may thus be estimated as probably 550,000, though no statistics are forthcoming. The "Reorganized," adding some for corrections, have a the grand total of about 645,000. The late statement of the Federated Churches by strange figuring instead of asking men who know, made out 1,646,170, which was palpably wrong to one acquainted with the facts. We have been publishing the Utah numbers as about 500,000 for a few years; and that has been correct by every test, though triple the number of a generation ago.

Courteously answering an inquiry, the "Reorganized" officials state that their number of adherents June 1, was in round numbers 94,000, exclusive of nearly 8,000 eliminated by rigorous pruning of the lists as to members, unknown or deceased, which has been done recently. Numbers of these are expected to be located later. Over 10,000 baptisms in two and one-half years are reported, with net gain in that period of about 6,000. The figures given in March, 1921, made the net membership 96,788, probably over 100,000 reported this year—which would have been the case if the pruning had not been done. Both kinds of Mormonism are working very hard. They should be a lesson for Christian people of every denomination in this; only that we work for the true cause of Christ! Why should not Christian people speak as often of Him and his truth as any other system does of their fad beliefs?—Light on Mormonism.

REV. NEWTON JONES OF LONDON TO VISIT AMERICA

Rev. Newton Jones, the well-known missioner of the National Sunday-School Union of England, expects to visit the United States and Canada in the fall and winter of 1923-24. He has already made a number of engagements, but has some open dates for those who may desire his services. Mr. Jones visited this country within the past year, rendering excellent service in New York, Chicago, Grand Rapids, Mich., Cleveland, O., Altoona, Pa., Baltimore, Md., and at various points in Canada.

He is a strong and popular speaker and is warmly commended by Dr. F. B. Meyer, Dr. Jowett, Rev. John MacNeil and Professor W. M. Clow, as a Bible teacher, evangelist, and "Chalk Talker" to children and young people, as well as adults. Inquiries as to his services may be addressed to The Moody Bible Institute.

A "VOICE"

"Tomorrow," he faithfully promised, "tomorrow for revival I'll pray;
Tomorrow I'll plead as I ought to, I'm busy, too busy, today!
Tomorrow I'll spend in my closet, tomorrow I will humbly bow."
Yet ever a "voice" kept whispering, "But the Church is languishing NOW!"

Tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow—the delay e'er repeated went on;
Tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow—till the years and the "voice" were gone?
Till the Church its God had forgotten? Till the land was covered with sin?
Till millions had hopelessly perished, and eternity was ushered in?

O members of the body of Christ, O ye Church of the living God,
O editors and leaders and pastors, O saints where our fathers trod;
The "voice" still insistently whispers; answer not, "Tomorrow I'll pray."
The Voice is one of authority; THE CHURCH NEEDS REVIVING TODAY!

The purpose of this department is to give the views of editors of periodicals, chiefly religious, on matters of interest to our readers. PRESENT DAY INTOLERANCE

Daily News (Chicago).

The devotees of science who thought that science would liberate mankind from its errors were badly hit by the late war. In that war they saw the most scientific nation in the world give itself to the pursuit of the most detestable errors and illusions. They are destined to a similar awakening regarding science in matters within our national border. The conquering of even the impalpable waves of the ether is not the conquering or regenerating of the spirit of man. Nor is it even any strengthening of the pure reasoning powers of his brain. He gets more information than did his ancestors, but he does not necessarily get any improved power of discriminating between information and misinformation.

If the gentlemen who manage our educational system will give our children the faculty of judging evidence, of weighing it, of sifting it, of separating proved truth from unproved and unestablished assertion, they will do more for this country than they could do by any possible multiplying of information and accumulating of scientific mechanical knowledge and skill.

LEADING THE CHILD INTO TEMPTATION

The Herald of Gospel Liberty

On every hand our young people are being allured into ways to spend their money for things they cannot afford to buy, and their time in ways that are harmful rather than beneficial. Business men know the almost irresistible power of salesmanship and advertising. But few parents have realized how this same power affects the lives of their children. In magazines, on billboards, in window displays, everywhere youth is tempted to use fine tobaccos, to wear gaudy and costly raiment, to dress in daring and extreme garb, to drink this or that or the other kind of beverage—and all at a cost of money which only a few of them can afford, and at a cost of moral fiber and stamina and regular habits which none of them can afford. In no previous generation did childhood and youth ever have thrown about them so many allurements and tendencies drawing them away from thrift and industry and studious habits as at present. And happy indeed is that home whose parents have perceived this truth, and have wisely and tactfully fortified its children against this modern danger.

"THE OLD EVANGELISM IS DEAD"

Christian Advocate.

A writer, speaking in a letter of conditions in his section of this country, says: "Of course the old evangelism is dead."

Indeed, what did it die of? Who killed it? Is sin dead? Is death dead? Is eternity dead? Is personal need of salvation dead? Is God, and is the Word of God, dead?

Evangelism may be dead, but is it not then time there was a resurrection from the dead? Does it put an end to sin to say nothing any more about it, to nurse under the blanket the viper that will yet strike us down? Evangelism was dead in Sodom and Gomorrah; it was dead at the feast of Belshazzar; it was dead in the sanhedrin that crucified the Saviour—the Son of God who preached evangelism, and who preached it because God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son to save men from sin. Evangelism has frequently been dead—but alas, and alack, go look on the world in those days when evangelism was not so much as spoken! Go, look on the church in those dark days! There may be change in methods, but as long as men are what they are, as long as sin is sin, what can be the cry of the preacher unless it is, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world?"

COMMUNIST SUNDAY-SCHOOLS

Daily Telegraph

Miss Margaret Milne Farquharson, speaking recently at a meeting of the National Political League, held for the purpose of directing public attention to the danger of Communist Sunday-schools of which there are reported to be 200 in the country, said that two Sundays ago one of the League's workers went into an extreme proletarian school. About eighty children were present. There was a "comrade" in the chair. The room was hung with portraits of Lenin and Trotsky and revolutionary catchwords. The teacher was a German Jew, and he said he had been often lately in Germany, and had a passport. In Germany he was put in touch with officials from Russia, who gave him instructions for the movement. He was a clever and attractive man, and the children liked him. He gave them a lesson on starvation and unemployment, rousing as much bitterness of feeling as he could. When reference was made to revolution the children cheered, and when religion was mentioned they scoffed and jeered at the word. Major Boyd-Carpenter, M. P., declared that the first article of the "Red" catechism was that there was no God; the second, that their greatest opponent was their employer; and the third, that their greatest enemy was the man who had got something they had not got.

THE INCREASING APOSTASY AND BLINDNESS

Our Hope

It would take many pages to record all what is going on in the greater part of the professing church of today showing the drift of things toward the predicted complete apostasy. We can give but a few of the many signs of the times in this direction.

In Minneapolis there is now a church which aims at the revival of the dance in connection with what they call "divine worship." The preacher illustrated his idea by "dancing the doxology." The spirit of Easter is to be executed by a resurrection dance and two young ladies will dance out the 27th Psalm. What next?

In the same city a preacher of an evangelical denomination declared that "Sunday evening is the playtime of the week for thousands of persons and that it is up to the church to get the people. If we are going to get them we must appeal to their play instinct. The preacher might well study the methods of the theater and use them to advantage."

In the St. Mark's Place Episcopal church of New York City a service was recently held by the rector and by a Parsee priest. The report said the altar of the church was used in the Christian portion of the service. For the other portion there was an altar copied from an ancient Parsee shrine, and on it an urn containing the sacred fire, the emblem of deity. Could it be worse?

Then we might quote the nasty, wicked, malicious utterances from the lips of "clergymen" of various denominations who deny the virgin birth, who insult God and His Christ. If Thomas Paine, Bradlaugh and Ingersoll were living today they would blush in listening to these garbed rascals who vowed once to preach the Word and stand by the creed of their denominations and who have become traitors worse than Judas ever was. God have mercy on them!

What Every Christian Should Believe

By William Evans

About the Bible, God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, and Satan.

The object of this book is not to lay down dogmatically what every Christian should be compelled to believe, but to state in plain, unmistakable terms what true Christians from the beginning have believed and what those led by the Spirit of truth do believe.

"SPOILED" BY GOING TO A BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL.

Evangelical Messenger.

"It has just spoiled her," was the strange and shallow-minded remark by a lady concerning a young woman whom I intimately knew, and who had attended a Bible Training School. She considered the young woman "spoiled" because the latter did not accept her views as to certain social maxims and practices, and because she took a deeper interest than ever in spiritual things. May it be the blessed lot of many others to be "spoiled" in the same manner!

But just a few words as to how the young woman was "spoiled." Her interest in and knowledge of the Bible were very greatly increased, her religious experience was considerably deepened, and her usefulness greatly augmented. Greater interest was awakened in Bible study in her home. She also became a far more efficient teacher in the Sunday-school, so that all her scholars became Christians. Going to that Bible school did not make the young woman gloomy or unsociable, but rather added charm and interest to her daily life. The unsaved were not repelled by her introduction of religious subjects in social intercourse; but, on the contrary, interested and benefited. She wisely adapted herself to circumstances, and drew them out in inquiry as to the way of salvation. "Spoiled," indeed, for the frivolous things of the world, a kind of spoiling many others need. Going to a Bible Training School, or our own theological seminary, may accomplish it for them under the blessing of God.

A GREAT CITY'S SHAME

United Presbyterian

The citizens of Buffalo, N. Y., elected as mayor Frank X. Schwab, who sought the office as an out and out "wet" candidate. He owns a brewery and has been convicted of violating the Volstead law. His election meant that the men engaged in the business of enforcing the prohibition law of the land will have a hard and thorny path. By the election of such a man Buffalo has placed itself in a very unhappy situation. His attitude has been one of defiance to the Eighteenth Constitutional Amendment and of open encouragement to breakers of the law. Under his regime Buffalo will surely become the bootleggers' heaven and an example to strengthen all the lawless souls and hands in the land. To see a great city in practical rebellion against constitutional law is not an assuring sight and must be the occasion of deep humiliation to its Christian citizenship. The Gazette Times, Pittsburgh, says: "Buffalo has become known as one of the wettest spots in the country, implying that there the people generally openly defy the law against traffic in intoxicants. Confirmation has been given the news that Mayor Schwab, who is president of a brewing company, has pleaded guilty to violating the Volstead act.

It is stated that the offenses he was accused of were committed before his election to the mayoralty. But the matter of time does not in any sense mitigate the position in which his incumbency of the chief magistracy of the city places the community. A lawbreaker before he took office, it is a fair surmise that he has not been scrupulous in obeying the liquor law since he took the official oath. His attitude toward prohibition had been carefully explained. He had placed himself in the position of advocate of law breaking. It would be strange if he did not do what he desired others to do. The influence of his sentiments against obedience unquestionably has been bad. The spectacle of the mayor of a great city being penalized in open court for violating the law of the land should make the people of that city grieve and pause to take stock of their moral state. If Buffalo continues to support its mayor now that he has been revealed as a practitioner of the vile principles he has preached, it will acknowledge itself practically a rebel against the constitution."

Better Giving
Acts 20: 31-35

The experience of the apostle presented in these verses begins with a word of warning—"Watch and remember." This warning is based on the prediction that after his departure, false teachers would arise who would "draw away disciples after them." In view of this, the apostle bids his hearers to be watchful.

The words which relate closely to our subject are found in verses 33-35. The adoption of the principle set forth in these verses will lead us to the place of "better giving."

There is, first of all, the principle of a proper estimation of comparative values. This is found in verse 33. Such a principle saves us from covetousness and the love of display. Faith lays hold of the unseen and enters into possession of spiritual joys which the world knows not of; being thus enriched, one is liberated from the prevailing sin of covetousness. Not only so, but with this proper estimate of spiritual and eternal things, there comes the impulse towards better giving for the promotion of these things.

The second principle is that of industry, honest toil, in order that one may have something to give. This is found in verse 34. This principle provides enthusiasm and zest for the daily round of toil. It transforms our tasks into work for God. It purifies and ennobles the soul and makes "better giving" a matter of service and sacrifice.

The third principle is seen in the words of verse 35, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." There are two types of life, the giving life and the getting life; one into which blessing flows, and one through which blessing flows to others.

The "giving life" is the more blessed one.

God's Commands and Our Obedience
Psalm 119:33-40

"Thy statutes," "thy law," "thy commandments," "thy testimonies," "thy word," "thy judgments," are terms which indicate the revealed will of God that by which life is to be measured and guided and judged.

Some one has forcefully referred to the Bible in this way: "This book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christians' charter. Here Paradise is restored, heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. Christ is its grand subject, our good its design, and the glory of God its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be opened at the judgment, and be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor, and condemn all who trifle with its sacred contents."

To a book like this, God's Book, the only sane and safe attitude is that of committal and yieldedness. Such action, springing from faith, will lead to a life of obedience to the commandments of God.

Getting an Education
Proverbs 9:1-11

The last verses give the gist of the lesson before us: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom and the knowledge of the holy is understanding." No education is worth getting that leaves out the wisdom and understanding which comes to the soul as a result of proper adjustment toward God.

God has revealed Himself in His Word and in His works. Inasmuch as He is the author of both, there can be no contradiction between their true testimony. A false or immature interpretation of either or both of these revelations may contain inconsistencies, but a true interpretation of both is bound to harmonize.

To the church, there has been committed the task of interpreting and applying spiritual truth as revealed in the Bible, while to the school has been assigned the task of interpreting the revelation of God in His works, sometimes called scientific truth. Between them, there should be no conflict. Nevertheless, there is today, a very serious and far-reaching conflict. This fact obviously demands the greatest care on the part of those seeking an education and imposes obligations on parents and guardians who may direct or advise in this matter. It should be remembered that the conflict between church and school is not concerned with demonstrated facts, but over a speculative philosophy and unproved theories masquerading under the name of evolution. The falsities of evolutionary assumptions have been clearly shown. As a philosophy or interpretation of life, this theory is waning. Nevertheless, it has wrought havoc with the faith of Christian young men and women, who were not fortified with an intelligent knowledge of the Word of God. Any education that ignores God as He has revealed Himself in Christ, is pagan and not Christian, even though it be called a denominational school.

An education is costly, not in coin as much as in hard labor, but it can be gained and is worth all it costs. God brings to the top of the mountain those who climb.

How Can We Help Foreign Mission Work?
Isaiah 6:1-8

The obvious answer to the question of our topic is found in the words of verse 8, "Here am I, send me. Send me in person or through a substitute; through money; through prayer; through intelligent and persistent effort, in any way that seems best, send me." This attitude of soul presupposes an experience similar to that which the prophet himself had and which is recorded in our Scripture lesson.

Here we find a vision, first of the Lord, "high and lifted up," followed by a vision of human need and opportunity. To see and learn that God is on the throne, the place of government and control, always marks an epoch in spiritual experience. Isaiah never forgot it. He even remembered the time of its occurrence, "The year that king Uzziah died." It was a vision of glory and of grace, for it not only revealed the need of cleansing, but also provided the means for the cleansing. It prepared the prophet for a larger ministry and more effective service than he had ever known before. When the vision of human need and opportunity to meet that need came to him, his heart expressed itself in the familiar words, "Here am I, send me."

God commits the interests of His kingdom and the progress of His gospel to prepared hearts, those who have caught the vision of His omnipotence in such a clear way that their own impotence can never again be a sufficient ground for refusal to respond to the call of God. Their prayer is:

Give me thy heart, O Christ! Thy love untold.
That I, like Thee, may pity; like Thee, may preach.
For round me spreads on every side a waste,
Drearer than that which moved Thy soul to sadness.
No ray hath pierced this immemorial gloom,
And scarce these darkened, toiling myriads taste
Even a few drops of fleeting, earthly gladness,
As they move on, slow, silent, to the tomb.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

IN HIS NAME

F. A. T., Rolling Prairie, Ind.

Question: Should not all of our prayers be made in the name of Jesus, or using some title referring to Him?

Answer: Our answer is in the affirmative. The promise of answered prayer is to ask in Christ's name; that is, according to His person and His will (John 15:16). Moreover, He also said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me" (John 14:6). For one to persistently refuse to pray in that name, as in the case you mention, would seem to indicate that either the person is not a Christian or has been wrongly instructed.

ROMANS 8:29,30

H. L. H., Vidette, Ga.

Verse 29 teaches the foreknowledge and predestination of God in respect to the Christian's conformity to Christ; while, verse 30 teaches the effectual calling, justification, and glorification of the Christian. These truths are wholly for the comfort and assurance of the Christian, whose salvation to the uttermost does not depend upon himself, but upon the love and power of God. Upon the other hand this passage does not teach barren fatalism. Man is always a free moral agent. God can save only those who believe on Him and who come to Him. Hence to the non-Christian the invitation always is, "Whosoever will."

BOOKS ATTACKED BY THE HIGHER CRITICS

* * * * * *

To our nameless and unlocalized reader we would say that most of the books of the Bible have been subject to the attacks of the destructive critics, but it is impossible in our limited space to answer "all of the objections with a word regarding each." In the Old Testament the books chiefly attacked have been the Pentateuch, the Chronicles, the Psalms, Isaiah, and Daniel. For a brief rebuttal we would recommend a pamphlet by Prof. Robert Dick Wilson, Ph. D., D. D., entitled Is Higher Criticism Scholarly? A fuller treatment of the subject is given by Prof. John H. Raven, D. D., in his Old Testament Introduction, or by James M. Gray in Primers of the Faith.

TOBACCO AND THE THEATER

R. B., Cleveland, O.

(1) The "filthy" tobacco user, the drunkard, and the drug addict may be saved and receive the gift of the Holy Ghost immediately upon believing. Such has been the repeated experience.

(2) Occasional attendance upon the theater may result in no conscious spiritual harm to one person, while another may receive spiritual injury of which he alone is unconscious. Besides, the subtle influences are such that often only the most spiritually minded would be able to detect certain phases of injury.

(3) Although the Bible says, "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved," it is yet possible for one to sin away his day of grace, because repeated refusals to respond to the voice of God gradually makes the ear dull of hearing. Under such conditions the day of grace for that person is past.

THE BEST REFERENCE BIBLE

B. L. K., Harrisonburg, Va.

(1) The best reference Bible is a matter of personal preference. For ordinary reading the King James Version is as good as any. The Scofield Reference Bible is the King James Version, but in our judgment the marginal references of this edition are more valuable than most others. It is well to own also an inexpensive copy of the Nelson American Revised Standard.

(2) The marginal references to God's rest in the fourth of Hebrews are based upon a mistaken interpretation. The rest referred to is not the weekly rest day of the Old Testament, but the spiritual rest of the soul, of which the bodily rest was an intimation or illustration.

(3) The prophecies in Isaiah 3:16-26 and 4:1, 3, 4, have complete fulfilment in the future. Isaiah 4:2, 5, 6 clearly refer to the kingdom age, which is still future. The first and second chapters of Lamentations contain a picture of the desolations and grief of Jerusalem following the destruction under Nebuchadnezzar.

RE-INCARNATION

W. S., Admiral, Sask.

This is a revival of Brahmanism, Buddhism and other ancient religions now held by the Theosophists and others in this country. Some Jews held this belief, but it did not generally prevail among them. It was also considered heretical by the early church. The passages quoted in the article by Mr. L. F. Englesby have little value as proofs. Would the guilty conscience of Herod attributing the power of Jesus to the risen John the Baptist (Mark 6:14,15) be accepted as any proof of a re-incarnation of that prophet? In regard to John the Baptist being a re-incarnation of Elijah (Matt. 11:14) the true explanation is that John the Baptist came "in the spirit and power of Elijah" (Luke 1:17). He was not Elijah re-incarnated (John 1:21,25). The phrase in Revelations 3:12, "and he shall go no more out," simply teaches the eternal security of the believer. The last passage (John 9:2) need not necessarily raise the question of the blind man sinning in a pre-incarnate existence. The question merely emphasizes the belief of the disciples that sin somewhere must have been the cause of the blindness. The question would be a slender proof for the doctrine of a re-incarnation.

Back of the entire article is evolution, from which the writer argues this theory of re-incarnation. As he says, "It fits in so well with the theory of evolution." By repeated re-incarnations the spirit of man is to "absorb experience from body to body" and finally grow "into a superman with the ages." Time after time he will come back to this earth until "he shall have overcome all the evils of the flesh and become so perfected that he does not need to go back." This is the latest that evolution has to offer to us. Far better is it to be a son of God, and when death comes to enter at once into the heavenly mansions.

BRIEF MENTION

V. C. K., Waterloo, Iowa.

The following Scripture passages should afford comfort to a parent from whom death has removed an infant: Isaiah 40:11; Matthew 18:1–6, 10–14; Luke 18:15, 16; Jeremiah 31:15–17.

C. D., Klamath Falls, Ore.

God is much more than a "universal principle." He is also an "external personality," the all-wise, all-knowing, loving Father. God may be imminent in us, but He also is transcendent.

The case you describe does not warrant legal separation upon scriptural grounds. Proof of the wife's death seems to be the only way out of the difficulty.

The Old Testament saints are to be raised at the same time as the saints of the New Testament. (Dan. 12:1–4; John 5:29; 1 Cor. 15:23). Only the "rest of the dead" are raised after the millennium (Rev. 20:5).

The two men in your community who claim to be the two witnesses of Revelation 11:3 are false witnesses. They probably are not doing the work of the two witnesses (vv. 4-6), neither are they prophesying in the city where our Lord was crucified (v. 8).

The Week Day Church School Movement

Over 200 cities and towns carried on religious instruction during the last school year.

Schools Numbered 700. Children Enrolled, About 50,000

The increase in schools was about 300 per cent during the year.

The rapid growth is indicative of the distinct, heartfelt need of religious education in our school system of education and it is destined to become an agency of major importance in the education of American childhood and youth.

To aid pastors and churches The Board of Publication acts as a bureau of information on all questions of religious education. Rev. Walter Albion Squires is Director of this work, and has written a book on the subject, entitled—

The Week Day Church School

Cloth, 168 pages. $1.25, postpaid

It gives extensive information on all problems associated with this movement, and many graphic charts are distributed through the book to clearly explain certain points in the book which need emphasis.

Teaching the Law of God
Nehemiah 8:1-18

Golden Text:—"Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end."—Psalm 119:33.

It will be of interest and profit to find in this passage an ideal Sunday-school class.

I. A Model Bible Class (vv. 1-6).

1. The Eager Assembly (v. 1). The people gathered themselves together and "spake unto Ezra to bring the book of the law." It was not a matter of the teacher urging the class to come together, but the class with yearning hearts requesting the teacher to come with God's Word. It is a most undesirable task to feed a child which is unwilling to eat. People need to come frequently together to hear God's Word. They need to see God's holiness as an ideal. Not only do they need to see their sins, but they need to be reminded of their duty. They have sorrows also which only can be met by God's Word. The Bible is the only book for the Sunday-school.

2. The Representative Assembly (v. 2) The class was made up of men, women and children. The men then did not leave the church-going to the women. Neither were the children left at home with nurses or to play on the streets. God's Word should be taught to all classes, men, women and children. The marvel of God's book is that it can be understood by all classes. The child can grasp its truths with the adult.

3. An Appreciative Assembly (v. 3). Their ears were attentive from morning to mid-day. So eager were they to know God's Word that they did not get tired although the lesson lasted for five or six hours. Today where the class recognizes that God is speaking through His Word they listen with attention.

4. Due Reverence Shown God's Word (vv. 4, 5). When Ezra opened the law all the people stood up. This they did out of respect for the holy Book. The reason there is not proper reverence for the Bible is that people are not taught to believe it as God's Word. Reverence in the house of God will only be when the Bible is regarded as God's very words. We should not worship the Bible, but we should esteem it as we esteem no other book.

5. They Joined Heartily in the Prayer (v.6). As Ezra led them in prayer the people joined heartily in saying, "Amen! Amen!" bowing their faces to the ground.

II. A Model Bible Teacher (vv.7, 8).

Much depends upon the teacher as to the attitude and behavior of the class.

1. He Stood Up Where the People Could See Him (v.5). The position and bearing of the teacher has much to do with the attention and interest of the class.

2. He Read Distinctly (v.8). Much Bible-reading is greatly to the discredit of the Word and the reader. Perhaps no reading is so poorly done as that of the Bible.

3. Caused the People to Understand the Reading (v.8). The supreme business of the teacher is to make the Word of God so plain that all, old and young, can understand. The teaching should be clear, simple and definite. Failure in this is inexcusable.

III. The Impressions Made (vv.9-18).

1. Conviction of Sin (v.9). The Word of God brings conviction of sin (Acts 2:37). It is quick and powerful (Heb. 4:12). The way to get conviction of sin is by teaching the Word of God, not appealing to the emotions by telling death-bed stories. The Holy Spirit applies the Word. The people had real cause for sorrow—they were far from God. They not only had become worldly and the rich were in their greed oppressing the poor, but they were perplexed through their mixed marriages. They had violated the law of God of intermarriage with the heathen. What conviction of sin the teaching of God's Word would effect today along this line!

2. Weeping Turned into Joy (vv.10-12). When sins have been perceived and confessed God would not have His children to be sad. Continued mourning will not atone for the sins that are past. It unfits one for present tasks and dishonors a pardoning God. Besides, joy has a salutary effect upon one's entire being. It quickens the circulation of the blood and gives buoyancy to life. "The joy of the Lord is your strength" (v.10). To be joyful is a positive Christian duty (Phil. 4:4; Gal. 5:22). We may be placed in difficult positions, but should joy in the Lord.

3. Shared Their Blessings with Others (vv. 10-12). Christianity is not having a good time alone; it is sharing our prosperity with others. True joy manifests itself in giving to others. Pure religion goes out to minister to the poor (James 1:27).

4. The People Obeyed (vv.13-18). In their acquaintance with the Scriptures they found that the Feast of Tabernacles had been long neglected. As soon as they understood the Scriptures they went forth to do as they had been told. They went to work and kept this sacred feast in a way that it had not been kept since the days of Joshua (v. 17). If the Scriptures were read and made plain many things could be found which have not been complied with. In the keeping of this feast they dwelt in booths, thus typifying their pilgrim character and bringing to their remembrance the days of their wilderness journey. As children of Abraham we should look forward to a city which hath foundations.

Malachi 3:1-4:3

Golden Text:—"Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Malachi 3:7.

The subject of today's lesson is broader than the text, especially the verses printed. The best way to teach this lesson is to give a survey of the entire book.

Malachi was perhaps contemporary with Nehemiah; probably sustained the same relation to Nehemiah that Haggai and Zechariah did to Zerubbabel. After the completion of the walls of Jerusalem Nehemiah seems to have been called back to the Persian court, but returned to Jerusalem after a few years. Though outwardly the lives of the people were correct, the prophet pointed out the sins of a corrupt priesthood, mixed marriages and a failure to pay tithes.

I. Israel's Base Ingratitude (1:1-5).

God approached them with the tender affirmation, "I have loved you." It was the prophet's burden to declare this fact unto them (v.1). So formal and worldly were the people that they failed to see God's good hand upon them. The attitude of Israel to God is shown in the skeptical insinuation, "Wherein hast thou loved us?" The prophet answers this by showing God's choice of Jacob and His passing by Esau; his destruction of Edom and saving of Israel.

II. God's Severe Indictment (1:6-2:17).

1. Against the Priests (1:6-2:9). They were guilty (1) of profanity (1:6). Their profanity was in despising the name of God. To fail to honor God is to be profane; to use His name in any unreal way is to be thus guilty. (2) Sacrilege (vv.7,8). Their sacrilegious act was in offering polluted bread and blemished sacrifices. To bring such offerings to an earthly ruler would be a gross insult. Gifts to be acceptable with God must be genuine; must cost something. There is no intellect too brilliant to offer in the Lord's service. The young should not esteem their lives wasted who offer them on the altar of missionary sacrifice. Most people are giving that which they do not need. (3) Greed (1:10). They were not willing to open the doors of God's house without pay. Our service should be out of a heart of love for God, not for profit. This has a vital application to ministers and evangelists today. (4) Weariness (1:12,13). Because of lack of love the routine of duty became irksome. God threatened them with severe punishment unless they would take His rebukes to heart. (5) Not teaching the law to the people (2:1-9). Those set apart to teach God's law to the people have a great responsibility and God will most surely demand an accounting.

2. Against the People (2:10-17; 3: 7-15). (1) For ungodly marriages (2:11, 12). God's purpose in the prohibition of mixed marriages was that He might raise up holy seed (v. 15). Marriage with the heathen would frustrate this purpose. The marriage of the believer with the unbeliever today brings confusion into the fold of God and turns aside His purpose. (2) For Divorce (2:13-16). Divorce was the source of great sorrow—even the tears of the wronged women covering the altar (v.13). The offerings of a man who had thus treated his wife would be an abomination to God. Perhaps the priests had set the wicked example in this. The tears of wronged women today are going up to God and make even the prayers of some men an abomination to Him. (3) Public wrongs (3:5,6). (a) Sorcery—magic. Those who practice such things should be regarded as public offenders. (b) Adultery. This is a sin of wider extent than the parties named. (c) False swearing. (d) Oppression of the hireling, widow and fatherless. (e) Turned aside the stranger from his rights. (4) Blasphemy (3:13-15) They openly spoke against God asserting that it was profitless to serve Him.

III. The Severe Judgments which Shall Befall the Nation (3:1-5; 4:-1-6).

1. By Whom Executed. This is done by the Lord. Judgment has been committed to the Son of God (Acts 17:30,31). When Christ returns the faithful and the unfaithful shall be differentiated and rewarded according to their deeds.

2. Time of Second Coming of Christ. John the Baptist was the forerunner of His first coming. Elijah shall be the forerunner of His second coming.

3. Result. For the righteous it will be a day of healing and salvation. To the wicked it will be a day of burning and destruction. A book of remembrance is now being kept; a day of retribution is coming.

Review: The Exile and The Restoration

Golden Text:—"The Lord hath done great things for us: whereof we are glad." —Psalms 126:3.

Two methods of review may be employed to advantage:

1. Character Study. Assign the outstanding heroes of the quarter's lessons to members of the class and have them report. This assignment must be made the week previous, e.g. Ezekiel, the prophet of God; Daniel, the statesman; Ezra, the teacher of God's Word, etc.

2. Summary of Contents. This is a good method at all times. It can be adapted to different grades. The following is suggestive of carrying out this method:

Lesson I. Before Ezekiel was commissioned as a prophet he was given a vision of the Almighty. After that he was given an experimental knowledge of God's Word—he ate the Book—digested and appropriated its contents.

Lesson II. Because Daniel besought the Lord he was able to make known the king's dream and interpret it. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God." (James 1:5).

Lesson III. While Belshazzar and his lords were engaged in drunken revelry a mysterious hand recorded divine judgment. There is a day coming when men must be judged. Happy is the man who has fled to Christ, for to such there is no judgment.

Lesson IV. Daniel's sterling worth brought him to the front—he was elevated to be Prime Minister of the Persian empire. Moved by jealousy certain wicked men plotted his downfall. Because of a flawless record in business they trumped up a charge against him on the ground of his foreign religion. Though the king executed the foolish decree Daniel was delivered and his accusers were cast into the den of lions and destroyed.

Lesson V. Though Israel went into captivity as a chastisement of the Lord, in due time He recovered them. God's covenants and judgments are sure. He can move a heathen king to freely fulfil His own good pleasure and purpose.

Lesson VI. In the restoration of the people to their own land, the first thing necessary was the provision of a place for the worship of God. As soon as this work was begun, violent opposition was in evidence. That which God sets out to do shall be completed though all hell oppose.

Lesson VII. Haman's wicked plot against the Jews was frustrated by Esther's shrewdness and courage. Those who plot against and hate God's covenant people shall be brought to destruction.

Lesson VIII. Through Zerubbabel the people were brought back and established in their own land, but they had gone far away from God. There was now need of a religious leader. Ezra was moved by the Spirit of God to lead them back to fellowship. Because Ezra sought the Lord his way was prospered. Success always comes to those who trust God.

Lesson IX. When Nehemiah heard of the distress of his brethren at Jerusalem, he took the matter to the Lord in prayer. Their sorrow and distress was his sorrow and distress.

Lesson X. When Nehemiah began the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem he encountered violent opposition from without and from within. His faith in God moved him to go straight on with the work and he had the joy of seeing the work completed.

Lesson XI. The method used in bringing back the people to God was the Word of God. Because God's Word was made plain to the people they repented of their sins and rendered obedience to God.

Lesson XII. Malachi as an aid to Nehemiah in effecting reforms pointed out the sins of the people, viz: Base ingratitude, a corrupt priesthood, mixed marriages, robbing God by withholding tithes, etc., pointing to a day of judgment when righteous retribution would be meted out to the wicked and rewards would be given to the faithful.

October 1
The Birth of John the Baptist
Luke 1:5-23,57,63

Golden Text:—"He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and he shall drink no wine nor strong drink."—Luke 1:15.

We are today entering upon a six months' course of study in the Gospel of Luke, whose general subject is "Jesus, the World's Saviour." Today's lesson concerns the birth of John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ.

I. The Parents of John the Baptist (vv.5-7).

1. When They Lived (v.5). "In the days of Herod the king." They lived in a day when ungodliness was rife. The priesthood was very corrupt and the ruling classes were wicked. Zacharias and his wife lived in a time when it was not easy to be godly.

2. Their Character (v.6). They were righteous before God. To be righteous before God is a high tribute. Many appear to be righteous before men who are not righteous before God. Their lives were so mated that they walked in the commandments of the Lord blameless. How beautiful it is when husband and wife are united in the Lord and walk together in fellowship with God. The highest in wedded life can only be attained when both are united in Jesus Christ. Their practical living was manifested in obedience to God's commands.

3. They Were Childless (v.7). Though this godly couple were well mated and they possessed the joy of the Lord in their souls, there was a real lack in that home. No home is quite ideal into which no child has come to gladden the hearts of the husband and wife.

II. The Birth of John Promised (vv.8-17).

1. By Whom (v.11; cf. v. 19). The angel Gabriel appeared and made known the good news to Zacharias. This exalted being, the special messenger of God, was sent to make this disclosure.

2. When (vv.8-14). While officiating as priest this good news came to him. Zacharias must have been definitely praying about this very matter (v.13). As he burned incense, which typified prayer, the multitude without were praying.

3. Characteristics of the Child (vv. 15-17). (1) Shall be great in the sight of the Lord (v.15). Though the people did not greatly esteem him he was highly esteemed by the Lord. This is infinitely better than if he had been greatly esteemed in the eyes of men or in his own eyes. (2) Shall drink neither wine nor strong drink (v.15). The child shall become a Nazarite, separating himself from sensuous things and dedicating himself to the service of the Lord. (3) Be filled with the Holy Ghost (v. 15). The energy of the divine Spirit would enable him to lead the people to repentance (v.16). (4) Shall go in the spirit and power of Elijah (v.17). In this power he was to prepare the people for the coming of the Saviour and the salvation which He was to bring.

III. Zacharias Asking for a Sign (vv.18-23).

Although the aged priest was earnestly praying for the salvation of Israel the gracious promise of the angel, which was the beginning of that salvation, staggered his faith. He was unable to believe that that for which he fondly hoped and prayed would be realized. The angel gave to Zacharias a sign. He was smitten with dumbness which was to continue until the fulfilment of the promise. Because he refused to praise God in faith for this gracious promise God caused his tongue to be silent until the promise was fulfilled and his lips could open in thanksgiving and praise. Though he was thus rebuked his faith was strengthened by the manifestation of the supernatural. God wants us to believe His promises no matter how contrary to reason they may seem.

IV. The Promise Fulfilled (vv.57-63).

When the time came for the birth of John, Elizabeth brought forth a son and the neighbors rejoiced with her. On the eighth day they circumcized the child and gave him a name according to the instruction of the angel (v.13). The name John was contrary to the family custom. By means of writing Zacharias made known the name which he would have by divine instruction. At this time God opened the mouth of Zacharias and he offered up praise.

"The glorious gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to my trust"—I Tim. 1:11.

A man dies and leaves a large inheritance to a number of heirs. And of course he has made a will, in which he has named the heirs and carefully defined the inheritance falling to each. He has appointed me the executor of his will and the trustee of his estate. That means that for the time all the wealth and property of the deceased is in my hands. But is it mine to keep for myself? By no means. I am a trustee, not a proprietor. My duty is to seek out every heir, near and far, and to spare no pains until each one has been given his due share of the inheritance. To do less than my utmost to discharge the trust committed to me, to withhold from a single heir his rightful portion and appropriate it to myself, would brand me as dishonest and dishonorable in the eyes of the law and of my fellowmen.

Now the fact is that a man has died—the Man Christ Jesus. And He has left a glorious inheritance, described in His published will. Many of His heirs have been found in this country, and have been put in possession of their riches. But many more are far away in Africa, Asia and other lands. These know nothing of their good fortune, but are dying in spiritual poverty and despair. Yet they are His heirs, provided for by His will, if they did but know it. And I am a trustee of this gospel. Have I been faithful? Have I done my very best to give them the good news?

"The glorious gospel—committed to my trust." Ponder well these wonderful words, Christian readers, until they thrill and inspire you. He has put you in trust with the gospel for these heathen souls. He has chosen you, has trusted you. He is depending upon you. If His children fail Him, He has made no other provision. Are you being true, or are you disappointing Him? Oh, the consequences involved—to them, to you, to Him. God help you to do your very best.

A Missionary Prayer

"Lord, thou hast given me a trust,
A high and holy dispensation,
To tell the world, and tell I must,
The story of thy great salvation;
Thou might'st have sent from heav'n above
Angelic hosts to tell the story,
But in thy condescending love,
On men thou hast conferred the glory.

"Let me be faithful to my trust,
Telling the world the story,
Press on my heart the woe,
Put in my feet the go,
Let me be faithful to my trust,
And use me for thy glory."

—Rev. A. B. Simpson.

Chinese National Christian Conference

This great gathering was held May 2-11, and reports are now appearing in the leading missionary periodicals, while impressions are being voiced by delegates who have since returned to America. These reports and impressions differ widely. Some of the delegates regard the conference as having been highly creditable and fraught with large results for good, while others look upon it with disappointment and criticism, claiming that it was skilfully controlled by a small but strong coterie of "modernistic" leaders who exalted "organization" at the sacrifice of spiritual features, and the discussion of such vital subjects as evangelism. There was no disguising the issue as between the "conservative" and "liberal" parties both in the missionary body and in the Chinese church, and there were moments when the unity of the conference was severely strained.

The results and influence of this gathering are difficult to forecast. The most definite achievement was the creation of a National Christian Council, composed of 100 members, the majority being Chinese, entrusted with the task of more perfectly coördinating the various Christian forces in China and arranging for another National Christian Conference in due time.

This conference was attended by 1,100 delegates, of whom the majority were Chinese, and was presided over by an able Chinese chairman.

An automobile with missionaries being ferried across a broad stream in French Indo-China. The French government has constructed excellent auto roads, as well as railroads, and this fact greatly facilitates missionary efforts to reach the 18,000,000 unevangelized Annamese people.

Survey of Christian Forces in China

In connection with the above conference an exhaustive missionary survey of China was made, which took three or four years, and the findings of which have been published in a huge, atlas-like volume of some 600 pages. This book is entitled The Christian Occupation of China, and contains a mass of statistics, 320 maps and 125 diagrams, and much varied and valuable information.

The following figures are of special interest: Missionaries, 6,636; Chinese workers, 24,732; communicants, 345,853. American missionaries number 3,305; British, 2,218; and Continental (European), 758. Numerically the Chinese church has increased fourfold in the short period since the Boxer uprising of 1900. This is cause for praise and rejoicing indeed, and yet when it is reflected that there is still less than one church member in every 1,000 of the entire population it becomes painfully obvious that the work of evangelizing China is only well begun.

New Stations in French Indo-China

The Alliance Mission, which except for the Bible Society and a group of workers in Laos is as yet the only evangelical agency in this neglected field of 18,000,000 people, has recently taken several advance steps in Cochin-China, the southernmost of the five States comprising Indo-China. Sadec and Can tho, two of the best centers in the State, apart from its capital Saigon which is already occupied, have just been opened, as well as a third place, Chaudoc, located on the border of Cambodia, the only

State which remains entirely unoccupied by missionaries.

Rev. R. A. Grupe, '16, and his wife have located here, and Mr. Grupe writes: "We are here as near as we can at present be to the 1,500,000 unevangelized Cambodians, and there are four big Cambodian centers within a few miles, where we can preach to the people in the Annamese tongue. One could hardly find a more strategic point than this and we request the prayers of the Institute student body that God will defeat the plans of the enemy in this land and soon enable us to enter Cambodia and give the good news to the benighted souls there."

The Indian Situation and Missions

The arrest and imprisonment of Mr. Gandhi, the "Non-co-operation" leader, has apparently quieted the situation in India for the time, rather than inflamed it, as many feared would be the result. Nevertheless signs are not wanting of wide discontent among the people. Over 200,000 Indian citizens are at present in prison as political offenders, and this naturally causes deep resentment on the part of their relatives and friends. Then, sanction by the British government of the wicked traffic in alcoholic liquors, opium and commercialized immorality, despite its high profession of righteous ideals, has destroyed the confidence of many. The Indian people are still filled with a determination to become independent of British control.

On the other hand, there are complications in the ranks of the discontents. Mr. Gandhi's efforts to unite opposing factions have not been wholly successful. His demand for the recognition of the 60,000,000 "untouchables," and the attempt of these out-castes to force their right to enter temples, draw water from public wells and enjoy other privileges hitherto denied them, have stirred up the bitter prejudice of the proud Brahmans and other high-castes. It seems questionable, also, whether the apparent harmony which the tense national situation has brought about for the time between the heretofore irreconcilable Hindus and Moslems will continue long.

These are just a few of the factors entering into a situation of great seriousness and uncertainty in India. Under such conditions it is cause for praise to God that missionary work continues uninterrupted and with even increasing opportunities and results. Such testimony comes in letters from a number of missionaries in widely separated parts of the land.

For example, a missionary district superintendent writes from Raipur: "Notwithstanding political agitation the common people hear the gospel gladly and the number of Scripture portions sold is encouraging. Only this morning a man came for the third time from his village about twenty miles away asking for baptism. He had not found me at home the other two times. While at the front in war time he came in touch with some Christian young men and resolved to become a Christian on his return home. He seems earnest in his desire. He leaves tomorrow to bring his wife that she too may start with him."

Another missionary writes: "A strange thing is happening. Under ordinary circumstances missionary effort would be almost closed down in times like these. But the contrary is true, for more doors of work and opportunity are being opened to us than ever before. We continue to receive urgent invitations to open new out-stations where spiritually hungry people are wanting to hear the gospel."

All missionaries in India greatly need our prayers for divinely-given wisdom and grace at this crucial time.

JOSEPH: A TYPE OF CHRIST

Was the innocent Joseph hated and despised of his brethren, who, moved by envy (Acts 7:9), conspired his death? So was the immaculate Lamb of God hated, despised, and conspired against by His brethren, the Jews, who for envy delivered Him to Pilate. (Matt. 14:10).

Was Joseph sold, stript of his raiment, and cast into a pit? So was Christ both sold and stript, whose death and lying in the grave is strikingly typified by Joseph's lying in the pit; the pit and the grave being used in Scripture as synonymous terms.

Was Joseph drawn out of the pit, and made ruler over a nation that till then had not known him? So God would not leave the soul of His holy one in hell; neither did He see corruption; but rose again, to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, and was found of them that sought Him not.

Was Christ tempted, and did He overcome the temptation? So it was with Joseph, who resisted and overcame the temptations of his mistress.

Did Christ suffer with two malefactors; and was one pardoned and the other condemned? So was Joseph numbered with the transgressors, when he was imprisoned with the butler and baker of Pharoah, one of whom was pardoned, and the other condemned.

Was it said of Joseph, that he shall teach his senators wisdom? How much more is this true of Christ, the Eternal Word, the Wisdom of God.

Did all that was put into Joseph's hand prosper? So it is said of Christ, that the pleasure of the Lord should prosper in His hand.

Did a grievous famine prevail in other lands whilst there was plenty in Egypt, where Joseph was? So wherever Christ is not, there must of necessity be a spiritual famine; but wherever the true Joseph is, there will be bread enough, and to spare.

Did multitudes who were ready to perish for want, flock from all parts to buy corn of Joseph? So unto Christ is the gathering of the nations, who breaketh the bread of life to the hungry, and filleth the empty soul with goodness.

Thus much of this interesting prophetic history is already accomplished; the remaining part of it will not perhaps be fulfilled in its spiritual sense, before the time of the restoration of the Jews; till the arrival of which happy period the yearning of Joseph's bowels towards his barbarous brethren, who supposed him to be dead, and knew not that it was he that had preserved, fed, and supported them, doth finally and strikingly represent the wonderful affection of Christ towards His crucifiers, the Jews, who though now He is estranged from them, and they esteem Him smitten, stricken and afflicted (Isa. 53), yet doth He still preserve them, and will never leave them, nor forsake them; but at His second coming, to establish His glorious kingdom in the millennium, will make Himself known to them, with more than that amazing tenderness wherewith Joseph, at the second time (Acts 7:13) discovered himself to his brethren. (Gen. 45:1-5, 9, etc.)

Then shall they look upon Him whom they have pierced. Then shall they acknowledge Him to be indeed the Son of God, their much injured Messiah, as Joseph's brethren did look upon, and acknowledge him to be their much injured brother, the dearly beloved son of their father in whom he was well pleased. —Furnished from an old diary by Mr. Robert N. Wilkins, Allston, Mass.

"NEW EVERY MORNING"

Lam. 3:22, 23; Ps. 32:8; Deut. 33:25

I had not thought of it before—
  It never seemed to be His way;
But now I see it more and more
As o'er His blessed Word I pore—
  "New orders for each day."

At first I felt my life was set
  Along some fixed, unbending line;
Then, if an obstacle I met,
What disappointment and regret
  O'er ruined plans were mine!

Now as I take his blessed Book,
  And read each morning with delight,
Some new door opens, and I look
Into a room whose every nook
  Is filled with hope and light.

He bids me live "from day to day,"
  He says each day shall strength be given:
So, whether it be "Go" or "Stay,"
My orders what to do or say
  Are daily sent from heaven.

—R. C. Treadwell, in Watchman-Examiner.

"HOW WE ORGANIZE FOR AGGRESSIVE FALL AND WINTER WORK IN THE CHURCH"

A Symposium

II

Seek earnestly the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Begin to lay your plans early. Map out a series of sermons intended to stimulate interest in the vital things. Organize the children for catechetical instruction. Keep constantly before your people the expectation of a revival. Enlist the co-operation of parents in the salvation of their children.

Start a class for real Bible study. If impossible to hold it in the evening, do so in an afternoon and get the women to come.

Prepare a prayer-list and enlist as many as possible in a prayer-covenant.

Organize into prayer-bands those who will visit the homes of the persons whom you are trying to reach, spending some time in a social visit, and, if possible, in a brief song-service and prayer.

Hold an "Every-Member Prayer-meeting Week." Stress this hard. Divide your members into groups, placing one or more leaders over each group. Have each group hold a prayer-meeting each evening for four successive nights, and then come together on the fifth for a report meeting. All the members should be notified to which group they belong and where the meeting of their group will be held each evening. Place the meetings in homes where most needed.

Pray much! Let the Spirit lead, and God will give the victory!—E. S. Woodring, Presiding Elder, Harrisburg (Pa.) District, United Evangelical Church.

HOW TO INTEREST MEN IN THE WORK OF THE CHURCH

A Symposium

II

After nearly six years of experience in one church in this department of activity, we simply state the following, which is meeting with a growing measure of success:

1. A Manly Message:

A much respected brother who of recent years has visited hundreds of churches in the United States said recently in a men's meeting, "The average sermon does not appeal to men. Seldom do I hear one that would disturb a man who is living in sin. The majority of sermons contain anything but the gospel. There is too much preaching to the gallery. The average layman cannot be 'fooled' here, for I have not shunned to declare unto you all the council of God." It is a manly task, a manly message, and will appeal to manly men.

2. Cultivate a Devotional and Evangelistic Spirit:

The devotional and evangelistic spirit is the real life of personal Christian activity. It creates an atmosphere in which the Holy Spirit of God can work. It is the best type of advertising. Begin with a small group, meet regularly for prayer; press the principle, "Men after men for Christ and the church." The man who prayerfully and tactfully lays himself out to win his fellow thus, unconsciously becomes a center of spiri' communication; the very dynamic Christian service. It involves the re nition of the supernatural in the tas. Remember, the Holy Spirit of God works through men, not methods.

3. Tie the Men's Organization Up to the Church with Definite Tasks:

Local service in the church. Missionary activity for the church. A definite financial responsibility to the church. Opportunity for social and recreational development.—Albert G. Johnson, pastor, Albany Park Baptist Church, Chicago.

Some one has well said that we are not held accountable for our features, but we are responsible for our expression. There are many people whose souls are so full of the peace and joy of the Lord that their faces are made beautiful although slighted by nature in respect to their features. "There is no beautifier of complexion, or form, or behavior," says a noted writer, "like the wish to scatter joy and not pain around us."

The Scripture gives four names to Christians, taken from the four cardinal graces so essential to man's salvation: Saints for their holiness, believers for their faith, brethren for their love, disciples for their knowledge.—Thomas Fuller.

The Evangelistic Field

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.
Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evange istic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Dunlop report good meetings in work in California and request the prayers of friends for the next season.

George Preston writes on July 1 from Benton Harbor, Mich.: "Just finished fine meeting at Riverton, Ill., and will be at liberty to help pastors from September 3."

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie, singing evangelists, Topeka, Kan., assisted in special meetings at Brunswick, Mo., in July. The pastor, Rev. Creekmore of the Baptist church, did the preaching.

Evangelists Ray Palmer and M. W. Lampkin are now making engagements for the fall and winter. Pastors desiring the services of these evangelists should write at once to Dr. Ray Palmer, Kansas City, Mo., general delivery.

On July 8 Evangelist Harry O. Anderson wrote from Gilmore City, Iowa, that they were in the opening of what promised to be a very gracious revival. Great manifestations of God's presence. The party expected to continue there until July 21.

Evangelist Rev. Norman R. Curtis opened a tent campaign in Chandler, Ariz., July 9. The work is of "The Arizona Pioneer Mission" and promises good returns. At the time of writing they were in their third week with large attendance and good interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Stewart had charge of the music in the United Brethren Training School, held July 24-August 6, at Warren, Pa. The sessions were well attended and the messages by the Rev. G. B. Batdorf of Dayton, O., were especially helpful.

The Solomon-Armstrong Evangelistic Party report on July 5 that they just closed a most successful two weeks revival meeting with the First Baptist Church of Bogalusa, La., in which there were 150 additions, 98 of whom were for baptism.

Evangelist John E. Brown and party opened the fall season with a country-wide meeting held in Sweetwater, Tenn., beginning July 23. This party is composed of C. L. Virgin, advance organizer; Alva R. Wilgus, chorister and young peoples' worker; Miss Anne Andrews, womens' worker and soloist, and Floyd A. Clark, pianist and secretary.

P. H. McCarthy, superintendent of Morning Star Mission, Joilet, Ill., says that God is blessing the mission. During the third quarter of the thirteenth year of the mission there were 118 conversions, 213 free meals given, clothing given to 82 persons, 325 Gospels distributed, and 78 police court and jail visits.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Thomas, '13, closed their evangelistic season in a union meeting at Mound City, Mo., with G. A. DeFlon in February. They then supplied the Christian church at Colby, Kan., for three months in which they were very much blessed. They are now at home at 2330 York St., DesMoines, Iowa, and are arranging to do supply work in needy fields.

In a letter from J. Basil Long, he says: "I have been very busy for the past two years since leaving Moody. I am singing with the George M. Taylor Evangelistic Party. We just closed a meeting of five churches at Hawthorne, Calif., lasting a month. The Lord gave us a victory with 165 converts. Also, through the month of May we had a very successful meeting in Los Angeles at the Hoover St. Baptist Church with more than 100 converts. We start our next meeting in September at Azuza, Calif. During our vacation Mrs. Long and I are associated with Robert Harkness giving special gospel musical programs in southern California."

The following was received from E. L. Wolslagel on July 15: "Mrs. Wolslagel and I have just returned from Georgetown, Ky., where we had charge of the music at the Kentucky Baptist Assembly, June 27–July 7. Our class for the training of song leaders proved very popular. We were invited to return and teach such a class next year. The registered attendance eclipsed any previous assembly record of fifteen years. We go to Blue Ridge, N. C., for two weeks beginning July 16, where we are members of the faculty for the Southern Y. M. C. A. Secretaries Summer School. Music is given a prominent place on all the training programs—physical and religious. Our evangelistic engagements for the fall will be with Dr. J. J. Wicker of Richmond, Va."

A report has been received from Arthur J. Smith, General Secretary of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City, Inc., giving a statement of the work done. He says: "To July 8 we conducted 1147 meetings in 68 centers, in English, Chinese, French, Hungarian, Polish and Russian, with an aggregate attendance of 113,778. A Hungarian, converted in an open-air meeting in a 'red radical' district in 1921, is giving largely toward the support of an open-air speaker in the district in which he was converted. A six-weeks tent campaign in one center closed June 25. The workers expect many accessions to the churches as a result. Five tents are in operation at present. We greatly need additional workers for centers not covered, especially Italian, Spanish, Russian and Czecho-Slovakian. We also need workers among boys and girls."

The following is taken from a clipping received July 21 which appeared in a Norfolk (Neb.) paper: The evangelistic services which have been held in the tent tabernacle on the Lincoln school grounds for the last five weeks under the direction of Rev. E. C. Hunter, chorister, W. D. Wheatley and Mrs. Wheatley, closed Sunday night with a record of 467 conversions, which places it in top position of any revival service held in Norfolk. That Mr. Hunter's efforts will not stop when he leaves Norfolk is assured by the young men's prayer club which has been formed by those attending the young men's prayer meeting and a club by the young women's prayer meeting attendants, both of which are non-denominational, and cottage prayer meetings which will continue to meet weekly during the summer. The children's weekly meeting will be continued at 4 o'clock Tuesdays at the Methodist church.

Why Four Gospels? by Arthur W. Pink.

This subject has been presented by others, but this volume fills a need of Bible students of the present generation. Many have felt that a single Gospel would have been less confusing than the four which we now have; but, as the author shows, each of the four evangelists gives a distinct and vivid portrait of Christ whose beauty and value would be lost in a composite picture.

The Victory of God, by Rev. James Reid, M. A.

These twenty-five sermons give evidence of a great preacher. They are characterized by simplicity, directness, virility, originality and fearlessness. Popular in the best sense, they also are philosophical and theological. The preacher is pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Eastbourne, England.

Stories of the Kingdom, by Rev. Will Reason, M. A.

Addresses to boys and girls. The parables spoken by Jesus are made the basis for practical and spiritual talks to the younger members of the flock. Deep truths are expressed in words children know and use. They are full of interest and suggestiveness but possess also the even more important element of being Scriptural. This book is adapted to being put into the hands of the boys and girls themselves.

Wonders of Missions, by Caroline Atwater Mason.

The author has already given to the world several missionary volumes, the best known of which probably is The Little Green God. The present volume is a vivid presentation of fact, episode, and adventure from the lives of great missionaries in many lands. The author does not aim to give a history of missions, but by typical pictures and incidents, she gives a tonic to our faith and devotion.

To be Near God, by Abraham Kuyper, D. D.

This is a little book of devotional meditation. One hundred and ten vital Scripture utterances are considered. The name of this great Dutch theologian is a guaranty of its doctrinal soundness. It expresses the vital spiritual aspirations without the erratic notions so frequently found in a book of this kind. The meditations are short and adapted to the busy Christian who desires to be alone with God for a short time each day.

Our Reasonable Faith, by Park Hays Miller.

"This book," as the author says, "is the effort of the writer to tell in simple language some of the thoughts concerning the Christian faith and the Christian life which have helped him in the secret battles of his own mind, and which have helped others like himself with whom he has dealt." While not a formal apologetic of the Christian faith, it will most certainly strengthen the faith of Christians and create within the minds of young Christians a real and positive faith.

The four subjects which are treated in this volume are: The Bible which contains the revelation of God to man; the fundamental truths revealed in the Scriptures; the Ten Commandments as the laws of conduct; and the church through which the truth has been preserved, is taught, and in which the Christian finds his field for service.

This book ought to be placed in the hands of every young Christian. Fathers and mothers and friends will find this a most excellent book for a gift. No better Christmas gift could be found, especially to the young men and women who are away in schools.

The Church and the Immigrant, by Georgia E. Harkness.

A clear and sympathetic presentaton of the case of the European immigrant in America, and an outline of a program by the church for his Americanization and social and educational betterment. The book is written from a Christian standpoint, and the ultimate aim is more than once stated to be to make of these people "citizens of the kingdom of God." But the question is whether a vital Christian faith is rightly to be assumed as an outgrowth of the process of social and educational uplift, and not rather to be regarded as the first essential to be sought, as furnishing the true incentive and the needed dynamic for the desired development into intelligent, moral and loyal citizens. Social service has its essential place. True Christianity will ever show itself not in mere preaching alone, but in unwearied practical ministry to every need of the individual and of society as a whole. But when "applied Christianity" is so much advocated, it becomes as it is today, a matter of importance to make sure that it is really Christianity—the truth of the redeeming, life-imparting, energizing, divine Christ that is applied, and not the poor, weak substitute of improved environment and human effort.

Is The Higher Criticism Scholarly? By Rev. Robert Dick Wilson, Ph. D., D. D., Professor of Semitic Philology in Princeton Theological Seminary.

This little book is worth its weight in gold because it is a book of facts. In the first place, Mr. Philip E. Howard, publisher of the Sunday-School Times who writes the Foreword, presents the facts to show that Dr. Wilson knows what he is writing about, and then Dr. Wilson presents the facts to show that the Old Testament writers knew what they were writing about.

The pastor or Sunday-school teacher or any other Christian worker who reads this book, and it is plain and simple enough for any person of average intelligence to understand, will find it to be "a defensed city, and an iron pillar and brazen walls" against the whole army of the destructive critics who by pretended scholarship would undermine the faith of the people in the text of Holy Writ.

We can give only an illustration or two of its contents. At one place the author says, "If the biblical history be true, we shall expect to find Babylonian words in the early chapters of Genesis and Egyptian in the later chapters, and so on down, an ever-changing influx of new words from the languages of the ever-changing dominating powers. And as a matter of fact, this is exactly what we find." Then he goes on to prove it.

The critics are in the habit of stressing the fact that little mention of the law is made in the period before Hezekiah or even Josiah and assert therefore, that the law of the so-called Priest-code was not fully established before Ezra. In other words, they make much of the argument from silence. But Dr. Wilson shows how little is proven by this argument by the analogy of Bryant's History of the United States (3500 pp. quarto), which makes no mention of a number of very important things which nevertheless were part of the law and the life of this nation.

At one place in the book Dr. Wilson shows the boasted critics, Ewald of Göttingen and Driver and Gray of Oxford, to be absurdly ignorant in their claims.

And at still another he puts eight questions to the objectors to the biblical account of the law of Moses which they are asked to answer before their theory of the origin thereof can be accepted, and not one of them can be answered consistently with their theory.

Sometimes a book notice concludes by saying "This book should be read by everybody," or words to that effect; but it can be said in this case and mean what it says.

A NEW FACULTY MEMBER

The Board of Trustees has called Rev. Elbert L. McCreery to the Faculty of the Institute to be associated with Dr. Glover as a teacher of phonetics, and other subjects in the Missionary Course, and teacher of Greek Exegesis in the Pastor's Course. He enters upon his work at the beginning of this Fall Term.

Mr. McCreery is a graduate of Monmouth College and Xenia Theological Seminary, in which latter institution he served also as instructor in Hebrew. After completing his theological course he spent some years as a missionary under the United Presbyterian Board in Egypt and the Sudan, where he worked out the grammar of the Shulla language, and was working on that of the Neuer tribe of Africa, when owing to his wife's health he was obliged to return to this country in 1913. Thereafter he was associated with Dr. J. Campbell White in the Men's Movement of his denomination, and subsequently became a field secretary for the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and chairman of the New Era Movement of the United Presbyterian Church for the Synod of Nebraska, in which state he was also serving in the pastorate, when he received the Institute's call to become a member of its staff of educators.

Mr. McCreery possesses the didactic gift in an unusual degree, and is regarded as a most valuable factor in the developing work of the Institute.

AN APPRECIATION

In an article entitled, "A Little Journey to Chicago," telling among other things something of the recent Baptist rally in the Institute, and contributed by Rev. Curtis Lee Laws, editor of the Watchman-Examiner, to his own publication, appeared the following paragraph:

"Moody Institute, with its 800 young men and women, is a remarkable place. It has many buildings and is finely equipped for service. Its organization seems to be almost perfect. It has a faculty of earnest, consecrated men and women. It has trained a multitude of men and women for Christian work at home and abroad. It has at its head an able man—a profound Bible student, a brilliant lecturer and a capable man of affairs. Of course, we did not see the school at work, for classes were suspended for the two days of the conference, but everything about the Institute made a most favorable impression on the visitors. We enjoyed our visit and our work thoroughly."

"ATTENDING WORLD'S GREATEST BIBLE SCHOOL"

Under the above heading The Independent Herald, Hinton, W. Va., in its issue of June 1 discusses the work of two Moody students from that locality. In part it says: "On April 27, Miss Hattie Marie Foster of Hinton, and Miss Mary Mozelle Reed of Judson, entered the greatest Bible school in the world. There are many good Bible schools, but none quite compares with Moody. Hattie is a member of the Calvary church of Hinton, and Mozelle is a member of the Freedom Baptist church on Pawley's Creek, six miles from Hinton. The Calvary church felt that no greater investment of mission money could be made than to support Miss Foster in the Moody school. The Freedom church felt the same way about Miss Reed."

REV. GORDON WATT

Rev. Gordon Watt, M. A., of Aberdeen University, Scotland, was ordained a minister of the Church of Scotland in 1895 and called to the pastorate of the High Kirk, Kilmarnock, Ayrshire. He labored there for eleven and a half years, and his ministry was greatly blessed of God. From that church have gone forth men to preach the gospel all over the world. He was called in 1907 to the church of St. Paul's Glasgow, where he succeeded Dr. James Paton, brother of the faithful missionary to the New Hebrides.

From that city he was transferred to one of the most important charges in the north of Scotland, in the parish of Forres, Morayshire. There the Lord laid upon him the burden of the message of the Cross and prayer warfare, and he received the distinct call to lay aside the work of the stated ministry and go out in faith in and dependence on the Lord to proclaim that message. In his own country Mr. Watt has been busily engaged in conventions connected with the Keswick movement as well as in evangelistic missions.

Last fall he was invited by the late Mrs. Courtlandt De Peyster Field, of New York, to speak at her spring conference, and since then other doors have opened here. At the Institute he had an edifying ministry during the rally of distinguished Baptist leaders who honored us by their presence following the Indianapolis convention, and at our special summer course he was greatly appreciated. He was one of the speakers at our Bible conference at Eagles Mere and also at a similar gathering at Erieside where he gave a series of addresses.

Mr. Watt expects to return to America the latter part of January for service until September 1, 1923, for which period his engagements are being booked by the Extension Department.

Mr. Pietsch reports the spiritual destitution of San Francisco to be deplorable, and that this mission has for its purpose aggressive down-town Christian work. It seems to be on a sane foundation, for Bible teaching as to the fundamentals of the Christian religion, is a feature.

A letter from Charles B., '12, and Mrs. Le Fevre, '16, states that the former is Director del Instituto Biblico Temuco, Chile, S. A., which was opened for the training of native Christians last year. Mr. and Mrs. Le Fevre testify that their Institute training has been of great value to them.

He is now enrolled as a student in the Correspondence Department. "It may interest you to know that I am now putting in not less than three hours a day on my Bible study," he writes, "and I expect to keep it up. Not a day passes but what I wish I had started it long ago."

JOYS OF A GOOD BOOK

A good book! Joyous companion of my heart,
A friend, in truth, in joy or grief thou art;
If I but choose thee wisely, then indeed
Thou shalt truly minister to my soul's need.
A chance acquaintance met in library or store
May often prove a friend worth knowing more.
However well I know those I love best,
I never can exhaust their wealth or interest.
A book that's much bethumbed and read again
And then once more is friendly as the best of men,
A good book truly an eternal friend may be;
Itself remains complete, it yet becomes a part of you and me.

—Ward Macauley, in Publishers' Press

WHAT AN OPPORTUNITY!

Miss Eleanor M. Blackmore, for years a faithful missionary in Nicaragua, while writing a Chicago friend recently, spoke of the safe arrival of a donation of 18 copies of Todo de Gracia (All of Grace), by C. H. Spurgeon, in Spanish, and added:

"The books have gone like 'hot cakes' and everywhere they are clamoring for more. It meets a great need and is feeding souls. So much literature we get is anti-Romanistic and just makes the men quarrelsome and full of hate. They get their head puffed up with a little knowledge while their feet slip into sin. Correct doctrine and holy living must go together or knowledge is vain. Latin America is large and needy—workers are few—so we welcome the printed page. A good postal system makes it possible to reach, by mail, towns which in this generation are never likely to hear a gospel preacher."

QUESTIONS EVERY CHRISTIAN SHOULD ASK HIMSELF

Am I distributing any gospel or sound-doctrine literature? Is anyone doing it in my neighborhood? If I know the need, am I at all responsible in the matter?

Is my pastor diligent in his use of Christian literature? Should I remind him?

Are wholesome religious books at all available in my community? Ought not I bestir myself to make sure that they are easily obtainable?

Am I using suitable means to get true-to-the-Bible literature into the hands of Sunday-school children and other young people of impressionable age? Am I urging others also to do this?

Am I praying regularly for colporteurs and others who devote a portion or all of their time to scattering the Word of God and evangelical literature? Am I assisting with my means any of these?

SAID OF BOOKS

Embalmed minds.

Voiceless teachers.

Friends of the friendless.

Repositories of universal experience.

Lighthouses erected in the sea of life.

A guide for youth; an entertainment for age.

The only voices loud enough for future ages to hear.

There is no worse robber than a bad book.

A room without books is a body without a soul.—The Baptist.

The Better Day

By Rev. J. W. Kirschner, St. Joseph, Mo.

O Autumn days!
With smoky haze,
Hanging o'er the hills,
And brooding o'er the browning woods;
While quietness fills the universe—
Except for song of locust wild,
And katydid so meek and mild.

The birds fly low,
As south they go,
Over the ripening fields;
The horned owl watches for his prey;
Into the lake blue teals drop down;
The bittern wades along the bar
And mutters to the evening star.

The flowers that grew
Around the slough,
When summer days were here,
Bowed in death one frosty night;
Their blossoms now are sear and brown,
But tucked away in woodland lair
A flower blooms that's prettier.

In early morn,
When comes the dawn,
It shyly lifts its head
And smiles into the face of day
With lovely petals red and gold—
It is the fringed gentian,
Disputer of the frost king's reign.

When life's Maytime
Starts to decline,
And winter days come on;
When friends and hopes, like frozen flowers,
From you are gone ne'er to return;
Do you lose faith and mourn the day,
That took your favorite flowers away?

O troubled one!
Why do you long
For days that used to be
When buds of Maytime clustered hung?
Your eyes shall see a fairer day—
The crowning day! the hope of men!
The day when Jesus comes again!

"White Unto Harvest"

"Behold I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the fields that they are white already unto harvest." John 4:35.

"He that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame." Proverbs 10:5.

COPYRIGHT, UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

"Lift up your eyes to the fields that are whit'ning,
Hark! 'tis the voice of the Master and Lord;
See, on each side there is work for the reaper,
Sheaves that are golden shall be the reward.

Look on the fields how the harvest is wasting,
Waiting for reapers to garner it in;
He that is faithful receiveth his wages;
Joy everlasting the reaper shall win."

The Moody Bible Institute has been sending forth reapers for years. If you cannot be a reaper yourself, do you not want a part in sending forth others who will gather in the harvest? Ask for information about our Life Annuity Plan.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"By what authority doest thou these things?"—Matthew 21:23.

Cut from the Loaf

The chief priests have not a word to say about our Lord's teaching. They make no charge against the lives or conduct of Himself or His followers. The point on which they fasten is his commission: "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" The same charge has often been made against the servants of God, when they have striven to check the progress of ecclesiastical corruption. It is the old engine by which the children of this world have often labored to stop the progress of revivals and reformations. It is the weapon which was often brandished in the face of the Reformers, the Puritans, and the Methodists of the last century. It is the poisoned arrow which is often shot at city missionaries and lay agents in the present day. Too many care nothing for the manifest blessing of God on man's work, so long as he is not sent forth by their own sect or party. It matters nothing to them, that some humble laborer in God's harvest can point to numerous conversions of souls through his instrumentality. They still cry, "By what authority doest thou these things?"

His success is nothing; they demand his commission. His cures are nothing; they want his diploma. Let us neither be surprised nor moved, when we hear such things. It is the old charge which was brought against Christ Himself. "There is no new thing under the sun." (Eccles. 1:9).—Bishop J. C. Ryle, D. D.

Luther T. Townsend

News of the death of this distinguished brother last August, reached us too late for notice to be given in our September issue. He had been a preacher of high rank in the Methodist church, and subsequently served for a quarter of a century as professor of theology in the theological school of Boston University. Retired from active service many years ago, he still continued to wield his trenchant pen in the cause of evangelical Christianity almost until the day of his death at the ripe age of 84. In his Boston days we knew him well and were often associated with him in public causes. He was a valiant warrior for the truth and exceedingly able as well as fearless. The Roman Catholic hierarchy had felt the point of his weapon and knew him as a foe to be considered. His great sermon entitled "Germany God's Battle Axe," delivered in Park Street Church, Boston, at the opening of the world war, marked him as a statesman-prophet. But perhaps one of the best things he did latterly in defense of the truth, was his brochure on The Collapse of Evolution in which he was far ahead of most of us in discerning the utter weakness of that inflated hypothesis.

Dr. Townsend used to be known as a Calvinistic Methodist, but whether that was entirely true or not, of the thing everybody who knew him was assured, namely, that he had no sympathy with the modernistic tendency as represented by some of the leaders of his denomination. Perhaps he never called himself a "Fundamentalist"—it was unnecessary—but until the last he stood to be counted with those who believed in the Old and New Testaments as an inspired revelation from God with all that it implies. He stood also for the gospel for the individual as one who was not expecting a regenerated society except as it was made up of regenerated men and women through faith in Christ.

"The 'Social Gospel' or the 'Gospel for the Individual'"

The Federal Council Bulletin (June-July), had an editorial on this subject which came so near stating the gospel as it really is, that we held our breath for joy. But we might have been spared the strain, for nothing happened differently from what might have been expected. The editor saved himself from commitment to the absolute truth while on the very edge of it.

"Let us be done," said he, "with setting the 'social gospel' and the 'gospel for the individual' over against each other. Each is but a partial phase of one indivisible whole."

Then he became interesting. "We shall have a better world except as we have better men," said he. This was underscored, and we sat up and took notice. "Changed environment is not a substitute for a changed heart." Better and better. "Nor shall we get a greatly changed environment until men's hearts are changed." Very near the goal, surely he will reach it. No, his thought curves, "The city of God will never be built on the earth," said he, "except as individual men and women in increasing numbers find a new motive and new power in their lives and deliberately commit themselves to the way of brotherhood and love and service incarnated in Jesus Christ."

This is not the gospel of Jesus Christ as we understand it, and its likeness to it is in our judgment, more dangerous to souls than an out and out denial of it.

It would be the gospel if it read thus: "The city of God will never be built on the earth except as individual men and women in increasing numbers commit themselves to Jesus Christ"—not to the way of brotherhood and love and service incarnated in Jesus Christ, but to Jesus Christ Himself.

Jesus Christ is Himself the Very God, and that which men and women need is vital union with Him by faith. He offered Himself upon the cross as a sacrifice for human guilt, and the men and women who commit themselves to Him as the crucified and risen Saviour receive the right, or the authority, to become children of God (John 1:12). That is to say, they are "born again," and this it is which gives them "a new motive and new power in their lives," and which leads them to "deliberately commit themselves to the way of brotherhood and love and service."

Very different is this teaching from that in the Federal Council Bulletin, as different as life is from death. When the Federal Council preaches this gospel the evangelical church will be with it to a man, with its money and its prayers.

"This Is a Wicked One!"

A friend sent us a pamphlet advertising another cult recently started, to which he attached the comment we have chosen as the title of our editorial note. It is certainly a true comment.

The platform of the cult rests upon "Fourteen Points," the first of which states that man is consciousness, the consciousness of God. God is the Infinite One, "the primal and actuating half of myself." Christ Jesus is the Son of God "as is every other being or thing which God created." Heaven is a condition of the mind, "always existent and always present." There is no death. There is no Devil. Hell is a belief and is neither true nor real. "Matter is all that stands between you and any goal you wish to attain." "The goal is constant, conscious unity with soul." If you will memorize the fourteen points, (a few of which we have stated in part), getting the full spirit and meaning of them, "you can positively overcome every physical, mental, moral, and financial ill." Every disease can be healed. "No one is turned away or given up until healed when case is taken." "We specialize on incurables and death claims." Treatments and class instruction are given by "experienced practitioners and teachers" and the public is invited to "come without money and without price." The projectors call it the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Remember the Baltimore Conference, Oct. 1-8. Write Secretary Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, if you can go.

Is it not strange what is wrought in the name of religion, and in the name of the true religion! And is it not strange how easily intelligent human beings are led away! What a corroboration of God's Word that when men "receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved, for this cause he sendeth them a working of error (strong delusion), that they should believe a lie" (2 Thess. 2:11).

Freemasonry and Christianity

In our August issue appeared a contribution from a Missouri correspondent entitled, "Can a Christian Be a Freemason?" The author was unknown to us personally but his contribution was published on its merits, as it seemed to be written in a good spirit and to be scripturally sound.

It was taken exception to however, by some of our readers, one of whom challenged the statement that "Freemasonry will not accept Christ as the Son of God." He admitted that in the first three degrees of Masonry no mention is made of Christ, but that in the Scottish and York rites He is spoken of as "the only begotten Son of God," and that the entire work of the eighteenth degree of the first-named rite is about Him.

Fairness seems to require the publication of the above rejoinder, and yet in the same letter the author confesses that while he has been a thirty-second degree Mason, he now believes that Freemasonry "is no place for the child of God." The great sin of Masonry, he goes on to say, is—"that a Christian is tempted to put his trust in Masonry and his Masonic brethren rather than in the living God."

"Quit If in Peril"

Our readers may recall that these words were reported as the orders given last summer by Mr. Warren S. Stone, chief of the Engineers Brotherhood, to train service men at points where their lives were considered in danger because of strike conditions. It seemed so different from the orders that might have been expected to be given to men who were serving the public at a crisis, to say nothing of serving their employers, that it startled us. We were not surprised therefore to read in the same paper that the service men on one of the roads had gone the chief one better, as the saying is, and quit in such a way as to leave the public in peril, and this apparently when they themselves were in no peril whatever. The New York World in its edition of August 12 characterized the act as "nothing less than inexcusable and dastardly."

It was quite unlike the previous reputation of the Railroad Brotherhood in which there are many men who know the higher brotherhood in Christ, and we are confident that these latter will continue to be heard from in one way and another until the public is reassured that they are not the kind of men who quit because they are in peril.

Book Censorship

We doubt if the idea will carry and we doubt if it is feasible, but its very suggestion by the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice shows how serious a situation it presupposes in the field of literature to which it particularly applies. That field is the publications purporting to discuss psychoanalysis while really putting forth a flood of immorality.

The secretary of the society named in addressing the Author's League upon the subject, speaks of the "commercial urge which induces writers and publishers to put out literature tending to harmfully arouse sex impulses." It is a shame that it should be so, but we doubt if any Will Hays or Judge Landis will be found to function as a censor. Meanwhile let parents be on guard for their children, and let library committees exclude from the public shelves all books of the kind to whose harmfulness for the average lay reader there exists a reasonable question of fear.

Broadcasting the Sunday-school Lesson

It may interest friends to know that our treatment of the International Sunday-school lesson is broadcasted every Friday afternoon from 1:10 to 1:50, from the Western Radio Station, Kansas City, Mo., W. O. Q. 420 meters, and can be heard throughout most of the Missouri and Mississippi valley towns. All those having radio sets are invited to listen in. The enterprising broadcaster is Mr. Walter L. Wilson, Vice President of the Baker Lockwood Manufacturing Co. of Kansas City.

"Mel" Trotter

We feel sure that all our readers who have been aware of the court proceedings through which this honored and useful servant of God has recently passed, will share our rejoicing and thanksgiving that he has been cleared of the charges that were hanging over him. He was granted a decree of absolute divorce, and the suit brought against him for separate maintenance by Mrs. Trotter was dismissed. The latter, however, is not left without a comfortable support, as she receives a certain amount of money and two houses, the rentals from which amount to about $1,500 a year.

We deeply regret such a separation of husband and wife after many years of wedded life and united service in the Lord's cause, and all the more do we regret it because there was no reason for it in the infidelity of either the husband or the wife. Why it must have been is one of the many, many mysteries of life never to be cleared up this side of the morning that shall dawn without clouds.

How the enemies of the cross were rejoicing during the process of the trial, and how they were hoping that the great evangelist and rescue mission worker would be proven guilty! Now are they gnashing their teeth through fear, which we trust may be fully realized, that Mr. Trotter's power and fruitfulness in the salvation of souls may, by God's grace, be greater than ever before.

We pause further to say, that during the trial a reported interview with the editor-in-chief of this MONTHLY was published in different papers through the country, implying a question of doubt as to Mr. Trotter's innocence or guilt, which interview never took place. Moral: Do not believe all you read in the newspapers.

Child Labor

It will be sad indeed if the effect of the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court is a return to anything like the previous conditions of child labor. This is said with no reflection on the court, of course, whose decision, as pointed out by others, was based on a purely legal analysis of the law, uninfluenced by any "interests." It is simply unconstitutional for the Federal Government to try to regulate child labor by levying a tax upon its products not for revenue, but as a prohibitive measure. The friends of the children will now bend all their efforts towards the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution which they believe is the only effective way to prevent the evil.

MORNING PRAYER

By Ruth Parrish, Bakersfield, Calif.

In the early, early morning
Saviour, I would see Thy face,
I would look upon Thy beauty,
See Thy smile of love and grace.

I would come into Thy presence
To receive the needed strength
For the day that lies before me,
E'er the evening falls at length.

I would hear Thee speak, dear Master,
Lest the busy noise of day
Should prevent my ear from hearing
What Thy gentle voice would say

Put Thy impress so upon me
That those who look at me shall see
A reflection of My Saviour,
Showing I have been with Thee!

Conan Doyle and the Life Beyond

Editorial

"HELL, I may say, drops out altogether."

This is the way that Conan Doyle in his "raid" on America expresses himself when he comes to talk about what occurs to man after death. And in doing so, he unwittingly reveals the secret of the popularity of Spiritism as a religion. Any religious teacher who can drop out hell altogether will not lack a following, but at the same time he needs to be taken with a grain of salt.

However, Conan Doyle admits that without some punishment, "there could be no justice in the universe," but the only punishment the spirits will allow is a kind of purgatory as he calls it, "a hospital for weakly souls rather than a penal community."

Criminologists will be interested in this. They are telling us that one explanation of the increasing lawlessness in our days is that so many of our jails and penitentiaries are 'hospitals for weakly souls rather than penal communities.' And if there is no more fear of punishment in the life beyond than there is here, then

"On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined!"

However, the spirits are somewhat inconsistent, for "Miss Julia Ames in her beautiful posthumous book, says in memorable words: 'The greatest joy of heaven is emptying hell.' "

Miss Julia Ames is a spirit whom Sir Arthur frequently quotes. She is plainly in high esteem in the Spiritistic circles which his presence graces, and she is here describing how the spirits in the higher spheres find part of their employment in reaching down to lower ones to educate their occupants and bring them up to a level with themselves. Hell therefore exists as a permanent place of punishment, or else there could be no such thing as emptying it!

But further light is thrown upon the life beyond when Sir Arthur says, "The lower (spirits) cannot ascend, but the higher can descend at will." Sir Arthur himself cannot explain this, but the Bible explains it very clearly. These spirits in other words, are not the spirits of the departed, but demons who counterfeit materialization of the dead, and who inhabit the air. Satan, who is at their head, is called "the prince of the power of the air" (Eph. 2:2). They may come down to earth, but they cannot ascend to heaven.

This also explains what is another mystery to Sir Arthur, namely, why the greater part of the appearances occur soon after death. "Out of some two hundred and fifty cases carefully examined by Mr. Gurney," he says, "one hundred thirty-four of such apparitions were actually at the moment of dissolution."

He imagined that the dead man may be too pre-occupied with his own amazing experience to have much thought for others. But that is not the reason. The reason is that the demon is limited to earth in his means of obtaining information about the dead man, and the likelihood of obtaining it diminishes in proportion to the time elapsing after his decease. "Communications usually come from those who have not long passed over," says Sir Arthur, "and tend to grow fainter. ▲ ▲ ▲ ▲ One gets all one's views from the one generation." The above mentioned fact is the explanation of that.

It also explains something else. Sir Arthur is evidently a little ashamed of some of the experiences associated with Spiritism, the frivolous and foolish things. He cannot understand them, but he supposes that the dead person who comes back does so "retaining all his strength and weakness, his wisdom and his folly, exactly as he has retained his personal appearance." "We might suppose," he says, "that the most frivolous and foolish would be awed into decency by so tremendous an experience, but impressions soon become blunted, the old nature may soon re-assert itself in new surroundings, and the frivolous still survive, as our seance rooms can testify."

Nay, Sir Arthur, the demons are playing tricks on you!

It is astonishing what details of the life beyond are given by these spirits in comparison with the reserve of the Bible. Sir Arthur tells us on their authority, that the people there are clothed, "since there is no reason why modesty should disappear with our new forms"! "People live in communities." "Examples show clearly either that the spirits have the use of an excellent reference library, or else that they have memories which produce something like omniscience"! He quotes the spirit of Raymond Lodge as believing that chemists in the life beyond can make even alcohol or tobacco which may "still be craved for by unregenerate souls"!

How a person of mature years with the acumen of Sir Conan Doyle can become sponsor for such vagaries demands some attempt at an explanation. But the nearest approach to one is his remark that it is not "easy to suppose that spirits can tell the truth about our world, but untruth about their own." One wonders if he ever heard of that "lying spirit" who persuaded King Ahab so that he went up and fell at Ramoth-gilead (I Kings 22:20-23)? Or, if he remembers that Julia Ames told W. T. Stead that he would meet his end by being trampled to death in the streets of London? It was for this reason that when the Titanic struck an iceberg, he deliberately refused to get into a boat, and went to his cabin and to his watery grave, convinced that his hour was not yet come!

God pity the man who builds his eternal hopes on such testimony.

The Higher and Higher Life

By Rev. A. C. Dixon, D.D., Baltimore, Md.

"EVEN the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength: they shall mount up with wings as eagles: they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint" (Isa. 40:30, 31).

"Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings and brought you unto myself" (Exod. 19:4).

"As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: So the Lord alone did lead him and there was no strange god with him" (Deut. 32:11, 12).

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." Scholars tell us that the Hebrew word "renew" does not mean increase, primarily, if at all. It does not mean that waiting upon the Lord gives us more and more strength of the kind we already have. But it is in contrast to the verse that precedes: "Even the youth shall faint and be weary and the young men shall utterly fall. But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

We have a picture in the thirtieth verse of natural strength, the strength of youth, a strength that becomes weary and that utterly falls. But they that wait upon the Lord shall get a new strength. It may almost be translated "shall exchange their strength"—shall exchange the natural for the supernatural strength—the strength of the youth for the strength of God.

The strength of the youth is the gift of God and the glory of the young man is his youth, and all of it should be consecrated to the Master; but they that wait upon the Lord get hold of the strength of God Himself. And as we wait upon the Lord, this supernatural strength works through us to will and to do of His good pleasure.

This is the third in a series of addresses given in the Moody Bible Institute on the general subject of "The Christian Life." The first which appeared in July, was entitled, "The Quiet Routine Life" (Walking with God); the second, which was not reported, "The Strenuous Life" (Winning the race); the third had for a secondary title, "Mounting Up With Wings As Eagles."—Editors.

Waiting Upon the Lord by Prayer

Of course, there are many ways in which we can wait upon the Lord. Wait upon Him in prayer—by petition. "Ask and ye shall receive." And when you really pray, you have passed beyond the strength of youth. You do not get your petition by reason of any natural vigor that you may put into your prayer, but because God works in answer to prayer. The basal proposition of Andrew Murray's great book Intercessory Prayer ought not to be forgotten, that in His relation to His people God works only in answer to prayer.

Now if we trust our natural strength we shall get what we can bring. If we trust our sermon we shall get what the sermon can do. If we trust our money, our organization, our social position, we shall get what those things can do, and that may be something. But if you wait upon God in prayer and trust Him, you will get what God can do. And the need of the church today is what God can do. "When they had prayed, the place was shaken." Not when they had preached or held a Bible conference; not when they had organized or taken up a hundred million dollars for the work of the Lord, but when they had prayed. Nothing short of God can shake things, especially shake a city like Chicago. If good preaching could shake this town, the flag stones would be torn to pieces. Good preaching does not shake places. There must be a church on her knees back of the preacher if the place is shaken.

What Was Back of Finney and Edwards?

It was Abel Cleary back of Charles Finney that led God to shake Rochester. A little group of people who prayed all night and came to church without their breakfast led God to shake this continent through the preaching of Jonathan Edwards. "And these all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication," and as a result of their prayer the rushing mighty wind and the tongues of fire on the day of Pentecost. Back of all revivals, whatever else there is, is prayer. God works in answer to prayer. They that wait upon the Lord in petition shall exchange their natural strength for the supernatural strength of God, Who works in answer to prayer.

Waiting Upon the Lord in Praise

We wait upon the Lord in praise. Luke tells us that while our Lord prayed the fashion of His countenance was changed; He was transfigured before them. But look into that word pray, and you will find that it does not mean to beg, to petition. It is almost our word eucharist. It means thanksgiving and worship and praise, and when the Lord came before the Father in that attitude of mind and heart, the transfiguration took place; and that is the kind of praying which transfigures character to-day, that just delights to wait upon God for the pleasure of waiting upon Him. It delights in His presence—goes before Him with the incense of prayer and thanksgiving and praise and adoration, and as we praise God, God works the exchange of the natural for the supernatural.

Letting God Talk to Us

We wait upon God by letting Him talk to us. When praying we talk to Him; in our Bible study we let Him talk to us. And when we have let the Lord talk to us as He wants us to talk to Him, waiting upon the Lord to learn His message, our strength is renewed in the sense that it is made new, and we exchange the natural for the supernatural by the Word of God. "All scripture is God-breathed"—has in it the breath of God, and breathed out from God. It is a living Book, alive with the life of God. It does not say that the writers of Scripture are God-breathed, though that is true, but that the Scripture is God-breathed, and that is the proper translation.

If we wait upon God, letting Him speak to us, His supernatural power takes hold of us as we preach His word unto others. They that wait upon the Lord shall exchange the natural for the supernatural, and notice what takes place: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles."

It is waiting on the Lord that makes them mount up on wings. They are not conscious of using their wings. They are just conscious of waiting upon the Lord in prayer and praise and letting Him speak to them out of His Word; as we wait upon the Lord the wings use themselves. The supernatural power is in the wings and we mount higher and higher, and if you wait upon the Lord every day you will mount up higher every day, and you never get so high that you cannot get higher still as you wait upon God.

Do Not Get Too High

Never get so high that you cannot get any higher in your own consciousness. Do not reach the highest point, for when you do, you will be on the dead level, or you may fall off. A man came over here from India and said he had reached the highest niche of Christian experience. I heard him say, "I do not deal with sin any longer on the inside; I just deal with it on the outside. Every emotion of my soul is under the control of the Holy Spirit." And when he said that, that man was living in a sinful relation that I will not describe here. Mr. Moody asked him if this was true. He contended that for others it was sin, but not for him; the sin had been taken out of him. Mr. Moody said, "If you open your mouth in this country again, I will publish you in the papers." And he went back to India.

There are those who believe that they have reached the highest niche and that all inbred sin has been taken from them. Then the Devil will suggest something, and they think it is all right for them to do it. The Devil took Christ to the pinnacle of the Temple, and asked Him to fling Himself down. If he can get you to the place where you do not need to wait upon God any longer to get higher and higher, he will push you off.

He Got All There Was at Once

I recalled in Brooklyn the other day the incident of a man who used to get up in prayer-meeting, and say, "Twenty years ago I received the second blessing, and I have not received anything since, because I got all there was to be had then." He had reached the top. I could prove it by every member of that church that he was the best prayer-meeting killer in the town. When he rose to speak it was like the bones of Ezekiel's vision, it was so dry. When he got through the prayer-meeting was about dead. Twenty years ago he got to the top and he quit waiting upon God to mount up higher, and he has been sinking ever since. He began to wither.

Whenever you feel that you have it all, you can depend upon it that you have reached a dangerous place. John the Baptist prayed the Lord Jesus that he might receive the Holy Spirit. "I have need to be baptized of thee, and why comest thou to me?" And yet John the Baptist was full of the Holy Spirit from his mother's womb. Those who are the highest want to mount higher still, and there is a topless height to which we come. But do not come to the top yet. Wait upon God and expect higher and higher things in the days to come.

"They shall mount up with wings as eagles: they shall run and not be weary." The youth get weary and if you trust in natural strength you will get very weary in body and soul, but if you wait upon the Lord you live the strenuous life and do not get weary, because God lives in you—you are living with the supernatural, and the waiting upon the Lord and the mounting up is the preparation for the race. Those who do not know how to wait upon the Lord and mount up on wings are not ready for the race. Those that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up, they shall run—but the climax is the last. "They shall walk and not faint"—which is a stronger word than weary.

Doing the Humdrum

Those of us that wait upon God in prayer and praise and let Him exchange the natural for the supernatural, we shall live the strenuous life without weariness, and we can attend to the humdrum of everyday experience without fainting, which is harder than mounting up with wings or running a race. There is an inspiration about the crowd around the race track and about eagles' wings, but it is very commonplace, this walking along the dusty road, doing the humdrum things that lie closest to us. Look at Ezekiel's vision—there is the face of the ox, the symbol of patient endurance along the dusty road—but it is an ox with a wing, which is a symbol throughout the Bible of God Himself.

If you have yourself linked with God, the burden of the ox along the dusty road would make you faint, but He will keep you from fainting. Some of us appear better in the pulpit than we do at home Sunday night. Some of us appear better in conventions than we do in a board of deacons when two or three of them have horns. Some of us appear better in delivering a prepared address than when some one meets us and says a disagreeable thing.

Too Holy to Be Polite

Last Sunday night I said something about complete consecration, and a man came up to me afterward and said,

"Do you mean entire sanctification"?

"Yes, completely setting oneself aside and apart for God."

"Did you mean taking out all inbred sin and tendency to evil?"

"No, because I do not believe in it."

He got so mad that he could not be polite. He spoke out loud enough to be heard by five hundred people,

"It is holiness or hell!" and off he went, mad as he could be. He had reached the top and he thought that all evil and tendency to temper had been removed from him. That fellow doubtless appears well in the pulpit, but they probably think better of him than those who were around and heard him that night.

I like to look at Jonah in Nineveh, but under the gourd vine he does not look so well. I like to look at Elijah on the top of Mount Carmel in the presence of the priests of Baal, praying down fire out of heaven. But look at Elijah at the gate of Jezreel, wet from head to foot with rain. And Ahab comes riding by and tells Jezebel all that has happened, and she vows vengeance upon Elijah. When Elijah hears this, he runs away so fast that the next day we find him up at Beersheba, one hundred miles away. And instead of going to the hotel, he goes out under a juniper tree and wants to die.

We need the supernatural power for the humdrum—for the kitchen and study, and for the things that fluster. We need the power of God as much in that as in anything else.

And notice: "I bare thee on eagles' wings and brought thee unto myself." The eaglet on the mother's back seems to be the picture. Whatever some naturalists say about it, I believe it takes place. Certainly some birds ride upon the backs of other birds.

The Preacher's Personal Experience

After forty-five years in the pastorate, it seemed to me that the Lord would have me leave this and go into the ministry at large. There was much struggle but a great quietness of heart, and I was thoroughly convinced: and as the end of that period of forty-five years approached, I felt solemnized. As many a time in this building and every year during the forty-five almost, I have had a watch night service, I thought I would have one all to myself, looking out upon the past and then upon the future.

The hotel proprietor, though he had not given us a fire for the whole winter, said he would give me one that night. It was a rainy, cold, last-day-of-March night. At ten-thirty I was sitting in my study chair with my Bible open, before a blazing fire. I then turned over and read the Book and asked God to speak to me anyhow and anywhere. I read through one or two of the shorter books, and I had a glorious time with the Lord, letting him search and strengthen me and inspire me out of his heart.

And as the clock was striking twelve, the old period of forty-five years was passing out, and the new period of forty-five million coming in, I sat there with my Bible on my knee. I think I knelt down with it open before me on the table and asked God to give me a message. Then I saw what I do not remember ever seeing before. "I bare thee on eagles' wings and brought you to myself." And I could look back and see the Lord bearing me up for forty-five years, no effort at all, and could look ahead and see Him bearing me up for forty-five million more and no effort at all, just resting upon Him. And I said, "Lord, I have preached on walking with Thee and I have preached on running the race, but I never preached on riding; give me a good sermon to preach on riding." And I preached it in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and we had a good time riding together that night.

"I bare thee on eagles' wings"—that is salvation, and there is nothing between the little eaglet and the rocks below that bring death except the mother bird. And there is nothing between us and destruction except God, and we do not need any more. There is just God, God in the blue, God in the heights, and we are resting in our simple weakness upon God. You can just rest upon God for salvation and for victory. And as you rest upon God for salvation and victory, He bears you. His supernatural strength is underneath and He keeps you.

"I bare you on eagles' wings and brought you to myself." The Lord did not take Israel out of Egypt to get them into Caanan. He took them out of Egypt to get them to Himself. And that is His object with us—to get us to Himself. And when He has brought us to Himself, He has accomplished the great purpose of redemption.

We have not time to look at that other Scripture which shows the way the Lord gets us on His wings, as the eagle stirs up her nest. He does this sometimes in order that we may commit ourselves to His wings and His power and strength. Do you want guidance while your nest is stirred? He will guide you; He will lead you if you commit yourself to Him.

There is no path through the air nor in the sea, but He has a way of leading us where there is no path, and if we commit ourselves completely to Him He will lead us through the pathless air and over the trackless sea. Just commit yourself to Him, and on His wings you will be borne.

The Kingdom Parables in Present Day Application

By Professor Newton Wray, Taylor University, Upland, Ind.

THE kindly tone of Mr. John E. Moyle's letter in the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY of last February, in which exception is taken to my exposition of the parable of the leaven hidden in the meal, leads me to return to the subject in order to amplify certain phases of the argument and thus meet the objection set forth in that letter. It is gratifying to know that while premillenarians may differ in some particulars regarding the second coming of Christ and the millennium, they are in accord on the main facts—that the coming precedes the millennium and inaugurates that Golden Age.

An Imminent Coming

This is the only view that harmonizes the prophetic Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, and furnishes the believer with incentives to unworldliness and watchfulness. It is psychologically impossible to get people to heed the Master's command, "Be ye ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh," when their thought is of His coming at the end of a long age. When they are warned of an imminent event, they will react to its significance.

Note the spirituality and zeal of the apostolic church in which "the blessed hope" burned with an ardor never since equalled. The critical objection that the early Christians were mistaken in their hope does not answer the argument that this hope was a powerful motive to holy living and self-sacrifice and justifies the charge that such an objection is unfair. Tried by Scripture it is seen to be merely the vague generality of unbelief. It is the critics who are mistaken. Those early Christians understood the teaching of Christ and His apostles far better than men who dispute its authority and finality. They believed, as premillenarians now do, that the Lord's return has for its object the fulfilment of Scripture concerning a kingdom age in which Israel, now a withered tree, "shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit," while the church, her mission done, shall reign with Him.

And they were warranted in regarding the event as imminent, by this fact, as well as by the emphasis placed by Him upon its uncertainty as to time and suddenness as to manner. It was not for them "to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath set within his own authority," but to receive power of the anointing Spirit and be His evangelists until He should return and "the times of restitution" should set in (Acts 1:7, 8; 3:20, 21). This was said with respect to the church as a corporate body.

The Parable of the Leaven Consistent

The kingdom parables cannot be forced to yield an exposition out of harmony with this comprehensive statement. They cannot be turned against each other nor against other portions of Scripture. If the Bible is inspired, it can not contradict itself. And our Lord who was jealous for the fulfilment of every word of God, who said "the scripture cannot be broken," would never speak a parable that did not agree with any part of it. Therefore the parable of the leaven must be consistent with other parables of the group and with Scripture as a whole. The point of resemblance must be such that this consistency will be preserved.

When Mr. Moyle refers to "fire" and "water" as being used in more senses than one and asks, "Is it unreasonable to believe that leaven may also be used in different senses?" the answer must be found in a careful study of these parables and of all the passages that have to do with the subject. The answer must accord with the principle or purpose that accounts for the statement in any case. The symbol or figure must not invalidate such principle and purpose. A figure, as has been said, cannot be made "to go on all fours." Fairness to a speaker or writer demands that we confine our attention to the point of his argument.

Fire and Water as Symbols

What, now, is the point of comparison in these figures? With respect to fire, is it not the holiness of God, which, in the one case, through faith in the atonement of Christ, consumes sin and purifies, but in the other case burns with wrath "against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who hold the truth in unrighteousness" (Rom. 1:18)? As to water, the point is power; when divine, to cleanse and satisfy, or to destroy, according to man's attitude to the same; when human, to rage and rebel. Although the figures are different, they are seen to relate to a certain principle with appropriate applications. The scriptures furnish no exception to this interpretation.

In the parable of the leaven, the comparison is not between the kingdom of heaven and the single term leaven, but between that kingdom (during the present dispensation) and the conditions mentioned in the parable. The complete predicate is part of the comparison. If leaven be considered a good principle what is the meal? If this is made to stand for the natural heart or the world, the parable would contradict the teaching of Scripture throughout; for meal, without a single exception, is the symbol of good, while the heart and the world are described as evil.

If both terms (leaven and meal) stand for good, the Lord is represented as saying that the kingdom of heaven is like a good thing hidden in a good thing; which contradicts the theory that the leaven is the gospel permeating and changing the world. On the contrary the gospel is always the meal, and the leaven and the world something else. No change in the order of the words would alter the meaning of the parable. What that meaning is I will now attempt to show.

The Purpose of Matthew's Gospel

Matthew's purpose in writing his Gospel to the Jews, was evidently to prove the Messiahship of Jesus through whom the kingdom expected by them should come. Hence he does not follow the chronological order of events, but so arranges his material that it shall bear directly on that purpose. So we find him bringing together in a chapter or context incidents widely separated in time. The principles of Christ's kingdom are set forth very early in the narrative. Miraculous proofs follow, with increasing hostility from the nation's leaders; notwithstanding which He confines His ministry to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

Thus the narrative moves on to the twelfth chapter where a decisive break occurs, suggesting the abeyance of the hope of national conversion and the supervention of a dispensational program in which the kingdom would assume a peculiar form for the age. Then follow the kingdom parables, the first one at least spoken "the same day" on which the break occurred, all of them grouped here to show they teach the same general truth regarding the kingdom. There is nothing in Matthew's narrative subsequent to these parables to contravene, but much to confirm this suggestion.

Luke Agrees With Matthew

Luke, who wrote for the Gentile world, agrees with Matthew, in a remarkable passage following the eschatological discourse of 17:20; 18:8, which contains our Lord's answer to the demand of the Pharisees, "when the kingdom of God shall come."

The passage begins in the same way as that discourse, "And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds and said unto them, Occupy till I come" (Luke 19:11-13).

Christ taught plainly that He was going away and that the kingdom which the Jews looked for should appear with His return. Between His going away and His return the rule of heaven on earth would have the form indicated by Matthew.

Luke employs the phrase "kingdom of God," which is the rule of God in its all-inclusive sense. Matthew's phrase "the kingdom of heaven" expresses that rule on earth. Of this there are two forms, the form it takes during the interval of Christ's absence, and that of the millennial age, a pure theocracy.

Jesus Furnishes the Key

We have to deal with the former, and there is no better way to understand His teaching concerning it than to study carefully this group of parables.

Such a study will prove that there will be no millennium before the end of this dispensation (See Greek, "end of the age," vv. 39, 40), but that a mixed condition will prevail, in which the divine sower and the wicked one are at work, the one with His gospel, the other with counteractions and counterfeits, till the Lord of the harvest shall return to garner His wheat (in the rapture of the church) and put an end to Satan's work.

It is suggestive of a true interpretation of these parables that Jesus explained three of them, thus furnishing us the key to unlock "the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven." In the parable of the sower, the seed is the Word, which Satan counteracts. The subjective state of the hearers is emphasized. Only one out of four profit by the Word. The next parable varies the figure, emphasizing the objective aspect of the kingdom. Satan here counterfeits the good seed (children of the kingdom) with tares (children of the wicked one), and he does this so subtly (vv. 25-27) and thoroughly (vv. 28, 29), that his crop must come to maturity; no separation can take place "until the harvest" (vv. 30, 39-41). Then "they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity."

Mark the words, "out of his kingdom." When it is said that my exposition of the parable of the leaven would make the kingdom of heaven "a corruption working in the world, a conception of the kingdom which cannot be admitted," my answer is verse 41 of the context, as well as the net with its good and bad fish. The purpose of Jesus was not to describe the nature of the kingdom but rather to set forth that complex situation in which the rule of God is contested by evil forces, the world as the field, the church as an institution in the world with the Word of God, and the multiform agencies that strive for mastery in this dispensation. In short it is like Christendom wherein the Word of the kingdom fails in three-fourths of its hearers, the wheat and tares are inextricably mixed, and the net of evangelism, cast into the sea of the nations, gathers all sorts of fish.

Can the parables of the mustard seed and of the leaven hid in the meal be made to contradict this uniform teaching? I think not. The former stands for nominal Christianity, the vast outward growth of the Church from the smallest beginning to its present numerical strength. If the first parable refers to the individual aspect of evangelization, this one discloses its collective result, and is objective in its emphasis.

Where False Teaching Comes In

My position is that this parable of the leaven cannot be so interpreted as to throw away the key Jesus has put into our hands by His explanation of three of the group, as well as to contradict the entire teaching of the Bible concerning the leaven. On the contrary, as the mustard tree represents the visible historic embodiment of the kingdom principles in its "children," whose faith is discounted and hindered by the presence of "children of the wicked one," so the leaven stands for an inward, corrupting principle, in whatever form, hidden by the church in her system of doctrine as received from Christ and His apostles. (See Luke 24:44-49; Acts 1:6-8, 28:31; Gal. 1:11, 12; Col. 1:23;

1 Tim. 4:16; 2 Tim. 1:13, 14; Titus 1:9; 2 Peter 1:19-21, 3:15-17; Jude 3.) These Scriptures refer to a system of doctrine.

To apply the above illustration: If schools and teachers of the church may be signified by some of the "birds" in the mustard tree, their teaching would be the leaven at work in the meal. Our Lord simply employs different figures to indicate these facts. In the one case the church is the object or passive recipient of evil forces; in the other, she is the active agent in introducing and tolerating the corrupting process.

The Ephesian church was commended for its hatred and expulsion of false teachers, though reproved for its lack of love. No doubt for a time they heeded Paul's farewell message (Acts 20:17-31). But as proof that the church in general was such a passive recipient, note the following passages: Acts 20:28-30; 2 Tim. 2:17, 18; 2 Tim. 4:1-4; Titus 1:10, 11; 1 Peter 4:17; 2 Peter 2:1, 2; 2 John 10, 11; 3 John 9,10 (Diotrephes a church boss turning down the apostle!); Jude 4, 17, 18; Rev. 2:14, 15, 20.

These passages show that the church is warned against the coming of evil birds, or admonished that they have already found lodgment among her branches and are tolerated on their roost. It was difficult for evil to get or retain a foothold, during the life-time of the apostles, whose presence and authority were powerfully corrective (Acts 13:8-12; 2 Cor. 7:12; 13:1-4; 3 John 10;Rev. 1:11; 2:2). Nevertheless the tendency which Jesus described in His kingdom parables manifested itself strongly in their day. Thereafter, it developed rapidly.

Leaven in the Old and New Testaments

It is the special aim of the parable of the leaven in the meal to emphasize this tendency.

Leaven is never mentioned except as something that ferments and spoils that in which it is placed. It was forbidden in every type of Christ and in every symbol of holiness and sound doctrine. Its use in Leviticus 7:13 and 23:17-20 implies sin or imperfection in the membership of the church, notwithstanding which the value of Christ's sacrifice avails. In Amos 4:4, 5 it indicates hypocrisy or pretense for which judgment could not be averted.

In the New Testament it bears this uniform meaning. Paul calls it "the mystery of iniquity" (2 Thess. 2:7), using the same word to denote one of the "mysteries of the kingdom of heaven" spoken of by Jesus, who warned the disciples against the leaven of the Pharisees, of the Sadducees, and of the Herodians.

The leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees was called "the doctrine" of those sects (Matt. 16:12); that of the former was explained as "hypocrisy" (Luke 12:1). This hypocrisy was self-righteous devotion to the Scriptures which the sect diluted and perverted by the traditions and commandments of men (Matt. 15:1-9). In its broad, inclusive sense it was legalism—the substitution of law for grace, or the mixture of law with grace. As such it was the subject of one of Paul's powerful epistles. And as such it leavened the whole lump of post-apostolic Christianity.

The leaven of the Sadducees was rationalism. They said there was "no resurrection, neither angel nor spirit" (Matt. 22:23: Acts 23:8). They were the higher critics of that day, ruling out the supernatural and reducing religion to a naturalistic basis. They took the same liberties with the Scriptures that the modern critics do. Their limitation was the same: "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God."

As for the Herodians, they were a worldly set, caring more for politics than for religion. They were in "for a good time" and would compromise the truth any day for worldly power and favor. The lowly Nazarene was beneath their contempt. Their successors are everywhere today. A holy religion has no attraction for them. They care only for the material benefits, the by-products of Christianity. The Cross is an offense; its humbling doctrines are taboo.

All other New Testament references to leaven signify evil. Every passage that speaks of false teaching is a plain allusion to this corrupting principle. In 2 Timothy 4:1-4 and Titus 1:9-11 it is contrasted with "sound doctrine." In 2 Timothy 2:17, 18, it is a denial or perversion of the doctrine of the resurrection, eating "as doth a canker"; in 2 Peter 2:1 it is a rejection of the vicarious atonement of Christ. The Greek verb means to ransom with a price. In 2 Peter 3:1-4 it is a denial of the second coming of Christ as a literal event; in 1 John 4:2, 3 and 2 John 7-11 it is a denial of the incarnation, and, by implication, of the virgin birth; in Jude 4 it is antinomianism and rejection of the Lordship of Jesus; in Revelation 2:14, 15, 20 it is teaching that justifies loose morals and clerical usurpation. That which could not be tolerated in Ephesus was permitted in Pergamos and enforced in Thyatira, thus showing the growth of error.

Other Features of the Parable

When we examine the other features of this parable the case for leaven as corruption is made stronger. Meal always represents purity and soundness of doctrine and life. In Leviticus 2:11 it typifies the manhood of Christ in suffering, and both leaven and honey are forbidden—the former indicating sin, the latter the natural sweetness that will not stand the test of fire.

Yet there are so-called Christian teachers who inculcate doubt of the sinlessness of Jesus and hold that our salvation is in imitating an amiable example!

The following sentences (italics mine) are taken from a text-book used in a church school: "He was tempted, as all men are; and we have no means of knowing, really, that He was absolutely without sin." "We are told of His agony of spirit in the garden where He was arrested, and can guess the bitter doubt that found utterance in the despairing cry from the cross, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' But He conquered His weakness, bowed to the divine plan and met His death serenely a martyr to His faith in His own destiny."

Strange teaching for young people who come out of Christian homes! The leaven of Unitarianism is working in the meal, placed there by the woman!

Who Is the Woman?

The church: if true, the bride of Christ; if false, the harlot that corrupts the souls of men. As a faithful church she seeks for the lost by the light of the Holy Spirit (Luke 15:8, 9). As unfaithful, she carnalizes her membership and lines them up with the idolatrous world (Rev. 2:20).

Thus we see the church corrupting her system of pure doctrine by the leaven of heretical teaching and this means apostasy from the faith.

The teaching of the parable would not be different, should it read, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a woman who took and hid leaven in three measures of meal."

In either case the responsible agent is the woman (church) and the effect of her action is corruption of the faith. The corrupting process goes on in secret aided by the silence or apologetic attitude of pulpit and press, the mass of the membership not realizing the insidious character of the teaching in institutions they support.

The Hid Treasure and the Pearl

The parables of the "hid treasure" and the "pearl of great price" agree with this general outline of kingdom truth. Israel is the treasure hid in the "field" (world) which was bought by Christ's blood for the accomplishment of His kingdom purpose toward it and the nations in the coming age. The prophecy is running: "Israel is swallowed up; now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel wherein is no pleasure" (Hos. 8:8). Another prophecy declares that God's people lie buried among the nations, but that He will bring them out of their graves into the land of Israel and make them the joy of the whole earth (Ezek. 37:12-28; Zech. 8:23; Acts 15:15-17; Isa. 27:6).

The pearl of great price is the true church—the body of saved believers—as distinguished from the mustard tree, the visible, nominal church. Surely the "merchant man" is Jesus Christ, as is "the Good Shepherd" who came to seek and to save the lost, and the "nobleman" who went away to receive a kingdom and to return. The sinner does not buy; he is "bought with a price" (Mark 10:45; 1 Cor. 6:20; 1 Tim. 2:5, 6; 1 Pet. 1:18,19).

The hid treasure and the pearl represent the two sides of the kingdom which the nobleman returns to set up—the earthly side with Israel in her Messianic position at the head of the nations, and the heavenly with the glorified church as the bride of the Lamb reigning with Him over Israel and the nations. For her He "sold all that he had" (Phil. 2:6-8; Eph. 5:25-27; Titus 2:14, R. V.). and in her He shall be glorified and admired in the day of His appearing (2 Thess, 1:10).

The Marvelous Unity of the Bible

By Rev. Frank M. Goodchild, D.D., New York

DR. GRAY, teachers, students and friends of the Moody Bible Institute:

This is a Baptist day. It was a Baptist hymn you just sang, you know. The author of it was a Baptist preacher called from a little church to a big church. He had his goods packed to go and then the strain came on his heart and he could not go. He stayed with the little flock and wrote that hymn—

"Blest be the tie that binds

and in writing that hymn, sung by all bodies of Christian people he rendered a vastly greater service than if he had gone to Westminster Abbey to preach.

I never have visited the Moody Bible Institute, not because I have not wished to, but because I have been much too busy to do it, unless I had a special mission here to draw me. But I assure you I am one of that vast multitude of people interested in the work of the Institute, praying always for its work. If you ever get discouraged remember that your friends, not only in this land but throughout the world are numberless, and we bear you on our hearts constantly, teachers and students alike. You are not forgotten in heaven, of course, and you are not forgotten on earth, and I am one of that great multitude who pray for your work often.

I am to talk to you for a little while about the unity of the Bible.

"I accept the Bible unmutilated." I spoke those words thirty-four years ago to the council that examined me for ordination to the ministry. I say them with even greater emphasis today.

Some who were present that day did not like the statement. I am not sure they would like it any better today; and yet I did not then and do not now mean in making that statement, to make any insinuating suggestion, but simply to declare my absolute confidence in the oneness of the Holy Scriptures, and to intimate that any subtraction from them would be a mutilation of them.

It was not an ill-considered statement when I made it first, although I was then only a youth fresh from college and the theological seminary, and I make the same statement today, after many years have furnished ample opportunities for a profound consideration of them, opportunities that have not passed unused.

He Has No Fears

I am free to say that during all these years I have never felt any fear about the Book. I have enjoyed an unshakable conviction that it is God's Book; that God is able to take care of it and that He will take care of it. The people who have sat under my ministry know I have no fear at all of criticism of the Bible as such, but the spirit of the critics I have often unsparingly condemned and their dicta I have unhesitatingly repudiated.

Central Baptist Church, New York City

But criticism so far as it is a careful, intelligent, honest and scholarly study of the Scriptures I have always welcomed. The Bible itself invites it and common sense approves it. The higher the claims any book makes for itself, the more positive its demands for our obedience, the more searching our scrutiny of it should be. I have no use for superstitious credulity determined to believe the book no matter what its contents, and I have no use on the other hand for the critics who are determined not to believe the book no matter what its contents. The blind believer and the blind disbeliever are surely equally fools, both having cast good sense to the winds.

And I do not know but the man who professes to believe in the Bible but denounces those who investigate its claims and manifests fears for the results of the examination—I do not doubt but that man does the Bible more harm than the worst critics of it. He does not believe in the Bible who hugs it to his bosom and runs off into the darkness of superstition and traditionalism, fearing to bring it to light lest its statements be disproved. But he believes the Bible who confidently seeks to have all light possible shed upon it; who says "The more light the better"; and who believes the more we study the Bible the more we shall feel what an infinite treasure we have in it.

His Father's Bible

Now while I have not shut my ears against anything that scholarship has had to say about the Bible, and while I have done all that I could to keep up with the work of biblical students at home and abroad, yet I have today the same Bible that my father gave me so many years ago. There are just as many books in my Bible as in his. The parables are all there, the miracles are unshattered, the history remains trustworthy, the requirements are just as high, the assurances just as comforting, the promises just as reliable. I have been preaching from the Book as my father did, and I make the bold claim today, in spite of the supposedly superior light that we have now, that my father was as earnest and expert a student of the Word as any of us. He did not know much about "varied readings," or "clay tablets" or results of excavations, but he knew God as men who walk the halls of Scripture knew Him, and he knew how to make other people acquainted with Him. It was the boast of Tertullian, that every mechanic among the Christians of his day "knew God and could make Him known to others," and it delighted Tertullian to set that fact in contrast with the ignorance of Thales, the Greek philosopher, about God.

How to Know the Bible

You know there is another way of knowing the Bible than by a critical study of the text or a careful scrutiny of its origins, and that is by the illumination of the Holy Spirit. The Bible knows how to bear witness to itself. The divine qualities of the Bible are intrinsic and self-authenticated, and not dependent upon anybody or anything outside for certification. It is not necessary for us to have the counter-signature of Tübingen, or Leipsic, or Berlin, or Oxford, before we believe the divine Word. On the other hand men may feel they know the source of every paragraph in the Book, the historical setting of every incident, and the biography of every word used, and yet altogether miss the real meaning of the Book. It is as true today as ever that some things are revealed to us only through the Spirit of God, and I cannot escape the conviction that we get more from the Book as we approach it in sympathy and gratitude, than if we come to it with challenge and criticism.

Its Divinity

Now let me speak for a little while on the oneness and the divine origin of this Book. Its oneness in its effects, in its structure, in the personality that dominates it.

A man who never had seen a copy of the Bible who should pick it up and look into it would perceive at once that it is not like other books. There is a majesty in the words that makes them sound different from men's words; an insight into our nature that makes us tremble; a perception of our needs that fills us with hope; a power to satisfy those things that go beyond our hopes.

Archbishop Leighton has told us of a man who went into a church in Glasgow and heard the fifth chapter of Genesis read. It is almost nothing but a list of the names of the patriarchs from Adam to Noah, and the number of years they lived. But the man left the church that day converted, and the thing that converted him was the constant repetition of the phrase—"And he died." Adam lived so many years—"and he died." Seth lived so many years—"and he died." Methuselah lived so many years,—"and he died."

Dr. Robert F. Horton in relating the incident, said, "I believe you can do so with every book from Genesis to the end, and every page of the book has the same power to lead a man to believe in the living God and the Christ who loved him." Once when a missionary read to the natives of an East Indian city the first chapter of Romans, an intelligent Brahman came to him and said, "That chapter was written by some of you missionaries about us Hindus, it describes us so exactly."

A body of Chinese employed to translate the New Testament went on translating it at first without any apparent effect on them, but after some time the leader said, "What a wonderful book this is."

"Why so?"

"Because it tells me so exactly about myself. It knows all that is in me. The One who made this book must have made me."

A Moslem is particularly difficult to turn away from his own belief, and the only way he is ever brought to Jesus Christ is when he is induced to read the Bible. If you can get a Mohammedan to read the Bible his conversion is practically certain.

Dr. Robert Hooker gave an incident of a Christian Englishman visiting in Cashmere, accompanied by a native servant, a Mohammedan. The Englishman was no more ashamed of praying than his servant was. Every day he read the Bible and prayed in his tent. The servant observed it. He was not surprised at the praying, but he was curious about the Book. He asked what book he was reading, and the man told him it was a New Testament and added, "If you would read it for yourself I would give you a copy, but you must promise to read it."

He said he would, and the Englishman got him a copy in his own language. The native read it and before long asked to be baptized and became a herald of Christ.

Its Uniqueness

Now from these singular uniform results coming from the reading of this book, we can easily infer that in all its parts it has a singular character. Here are sixty-six books bound together. Some are only a page or two in extent. Some take hours to read if they are read aright. These books were written by forty men at least. They lived in different lands far separated, they wrote in different languages, many of them, and they represented every social development. Each author was evidently conscious of being free in what he did. He developed his own theme and used his own style of expression. There was absolutely no possibility of collusion among them. I do not think any of these men thought they were writing a part of a Book, so thoroughly independent were they. Yet the result of all the writing strangely enough, was not many books, but one; so evidently one that when put together it was called The Book or the Bible, and that is one of the most marvelous things in the world.

The subjects on which these men wrote were those on which nature and their own thinking could give them the least possible light, and yet in the whole 1500 years of its composition the matter of this book was absolutely one. Its purpose altogether harmonious and unchanging from beginning to end. Its view of God and man remained the same, and all over the world, among the most varied peoples the effect of reading any part of the book is always the same.

There is nothing like that anywhere else in the world. It is unnatural; it is awesome; it is supernatural. What explanation shall we give?

Not long ago my church built a new meeting house in New York City, and I often went down to look at the men as they were working there. There was a small army of them, working on different parts of the building at a distance from one another. They were very different sort of men. The materials were different. The steel came from Pennsylvania, the limestone from Indiana, the wood from the forests of the Northwest. There was such a variety of materials as I could not even name here today. And each man went about his work apparently without thinking very much of the other men working there, and yet out of all that fine structure daily grew into its final perfection. If as I stood there you had asked me the explanation of such harmony of result, I should have pointed you to a man who now and then moved about among the workers, and called their attention to a paper he carried in his hand. That was the superintending architect, and the sheet to which he referred was the detailed plan of the building. That plan was the work of one master mind that controlled everybody from the biggest to the smallest; from the finest mechanic to the most ignorant laborer. It controlled everybody who did a single stroke of work on the building, and so the marvelous harmony of the building was obtained.

You have no reasonable explanation of the impressive harmonious work done by forty or more in the Bible, unless you accept the statement they themselves made repeatedly, that they were inspired and controlled by one master mind, God himself, a sensible and satisfying explanation to any man who will consider it.

Opposed to Environment

Now the unity of the Bible is the more remarkable when you remember their teachings were often at variance with the opinions among the people with whom the authors lived. Men are usually profoundly affected by their surroundings. Environment is said to be more efficacious in making character than heredity today. Tennyson said, "I am part of all that I have met." At a Crozier commencement some time ago, Dr. B. C. Taylor who had been a teacher there for forty years said, in his farewell address, "I wish I could analyze myself and tell where each part of me came from." We often try to do that sort of thing. We say of one trait, "That came from my father." Of another, "That I caught from my grandfather." Another will say, "I have a friend and I learned that from him."

The biblical writers all betrayed their living relations by the ideas they expressed and the way they expressed them. It would have been impossible for any one to have heard some one talk like Paul the scholar, and yet that not create any effect. God saw that he would have to reveal to man His own great abhorrence of sin, and His grief over man's falling, and the method by which he might have a remedy from sin. In that great thing the Bible writers always held absolutely true.

Some have impressed it upon us that Moses learned much from Egypt, and that the Jews gave us what they got from Babylon, Egypt and Assyria. Moses, indeed, was learned in all the wisdom of Egypt, but one of the things Moses learned from the Egyptians was not to do as they did. He was in the midst of the greatest civilization of the world when he was in Egypt. Yet throughout the account given of him we find him in opposition to Egypt.

Turn to the book of Genesis that carries the story of the race back to the beginning, and you will find there a view of things in flat contradiction to the opinions that prevailed among the Egyptians, and the other nations neighbors of the Jews. Moses shows God creating the moon and stars. But you know that the sun and the moon and stars were the gods of the nations round about the Jews. All through the first chapter of Genesis Moses demolishes the gods of the heathen.

Turn to Leviticus. A great many men do not like the atmosphere of Leviticus. It is full of blood. The book is so distasteful to some men that they have insisted that the priests of God were nothing but butchers.

But think of what Moses is doing in the book of Leviticus. When he got an unorganized mass of people out into the wilderness he had to teach them. How was he to do it? Remember they had come from a land that was full of gods. Egypt worshiped cattle. One time when the Israelites broke away from Moses the people had a calf as god, showing how profoundly their stay in Egypt had influenced their lives, but when Moses arranged his sacrifices of what did they consist? They were killing the gods of paganism! Every morning and evening in the worship of Jehovah the blood of an Egyptian god was poured out and the flesh of an Egyptian god burned on the altar. You see the point of that surely. All the gods of the heathen were offered in sacrifice to Him Who alone is God, and so in books that men have rejected or discredited, we find testimony to some of the great truths set forth in other books of the Bible.

Christ's Person Dominating

Then we hasten to the last of the wonderful Book, and have the testimony from the Lord Jesus Himself as to its unity. He says, and this is my last contention, that the Book is one in pointing to Him. One great personality dominates all the Book. I want to say that each book of the Old Testament has Christ as its object and center. Our Lord Himself said that, and I bank on what He says. I know that there are many who do not believe it, and who think they understand the Scriptures too; but do not be troubled about that. They are not a new species in this world of ours. In our Saviour's time there were two men who thought they knew the Scriptures, but could not see the cross in them, and our Lord rebuked them for their blindness and said, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself."

They had a Bible reading that day conducted by the Lord Himself, and His subject was, "Christ in the Old Testament."

On another occasion He said, "They are they which testify of me," and on another occasion—"All things must be fulfilled which are written in the law and in the prophets and in the psalms concerning me."

So much for the purpose of the Old Testament. Of course the purpose of the New Testament is to present Christ. The purpose of the whole Book is, as John states concerning his gospel, "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God: and that believing ye might have life through his name."

It is a wonderful Book. Its author is God; its subject is Christ; its object the salvation of man; its end is eternity; its name is the Bible Wonderful Book! Do you read it? Do you really read it? Will you read it henceforth as you have never read it before, believing it to be God's Book; down on your knees before it; praying for the illumination of God's Spirit?

It will make you wise above your fellows, this Book will, if you read it; wise unto salvation for yourself, and wise unto salvation to others as well.

Wonderful Book! No wonder men and women through the ages have clung to it as worth more than life itself.

"Let all the plans that men devise,
Assault this Book with treacherous art;
I'll call them vanity and lies,
And bind the Bible to my heart."

The Coming Battle for the Christian Faith

By Rev. C. F. Koehler, Ashland, Ore.

THERE are movements within the church today which indicate that a great crisis is impending. These movements, or perhaps better, that movement, is nothing new in the program of God. Whenever corruption in morals or thinking enters the church, those faithful unto the Lord by the direction of the Spirit withdraw together, forming themselves into new organizations loyal to the divine revelation. So Protestantism withdrew from Romanism and so it was when the Wesleyan church was founded. Another exodus is imminent in view of the strength and assertiveness of "Liberalism" within the denominations.

This movement in its present stage involves mostly the leaders, but it will be only a matter of time till the whole flock becomes infected.

The movement itself is not clearly defined in the minds of most who are aware of it. It is imagined that the cause is a renewed interest in prophecy and the activity of millennial agitators. This, however, is only a phase. The real cause is the bold and egotistic disposition of the Holy Scriptures by the destructive critics. These men are entrenched in important chairs in educational institutions, speaking as oracles to plastic youth, and wielding an influence of incalculable power. Sincere perhaps, but knowing nothing of experimental religion, they are blind leaders of the blind, and steer humanity toward the reef of religious and national disaster.

Editors MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY:

I am submitting this article which to my mind represents a situation that should be presented to the people. A sermon by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, entitled "Shall the Fundamentals Win?" confirms me in this opinion. The Bible Institutes rather than the Theological Seminaries are the conservators of the truth during these trying times of apostasy.

Very sincerely,
C. F. KOEHLER

What Two Newspaper Articles Reveal

Two articles recently appearing in the press indicate the current of this movement and prophesy its results. One in the Literary Digest of February 25, 1922, entitled "Methodists Lifting the Curse"; the other in a daily entitled, "Dancing Splits Up Church Societies."

The significant thing in the first article is not so much the statement that "the provision of the church commanding all its members to shun the theater and dancing as soul-warping evils" still stands though leading clergymen state that they no longer hold it binding, but that "there has been emancipation in theological views about the verbal inspiration of the Bible." Also the attending statement: "There has come an emancipation in the church in which people claim the right to think for themselves."

The significant thing in the second article is that the young people's organizations of the Baptist churches of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., withdrew from the city union because the Presbyterian young peoples' societies declared in favor of dancing under the auspices of the societies.

The two conditions set forth in these items are more closely related than many imagine, for there is an organic relation between liberal thinking and liberal living, or the spirit of worldliness. Where the destructive criticism prevails, there the pleasures of the world come in and the Spirit of God goes out. Wrong thinking opens the life to wrong living. "As he thinketh in his heart so is he."

A Counter Current

Opposed to this trend there is another current of a constructive nature, embracing the orthodox leaders of all the denominations, fostered by Bible institutes, defended by their magazines and a few of the denominational periodicals.

This movement champions the verbal inspiration of the Scriptures, insists upon the Godhood of Christ, blood atonement, regeneration, the doctrine of the Holy Spirit, the deadliness of sin, the judgment and eternal reprobation of the impenitent. It also demands cleanness of life and separation from the world.

This movement is not so assertive nor boastful as the other, but it is more powerful and extensive than it appears. God is in it, and the power of the Spirit operates through it in the hearts of men and still offers to God the incense of souls born again.

The coming battle of Christianity lies in the hostility of these two forces, each growing stronger and producing fruit of its kind.

I

A Survey of the Battlefield

In view of these general facts, let us take a survey of the situations they present.

1. We have mentioned that the two phases of the liberal movement, faulty theology and faulty ethics, are inseparable; where one is the other follows.

The reason for this is not difficult to discover. Both arise from a common defect, the absence of the experience of regeneration. The critical, liberal thinkers have never learned the primary Bible lesson that spiritual things are spiritually discerned.

When the persecuting Saul of Tarsus received his spiritual vision, instantly his whole intellectual being was reversed relative to the gospel of Jesus Christ. Pride of intellect is the curse of the destructive critic, and until he humbles himself under the mighty hand of God he is doomed to live in spiritual darkness, however great his learning. He is as the Pharisees of whom Jesus spake, "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, we see, therefore your sin remaineth." Lack of spiritual understanding is likewise the cause of faulty ethics, of mistaken conceptions of right and wrong.

A society whose membership consists of regenerated souls would never debate the question of popular amusements; nor would a regenerated pastor turn his church into a soup kitchen or a moving picture theater. Not that some of these things do not have their place when God can be glorified thereby; but the power of the church does not lie in compromise with the world.

The reason the church is not more popular is not because it does not bend enough toward the world, but because it does not demonstrate the Christ-life in holy living.

2. Another thing is obvious. The divergence between these two movements is at the conception of the nature and function of Christianity in the world. Here we face the question of a final authority. Shall each one interpret Christianity according to his own opinion, or shall he take the statement of the Scriptures?

Men have many and curious views of the function of the church in the world. They cannot all be right, we must have an authority, but if the Bible is not accorded this position there is no authority.

According to the Scriptures the function of Christianity is the salvation of individual sinners from their sin. The agency in this salvation is the Holy Spirit, and its operation is based upon the atonement of Jesus Christ. The obliteration of the Cross as the substance of redemption takes from the believer the one reason for Christianity, and he cannot let so fundamental a fact go, upon which is based his hope of heaven.

The struggle of the conservative element is not more pronounced or widespread because the enemies have been fighting behind masked batteries and obscuring their heterodoxy behind glittering generalities. Discussing a fellow pastor, a mutual friend remarked: "I never could find out just where he stood in his religious views." So the great bulk of orthodox believers are not aware of the seriousness of the situation, the religious tragedy that is being enacted behind the curtain.

3. The trend of the movement in the school of the Modernist theology is similar to that throughout the generations of the Jews, culminating in the national apostasy, in the rejection of their Messiah.

Gradually the traditions of the rabbis kept replacing the teachings of the Scriptures, until the basic doctrines were the teachings of men. Also we discover that with this process the Jewish sense of morality deteriorated, conscience became warped, and spiritual perception lost. So that the closing days of Jewish nationalism until the final fall of Jerusalem, were characterized by horrors one can scarcely conceive in human beings. Corrupt theology culminated in corrupt ethics, a polluted morality and complete apostasy.

II

Going Back to the Newspapers

Let us now give consideration to the articles previously referred to, first to this sentence, "There has come an emancipation of the church in which people claim the right to think for themselves."

The meaning is, that men have a right to deny the inspiration of the Scriptures, and therefore to create such theological conceptions a priori as appeal to their fancy, and to reject such as stand in the way of their intellectual bias or their physical desires.

It is remarkable how skilful the modern critic has become with his religious scalpel. He is able to extract all the vital organs from the body of truth and exclaim, "Behold the wonder that shall speedily usher in the millennium which I have created by the might of my power and for the glory of my majesty!" But to think for one's self, when that is at variance to the teaching of the Bible is a dangerous proceeding. Let these free thinkers beware. God does not settle all His accounts in 1922.

This leads to a second expression which definitely sets aside plenary inspiration and states, "Today we emphasize the spirit of the Word" (which being interpreted, means), "We make the Bible mean what we want it to mean," for such hazy terminology is simply a screen behind which the dagger is plunged into the heart of the Word. The religion of Christianity stands or falls with the doctrine of the plenary inspiration of the original text.

We have called attention to these beliefs of the liberal thinkers to lead up to the question, "Will men who maintain such ideas ever leave them for the faith of evangelical Christianity?"

We think not. On this account there is nothing in the future but an increasing intellectual conflict and final complete separation. There will be no great religious awakening of the church for the promotion of God's program until this separation is consummated.

III

What Will Be the Result?

1. This coming battle will mean a new religious alignment whereby either the present denominations will disappear and two great bodies be formed, the evangelical and the rationalistic, or the evangelical Christians will withdraw from the denominations and either form a new church body, or continue a wing of the original denomination with a different title. The evangelicals will make the first move in their zeal to preserve, guard, and propagate the fundamentals of the faith.

Distinctions are already being made. There are men in my denomination to whom certain pulpits are closed because of their conservatism, and their insistence upon a genuine Christian life in professing Christians. The membership of these churches is composed predominantly of worldly people who think more of a good time than of converting sinners.

2. It will mean a new statement of the essentials of Christianity, which will especially emphasize the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures, the virgin birth, deity, resurrection, and atonement of Christ; the baptism of the Holy Spirit; regeneration; the victorious life, and the second coming of Christ.

This creed may go so far as to insist that men who find themselves out of agreement with it shall demit their ministry and be disqualified from the holding of any office.

3. It would not be surprising that in this re-alignment a new type of educational institution were developed.

The educational system of today from the public school, through college and university, is becoming more pagan and going to seed in its social, histrionic, and athletic life. A spirit of worldliness, a passion for questionable pleasures are shallowing the minds of youth and debauching their characters. The school system is not only not a corrective of this dangerous trend, but a contributor to it.

And the worldly church element looks on in approval. Teachers in our public schools professing a nominal Christianity have received their religious ideas from rationalistic instructors in the higher schools of learning, and these in their turn influence the thinking of their scholars and to an extent, of the communities in which they labor. It not infrequently occurs that a Christian parent finds himself in hostilities with his children, who, enamored by some instructor, insist on entertaining dangerous religious ideas against the instruction of the home.

Our whole scheme of education has become divorced from all religious influence. In some states the Bible is barred from the school-room, while all forms of pagan philosophy are admitted and taught. Socrates is studied, but Jesus Christ is put in the discard. Little wonder then that such headlines as these occasionally creep into the press, "Inquiry to be made into charges of immorality in the public schools of . . . ."

It is the same story over, faulty religious ideas are the opening wedge to faulty characters. Without the upward pull of faith in God and trust in Jesus Christ, degeneracy is bound to result in adult and in child.

The Christian church was the originator of our public school system; she laid the foundations of the leading universities in the land, and she can again resume the responsibility of educating her youth in such surroundings as will not destroy their faith in God.

In view of all these things, it appears that there is but one thing that can ward off this eruption in the church, and that is the universal revival of Holy Spirit religion through which the propagandists of the new theology will be converted, rooting worldliness and rationalism out of the church. But this seems remote, though not impossible.

The picture we have drawn is not a comforting one. But of one thing we may be convinced: whatever does transpire, God's purpose will be fulfilled to the least detail. Hence the believer can view the wrecks of time without fear and with an inspiring hope, for "in the evening time it shall be light."

Punctuation and Doctrine

By Rev. W. J. Erdman, D.D., Germantown, Pa.

GREAT pains have been taken by editors of Greek New Testaments and by the revisers of the Bible, to punctuate the text so as to bring out the sense of a passage more clearly. The insertion of a comma often decides the doctrine taught in a verse.

A few illustrations of many that might be given follow. In Romans 1:1-4, the comma after "gospel of God," implies the passing over of verse 2 to show that the gospel is "concerning his Son," and then later the semicolon after "from the dead" tells us that this Son is the historic "Jesus Christ our Lord." That the virgin mother of the Lord Jesus was of "the house of David" is denoted by the comma after the word "Joseph" in Luke 1:27. Later, Luke tells us that Joseph was also of "the house and family of David" (2:4, 5).

Another example is in Galatians 3:26: "For ye are all sons of God, through faith, in Christ Jesus." The comma after "faith" indicates that the believers are "sons of God in Christ Jesus"; and accordingly in 3:28 instead of "for ye are all one man in Christ Jesus," it should read "one son."

In Galatians 4:6—"the Spirit of his son into our hearts, crying Abba, Father," the comma after "hearts" indicates that it is the Spirit who is crying,—"hearts" is plural, but "crying" is singular. On the other hand Romans 8:14-16 reveals a conjoint "crying" of Spirit and believer, "ye received the Spirit of adoption (sonship) whereby (wherein) we cry Abba, Father."

In Ephesians 1:4, 5 it is a question whether the colon should be placed after the word "him" or the word "love."

In Ephesians 1:13, 14, the comma after "Holy Spirit of promise" and the other after "inheritance", indicate that the sealing with the Holy Spirit is "unto the redemption of God's own possession." See this confirmed by 2 Corinthians 5:5.

In Hebrews 10:12 the comma after "forever" indicates the uninterrupted continuance of the efficacy of "the one sacrifice"; and "sat down" is in contrast with the standing day by day of "the priest ministering and offering often times the same sacrifices, the which can never take away sins" (10:11). The Lord Jesus is seated at the right hand of God until He rises to take possession of His own throne. (Heb. 10:13; Ps. 110; Rev. 3:21; 5:1-7).

A kindred instance may be noted. In Matthew 19:28 the comma after "followed me" indicates that the "regeneration" was a thing of the future and contemporary with the sitting of the Son of man on His own throne on His return from heaven to begin "the restoration of all things whereof God spake by the mouth of his holy prophets that have been from of old" (Acts 3:19-21; 1:6-11).

Another and most significant change of a word in a quotation from the prophecies of Isaiah (64:4; 65:17) is found in 1 Corinthians 2:9 where "them that love him" is written instead of "him that waiteth for him." The inspired change of these words tells us that the wonderful things of grace and redemption promised in the Old Testament and which wise men and prophets longed to see had now come through the death and resurrection of the Messiah, and caused all who received them to "love him."

Two Ways of Moving Mountains

A Missionary's Testimony

I WANT, if it is God's will, to pass on to others special help and encouragement given to me by God about six years ago through Isaiah 41:15. I know that the chapter refers to the future of Israel. In the reaction against the old method of interpretation, that left Israel out of the question, and took every promise for the church, we are apt to leave such chapters as "Jewish ground." But we are the "Israel of God" (Gal. 6:16), and promises which have a literal, earthly fulfilment for them, may have also a spiritual fulfilment for us.

The difficulties at my station were, and still are, many and great. There was, and is, urgent need of revival. I had read of the faith that moves mountains, and I knew God's power was unlimited; but my mountains were still there. I prayed; I cared; I took them to God in the name of the Lord Jesus; but they did not move.

Then, one day, this chapter "came alive." Every Christian who has walked with God will know what I mean. It did not come as part of God's program for the Jews by and by. It came as His personal message to me that day, as freshly and as intensely real as if I had heard Him speaking to me alone. It has heartened me through these years. It will hearten me till, either here or from the glory, I see the scattered dust of the last of my mountains, and rejoice in the Lord, and glory in the Holy One of Israel.

The message is this. There are two ways of moving mountains. One is by a sudden and swift uprooting; the other is by threshing them. Have you ever been on a farm, and watched the threshing machine at work on a stack of corn? It does not move it all at once; but it takes it, a little at a time, till all is gone. In Isaiah's time there was no machine. The worker held his threshing instrument in his hand, and kept on beating the corn with it.

God is the worker. The difficulties around me are like mountains and hills. He has said that He will take me, and renew me, and sharpen me, and wield me as His instrument, to attack these mountains, a little at a time, till the whole is loosened and disintegrated. I am, by constant believing prayer for revival, to fan them. The wind of the Spirit will keep removing the loosened parts, until the whirlwind of revival shall scatter the last fragments.

Even with a sharp instrument in skilful hands, it takes a long time to thresh a mountain. It is not an affair of a moment. But when God wields the instrument which He has fitted for His purpose, the result is sure.

Read the whole paragraph, Isaiah 41:8-20. I was a Jacob; selfish, self-willed, prone to do things in my own way, apt to think I could manage alone, and yet wanting and craving for God's best. He chose me; He emptied me; He changed my name to "Israel," His servant. And He did this because I belong to the Lord Jesus, His Friend, of whom Abraham is a type. He has called me, too, from the ends of the earth; and though I have grieved Him over and over again, He has not cast me away. I am not to fear, for He is with me "all the days." The "I will's" of this chapter are for me. Left alone, I am still only the "worm Jacob," but the Holy One of Israel is my Redeemer. I am not to be dismayed or to fear, for He is my God. Satan's opposing hosts, who are behind the mountains of difficulty, are to be as nothing, and perish.

And then, verse seventeen, comes the promise of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. This church, once so dry, is to be fruitful; with pools and rivers where now there is only a wilderness with bare heights. It is to produce, in native teachers and missionaries, mighty trees for God's glory, "that they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the Lord hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it."

Over six years have gone by, and I have seen some of the mountains depart. Others are still there. The whirlwind has not yet scattered them. The mighty revival has not yet come. But as surely as God has given His promise, it is coming. He will create it; because He gave me His word, and He is faithful.

May God, who has told me to write this, make it His message to some other discouraged and doubting worker! Do not look in at yourself. You will see only a "worm Jacob." Be still in the hand of God, and let Him renew and wield you. He is able, and He will.

A Bluejay's Feather and Its Gospel of Beauty

A BLUEJAY left his calling card on us the other day. We found it on the back doorstep. The formal visitor does not use that avenue of approach, and this particular bluejay, who, of course, is familiarly known as Sammy, cannot be considered a formal visitor, in spite of the fact that he left his calling card. He may, indeed, have left it in a spirit of satirical travesty on the ways of humans. We have noticed an impudent tilt to his head.

The back doorstep, however, is a place where crumbs are found, and Samuel, with a keen eye for anything eatable, long since learned to make it a place of resort.

But it was the calling card which prompted us to begin this editorial—a long, narrow feather, delicately beautiful in structure and color.

From contemplation of its blue length, crossed at the tip with black bars and edged on one margin with dark gray, our admiring eyes wandered to other wonders of hue and form in the little space of garden frequented by Sammy and his crumb-hunting rivals, the squirrels.

Pansies, bachelor-buttons, marigolds, zinnias and cosmos—what a varied beauty the small patch of flowers presented. Behind them was a background of blossoming elderberry surmounted by the green foliage of great trees. A sharp tapping drew our gaze to one of the latter, and there, amid the leaves, a glint of contrasting red disclosed Rufous, the woodpecker, busy picking up a livelihood. He, too, is beautiful when he lets himself be seen.

Why the wonderful artistry in bird and woods animal, in flower and bush, in tree and sky?

Why the coloring of bluejay's feathers, of woodpecker's crest, of pansy and marigold and bachelor-button?

Science makes partial answer, an answer fascinating in its revelation of the ways of nature and the utility of beauty.

In the bird, it tells us, the decorative vesture has its part in luring the mate. It is a means to the perpetuation of the species. In some strange way this same great end may be aided by color in the flower, although here perfume, nectar and form more obviously serve it.

But, accepting all that science can tell us of why evolutionary forces have tinted feathered wing and petaled blossom, does the explanation satisfy?

We agree that beauty is not the product of chance. And everywhere beauty is to be found in nature. It did not simply happen so, nor can we believe that such utility as may be assigned to it alone accounts for its wonder and variety, its universal presence.

Man has helped. He has cultivated beauty in the plant world, but the initiative comes from nature. Without it he could accomplish nothing.

Why? Can one doubt that back of it all there is a supreme love of the beautiful and a Supreme Lover? Can one doubt that these marvels of design and color, product though they be of a developmental process, are proofs of a thought and a feeling by which the process is inspired?

Surely, there is a gospel in the world's beauty, a message of good news concerning the underlying purpose of life.

When we look at the bluejay's feather or the pansy, with its purple edging and its exquisitely traced lines of radiating mauve, there stirs within us an admiration and delight, a gladness and gratitude for their charm. We become lovers of the world as they reveal it.

Is it not this beauty that the Supreme Lover seeks in us? Has He not set before our eyes these appealing wonders that we may have aroused in us the desire that life, in its human manifestation, may be as beautiful?

External though the beauties of bird and flower may be, they are not of external origin. The magic that gives grace of form and charm of color lies within. Environment may help; the selective work of nature may contribute its part; but the urge is in the life. Are we not too much concerned with externals? Too eager about what evolutionists call "acquired characteristics"? If the life of humanity is to be beautiful in response to the desire of the Supreme Lover, the urge must come from within. Only as the soul of man seeks beauty in spirit and character will the transforming miracle be wrought for which the world waits. —Chicago Evening Post.

President Angell's Yale Baccalaureate

Some of our subscribers may have read the following in the secular press last summer, but we think it valuable for reproduction here.—Editor

SPEAKING yesterday from the text, "For unto whomsoever much is given of him shall be much required," President James Rowland Angell in his baccalaureate address to the graduating class at Yale discussed certain of the demands which society properly makes upon the educated young American.

He pointed out that, as a matter of course, such men are justly expected to possess trained intelligence, breadth of intellectual outlook and the capacity for hard work. Failure in any one of these rudimentary requirements constitutes an indictment of the education a man has received, and every institution must be willing to be judged by the success with which its students meet this test. If the latter can also bring to their life work forceful, independent personality, the stuff of which leadership is compounded, so much the better.

The Claims of the Community on the College Man

Furthermore he urged that because society has selected the college graduate in preference to thousands of his fellows to receive the most effective training we know how to bestow, the community has a right to expect from him in return a deep sense of his obligation to serve that community. The college bred man who does not conceive his task in life as one compelling him to make some contribution to human advancement, as well as a means for supplying bread and butter and starting a bank account, is unworthy of his privileges. And no business which cannot be thus justly conceived as promoting human welfare can retain the respect of an educated man nor enlist his full energies. Persons familiar with the history of civilization or the structure of modern society can have but one opinion regarding the outcome of the cynical worldly-wise doctrine of expoiltation of social or business opportunities for purely selfish purposes, whether these purposes affect a single individual or a special group. Contemporary Russia affords an interesting exhibit for those of a different mind.

Character the First Requirement

Most important and most difficult of all for the educated man to meet are the demands for sheer character. The college graduate is naturally expected to possess all the basic virtues and to have them rather more highly developed than less favored youth. Foremost among these is inevitably the demand for downright integrity, honesty and reliability upon which rests the whole structure of our social and economic organization. This is a claim which the college graduate will gladly recognize and manfully strive to meet. But the great strain put upon the character of the educated young man is found in the changing moral and religious standards of the time and particularly because of the rapidity and violence of these changes. It can hardly be doubted, for example, that in the United States at least, the violation of law has never been so general nor so widely condoned as at present. This is a fact which strikes at the very heart of our system of government, and the young man entering upon his active career must decide whether he too will condone and even abet such disregard of law, or whether he will set his face firmly against this course. The effect upon his own character of the decision which he makes, as well as upon the community in which he lives, is of the most critical importance.

The Sex Question

Again there is a widespread belief that the relations of the sexes have undergone material relaxation in recent years, that marriage is daily less of a sacrament, and more of a transient adjustment in the lives of those directly concerned. The University and the community has a right to demand that the educated man should not merely drift with the current of the set in which his lot may chance to be cast, but that he should look thoughtfully and earnestly at these issues, and others like them, and stand courageously for those ideals and practices commending themselves to his judgment as most likely to promote a sound and wholesome society.

Religious Experience

Finally, there is the inner sanctuary of the educated man's religion, his philosophy of life. Traditional religion is under heavy fire. Many prosperous and worldly-minded individuals find it possible to disregard it altogether as intrinsically inconvenient. Others of a more intellectual caste regard it as a remnant of the superstition of primitive man, and as such, beyond the serious consideration of the educated. These are difficulties of no mean order. And yet the world has the right to expect that the educated young man will come through these troubles with a saving faith in the primordial place of righteousness and love in the world, and a reverence for the spiritual significance of personality, which after all lies close to the heart of all religion and especially of Christianity. Certain it is that no man who sees life whole, as the educated man may be expected to do, can disregard religious experience as one of the ma- jestic and enduring forces in human life.

PLAYING POLITICS

The steam roller method was much in evidence at the Northern Baptist Convention. For "political chicanery" and "trickery" certain leaders are not to be equaled. The vote on the adoption of the New Hampshire Confession was lost, not on its merits, but by reason of "dirty politics." When Dr. Riley moved the adoption of the New Hampshire statement as the confession of faith for Northern Baptists, immediately Dr. Woelfkin moved as a substitute that the New Testament be adopted as the only Baptist confession. This was equal to putting everyone who voted against his substitute as an opponent to the New Testament. Fundamentalists only intended the New Hampshire Confession as a statement of what the New Testament taught, but the carrying of Dr. Woelfkin's substitute motion left the Rationalists free to put their own interpretation on the New Testament, precisely as do Unitarians and Eddyites as well as all other false teachers. Some victory! Apparently the Liberals were afraid of what might have happened had the issues been settled on merit.—Rev. C. Edw. LaReau, pastor of the Maranatha Baptist Church of Detroit, in the Tabernacle Messenger of June 25.

The Poet With God

GOD SATISFIES
By A. R. Garrett, McAlester, Okla.

If I can find you at the end of the day,
What care I though the labor be hard?
My work will be play,
My night turned to day,
My progress will nothing retard.

If I can find you at the end of the lane,
What care I though the journey be long?
Though clouds hover near,
There's nothing to fear,
My heart will be filled with a song.

If I can find you at the end of my life,
What care I when the Reaper appears,
For mine you will be
Through eternity,
Where time is not counted by years.

SEEKING THE INFINITE
By William Olney, London, England

Our hungry souls cry in their want,
  Yet scarce discern their need;
The richest gifts of time and sense
  Cannot their hunger feed;
Let all material joys unite
The soul still needs the Infinite.

O, warm my heart with love divine!
  Give thine eternal peace!
Cleanse my soiled spirit at the Cross!
  And from self's reign release!
Then shall my new-born nature live
By strength which only God can give.

Let this world seek to satisfy
  Its mind with things of earth;
Let hearts, blind to eternity,
  Crave joys of fleeting worth;
Souls, which their true need recognize,
Must seek from heaven divine supplies.

THE GODWARD THOUGHT
By Ella M. Reitz, Brookville, Pa.

To lift a thought to God each day
Will lift us from our narrow way;
The moments spent with him in prayer
Help us to bear our load of care.

The earnest thought of Him above,
Makes us to feel His boundless love
Around us flowing, full, complete,
And smooths the rough path 'neath our feet.

'TIS GOD, AND GOD ALONE
By Richard N. Lemke, Chicago, Ill.

Not yours to ope the bud
  Into a blossom fair,
Nor yours to put the scent
  Within the flowers rare;
Not yours, but God's alone.

Not yours to make the birds
  Flying aloft to sing,
Nor yours to bring them back
  Again at call of spring;
Not yours, but God's alone.

Not yours to put the life
  Within the heart of all
The growing trees we see
  Within the forests tall;
Not yours, but God's alone.

'Tis God alone can make
  This lovely nature grow;
'Tis God alone that gives
  This flowing life below;
'Tis God, and God alone.

THE GREATEST THOUGHT
By Rev. George M. Myers, Casey, Ill.

My soul, what is the greatest theme that may Gain entrance to thy sacred shrine each day?
Is it the vast extent of land and sea
Which is the time-abode for you and me?
Or, that our earth, with other planets far,
Follows the sun, a friendly, distant star—
Through space unbounded, while the aeons pass,
Like sheep, their shepherd, through a field of grass?
"No. None of these can be the greatest thought,
That psyche to my shrine has ever brought;
"For, what are these—the earth, the sea, the sky,
The sun and moon, and all the stars on high,
"But master-pieces of that mighty hand
That o'er the universe holds full command?
"O, no! of none of these can ever be
The greatest thought that comes to me."
Answers my soul, "So far as I have trod,
To me, my greatest thoughts have been of God."

Comparative Record of Two Denominations

By Layman

THE writer has long been a member of the Northern Presbyterian church; hence he has no hesitation in offering to the religious press for publication the facts given below.

Self support is not the only nor the chief mission of the church. The measure of its real success is its benevolences; what it does, not for itself, but for others. Also the contributions per capita is the only fair method of measuring either progress or decline. The figures for benevolences, as given in the Assembly Minutes of both denominations for 1919, 1920 and 1921 and in the church papers for 1922 are as follows:

Northern Church

	Member-ship	Benevol-ences	Per capita
1919	1,605,033	$11,707,633	$ 7.30
1920	1,637,105	17,310,690	10.57
1921	1,692,558	16,040,319	9.47
1922	1,756,918	14,551,620	8.28

The loss in 1921 was $1.10 per capita; in 1922, $1.19. Only 98 cents separates the per capita gifts of the last year from the record of 1919, the year in which the New Era Movement was started.

It is interesting to compare these figures with those of our brethren of the Southern Presbyterian church. Their record is as follows:

Southern Church

	Member-ship	Benevol-ences	Per capita
1919	364,230	$2,722,186	$ 7.47
1920	376,517	4,161,453	11.05
1921	397,058	5,894,232	14.84
1922	411,854	5,472,320	13.28

The per capita gifts to benevolences in the Southern church last year were exactly $5.00 more than those of their Northern brethren, a difference of more than 62 per cent.

If the Northern church had given in the same proportion per capita, their gifts would have amounted to $8,784,590 more than was reported to the General Assembly.

In the previous year, 1921, the contributions of the Southern church to benevolences were $14.84 per capita; of the Northern church, $9.47, a difference of $5.37.

Gifts in the same proportion, $14.84 per member, would have brought the offerings of the Northern church to missions and other benevolences up to $9,089,033. For the two years, 1921-22, the increase would have aggregated $17,873,624.

Why This Difference?

In my opinion there is only one reason, but that is sufficient. The leaders in the New Era Movement of the Northern church stressed giving, everybody determining his or her own proportion to give. The leaders of the progressive campaign committee of the Southern church accept God's terms of proportion, the tenth, to be paid, and hence stressed tithing.

Are there any reasons for believing that if the Northern Presbyterian church had pursued the same methods and used the same literature as their Southern brethren the results would not have been at least equal?

Is not nearly eighteen million dollars in two years a rather stiff price to pay for mistaken teaching?

In a pamphlet now in the press entitled How one Denomination is Succeeding, the methods of the progressive campaign committee of the Southern Presbyterian church, so far as the circulation of tithing and stewardship literature is concerned, are given in detail; also offers of practical partnership with denominational leaders, ministers and individual church members, who desire to educate their people in tithing. Upon request this pamphlet, with two others bearing on the same subject, will be sent free to any address by

Gutenberg's Dream

ONE gets easily tired after inventing type, and Gutenberg rested his head in his arms. "Tell me", he asked of the good fairy who hovers over inventors at such moments, "tell me what this child of my brain will grow up to be. Let me see it in its perfection, centuries from now."

And lo, Gutenberg dreamed a dream!

And he saw, lying on the front door-step, a Sunday newspaper. With trembling fingers he lifted its heavy bulk to the table and undid it, revealing the following precious contents:

A colored funny section, combining the worst taste and the worst art of which the known world is capable.

A news section, made up for the most part of unimportant chronicles dilated far beyond their legitimate size and coated with a spurious gilt of importance to justify their taking up the space not devoted to advertising.

Editorials settling all the problems of the world in alphabetical order, written by men whose personal opinions in the open air would be rated at about eleven cents on the dollar, but who, under the impressive anonymity of an editorial page, can make and unmake wars, laws, and men.

Press-agent material, sent out by the bundle from agencies "for release Sunday", printed in the guise of impartial news.

Sensational special articles, based on the theory that everyone must read a peck of dirt before he dies. . . .

At this point, Gutenberg roused himself from his dream, and, gathering up his type, threw it into the fire.

BOORISHNESS DOESN'T PAY

Pittsburgh Post

The New York Times a few days ago printed a story about a life insurance agent who in some manner eluded attendants and forced his way into the private office of the head of a large Pittsburgh concern. The latter was busy and naturally resented the intrusion. On learning the intruder's business he asked him to leave. The insurance man, the story goes, defied him, and the executive's astonishment at his audacity turned to amusement, he consented to listen to the fellow, and ended by applying for a good-sized policy.

"That salesman had moral courage," the narrator of the story says, and gives one to understand that his procedure in the matter was commendable and should be taken as an example by other salesmen.

A good deal of piffle of this sort is being published nowadays in the extensive literature on the subject of attaining success in business. What is called "moral courage" in this particular case was not that at all, but simply impudence. Once in a while a man may be able to "get away" with impertinent rudeness and ignoring of the civilities. But in the long run it is not a profitable practice.

PARTISAN AND SECTARIAN

Journal of Commerce (Chicago)

Once the political partisan and the religious sectarian were powerful and controlling influences in American communities. They were whole-hearted and devoted adherents of their parties and their churches, and kept both party and church in line with their avowed principles.

But weakening influences developed in both, and now we have something different, and weaker. Ask the church member why he is a Methodist, or a Baptist or a Presbyterian, or an Episcopalian, rather than an adherent of some other denomination, and note his hesitation and inability to define the difference in beliefs and practices which used to be sharply defined. Or put a similar query to the Republican and Democrat and observe their lack of ready reasons for their party connections.

One of two things is true. Either the churches are losing their distinctive characteristics, or their membership has grown ignorant of them. Either the citizenship in the leading political parties no longer is devoted to principles, or the parties have lost principle. Either is bad for church, party, and the citizen.

The evils of sectarianism and partisanship always speak for themselves, but behind them was steadfastness, fortitude, faith and knowledge of purpose. Now we have vacillating political allegiance and lack of sound conviction in denominational beliefs; and our last state is worse than our first.

WHERE PREACHERS NEED GUIDANCE

Journal of Commerce (Chicago)

Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, for many years a famous Presbyterian clergyman in New York City, was recently sued and a judgment rendered against him for $24,077 on a note he indorsed. The incident, so unpleasant in a preacher's life, recalls other experiences of clergymen in business transactions.

Bankers have many occasions to reflect on the ease with which preachers are led into bad business ventures. Almost all of them are savers, and a depressingly large percentage of them make unwise investments. The adventurer with a patent "worth millions," the stock salesman whose certificates will double in value in a year, the man who has valuable corner lots to sell to men who can be made to believe they will increase enormously in price in a few months, all find easy victims in the preacher who has a few hundred, or a few thousand, dollars laid by after years of close economy.

Every ministerial body, at least once a year, should be given instruction in the care and investment of their small savings. With little or no business training, they need this kind of advice to save them from "confidential opportunities" to lose all they have. One word of caution every clergyman should be willing to remember, and that is never to invest with a stranger or with anybody else until the investment has met the approval of a banker or a prudent business man in his congregation.

CHURCH CENTERS EFFORTS ON HOME

Evening Post (Chicago)

The American parent is blamed for failing to maintain the standards of Christian ideals in the home, resulting in the present "godless generation," in the report which the joint commission on home and family life presented to the triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church which was held in Portland, Ore., in September. The report vigorously condemns the absence of a spiritual tone in the American family life and the consequent lack of Christian education in the younger generation. The commission was appointed by the convention six years ago and its findings bear the signatures of the most prominent bishops and laymen in the church.

The report declares that the root of the family problem lies in the lack of religion in the home. In comparison with the early life of the country, when prayer and Bible reading constituted a regular part of the daily program, it cites the prevailing tendency today, when the average American family has entirely excluded religious thought from its home life. Sunday, the report asserts, has become a day for extra sleep, motoring and other amusements. "If American children are not to be taught the name of God in the schools and He is to be unnamed in the home, what can we expect," it asks, "but that at this moment the United States is actually developing into a non-Christian nation?"

The report recommends a strong, robust religion as the need of the day. It utters a warning that the nation will decay unless the American home returns to something approaching its former ideals.

The report is not entirely pessimistic in tone, for it cites the progress which has been achieved in various lines. "The curse of drink has been throttled," it declares. "Commercialized vice is passing. Even war is going the way of human slavery, polygamy and other creatures of the night." In view of these advances, it maintains that the church must concentrate upon the one essential thing, making the home Christian, an achievement that in time will solve all economic problems.

BRAVE WORDS ABOUT BAD MOVIES

The Christian Statesman

The good people of this country owe a debt of gratitude, because of the growing spirit of responsibility in newspaper offices concerning moving pictures.

That super-excellent weekly, Life, has, during some time past, been conducting a department of truthful criticism passing shrewd and artistic judgment, a judgment which is moral without being prudish, upon all the most important films that are offered by the producers. And the fearlessness with which Life has performed this greatly needed work may have had something to do with inciting the newspapers to similar independence and conscientiousness. It is a very significant moral triumph when a newspaper will condemn in unstinted fashion a film which is being advertised in the newspaper's own pages. It shows that the editorial conscience has not been bartered away through the business department.

It would be invidious to single out any one particular newspaper; because scores and hundreds have come to a sense of their moral responsibility, and they are discharging their duty regardless of present consequences or threats of further consequences by the controllers of the moving picture industry, or art, or game, or whatever you may choose to call it.

We have before us a copy of a metropolitan newspaper, carrying on one page a sensational advertisement of a film which cost one million dollars, and also a criticism of the film by the dramatic writer of the paper. The advertisement is full of alluring expressions designed to excite the expectation of the public that the picture gets onto forbidden ground and is more than daring in its treatment of sex questions. And the newspaper's criticism says that the picture is rotten, and that the police power has excluded the most immoral features of the picture, so that it is not even satisfying to those who might be induced to attend for the sake of viewing nastiness.

The advertisement says that the million dollars was spent by great artists to produce realism. And the criticism says that the million dollars were spent to produce a mass of filth.

Once more we offer gratitude to the newspapers. It rests with them more than any other one agency to compel the moving pictures to keep within the proprieties.

THE UNKNOWN GOD

Youth's Companion

When St. Paul visited Athens he was astonished to find in that rich, that busy, that curious, that eager city an altar erected "To the Unknown God." America of today is richer and busier than ancient Athens was, more splendid, more luxurious, more immensely, intensely pre-occupied with itself. The surface of life has never been so varied, so absorbing, diverting, distracting. New impressions, new discoveries, new facts, come upon us so quickly and thickly that we have hardly time to think or to feel.

And this rush of surface life has for many of us completely crowded God out. Perhaps never in the world before has there been so little sense or thought of the divine in common living. In our education we try to teach a thousand things, things of supposedly ideal profit, things of practical daily usefulness. We are prohibited by law from teaching anything about God. What pagan or barbarous nation would not find such a state of affairs grotesque? God has left the hearth also. Where are family prayers, faithful readings of the Bible? They are gone and forgotten, and few of us know them any more. But we find God in the churches still. Perhaps—when the automobile takes us there and not elsewhere. And even in the church the social tends more and more to override the sacred. We comfort ourselves with the thought that we are treating God with reverence; but often reverence is dangerously near oblivion.

And so the divine must come back and will come back, if the vastly growing world of democracy is to go on growing to perfection. As St. Augustine said long ago in words of profound beauty, "Thou hast made us to turn to Thee, and our hearts can find no peace until in Thee they are at rest." That is why so many of us today have rebuilt in spirit, if not in fact, the old Athenian altar: "To the Unknown God."

USING SUBSTITUTES

The Pilot

On Sunday afternoon in the meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention in Buffalo, N. Y., two years ago, one of the addresses was delivered by Sam Higginbotham, missionary to India. Some years ago he went in for scientific agriculture, and since that time he has developed a farming enterprise that has become a sort of agricultural experiment station for the natives. He is doing a magnificent work for the secular welfare of that poverty-stricken people. His work has become something of an example for other missionaries. Increasingly the work of missionaries is turning from winning the people to Christ and salvation to that of improving their physical conditions.

It is perfectly possible to teach the heathen a modern system of education, to build better houses, to adopt better sanitation, to do better farming, to live more comfortably, and still leave them heathen—without Christ and without hope for the future life. It is always easier to promote something else than to promote a true Christianity. The business of the church and of its missionaries is to tell people that they are lost sinners in need of a Saviour, and that God in his love has provided a Saviour, that salvation is not in better living conditions but in the blood of the Son of God.

A multitude of things are being substituted for the realty of those things which Christ brought from the presence of the Father and offered to men. The missionary had told the story of his success in developing a model farm among the people of India and told it well and interestingly. As he neared the close of his address he said sometimes people asked if he could honestly use those things instead of Christianity. "I reply," said he, "That is Christianity." He put great emphasis on the "is," and there was a roaring and prolonged applause from the great audience that heard.

Better Work
Romans 12:9-11

A better type of work depends upon a better type of life. The Epistle to the Romans, from which our Scripture text is taken, deals with this better type of life. It is described as a life of faith, a justified life, a separated life and life eternal. The first part of the epistle shows how this life is provided by God and how it is received by man. "Grace" and "faith" are the two key words. Then, beginning with chapter 12, such matters as consecration, character and conduct become dominant. These are presented as a result of that new life provided by grace and received by faith. To all the recipients of this life the apostle addresses the exhortations contained in our Scripture lesson. Yieldedness to these exhortations leads to "better work."

"Let love be without hypocrisy," or pretense; that is, be genuine, real, dependable and sincere. A game of make-believe is permissible for children but in the game of life make-believe or pretense is simply living a lie. It exclaims, "I am delighted to see you," while the heart wishes that the individual addressed were a thousand miles away.

"Abhor that which is evil," in thought, in speech, in act. Never play or trifle with that against which conscience and the Holy Spirit protest. Abhor it, or it will ruin you. Positively and persistently follow that which is good. "Better work" will be the result.

Towards others be kindly affectioned rather than critical and censorious. Act honorably, seeking others' good, rather than selfishly seeking the promotion of personal interests.

In business be diligent. The slothful are never respected. Use the best methods. Achieve the greatest success. At the same time be "fervent in spirit." See that you do not cool off spiritually. Beware when you lose your enthusiasm for the things of God. With these Scripture verses as a basis, we would say that better work is the result of certain qualities in life which enrich and energize the soul. These qualities are sincerity, purity, kindness, thoughtfulness of others, diligence and enthusiasm.

The Folly of Procrastination
Ecclesiastes 9:10

The modern version of Ecclesiastes 9:10 is "Do it now." It has been well said that the road of "by and by" leads to the house of never. The folly of procrastination may be clearly proved on this basis.

1—It kills time. We can all make a personal appropriation of the following: "Lost—one golden hour set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward because gone forever." Time lost means less accomplished, less of service and less of reward. Every duty neglected means loss of some blessing that we might have had.

2—It loses opportunities and prevents development. Knowledge and wisdom both are gained through obedience to the Scripture which bids us buy up the opportunities. See Ephesians 5:16. Many Christians wonder why greater opportunities do not come to them. The only reason is because those that do come are not improved.

3—It weakens character. One who is always going to do great things and never begins, soon becomes a graduate in untrustworthiness. He lacks the quality of dependence for which employers are looking and often look in vain. Like the man in the parable, no one will hire him. Failure to do the thing at hand with all our might means failure in the making of a life that counts. Life is made up of little things and procrastination leaves them undone, or only half done.

4—It proves fatal. This is true not only in regard to the things of time and the things that make for character here and now, but also to the eternal things, the things of the soul's welfare. Procrastination is clearly related to excuse making, and that in turn is a close relative of moral cowardice. "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation." Felix delayed the choice which was pressed upon him and suffered eternal loss as a consequence.

The counsel contained in the one verse of our Scripture lesson is worthy of adoption as a principle of life. Whether great or small, that which is near and calls for action should have immediate and whole-hearted attention and be done in such a spirit as to glorify God.

True Patriotism
Isa. 1:16-20

The world changes, but human nature does not change. Sin is rampant and the call to repentance necessary as ever. The true prophet and patriot sees the sin of his people and calls them back to God.

God deals with nations as well as with individuals. There are national sins in addition to personal transgressions. The Hebrew prophet was a seer and one who saw below the surface and dealt with things as they actually were rather than with things as they appeared or seemed to be. Purity of purpose and clearness of vision enabled him not merely to look at events but to look through them.

What Isaiah saw in the life of his people and nation is presented in verses 3-15. The people had turned away from God. Notwithstanding this, they maintained a religious appearance, bringing a multitude of sacrifices and going through the formality of temple worship but in a professional and perfunctory way, worthy only of the contempt expressed in verse 14. The cause of all this may be seen in verses 5 and 6. For this condition there can be but one cure as found in verses 16-18, namely, conversion and cleansing. Accept this cure and verse 19 becomes operative and experimental—refuse this one and only remedy and verse 20 is all that remains.

True patriotism must be Christian through and through or it is faulty and doomed to failure. The spirit of lawlessness now so prevalent must be met and overcome by a patriotism in which the Christian sanctions and penalties have a prominent place. The holiness of God, the atonement of the Cross, the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit, the righteousness of the law and the dignity of the state, all need a re-emphasis in this present time. The true patriot will stand for these things, insisting that obedience to God brings prosperity while disobedience brings poverty and punishment.

October 22
Reverence and Worship
Psalm 111:1-10

The Psalm begins with a call to praise the Lord, and closes with the assertion that His praise endureth forever. The reason for this is found in the character and works of God. He is gracious and full of compassion; He provides for all them that fear Him; He is ever-mindful of His covenant; His words are great; His commandments sure and His righteousness enduring. What God is and what He had done becomes the basis of the call to reverence and worship Him.

Where there is no reverence for God, there will be no reverence for law or human life, for parents or for the aged. Irreverence is degrading. It destroys the finer things of the spirit. God's name, His Word, and His day of rest call for a reverent attitude of soul and mind. The tenth verse of the Psalm teaches that reverence for God is the beginning of wisdom. The phrase which reads, "the fear of the Lord" is synonomous with reverence for God, and beyond all question and doubt such reverence marks "the beginning of wisdom." This is true both in child life and in adults.

Worship is the result of the soul's true vision of God. "God is worthy." This is the song which the redeemed sing. This sense of worthiness leads the soul to worship the worthy One. "Adoration," says Madame Guyon "is only a jet thrown up from the worship of the Spirit. Worship is continual communion with the Father."

A man becomes like the one he worships. To worship God is to become truly great for God Himself is great as well as good and gracious. Worship lifts the human spirit out of the things that belong merely to time into the things that relate to eternity. It was Emerson who said, "If your eye is on the eternal, your intellect will grow and your opinions and actions will have a beauty which no learning can rival." Worship does for the soul what physical exercise does for the body. It makes us fit to live our lives on high levels; it keeps conscience sensitive and it makes the heart true towards God and tender towards others.

A Saloonless World
Ephesians 6:10-18

The diligent Bible student who is also a keen observer of human affairs will constantly be reminded of the words in Isaiah 55:8, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts."

A saloonless world is not a saved world. A picture of a saved world is given in Revelation 22:3-4-5. This picture presents a condition or state that will satisfy the heart of God and of man. It is God's ideal and for its achievement, God is unceasingly at work. The saloonless world is a human ideal, greatly to be desired and one for which Christian believers may well labor and pray. Nevertheless we must make a distinction between sin and the saloon, which is only a form of sin. Salvation includes deliverance from all sin, not only its pollution and its power, but its very presence.

The warfare presented in our lesson text is not merely a fight against saloons but a conflict with the hosts of wicked spirits. Into this conflict only those are called who are already "in the Lord." All such are exhorted to become strong or empowered, so as to stand against the foe. The foe is the Evil One and the spirits of darkness and wickedness who serve under him. In order to take the field against these forces and overcome them the Christian must be properly equipped. He must be armed with truth, conscious of righteousness, prepared for all emergencies by the perpetual possession of the peace of God, guarded by faith from the fiery darts of the Wicked One and aggressive through the Word of God and prayer. There is much prayerless fighting to-day and consequently much failure all along the line. The plain teaching in verse 12 is that the battle is a spiritual one and the equally plain teaching of verse 18 is that prayer must have a large place in the life of the overcomer. Satan is an experienced fighter. He has already been beaten, having been defeated at the Cross, but only the use of God's provided weapons can make that defeat actual in Christian experience.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

THE UNENDING KINGDOM

L. W. K., Bethany, W. Va.

Question: How do you harmonize the statement in Luke 1:33 about the kingdom without end, with that in Revelation 20:4, 5?

Answer: While the Messianic kingdom is limited as such to a thousand years, yet the prophecies of the Old Testament agree with Luke 1:33 in merging the millennial kingdom into the ages which are to follow. See 2 Samuel 7:13, Psalm 72:5-7, Daniel 2:44; 7:13.

THE COUNTRY DANCE

M. W. C., Major, Sask., Can.

Questions: Upon our prairies dancing is practically the only pastime. We condemn the modern dance of our cities as a disgrace; but is not the friendly country dance quite a different proposition? Or would it be a stepping stone to the city dance?

Answer: The last question suggests the answer. Styles move from the city to the country. The country dance is far from being an innocent form of amusement. Other forms of amusement may be made popular, but they require careful planning. You could obtain literature upon the dance by writing to the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 826 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

THE CHURCH ANNEX

B. B. H., Kempton, Ill.

Question: Would you oppose the plan for a new church building which is to include a recreation or community hall that is to be used for Sunday-school, kitchen, basket-ball, and amusements of various kinds?

Answer: This is a matter upon which the opinions of sincere Christians widely differ. The advantage of a good Sunday-school room, and of a kitchen used for purely social or religious purposes are quite evident. The danger of the recreation and amusement features is that they crowd out the spiritual. It is difficult to keep them subordinate, but if the spiritual life of the church is what it ought to be the evils will be reduced. Pray and work to that end.

STOPPING SUNDAY BASE-BALL

A Constant Reader.

Questions: Is it right for a minister to enter a base-ball field on Sunday afternoon to stop a ball game by serving warrants on the players?

(2) What would be the best way to stop this Sunday ball playing?

Answers: (1) Our judgment is that it would not be wise, and that it would not further the gospel. It would come under the head neither of an act of mercy nor of necessity. A minister of the gospel has a bigger job than that of mere reform. Get men really saved and base-ball playing upon Sunday will take care of itself.

(2) Educate the public conscience. So long as players and patrons see no wrong in it the game will go on and there will be plenty of "rooters." Proclaim a better way to spend Sunday and persuade the leaders of the community to adopt it.

DEALING WITH SPIRITISM

C. J. F., Fort Worth, Tex.

(1) Most church members who are drawn away into Spiritism are ignorant of its nature and also ignorant of what the Bible teaches upon the subject. Books and pamphlets are being written so that people may be informed. We would suggest a book entitled Spiritism and Fallen Angels, by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., and a pamphlet by Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, D. D., entitled Spiritualism.

(2) The Old Testament saints were saved by faith just as we are. Their faith was counted to them for righteousness. David's prayer, "Create in me a clean heart, O Lord, and renew a right spirit within me," intimates some knowledge of the doctrine of regeneration which is the work of the Holy Spirit. Yet the Holy Spirit did not come in His fulness and abiding presence prior to the present dispensation.

(3) Yes; the Old Testament saints had access to God through prayer the same as we have, but Christ became "the new and living way" by reason of His sacrifice, the rending of the veil of His body, in contrast with the approach to God through the animal sacrifices of Old Testament times.

(4) Satan's object was to get Christ out of his way. Therefore he instigated Judas to betray Him. It is only an inference that Satan tried to kill Jesus in the garden. It is doubtful whether Satan realized what the atoning benefits of the cross would be.

(5) Apostates cannot truly be said to "fall from salvation," for they never have experienced salvation. Their departure is only from a formal profession or allegiance.

BRIEF MENTION

J. C. F., Carnegie, Okla.

You will find the Critical and Experimental Commentary upon the Bible more helpful than the one you mention.

F. A. W., Liberty, N. Y.

Concerning mind-cure or healing by auto-suggestion these methods need not necessarily dishonor God; but in some cases, perhaps, in many, they might have the tendency which the correspondent fears.

H. F. D., Lima, O.

If the woman be divorced from a man upon scriptural grounds is he any longer her husband? Is he not to her the same as dead?

(1) We believe fully in the atonement, namely, that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." We believe also that the benefits of the atonement will be shared by the body. This is true during the present time, but will not be fully realized prior to the resurrection.

(2) We do not know when the "latter rain" will take place, but it probably will be a repetition of the events of the day of Pentecost upon a much larger scale.

The Birth and Childhood of Jesus
Luke 2:1-20, 40-52

Golden Text:—"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man"—Luke 2:52.

I. The Birth of Jesus (vv. 1-7).

1. The Time (vv. 1-3). It was at a time when the Jews were coming under the Roman power. It was a most propitious time for the introduction of the gospel. The whole world was under one rule, making it possible for ministers to go from place to place easily and without molestation.

2. The Place (vv. 4-6). Bethlehem, as the prophet had foretold 700 years before (Mic. 5:2). God moved the emperor to enforce the decree of taxation in time to cause Mary to be at Bethlehem. The emperor was unconsciously carrying out God's purpose.

3. The Circumstances (v. 7). His surroundings were of the most humble sort. The almighty Creator condescended to take upon Himself humanity —to be born in a manger, becoming the poorest of the poor, that none might be hindered from coming to Him.

II. The Birth of Jesus Announced (vv. 8-20).

1. To Whom (vv. 8, 9). To shepherds who were watching over their flocks by night.

2. By Whom (v. 9). The first gospel sermon was preached by the angel of the Lord. The angels have part in making known the gospel to lost men. These glorious beings no doubt deeply sympathize with fallen, sin-cursed man.

3. The Nature of the Message (vv. 10-14). It was good tidings of great joy. It was good tidings because the way of salvation was about to be opened up for all, Jew and Gentile.

4. The Shepherds Witnessing (vv. 15-20). They made a prompt investigation of the angel's message. When they went to Bethlehem they found everything just as represented. When they beheld the Lord of glory they could not remain silent. They went back to their work praising God. Those who really hear the good news of salvation through Christ are impelled to tell it to others.

III. The Child Jesus Growing (vv. 40-52).

Jesus Christ was God, but His deity did not interfere with His development as a human being. The processes of His physical, mental and spiritual growth were the same as those of any normal human being.

1. Jesus Tarrying Behind at Jerusalem (vv. 40-43). At the age of twelve years a Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the Temple, for he was considered a "child of the law." Being unconscious of His mission when His mother and Joseph were returning from attendance at the Passover, Jesus tarried behind to enter the Temple and inquire into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. He had an alert, eager mind which inquired after truth, especially the truth concerning His Father's house. His heart yearned after His Father.

2. Jesus Found in the Temple (vv. 44-47). When His mother and Joseph had gone some distance on their return journey they perceived that Jesus was missing, and sought for Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintances. Not finding Him there they returned to Jerusalem where they found Him in the Temple. (1) He was "sitting" (v. 46), showing that He was no passing visitor or sight-seer. He was perfectly at home in His Father's house. (2) He was hearing the teachers of God's Word (v 46). This shows that He was eager to learn God's will. (3) He asked questions (v 46.) His growing mind was inquisitive. It more than received what was taught; it inquired after. (4) He answered questions (v. 47). His answers showed great wisdom, such as to astonish those who heard Him. Yet we should not surmise that He was consciously displaying His wisdom. It was not an exhibition of His divine wisdom, but the expression of the workings of a perfect human mind suffused by the Holy Spirit.

3. Mary's Complaint (vv. 48-50). She remonstrated with Him for His behavior. To this He replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that He was more than the son of Mary. God was His Father. Though these things were not understood, Mary, a wise mother, kept them in her heart.

4. Jesus' Obedience (v. 51). Though He was fully conscious of His divine being and mission He lived a life of filial obedience.

5. Jesus' Development (v. 52). (1) Mental. He "increased in wisdom." (2) Physical. He "increased in stature." (3) Spiritual. He "increased in favor with God and man."

The Ministry of John the Baptist
Luke 3:1-22

Golden Text:—"Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand"—Matthew 3:2.

I. The Degeneracy of the Times (vv. 1, 2).

The Jews had sunk to a very low level of civil, moral and religious life. Luke carefully enumerates the civil and religious rulers in order to show the profligacy of the times, and therefore the need of a messenger to call the people back to God and virtue. Pontius Pilate, a little later, attained notoriety by unjustly, and in a cowardly manner, condemning Jesus to death. Herod, the son of Herod the Great, was a murderer. Annas and Caiaphas were corrupt ecclesiastical rulers. The political, moral and religious affairs of the world strongly call for a John the Baptist to call it to repentance.

II. The Nature of John's Ministry (vv. 3-6).

In the wilderness he underwent a discipline which fitted him for his task. While there he heard the call of God and came forth with a message from Him. Out of the wilderness he flashed forth, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins (v. 3). The baptism was the sign of repentance. This ministry is declared to be a fulfilment of Isaiah's prophecy. The message was described as one calling upon the nation to prepare for the coming of the Messiah. The only hope for the world is God's salvation through Jesus Christ. Let men accept Christ and all war and contention will end. Men will then love each other instead of hating each other. They will then co-operate in helpful service instead of seeking to destroy each other.

III. The Content of John's Message (vv. 7-18).

1. Denunciation of Sin (vv. 7, 8). He called them "a generation of vipers." This shows that he charged them with deceitfulness and wickedness. Men in all ages have been awakened by such indictments of sin. Knowing the subtle hypocrisy of these Jews, he demanded evidence of their sincerity; the genuineness of their repentance was to be demonstrated by their works.

2. Announcement of Judgment (v. 9). He declared that the axe was laid at the root of the tree, and that the tree not bringing forth fruit was to be hewn down and cast into the fire. Face to face with judgment men become sober. John made it very plain that for their sins they should be called into judgment. Paul's preaching of a judgment to come made Felix to tremble (Acts 24:25). This kind of preaching is needed today. While John preached sin and judgment, he accompanied it with assurance of pardon on condition of repentance.

3. Instructions to the Inquirers (vv. 10-14). (1) The people (vv. 10, 11). Each man was to turn from his besetting sin and show love and kindness to his fellow men. Clothing and food were to be given those who had need. They were to turn from a life of selfishness and greed, and do unto others as they would be done by. (2) Publicans (vv. 12, 13). These tax gatherers who were guilty of greed and oppression were not asked to give up their occupation, but to exact only that which was appointed by law. (3) The soldiers (v. 14). These were, probably, the policemen of that day, at least men on military duty.

4. Testimony to Jesus (vv. 15-18). The people were musing in their hearts as to whether John was indeed the Messiah. When John perceived this he with fine humility declared that his mission was so lowly in comparison with Christ's that he would be unworthy to perform the menial act of a slave in loosing the latchet of His shoes. John baptized with water, but Christ, he declared, would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire. Water was a material element and at best was only symbolic, but Jesus would exert upon their souls the divine cleansing and quickening power. He showed that Christ would come with mighty power to punish the wicked and impenitent, even separating them as chaff from the wheat, gathering the wheat into the granary and burning up the chaff.

IV. John's Imprisonment (vv. 19, 20).

For his reproof of Herod's lewdness and other sins John went to the dungeon. God's faithful prophets are usually despised by the world, even cast into prison, burned and beheaded.

Jesus Tempted

Luke 4:1-13

Golden Text:—"For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted"—Hebrews 2:18.

I. The Place (v. 1).

The wilderness of Judea. The first man Adam was tempted in a garden with the most pleasant surroundings. The second man, Jesus Christ, was tempted in a barren wilderness, surrounded by wild beasts (Mark 1:13). Adam shamefully failed; Christ gloriously triumphed. The temptation continued for forty days.

II. The Purpose (v. 1).

He was led into the wilderness by the Spirit. Christ's temptation was Messianic. We are not tempted as He was, but the same methods are employed on us. During the eighteen years of retirement Satan no doubt tempted Christ like he tempts us. As a carpenter he was no doubt tempted by Satan to do imperfect work and use unsound material. The Holy Spirit, not the Devil, led Jesus into temptation. Satan, no doubt, would have gladly escaped this hour, but the time had come for the Redeemer to enter upon His mediatorial work; therefore He went from the place of anointing and heavenly recognition as the Son of God to meet and despoil the arch enemy (Heb. 2:4). Satan is a real personal being filled with cunning and malice.

1. It was not a preparation for His work, but rather its first conflict. In baptism we have the symbolic act of dedication of Himself to the work of redemption through the cross—the making full a righteousness. In the temptation, the strong man is spoiling the enemy.

2. It was not to see if Christ would stand fast, would fail under the most crucial test. Christ could not fail.

3. It was to show Christ as an object upon which we may rest our faith with unshaken confidence. He came as the second Man, the head of a new race, its very source and life. It was a demonstration of the inseparableness of the divine and human natures in the incarnation. In the act of the incarnation was found a union which the Devil could not break.

III. The Method (vv. 2-12).

Christ as the world's Redeemer sustained a threefold relation—Son of Man, Son of God, and Messiah, therefore Satan made each one a ground of attack.

1. As Son of Man (vv. 2-4). Satan made his first assault upon Him as a man by appealing to the instinct of hunger. Satan urged Him to use His divine power and convert a stone into bread. Hunger is natural and sinless. Real human life experiences hunger. The appetite of hunger was right and normal. The fasting that counts with God is that which results from taking to heart God's work and doing it so that physical hunger does not come. The temptation was in satisfying a right hunger in a wrong way. To have yielded in this case, though his hunger was desperate, would have been to renounce the human limitations which He had taken for our sakes. To use divine power to satisfy human needs would have been to fail as Saviour and Redeemer. To do right in a wrong way is to sin. In the incarnation He became identified with humanity, so He chose to abide in fellowship with man.

2. As Messiah (vv. 5-8). Here the temptation was to grasp His rightful dominions by false means. The Devil offered to surrender unto Him the world if He would adopt his methods—would worship Him. The force of this temptation was in the fact that the kingdoms of the world are Christ's by God's covenant with Him. Satan is only an usurper. God's method by which Jesus was to possess the world was the cross. The temptation Satan is pressing upon the church today is to get possession of the world by other means than the cross. We fall into the hands of the tempter today when we resort to worldly means of doing the Lord's work. To depart from unswerving loyalty to God and His Word is to fall into Satan's temptation. To bid for power by using worldly means is to follow after Satan. To worship the Devil would be to set up his kingdom.

3. As Son of God (vv. 9-12). Here Satan tries to induce Christ to presume upon God's care. He quotes a Messianic Psalm to induce Him to so act. To do the spectacular thing in order to get notice is to fall into Satan's temptation. For Jesus to have placed himself in danger in order to get God's special help in delivering Him would have been to sin. To test God as to whether He will keep His promise is the greatest distrust—it is to sin and fall. To put one's self in moral and spiritual peril in order to test God's faithfulness is to sin. Satan is never quite so dangerous as when He quotes Scripture. Beware of Satan when he comes with a Bible under his arm.

IV. Christ's Defense (vv. 4, 8, 12).

It was the Word of God. He met and repulsed the enemy with, "It is written." Our defense is God's Word. May every Sunday-school teacher know how to use it!

V. The Issue (v. 13).

Satan is vanquished. If we will but trust God and use His Word we too can overcome.

Messiah's Ministry (World's Temperance Sunday)

Isaiah 61:1-9

Golden Text:—"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."—Proverbs 14:34.

The Lesson Committee has gratuitously named this lesson "Worldwide Prohibition." Neither the text, nor the context, directly or impliedly says anything about prohibition as we understand the use of the word. However, when Messiah shall reign upon the earth the rum traffic with all other iniquitous practices shall be abolished.

I. Messiah's Commission (v. 1).

He was appointed by the Lord. God's plan for the world is a time of peace and blessing. This condition of blessedness is to be brought about through the ministry of the Messiah. As a qualification for this work, the anointing of the Spirit of God was upon Him. That this applies to Jesus Christ is proved by His own application of it to himself (Luke 4:18-21).

II. Messiah's Program (vv. 1, 2).

Messiah's program is twofold: To "proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God." Messiah brought gospel mercy at His first coming, and will bring judgment on all unbelievers at His second coming. The careful reading of Luke 4:18-21 will show that Jesus suspended reading of this passage at the comma, in Isaiah 61:2. His first coming opened up the day of "grace and the acceptable year of the Lord," and His second coming will usher in "the day of vengeance of our God" (2 Thess. 1:7-10; cf. Mal. 3:1-3). If Jesus had not stopped reading at the comma He could not have truthfully said, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears," because already nearly 2,000 years have elapsed since He began His ministry of grace, and the day of vengeance of God has not yet begun.

1. Proclaiming the Acceptable Year of the Lord (vv. 1, 2). In His ministry of grace He preached (1) "good tidings to the meek." "Meek" here means not only a grace, but a condition, that is, those in poverty and affliction, the same as those who labor and are heavy laden described in Matthew 11:28, 29. (2) "Bind up the broken-hearted." "Bind up" signifies healing. Ths the Lord has been doing through the centuries of His grace. (3) "Liberty to the captives." The figure of deliverance from the Babylonian captivity is used to describe deliverance from sin and death (Heb. 2:15). (4) "Opening of the prison of them that are bound." Messiah's work was to give deliverance to those who were enslaved by their sins. This He will do for all who will accept Him. (5) "The acceptable year of the Lord." This means a space of time in which God would accept all who repent of their sins and come to Him. God is willing to accept all who come to Him by Jesus Christ.

2. Proclaiming the Day of Vengeance of God (v. 2). While the day of mercy is lengthened out, the time of judgment will surely come. The day of vengeance will break upon the world when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven (2. Thess. 1:7-10). The time of grace and mercy is called the "acceptable year," while the period of judgment is called the "day of vengeance." The period of mercy is called "year," while the period of vengeance is called "day," showing that the period of mercy is much longer than the period of wrath.

III. The Blessings of Messiah's Kingdom (vv. 3-9).

When Christ comes and establishes His kingdom, wonderful blessings will result to the whole world, and especially to Israel.

1. "Comfort all that mourn" (v. 2). The day of vengeance will bring sorrow to many, but they shall be comforted when they shall see the King on the throne.

2. "Give unto them beauty for ashes" (v. 3). This peculiarly applies to Israel. The symbol for distress and mourning was sackcloth and ashes. When the blessed Saviour shall reign as King there will be no wearing of sackcloth and ashes, but instead the garment of beauty.

3. "Oil of joy for mourning" (v. 3). Israel has been mourning for centuries. When the Messiah shall reign as King they shall be glad.

4. "Garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness" (v. 3). Instead of wearing the symbol of the burden of sin they shall be clothed so as to indicate their joyfulness.

5. "Called trees of righteousness" (v. 3). These trees representing Israel as planted by God and bearing fruit, not as reeds bowed down with sorrow.

6. "They shall build the old wastes" (v. 4). Israel shall return to their own land and shall rebuild the city of Jerusalem and the cities of Judah which lay in waste.

7. "Strangers shall stand and feed your flocks" (v. 5). In the time of the kingdom the Gentiles shall render voluntary service unto Israel so that Israel may devote her whole time to the service of God.

8. "Ye shall be named the priests of the Lord" (v. 6). God chose Israel to be the priestly nation to represent Him to the Gentiles. This will be the fulfilment of that purpose. Israel shall yet function according to God's original plan and purpose.

9. "For your shame ye shall have double" (v. 7). Instead of the shame and confusion which Israel has experienced for centuries she shall have double honor and rejoicing.

10. "I will direct their work, and make a covenant with them" (vv. 8, 9). God will vindicate His people and cause the Gentiles to see the divine favor upon them. The Gentiles have despoiled the Jews. They have not only robbed them of their goods, but have appropriated the promises which God made unto them, and heaped curses upon Israel. Israel shall be the head of the nation and the Gentiles shall acknowledge God's favor upon them.

November 5
Jesus, The Great Physician
Luke 4:31-44; 5:12-26

Golden Text:—"Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses" —Matthew 8:17.

Since the topic sets forth Jesus as the Great Physician it will be better for adult classes, especially, to take the larger text chosen by the Committee and note the several outstanding cases of His healing. For some classes it will be better to study the one case of healing, namely, the healing of the paralytic.

I. Jesus Healing a Demoniac (4:31-37).

While engaged in teaching in the synagogue He was interrupted by a man who had an unclean spirit. Jesus rebuked the demon and compelled him to come out of the man. This was no doubt a wicked, supernatural, personal being who entered into, and controlled the poor man. This healing shows Jesus not only gracious, but powerful to set free the whole brood of diabolical passions such as lust, envy, anger and jealousy which rule men.

II. Jesus Heals a Woman of a Great Fever (vv. 38, 39).

Peter's mother-in-law was prostrate with a great fever. They of Peter's household besought Jesus for her. Jesus rebuked the fever and it left her, so that she immediately rose and ministered unto them. No earthly physician has ever been known to heal in that way. Divine healing is immediate and complete. We should distinguish between divine healing and faith healing. Faith healing is the result of the action of the mind upon the body and is measured by the degree of the faith, while divine healing is the action of the power of God upon the diseased one and is always complete and immediate, because it is measured by the power of the Healer—God. His fame spread abroad and many sick of divers diseases were brought unto Him and He healed them all, even casting out demons and forbidding them to testify of Him.

III. Jesus Heals A Leper (5:12-16).

Leprosy was a most loathsome and terrible disease. Because of its foulness one afflicted therewith was an outcast. The disease is thought incurable by man, therefore the leper was regarded as hopeless and dead. In response to the leper's earnest request Jesus touched him and bade the leprosy to depart, and immediately he was healed and cleansed. Leprosy is a type of sin. Though sin is loathsome, hideous and separating, Jesus has power to save those who come to Him by faith. He has power to heal and cleanse and restore.

IV. Jesus Heals a Paralytic (5:17-26).

1. Watched by the Pharisees and Doctors (v. 17). Jesus' fame spread abroad and this only incited jealousy on the part of these men. They did not want to get too close to Him, but close enough to know what was going on. These human teachers were watching the divine teacher.

2. The Paralytic Brought (vv. 18, 19). This is a fine lesson in Christian service. They could not heal the man, but being moved by sympathy they cooperated in bringing Him to Jesus who could heal and restore. Their efforts in bringing the man shows their willingness to go to pains and trouble to bring him to Jesus.

3. The Man's Sins Forgiven (v. 20). Jesus looked back of the palsy to its cause—sin. The effect of his sin was before Jesus, but he proceeded to deal with the cause of it. All disease and death is the result of sin. The Lord deals first with that which was at the root of the trouble. Jesus saw the faith of those not only who brought him, but of the man himself. No doubt He saw the man's sorrow for his sins.

4. The Purpose of Miracles (vv. 21, 22). The Pharisees accused Christ of blasphemy when He declared the man's sins forgiven. Jesus showed them that back of the beneficent deed to the man was the demonstration of His deity. The main purpose in the working of miracles is the authentication of the divine mission of the one performing them. The healing of the man was done by divine power. The working of the miracle was to demonstrate His authority to atone for sin and to grant forgiveness. While the divine power and authority are thus shown, the wisdom and love of God are shown that in all cases the supernatural work is for the good of the individual.

5. Relative Value of Physical Ills and Moral and Spiritual Maladies (v. 23). Physical ills are less serious than the sins which cause them. In dealing with them we should follow the example of Christ, and first deal with the cause.

OCEAN CITY BIBLE CONFERENCE

With the largest attendance in its history, the annual Bible conference at Ocean City, N. J., closed its sessions August 20. The consensus of opinion is that never was there a more helpful Bible conference held on this world-famed camp grounds.

The conference this year was held under the auspices of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Mr. George V. Kirk, Associate Business Manager of the Institute, in charge. Being undenominational it was open to every one. The interest of those in attendance was evident from the fact that the entire expenses of the conference were met by free-will offerings, no conference fee being charged.

The sessions were presided over by the Rev. H. L. Burkett, regional representative of the Moody Bible Institute.

The Conference speakers included Dr. James M. Gray, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute, and four teachers and preachers who are associated with the Institute under its Extension Department; Rev. Dr. Henry Ostrom, Rev. George E. Guille, Rev. Dr. Robert H. Glover and Rev. E. J. Pace.

Dr. Ostrom gave the opening message of the conference before an audience that filled the auditorium. He also spoke each day throughout the entire conference.

Dr. Gray gave several addresses, the most notable of which were: "Why Contend for the Faith?" "How to Master the English Bible," "The Authenticity of the Bible."

Delightful and profitable hours were spent each morning in Bible study conducted by Rev. George E. Guille. His theme, "The Finished Work of Christ" was made so plain that even a child might understand. He discussed the work of the Holy Spirit as related to the individual and the church, the fulness of the Spirit so complete through the Cross, to which he constantly pointed us.

Dr. Glover, of the Institute, who has spent more than twenty years on mission fields gave several addresses relating to the needs of the fields. "This is a crucial time," he said. "Doors of opportunity are opening as never before. We must heed the call, for the fields are white unto the harvest. 160,000,000 are still in darkness."

The conference was fortunate in having Dr. E. J. Pace, who gave several studies in the Epistle to the Ephesians. He also gave his noted lecture on "The Law of the Octave."

The music which was an inspiring feature of the conference, was directed by W. H. Gerow of Philadelphia.

Mrs. M. A. Martin.

"Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared . . . . . neither be ye sorry; for the joy of the Lord is your strength."—Nehemiah 8:10.

Historically, these were the words of Nehemiah to the returned exiles at Jerusalem over 2,000 years ago. But no less truly are they God's words to His church today. For how largely has the church, like Israel of old, been drawn into captivity to the flesh and the world, lost her appetite for spiritual things, and neglected her day of ministering to needy souls at home and unevangelized lands abroad!

There is an insistent need for a return to God, for a great spiritual revival within the church that will bring God's people back to their first love, beget in them a new hunger for the things of God, and quicken the pulse of their whole spiritual life. When such a spiritual revival comes a missionary revival is sure to follow, but not before. Only in the measure in which Christians find Christ real and precious to their own souls will they ever be concerned to make Him known to others. The only satisfactory basis, therefore, for missionary appeal is spiritual life.

Then shall not those who long for the advancement of worldwide missions pray without ceasing that more and more God's true children may be led to discern and to enjoy to the full the "feast of fat things, and of wines on the lees" which God has provided so bountifully in Christ? Thus fed and filled, the resultant joy of the Lord will be their strength, as His constraining love will be their motive, for the sending out more promptly and more adequately of "portions" to the millions of languishing souls in heathendom for whom as yet "nothing has been prepared" by a selfish and indifferent church.

"We have heard the joyful sound,
Jesus saves, Jesus saves;
Spread the gladness all around,
Jesus saves, Jesus saves;
Bear the news to ev'ry land,
Climb the steeps and cross the waves,
Onward, 'tis our Lord's command,
Jesus saves, Jesus saves."

Africa Inland Mission Figures

The following statistics are given for the above society, which is working in Kenia Colony (formerly British East Africa), Tanganyika Territory (formerly German East Africa), and Belgian Congo, up to January 1, 1922: Number of different tribes, 25; stations, 43; missionaries on the field, 128; native evangelists and teachers, 444; baptized communicants, 1,413; estimated population of territory occupied by A. I. M., 1,507,500.

Miss Hulda J. Stump, '09, in a recent letter requests home friends to join with the missionaries in asking the Lord definitely for 100 missionaries this year to re-enforce the present meager numbers and overtake the tremendous needs. Prayer is also requested that the ranks of the native workers may be greatly increased.

Missionary Rest Home in South Africa

Mr. Lawson S. Probst, '07, of the A. I. M. in Kenia Colony, writes from Cape Town, where he and his family were spending a brief time in rest in lieu of a furlough to America. He tells that a missionary home has this year been established there which will be of great advantage to many missionaries in Africa. It is called "The Andrew Murray Missionary Home" and is delightfully situated in the Kloof gardens of Cape Town in a quiet and very healthy spot. The address is 20 Bellevue St., P. O. Box 1465, Cape Town.

M. B. I. Bible Worker in Cape Town

A Bible training class has recently been formed at Cape Town under the presidency of Rev. Andrew C. Murray. The class has secured the services of Rev. F. H. Stern, a young minister there who is a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute, and who is teaching along the various lines of biblical instruction followed at the Institute. The class meets every Friday evening and consists at present of a score or more of young men and women who work during the day, but are enthusiastic to take up study and practical work in preparation for further Christian work in the interior as God may lead them.

Progress in the Dark Sudan

The Sudan Interior Mission has recently entered upon its twenty-fourth year of work. The past year has been one of financial testing at the home base, but of encouraging advance on the field. Baptism was administered to 333 new converts, three of whom constitute the first fruits among the Tangali tribe in the most distant region reached by the mission thus far. The native Christians grew in the grace of giving and their offerings amounted to $1,000. The first Gospels in the language of two of the tribes were printed by the mission's Niger Press. Fourteen new missionaries were sent out and distributed so as to strengthen the forces among the various tribes already entered.

This being accomplished, the mission feels the time has now come for a new advance into unreached districts and tribes, and with this object in view twenty-one new recruits have already been accepted during 1922. A few of these have already gone forward in company with Guy W. Playfair, field director, and other old workers returning. The departure of the remainder is contingent upon funds being received for their outfit, passage and support, and prayer is requested that these needs may speedily be met and the re-enforcements thus freed to go forward.

Is It Fair?

An Alliance missionary in the Marathi area in India writes: "My work needs much prayer. I have with me a younger missionary still studying the language, two trained Indian catechists, two book sellers and one untrained worker. I am responsible for a district of over 350 towns and villages with a population of over 200,000 people. There is a small but growing Christian community scattered in several villages, and we are seeing the beginnings of an encouraging mass movement toward Christ. We greatly need divine love and wisdom, and also physical strength for the pressing demands upon us."

Thank God for such a field of opportunity with its many open doors and open hearts, and also for these consecrated missionaries and native workers who bravely face the situation. But is it fair that such tremendous need should have to be faced by this mere handful of workers while so many Christian agencies and workers are vying with one another in small communities here at home? Truly the harvest yonder is great, but the laborers are few. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He will thrust forth laborers into His harvest."

Mr. Strachan's Campaign

Rev. Harry Strachan, field director of the Latin America Evangelization Campaign, recently paid the Institute a flying visit. He gave an inspiring address to the student body, telling of some thrilling experiences connected with the campaign which had just closed in three of the Central American Republics. Great congregations packed large theaters and tents and listened attentively to the gospel, a large proportion of them hearing it for the first time. Much Christian literature was distributed, and interested souls were put in touch with the nearest resident missionaries. The campaign stirred up the intense opposition of the Roman Catholic clergy, and there were times when the workers were endangered by crowds of roughs incited against them by the priests. But God signally delivered His servants, and a deep impression for good was made upon the people.

Mr. Strachan has already sailed again from New York to conduct a similar campaign in Colombia. This is one of the most backward and most fanatical of the ten Republics of South America, where missionary work has met with great opposition and results have been meager. The earnest prayers of God's people are requested for the present campaign.

A Chinese Convert Who Counted the Cost

Last Easter Sunday fifty-three persons were baptized and received into the church in connection with "Bethel," the hospital and evangelistic center conducted by the distinguished Chinese convert, Dr. Mary Stone, and several colleagues. This number included the whole Freshman nurses' class of ten. One of these, Miss Chow, is a granddaughter of the viceroy of the province. Her mother was a patient of Dr. Mary's, and one day this beautiful girl drove up to the hospital in one of the biggest cars in Shanghai, and announced that she wanted to become a nurse.

"But," said Dr. Mary, "don't you know that you would have to take off all those lovely clothes, and all your jewelry, and dress in blue cloth like a coolie, yes, and wash the feet of coolie patients and dress the women's hair?"

"All right," was the answer, "I'm ready."

So Miss Chow, who had never in her life done her own hair, came to be a nurse. Her family at first violently opposed her, but gradually came to feel rather proud of her spirit. Little did they imagine that this mad freak of hers, as they regarded it, would lead on to her becoming a Christian. But it did just this, and so she was finally baptized and joined the church at Easter.

Kanamori's New Campaign

Mr. Paul M. Kanamori has written a letter of great interest regarding the special evangelistic campaign in which he is engaged for this entire year. He is visiting all the Presbyterian churches of Japan proper and also Formosa, Manchuria and Korea. During the first three months of the year he visited 36 places and held 113 meetings, 80 of which were for Christians and 33 for unbelievers. The total attendance for the latter meetings reached 19,250 persons, and of these 5,881 professed to decide for Christ. This means one out of every three persons who attended his services were saved—a remarkable proportion indeed, twice as high as that of his three years' work before coming to America. To quote from his letter: "A wonderful change has taken place in the attitude of the people toward Christianity during my two years' absence in America. The Spirit of God has been working mightily, and this land is becoming riper and riper each year for the work of speedy evangelization." Our brother also reports having circulated over 100,000 copies of his "three-hour sermon," and he hopes to double that number before the close of the year. He cites some remarkable instances of conviction and conversion in his meetings, thanks God for the wonderful strength given him for his strenuous task, and pleads for the supporting prayers of his friends in this country.

Our First One Hundred Missionaries in Russia

FIVE hundred missionaries for Russia was the object placed before the Christians of this country by The Russian Missionary Society when in November, 1920, Pastor Wm. Fetler, with twenty-one Russian and two American missionaries, sailed from New York City on their way to Russia. Well, not quite two years have passed since the number was first mentioned and now we are in sight of the first hundred.

"What Hath God Wrought?"

NEARLY a hundred missionaries, each having some training, thoroughly orthodox and well established in the Word of God, preaching the Word in the power of the Holy Spirit, throughout Russia and Poland and other Slav countries. AND WHAT OF THE RESULTS? The missionaries go forth with trust in the Lord and without any guarantee of stipend, and share their own scanty supplies with starving people. They distribute American and British relief goods and Bibles and preach the Gospel. Whole villages have been moved by the Gospel, many hundreds led to the Lord, mission halls opened and churches formed Revival—yes, indeed, in a very marked degree—has been experienced by these heralds of the Cross. God has indeed wrought great things.

We Must Advance Still Farther

The cry for help is ringing loud. Millions are in dense darkness and must have the light brought to them. We need to engage more missionaries at once. Mr. Fetler, the General Director, informs us of fifty evangelists in Russia and Ukrania who need help and support. These native men know the language, and need no training other than that already received. They are already in the field, and are well qualified to do real missionary work. All they need is temporal support.

Famine is Still Raging

The crisis in Russia is not past. The famine is not over. Nay, the famine is bigger than all that can be said or written about it. The Russian Trade Delegation in London writes:

"It should be made quite clear that at least 3,000,000 people are not receiving any public aid at all in the famine area; that 11,000,000 people who are being reached in one way or another are being maintained on starvation rations only; and that the situation cannot in any way begin to improve until the new harvest in three months' time."

The Friends Relief Committee of London says:

"On the 19th of May we received the following cable from our representative in Moscow: 'Estimated that one and a half million will die from famine before harvest. Yield from forthcoming harvest, although probably high per acre, probably total only one-third normal. Unless assistance given, famine inevitably continue after next year.'"

We have received an appeal for help, dated April 5th, witnessed by the seal and signature of the Hmelevskoi Church Minister, I. Kovinchuk, as follows:

"Let it be known unto you that a great misfortune fell upon our dear native land Russia, as destruction falling away from God in foolishness, blasphemy, and chiefly the punishment from God, a hunger. We, the children living in the provinces of Ekaterinoslav and Tavrickiev in the south of Russia, are under the trials of hunger.

"In the beginning of the famine somehow we strengthened ourselves with the hope for the future, but now it reached the agony, when the brethren began to be sick, to swell, to die, to decompose. While alive we put all our powers, with the help of God and His blessings upon our labors, to slacken the hunger. We sent our delegates to Moscow and Kieff, where we received a certain help, for which we praised God Who takes care of us and our brothers sacrificing their mites. But this is as a drop of water in the sea because this offering, compared with so many starving brothers, sisters and children, does not help any, as the famine grows stronger, and with its terrors brings despair for the surrounding localities.

"Brothers and sisters, listen to the terrors of the famine! The South, which flourished with verdancy, now is barren, because a part of the trees in the orchards and in the groves are cut down for fuel, the herbs are burned by the heat, the earth turned into rock and dust, and cracked; the animals die for lack of food, and their corpses are used for food.

"At last, the people becoming exhausted from the famine and from the use of greens, leaves from trees, grass, saw dust, straw, chaff, bones ground into flour, for food, add to this mixture a white clay, and hot water. This is the food that your brothers and children use. Every one has his complexion changed, darkened, the skin clings to the bone, so that you can never recognize your acquaintances in the street by their appearance. The children ask for bread. They are asking their parents, saying, "Papa, Mamma, Mamma, Mamma, where is the bread which we had in abundance?" and they do not cease asking, "Give us bread," till the breath of their lives is out.

"Hearing these cries the parents are tormented in their hearts. The starving people fall down in the street and die, their corpses lie, because there is nobody to bury them. Several families have died. Cases occur when the parents die, their children crawl over the dead bodies, and ask for bread. There are instances the mothers have eaten their children. The human flesh with a various seasoning is sold on the market.

"Scores of children are carried out from the orphanages daily. The dead sons are buried in one pit in the cemetery. From the hospitals the half dead are taken out.

"We have no hides of any animal which we would not use as food. All things are exchanged for invaluable things, for a slice of bread. Now we are naked and are dying.

"Brothers and sisters, please turn your attention to the crying voices of your brothers and sisters and children. We beg, we seek, we die from the hunger. Please do not refuse us, do not despise our cry, do not decline our entreaty, and do not forget our terrible condition. Who has the sympathy to divide the pieces of bread with us? Have you not a compassion for those who are precious to Christ as you are? Do not leave us to die, pray for the suppression of hunger, ask the Lord about our native land Russia. May the Lord help you. Open your hearts before Him. There is a famine again for the year 1922. The winter corn is lost so is the spring corn. We do not know what the Lord will do with our country in the future."

The Needs of the Work

WE NEED THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS MONTHLY FOR THE SUPPORT OF THE MISSIONARIES already engaged and to engage and support many more.

WE NEED MEANS TO CARRY ON RELIEF WORK. Believers who are starving must have help. The missionaries can do more effective service if they can minister temporal relief to the destitute

WE NEED THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR BIBLES. Last December 20,000 were ordered printed at a price that made it possible to put a Bible into the hands of a Russian or into a Russian home for twenty-five cents. 100,000 have been ordered since, at a very small price. The fund is growing daily, but we need thousands of dollars more.

WE ARE PRAYING FOR FUNDS TO PURCHASE A MILLION BIBLES.

WE NEED THOUSANDS OF NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO "THE FRIEND OF RUSSIA," because we need to enlist thousands of Christians in America and Canada to pray for the work we are seeking to do, by God's help, in this needy field. Thousands are already praying, but we need thousands more to join them. To pray intelligently information is needed. It is needful that our praying friends keep in touch with the work by reading the magazine. We must go forward. The call of God is clear and the time may be short. WE MAKE THIS SPECIAL OFFER. TO ANY ONE NOT NOW A SUBSCRIBER TO THE MAGAZINE (EVEN THOUGH THEY HAVE BEEN ONE SOME TIME AGO AND HAVE DROPPED OUT) WHO SENDS US $1.00, THE REGULAR PRICE OF THE MAGAZINE FOR A YEAR, WE WILL MAIL POSTPAID, A BEAUTIFUL SACRED ART CALENDER FOR 1923. The calendar must be seen to be appreciated. It cannot be bought anywhere. It is purposely gotten up for a premium. Canadian readers will please send us full value of United States money. Any information cheerfully furnished

JAMES ON PRAYER

In James 5:13-18, there is a remarkable description of different kinds of prayer:

1. Individual Prayer—"let him pray" (v. 13). This is an exhortation to the "afflicted," bidding him take his case to God. It is better to pray than to grumble.

2. United Prayer—"let them pray" (v. 14). The "elders of the church" are to pray with and over the sick man; but, prayer is to be accompanied with the use of the means, the healing oil was to be applied, and this in "the name of the Lord," relying on Jehovah Rophi for the blessing which alone makes the means effectual.

3. Believing Prayer—"the prayer of faith" (v. 15) is that which shall "save the sick" by the glorious answer vouchsafed in accordance with the promise—"the Lord shall raise him up." Believing prayer is the prayer of dependence. Faith is that act of the soul by which everything is committed to and left in the Lord's hands. This is trust, and trust is prayer.

4. Intercessory Prayer—"pray one for another" (v. 16). In intercession, or prayer for the brethren, the saints have fellowship with Jesus. He lives to intercede; especially is intercession needed in cases of faultiness; and this is the divinely appointed method of healing.

5. Effectual Prayer—"the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (v. 16). Effectual prayer is always "fervent"—real, warm and true.

6. Definite Prayer—"Elias prayed that it might not rain." One great mark of real prayer is its definiteness. The need is made known, the request presented.

7. Repeated Prayer—"He prayed again" (v. 18). Prayer may be repeated as fresh occasions arise. Every change in circumstances must be made the occasion of special appeal.—Edward Carr.

OUR LORD'S SEVEN INVITATIONS

Each beginning with "Come," the invitations are as follows:

1. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28).

A very precious invitation to every sin-burdened soul. We can come to Him who is the "sin-bearer," and to Him who says, "Cast thy burden on the Lord," There is no load of human care of which He cannot relieve us, and there is no sin too dark for His precious blood to cleanse, thus making us "whiter than snow." We cannot know rest until cleansed from sin.

2. "Come and see" (John 1:39).

These two disciples were honest seekers after truth. They wanted to know more, and to have converse with Jesus. They asked: "Master, where dwellest Thou?" His answer was the same that He gives to every honest seeker: "Come and see." Note the result. "They came . . . and saw, and abode!" They had found their true Master, and believed Him to be what He professed to be, "The Son of God." The closer we come to Christ, and the more we look to Him, the more satisfied will our souls be.

3. "Come unto me, and drink" (John 7:37).

Christ knows our human nature. He knows what soul-thirst means, and that nothing else but the fountain of life can satisfy the parched soul. David knew this longing, and expressed it in Ps. 42:1. "As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God; when shall I come and appear before God?" And Isaiah burst out with the grand invitation: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money come . . ." (Isa. 55:1).

4. "Come and dine" (John 21:12).

He knows the soul's hunger. He is Himself the living bread. He satisfies the hungry soul; He meets our every need. It is indeed a privilege to sit down and dine with Him.

5. "Come, take up the cross, and follow me" (Mark 10:21).

We cannot wear the crown if we will not bear the cross. As followers of Jesus, we must walk in His footsteps, and count it all honour if we are permitted to bear the cross. The man who was compelled to carry the heavy cross for our Lord, when going to His crucifixion, was a Cyrenian (a black man), and his name (Simon) has been handed down for all time. The name, Simon, signifies one who hears or obeys. The name of the rich young ruler, who, when called upon to take up the cross and follow Jesus, but went away sorrowful because of his great possessions, was never recorded. May we account it an honor to witness for Christ!

6. "Come ye yourselves apart . . . and rest awhile" (Mark 6:31).

"He knoweth our frame." He knows our weakness, and just as the body needs periods of rest, so our souls need the same. We want more meditation—more quiet times with the Lord Jesus. Our Father usually calls His servants away for a quiet time before sending them to important work. Moses was sent into the desert for forty years before he began his real life's work. Paul was sent away for three years before his public preaching began. He prospers most in spiritual things who gets most alone with God.

7. "Come ye blessed . . . inherit the kingdom" (Matt. 25:34).

He has not redeemed us to a life of spiritual insignificance. We are born again, made new creatures, heirs and joint-heirs with Him. We are to be kings and priests, and our position is far above that of angels, pure though they may be. May we never despise our inheritance!

—Colvin Taylor, in The Christian.

"ALMOST" CHRISTIANS

Some are moved to flee from hell, yet still are only almost Christians. Some persons are really awakened by the Spirit of God "to flee from the wrath to come!" They forsake their old "pleasures of sin," their old companions, their old ways; they live in anxiety and dread; still they will not come to Jesus Christ in order to have life.

All your anxiety to flee from hell will do you no good, if you be only almost a Christian. You have trembled much and wept much, and prayed much for your soul. Still, if you are not brought to Jesus Christ it is all in vain. If you were swimming for your life, if you had breasted many a dashing wave, and were close to the shore, just within reach of the rock, and did not stretch out your hand to clasp the rock, you would be drowned. All your former pains and labors would be in vain. A man may drown within reach of the rock just as well as a thousand miles at sea. So, after all your anxiety, hearing, praying, and tears, you may perish where you are, just as surely as those who are out of sight of God. It is quite vain to flee toward the ark, if you do not flee into it. A man might drown clinging to the ark. Be ye "shut in"! It was vain for Lot's wife that she fled out of Sodom, for she never got into Zoar. Just so vain is it to be almost, but not altogether, a Christian.

Your sin is far greater than that of other men. Agrippa's sin was far greater than that of Festus or of Bernice. He was moved to flee to Christ, yet he did not flee. They saw no beauty in Him that they should desire Him. So it is with you and the world. Judas despising mercy through the Lamb of God, and hanging himself, was a greater sinner than betraying the Saviour; so your turning away from Christ is a greater sin than betraying Him—than all that ever you did against Him (Heb. 10: 28, 29).

The deepest place in hell will be for almost Christians. In strict justice it will be so. The more the sin the greater the guilt and the deeper the hell; and who has so much sin as the soul that comes nearest to Christ; yet is not ravished with His beauty and attracted to Him by His loveliness. In the nature of things the hell of the almost Christian will be more severe than that of others. To be almost saved, and yet to be lost; to be not far from the kingdom of God, and yet to fall into the kingdom of wrath! Oh, that will be an awful thought to all eternity!

"I was once very near being in Christ," many a one will say in that day. "I was made anxious for my soul; I wept and prayed, and searched the Scriptures. I listened with anxiety to the preached Word. I felt it was the power of God. I felt myself condemned by the law. I was quite different from my worldly friends; they did not understand my sorrow, they could only laugh me to scorn. I fled from them. I fled from my old sins. I was not far from the kingdom. I almost stretched out my hands to accept of Christ. I was almost persuaded to be a Christian; and, oh, where am I now?"

The higher you cast a stone into the air the deeper it will fall into the sea. So the nearer you are to Christ and heaven, the deeper you will fall into hell, "for unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required" (Luke 12:48).

May God open your eyes that you may not be almost a Christian, but a Christian indeed! "Behold, now is the accepted time, behold, now is the day of salvation." "Today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation in the wilderness."—Robt. Murray M'Cheyne.

YOUR OWN

What if your own were starving,
Fainting with famine pain,
And you should know
Where golden grow
Rich fruit and ripened grain;
Would you hear the wail
As a thrice-told tale
And turn to your feast again?

What if your own were thirsting,
And never a drop could gain,
And you could tell
Where a sparkling well
Poured forth melodious rain;
Would you turn aside,
While they gasped and died,
And leave them to their pain?

What if your own were darkened,
Without one cheering ray,
And you alone
Could show where shone
The pure sweet light of day;
Would you leave them there
In their dark despair,
And sing on your sunlit way?

What if your own were prisoned
Far in a hostile land,
And the only key
To set them free
Was held in your command;
Would you breathe free air
While they stifled there,
And wait and hold your hand?

Yet what else are you doing,
Dear ones by Christ made free,
If you will not tell
What you know so well
To those across the sea,
Who have never heard
One tender word
Of the Lamb of Calvary?

"They are not our own" you answer,
They are neither kith nor kin.
They are God's own;
His love alone
Can save them from their sin.
They are Christ's own
He left his throne,
And died their souls to win.

THE MEANINGFUL OR MEANINGLESS "AMEN"

There are few words in common use that are at once more meaningful or meaningless than the little word "Amen." It ought never to be meaningless. In itself it is full of a beautiful significance. It is simply a way of saying, "Let it be so!" The Chinese rendering of it is, "The heart wishes exactly so!"

Spoken at the close of a prayer it is something more than a convenient and conventional ending of the petition. It is the authentication of all that has gone before it. It is the seal of the sincerity of the asker and of the asking. It is a prayer itself which embraces all the prayer that has been offered. For an instant the praying soul holds itself in pause. It has voiced its appeal; it has presented its petition to the throne. Now it looks back over its words to see whether anything is to be added, changed, modified; whether anything has been asked foolishly or insincerely; whether it is willing to stand by everything it has said. Then softly it adds, "Amen!" It is its way of saying, "Lord, I mean all that I have said. As far as I know, I have told thee my need. I take nothing back. I seal up my prayer. I pray thee to grant all this, my petition." That is what "Amen" means, if it means anything at all. It is the soul's signature to the letter that it sends up to God.

But evidently, judging from the manner of its utterance, it does not always mean that. To some of us it seems to have no special relation to the prayer to which it is appended. It is simply another word for "Finis," the end. With reverent tone we make our requests known unto God, and then trail off into a muttered, half-inarticulate "Amen" at the close, because somehow a prayer does not seem quite finished until this conventional word has been spoken. If we understood that it is a part of the prayer itself, that it is, indeed, the summary or epitome of the prayer, we would doubtless be a little more careful not to pronounce it so carelessly and indifferently as we often do. We would better not say it at all than to say it as it is sometimes said, for with its meaning gone it becomes one of the "idle words" against which our Lord so solemnly warns us.—Watchman-Examiner.

What a vast portion of our lives is spent in anxious and useless forebodings concerning the future, either our own or those of our dear ones! Present joys, present blessings, slip by and we miss half their sweet flavor, and all for want of faith in Him who provides for the tiniest insect in the sunbeam. Oh, when shall we learn the sweet trust in God that our little children teach us every day by their confiding faith in us? We, who are so mutable, so faulty, so irritable, so unjust; and He, who is so watchful, so pitiful, so loving, so forgiving. Why cannot we, slipping our hand in His each day, walk trustingly over that day's appointed path, thorny or flowery, crooked or straight, knowing that evening will bring us sleep, peace and home?—Philips Brooks.

The Evangelistic Field

S. A. Woodruff

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the second day of the month preceding date of issue.

"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work, nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

A suggestion comes to the MOODY MONTHLY from a former evangelist who tells about a new plan for doing evangelistic work. He writes:

"Dear Pastor:

"After prayerful thought and knowledge gained from years of experience in Christian work, a few consecrated men have been working together for our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, going out to the churches on Sundays and evenings and helping the pastors in their work. As one pastor stated it—'Giving them a boost.'

"We are doing evangelistic work and filling pulpits that otherwise would be empty on account of sickness or absence of the minister in charge.

"The men are all connected with business houses of Wichita, Kan., and give the meetings a practical impetus from various phases of life. They are members of Methodist, Baptist and Christian churches, and include singers for special music, a soloist, chorister and an evangelistic speaker. Mr. Nichols, the chorister, and Mr. Appleby, the speaker, received their training at the Moody Bible Institute and have been in evangelistic work for several years.

"No charge is made, no free will offering is taken, expenses of transportation and entertainment being all that is asked. There is no advertising of our business or church connection. Our business is humbly to glorify God and hold up the Cross of Christ, that all men may be drawn unto Him, believing that there is none other name under heaven whereby we must be saved.

"If we can assist you at any time in the Lord's work, get in touch with us.

"Your Brother in Christ,"

Rev. Edwin S. Stucker, Ottawa, Kan., writes that he is planning to do evangelistic work again the coming winter.

Evangelist R. O. Wine reports an old time revival at Marshall. Even though the weather was hot, the interest was fine and souls born again by God's power.

G. A. DeFlon wrote, August 15: "I have closed my work for the summer as I need a little rest, and I am arranging my work for fall and winter."

The McKinleys closed a successful campaign with the pastor of the First Baptist Church, La Grange, Ky. Their son, Buford Loomis, 12 years old, was converted.

Dr. and Mrs. H. P. Dunlop report a profitable summer's work in and about Los Angeles, Calif. Besides the Moody Bible Institute, they are also maintaining a western address, 536 S. Hope St., Los Angeles, Calif.

The Franklin Evangelistic Party closed a successful tent meeting at Swanton, Iowa, August 20, the outcome of which will be a community church at that place. From there the party went to Coster, Iowa.

Rev. B. Frank White, evangelist, and Leonard Saxon, gospel singer, announce that they are to be associated in revival work during the coming season. They began their first meeting at Kearney, Neb., September 17.

William S. Dixon, Wheaton, Ill., reports that he has had a full and busy season as a pastor's helper in evangelism, with dates in Payson, Ill.; Joliet, Ill.; Duluth, Minn.; Ottumwa, Mt. Pleasant, and Sidney in Iowa; Ashtabula, O.; Lafayette, and Brazil, Ind.; Gallatin, Tenn., and Edgewood, Iowa.

Albert C. Hakim writes from Winner, S. Dak., on August 24: "The special evangelistic meetings held at Pleasant Valley and Fairview, S. Dak., resulted in the organization of two churches in these neglected districts. The Lord did great things for us in these meetings which the people have greatly appreciated."

Mr. Harry Dixon Loes reports from Anderson, Ind.: "During August we gave a number of musical entertainments in Michigan cities. September 3 we begin the fall season here in a union tent meeting, which, judging from the organization, will reach over the whole city. Our party consists of Rev. J. Orr Powell, pastor-evangelist; Harry Dixon Loes, director of music; Miss Birdie C. Loes, pianist and soloist; "Bob" J. Wadsworth, tabernacle custodian."

Rev. A. A. Haggard, writing from Gastonia, N. C., August 17, says: "I am still in evangelistic work. I have a large tent with a seating capacity of 4,000 and am preaching to from 4,000 to 7,000 people every night. We closed an eight-weeks campaign in Gaffney, S. C., my home town, with over 1,200 conversions. We are going into an eight-weeks campaign here and have had over 1,500 conversions already. We are having revivals of the old-fashioned type, with a regular Pentecost all the time."

Evangelist Norman R. Curtis closed a seven weeks' tent campaign at Chandler, Ariz., August 27. There were a number of conversions and renewals, of which the most striking were a mother with a babe in arms and leading a small child, also a husband and wife with three small children. The campaign running through the heat of an Arizona summer was a test of endurance on the part of both people and evangelist. Many attended practically every night. Mr. Curtis is planning his autumn and winter work in Arizona.

Victoria Booth-Clibborn Demarest recently sent out a circular letter, giving reports of the party's work for the past season. The most successful union campaign was in Greenville, Tenn. The meetings were held in a large warehouse and often between four and five thousand people attended. All classes of people were reached. The school superintendent dismissed the public and high school for the daily prayer-meeting hour. The young people came every day in full force and the principal said in his speech of farewell to the evanegelists, "The high school is one hundred per cent for Christ."

We present a picture on this page, of a houseboat built by Rev. William Cross, Baptist evangelist, who expects with his wife, to sail down the Mississippi River with it, to evangelize the small communities and scattered river folk along the shores. The MOODY MONTHLY is sending a supply of magazines to be distributed among the people on this trip.

Rev. George W. Truett, pastor, First Baptist Church of Dallas, Tex., celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his pastorate by an anniversary week, September 10-17. On July 2, the church passed resolutions of their appreciation of Dr. Truett's work. Following the anniversary services on September 10, the following program was arranged: Monday evening, Dallas, City and County Baptists' Night; Tuesday, Denominational Night; Wednesday, First Baptist Church Night; Thursday, Dallas Friends' Night; Friday, Social Fellowship Night; Sunday, 11 a. m., "The Tasks Ahead," sermon by Rev. E. Y. Mullins, D. D.

Charges of False Doctrine Against President Faunce, of Brown University and Professor Gerald Birney Smith of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, by Rev. Charles Hillman Fountain.

This is a pamphlet to be obtained from the author, at Plainfield, N. J. The charges are supported by evidence from the published works of Drs. Faunce and Smith.

Is the Bible the Inerrant Word of God, By R. A. Torrey, D. D.

Dr. Torrey never speaks or writes with an uncertain sound. Some radicals would charge him with dogmatism, while his friends might urge moderation. But his sincerity and scholarship are approved by the fact that his books have been translated into twenty-five different languages. This series of Sunday morning addresses is an ardent defense of the inerrancy of the Bible as against the loose views of the liberals upon this all-important theme. The last two chapters deal particularly with the resurrection of Jesus. 185 pages. 7½x5¼ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.50.

The Church, The Schools, and Evolution, By Rev. J. E. Conant, D. D.

This book deals fairly and fearlessly with the present controversy between rationalists and men of faith. The first part deals with the cause of the controversy, in which the logic of evolution is shown to be destructive of the Bible, and all of the fundamentals of the Christian faith. The second part discusses the cure of the controversy, which is two-fold: (1) Truth must be classified scientifically, and (2) Truth must be investigated scientifically. Great and essential facts are here illuminated and the primacy of faith over rationalism is fully demonstrated. This book should be widely distributed.

Blackboard Efficiency, by R. F. Y. Pierce.

This book is a suggested method for the use of crayon and the blackboard. The author states in the preface: "This book presents no untried theories nor elaborate pictures, but a wealth of simple outlines, symbols, sketches, forms, lines and combinations, which may be quickly drawn to stimulate the imagination and aid in imparting the truths of the lesson. The exercises cover a wide range of illustrative work and will prove workable to teacher, pastor and Christian worker." It is a pleasure to commend this book.

The Story of the Pilgrim Preachers, by P. W. Petter.

Following the Armistice a reaction was felt all over England by those who knew the teaching of God's Word. In order to meet the situation a group of men planned several preaching tours over the British Empire. Their work seems to have been signally blessed, even to the conversion of many souls. The object of this book is to convey their messages over a wider sphere and in a more permanent form. The reading of this book may be the means of stirring up similar groups of Christians all over the world to go out with the gospel message for this age.

The Return of Christ, by Charles R. Erdman.

In his "Foreword" Professor Erdman states that the purpose of this book is to deepen conviction and to promote harmony of belief concerning the return of Christ. We heartily commend the purpose of the volume and wish for it a wide reading. Since certain professors in other theological seminaries have sought to pervert the teaching of the Bible about the return of our Lord, it is particularly gratifying that a professor in Princeton Theological Seminary should write in defense of this great doctrine. We have only one thing to say by way of criticism. In our judgment the express purpose of the author has been weakened by his attack upon the "secret rapture" of the church, in support of which he quotes 2 Thessolonians 2:1–3. Verse one of this passage is simply by way of appeal, while verses two and three and those following deal specifically with the "Day of the Lord," and not with the rapture of the church at all.

Bible Boys and Girls, by Rev. Stuart Nye Hutchison, D.D.

This book contains "Five Minute" talks to boys and girls on a wide variety of Bible themes. The author possesses a rare gift for vividly portraying the truths of Scripture to children. He not only interests children but instructs them. He presents the truth in such a manner as to reach the level of the child mind and at the same time does not display childishness. This is easily the best book of its kind which has ever come to our notice. Pastors, superintendents and teachers will find this book most suggestive as to method of presentation and subject matter.

Missionary Messages, by Rev. James F. Love, D. D.

This book contains ten "Missionary Messages" by a leading mission Board executive. Their object is to quicken missionary interest. The fact that Baptists are primarily addressed and Baptist mission fields and programs specially set forth will affect to some extent the scope of the book's ministration outside of this one denomination. Nevertheless the book has a vital message for all Christians, and some important aspects and applications of the great missionary question are set forth in a very forceful manner. The chapter on "The Relation of the Missionary Message to Missionary Success" is much to be appreciated for its firm insistence upon the essential truths of the gospel and its frank disparagement of all modern substitutes therefor.

Problems in Pan Americanism, by Samuel Guy Inman.

This is not a book on missions but one which deals, as its title indicates, with the problems of relationship between the two Americas. Its author is peculiarly fitted by fifteen years of wide and intimate contact with Latin America to speak upon the subject he has chosen. His book is ably and thoughtfully written, reveals a vast amount of research and contains a mass of quotations from statesmen and writers on both sides of the Isthmus. Dr. Inman pays a generous tribute to the good qualities of the Latin Americans without covering up their weaknesses. He as frankly points out errors on the part of the United States in its dealings with its southern neighbors, Mexico in particular, and suggests a number of measures which in his judgment would contribute to removing the misunderstandings of the past and paving the way to a new and desirable unity and solidarity of the two Americas. His chapter on the "Monroe Doctrine" is particularly good. Altogether the book is a valuable addition to the literature on Latin America. It should be read by many, and particularly by all who anticipate personal contact with the Latin American Republics, whether on diplomatic, commercial or missionary lines.

The Holy Spirit of God, by Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D.

The second printing of this scholarly and devout work on the Holy Spirit now appears ingood form. Several years ago there was a review of this book in the columns of the Christian Workers Magazine, and there is no intention of presenting a review of it here.

From the time the addresses which form the book, were delivered at Princeton, some nine years ago, Dr. Thomas has consistently held forth that the Holy Spirit has a primary place in the doctrine of the Christian church. The biblical revelation, the historical interpretation, the theological formulation of the modern application of the subject are carried out logically and quite exhaustively.

The notes, bibliography, and especially the index at the end of the book, are to be most highly commended.

Crusading in the West Indies, by W. F. Jordan.

The author as an agent of the American Bible Society undertook the task of circulating the Scriptures throughout the nearer West Indian Islands, and has later become superintendent of the society's work over the larger part of Latin America. During fourteen years of constant travel and visitation he has become thoroughly familiar with the life and spirit of these Spanish-speaking peoples. In this volume he graphically describes his visits in Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo, Porto Rico and the French Islands. He unites the faculty of keen observation with the ability to express what he says in a clear and happy style.

The book is heartily commended for its abundant and interesting information about the islands, and for its earnest setting forth of the spiritual needs of the islanders and the blessed results of Bible distribution among them.

"The Life of Christ," 744 pages, by the Rev. Dean Frederic W. Farrar, D. D., F. R. S.

"A Dictionary of the Bible," 1,019 pages, edited by Dr. William Smith, classical examiner of the University of London.

"The Life and Epistles of Saint Paul," 917 pages, by Rev. W. J. Conybeare, M. A., and Rev. J. S. Howson, D. D.

These volumes are presented to the American public in excellent reprints. The last can be recommended without reservation. The Dictionary of the Bible is somewhat anachronous, still of great value to the uncritical reader.

The Life of Christ, although written by a liberal theologian in some respects, has charms in the descriptive portions, and such wealth of historical and geographical allusions, that it has found a hearty welcome with a multitude of conservative Christians.

Each volume is 9½x6½ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York, $3.00, each volume.

What Shall I Think of Japan? by George Gleason.

The author, for nineteen years a Y. M. C. A. secretary in Japan, ably reviews the whole history of that country's relation to the Far Eastern question. He first gives the lie to certain current but groundless charges against Japan. He then as frankly points out her blunders and wrongs in her dealings with China and Korea, and while not excusing these he lays the blame upon an anomalous situation which has existed in the Japanese government, whereby the arrogant war lords were able to carry through their militaristic policies independently of the Cabinet. He further reminds his western readers that Japan was led into her over-bearing foreign policies by the flagrant example of European powers. She went to school to western nations and so well learned the lesson of aggressive diplomacy that she has almost outrun her teachers.

Mr. Gleason shows a very natural sympathy for Japan, and it will be felt by some that his version of a few incidents is somewhat biased; yet on the whole he is very fair and his conclusions are reasonable. The book contains a mass of detailed information, including the texts of the treaties and agreements referred to, and a useful bibliography and copious index. The closing chapter, "Can Japanese be Christians?" presents twelve outstanding Christian converts as examples of the real hope of Japan and of the safeguarding of her relations with the world.

A NEW EXTENSION DEPARTMENT WORKER

Miss Virginia Williams

We are glad to welcome to the Institute family one of our graduates, Miss Virginia C. Williams, of Austin, Tex., who has just come into the Extension Department as a member of our staff of Bible teachers. Since her student days here ten years ago, she has efficiently served the Y. W. C. A. at Austin as general secretary, and at the St. Louis Y. W. C. A., she has been director of religious work and Bible teacher. Her service with the Cumberland Mountain Mission of Appalachia, Va., valuably supplemented her experience as a Christian teacher and worker. More recently she was appreciated as conference Bible teacher by the Women's Summer School of Missions of the Presbyterian Church (South) at Montreat, N. C. She is now available for engagements by churches, women's colleges, presbyterials, missions, Christian associations and conferences.

DR. E. J. PACE

After a year in the field as an extension Bible teacher and missionary lecturer, Dr. E. J. Pace has resigned to enter the service of an organization of laymen in Pittsburgh, Pa., whose purpose is to evangelize mill and factory workers with a view to gathering the converts into classes to be instructed in the Bible and trained for soul-winning. Dr. Pace is to have supervision of the latter sphere of responsibility.

A physical ailment incident to the tropics contracted during the ten years of his residence as a missionary among the Filipinos, brought him back to this country and limits his greatest efficiency to a more settled life than that which the extension work of the Institute afforded.

The prayers and best wishes of the whole Institute follow Dr. Pace.

REV. ELBERT L. McCREERY, D. D.

Elbert L. McCreery

Called by Institute's Board of Trustees to be associated with Dr. Glover as a phonetic teacher and other subjects in the Missionary Course, and teacher of Greek Exegesis in the Pastor's Course. He entered upon his work at the opening of the Fall Term.

REUNION AT WINONA LAKE

During the Bible Conference at Winona Lake an enjoyable gathering of nearly 100 former students of the Institute was held on the afternoon of August 25. Mr. Gosnell presided and spoke of the success of our special Summer Course and of the plans for the next year in connection with the Pastors' Course and the Evening Classes. Quite a number of those present spoke briefly of their experiences while students at the Institute, and expressed their gratitude to God for the biblical foundation laid in its classrooms.

Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas, one of the speakers at the Bible conference, attended the reunion, and gave a most helpful closing message on the essentials of Christian faith. The Christian fellowship song was sung, a photograph was taken, and refreshments served, thus bringing to a close a delightful hour.

A happy company of nearly one hundred M. B. I. people

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. J. E. Conant was the chief teacher in a Bible Conference at Eau Claire, Wis., August 29-September 3. He conducted an evangelistic campaign with six churches in Wilkes Barre, Pa., September 10-October 1, under the auspices of the Heights Christian Association.

Rev. George E. Guille fills a return engagement October 1-15 with the Presbyterian church of St. Albans, W. Va., followed by two weeks of Bible teaching in the Presbyterian church at Starkville, Miss., commencing Sunday, October 22.

Dr. Henry Ostrom, following his appointment at Ocean City, N. J., preached at the Mt. Lake Park Bible Conference. He assisted the Rev. John T. Raymond, pastor of Fidelity Baptist Church, Cleveland, O., in evangelistic meetings, October 1-8, and on October 10 he begins similar meetings in the First Presbyterian Church of Hamilton, N. J., of which the Rev. Warren Hershey is the minister. Both of these pastors were former students.

During vacation, Mr. C. E. Putnam helped out in the office of Superintendent of Men, and twice taught a large Bible class at Racine, Wis. He then filled an engagement at the United Presbyterian church at Oakdale, Ill.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE AND MANUAL ARTS EXHIBIT

Before the close of the Summer Term an exhibit of the work done by students in Domestic Science and Manual Arts was shown in their class rooms. The extent of the display and the excellence of the workmanship excited the admiration of the many visitors who responded to Miss Gaymon's kind invitation.

That men as cooks and chefs may equal if not surpass women might be inferred from the appetizing display prepared as a cooking review lesson by the men of the class. It included baked apples stuffed with cereal, plain and emergency biscuits, corn, raisin and bran muffins, shortcakes, beautiful loaves of white and brown bread, chops, Swiss steak with vegetables, scraped beef balls, scraped beef sandwiches, carrot salad, omelet, custard, etc.

In the Manual Arts room a placard gave the information that for use in Christian service this work served to get and hold attention; as an aid in making Bible stories vivid and real; to link Bible stories to child life; as an aid in developing Christian character; to provide interesting occupation linked with spiritual lessons; to stimulate interest in missions; and to foster wholesome recreation.

Products skilfully and ingeniously made in great variety illustrated what can be done by paper tearing, paper cutting, paper weaving, passepartout work, cardboard construction, raffia and reed basketry, stenciling, sanitas doilies with original designs, and bookbinding.

Missionary scenes of America, India, Africa, Labrador and Japan were strikingly depicted by cardboard construction, and exhibits of clay modeling illustrated the parable of the ten virgins with their lamps, the miracle of the loaves and fishes, the brazen serpent, altars, the Damascus gate of Jerusalem, and the ancient millstone for grinding grain.

Baby dresses and slips, samples of repair work, darning, mending, etc., made a fine showing for the class in sewing.

Credit is due Misses Gaymon, Darling and the students, for the painstaking work evidenced by the whole exhibit.

SUMMER TERM GRADUATION EXERCISES

Speaking before a capacity audience gathered at the Institute's Summer Term graduation exercises held in the Auditorium on the evening of August 10, Rev. John Roach Straton, D. D., pastor, Calvary Baptist Church, New York, discussed "Worldliness in the Church," and urged the graduating class of 107 students, the largest in the history of the Institute, to go forth in the name of the Lord proclaiming the only gospel which can cope with present day conditions.

"The spirit of worldliness has all but paralyzed the Christian church of today," he said. "Many churches do not know what it is to see a soul converted to Christ. They have great influence and fine buildings, but no power. The church of today is honeycombed with the dry rot of rationalism. There is too much churchianity and too little Christianity. Some pastors are so worldly that they try to dance their young people into the kingdom of God. The supreme issue of the hour in the religious world is, 'Do you believe God?' and not, 'Do you believe in God?' There is not a man on earth who does not believe something about God, but that is far different from believing God, taking Him at His word."

At the close of the address Mr. Bryan Y. Craig, secretary of the Board of Trustees, presented the diplomas. The list of graduates, fifty-five women and fifty-two men, follows:

Class Song

The class speakers were Miss Lucy Elizabeth Steele and William Wyatt Chandler. Miss Steele spoke from the text, "Except the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it" (Ps. 127:1), and Mr. Chandler's address was in harmony with the class motto, "In thy name we go" (2 Chron. 14:11).

Dr. Gray presided at the dinner to the graduates, following the reception given them by the Faculty and Business Staff. Harold Leonard Lundquist, representing the graduates, presented the class picture. In his speech of acceptance Dr. Gray said, in part:

"I often find myself standing in the presence of these class photographs, gazing at the students and thinking back over the history of those that I know, and not only thinking of their history while here in the Institute but their history when they leave this institution. I know some of you think I do not know you very well personally and that is true, I am sorry to say, of many of you, and yet some of you I know very well indeed.

"However, I know you a great deal better than you think I do, and it comes about that I get to know you better in some instances after you have left the Institute. I follow your career in the work of the Lord and I begin to know you as I never knew you here, and I am glad to find that as I follow the history of our men and women I have continual cause for pouring out thanksgiving to God for what He has wrought and what He is working in them and through them. Dr. Massee said to me some years ago, 'Dr. Gray, the students of The Moody Bible Institute have held the church of Christ in this country true to the evangelical faith for the last decade.'

"As the years come and go and students come and go, looking on these photographs and thinking through the history of these men and women is certain to give me gladness of heart. Occasionally, though, I come to the history of a man or woman who has gone astray, left the Institute and gone to college, and has at last arrived up to the belief of the modernists and liberalists.

"I want to say to you young men and women that any learning which leads men and women away from the Bible as a revelation of God is a learning that comes from the pit. It does not come through a heavenly vision. This is the education of the god of this age, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. I believe in education. Would to God that all the students in this Institute had all that one can obtain and use for God and for the glory of His Son, Jesus Christ! There has never been a period in the history of the Bible when the evidence as to the truth of His Word furnishes us so strong a confirmation as in this age. Nowhere is there stronger evidence than is found in the fulfilment of prophecy before our eyes. Now young men and women, do not be turned, but stand on that foundation which is God, which proves that He is faithful and true and every man a liar, for remember the day is coming, and may not be far ahead when we shall stand before the judgment seat of Christ to receive the things done in the body, whether good or bad, and in that day we in this Institute long to believe that we shall see you as those who are bearing testimony to the fact that we have not labored in vain, but that you may be indeed our joy, and our glory and our crown of rejoicing in the presence of the Lord Jesus Christ at His coming."

It was announced at the evening exercises that in the period from March 10 to June 26, 1922, a total of 242 students had completed courses in the Correspondence Department. These students represent thirty-eight states of the Union, and the following foreign countries: Africa, Canada, China, England, India, and the Philippine Islands.

DINNER TO THE SPECIAL SUMMER COURSE STUDENTS

This dinner, given by the Faculty at the close of the Course, was an occasion not only of happy fellowship, but also of many appreciative testimonies. A large proportion of the seventy-eight students enrolled, attended. The first to respond when Dr. Gray gave the opportunity was Rev. D. L. McConnell, pastor of Mt. Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, Chicago, who said:

"I came first to the Institute to hear the music, about two years ago, and got into Mr. Gosnell's class in Bible Synthesis. I have a preacher's habit, while listening to another speaker, of mentally constructing one of my own sermons, and as I sat there looking abstractedly at Mr. Gosnell, my wife suddenly nudged me and said, 'You'd better wake up, this is good. Mr. Gosnell is teaching Matthew.'

"I had never heard the dispensational view of the Gospel and it was all so new to me I had a headache at the close, trying to get my ideas adjusted to what I had heard.

"I was deeply interested and began attending the Evening Classes regularly. Mr. Gosnell very kindly gave me two books to read on the dispensational view of the Scriptures.

"My contact with the Moody Bible Institute has been epochal in my life. After I had been coming to the Evening Classes for sometime, I was asked to teach in our own Lutheran school on the south side. At first I felt I could not, but then I decided I would, and taught Synthesis. A number of our young people enrolled in the Evening Classes and I recently started a class in Synthesis and a class in Personal Work in my own church.

"I want to know more of the Bible and have decided to take two full years of the work in the Day Classes here."

Miss Fox of Bellevue, O., said:

"I hadn't the slightest thought of coming to the Institute for my vacation. I had planned something else, but this vacation was God's vacation for me and I cannot tell you how thankful I am that I have been privileged to come here and take the Special Summer Course. I am president of the Young Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of my church and I am sorry to say we have been sleeping, but as a result of my being here I have made some wonderful plans. And I am going back home to be a 'booster' for the Moody Bible Institute."

Mrs. Oscar Reinhardt of Birmingham, Ala., related how she had first come to know about the second coming of the Lord through Miss Millar of the Extension Department and added, "I want to take to our own town the benefits I have received here. Pray for Birmingham. There are some young people there who want to come to the Institute."

Miss Goddard of Knoxville, Tenn., declared no place the world over was like Moody Bible Institute. "It is so wonderful to be in a place like this where all the people you meet are for Christ," she said. "The prayer life in the Institute is beautiful. God sent me here to find myself and I am going back home with the ambition to be a soul-winner."

Mr. Isaacson, North Branch, Minn., said:

"I never was in such a place in my life. The first week I was here I could hardly eat or sleep. The place just gripped my heart and soul, and I am going to come back to enter as a regular student."

Mr. Davis of Philadelphia, a former Institute student testified he had received more than he expected from the Summer Course and regretted that the announcement of it did not reach school teachers more widely. "Just as I was about to leave Philadelphia to come here-he said, "I talked with some who would gladly have come if they had only known of it. I hope that another year the news of the Course may go to teachers all over the country. The teachers reach the children and if many could carry back what they received here, think of the great work that would be accomplished."

Miss Lois Page of the Brooks Bible Institute, St. Louis, said:

"What I have received here will mean a great deal in my work. The fellowship and Christian love manifested here are delightful. I hope many more from St. Louis will be here next year. I took the Scofield Course and prize highly my Correspondence pin."

Miss Pauline Weiss, a school teacher from Newark, N. J., said:

"I was here last summer but did not get as much benefit as I have from the Special Summer Course, because I had to take what I could get from the regular classes. I am glad to know that there is to be a Special Course again next year. After going back home last year I started a Bible class in the high school and the Junior college. Some criticized me and said that the young people needed diversion instead of anything so serious, but God has blessed the class. Three of the students have given their lives to the Lord for Christian service and are planning to come to the Institute."

Of the seventy-eight students enrolled thirty-seven were women and forty-one were men, of whom twenty-one are pastors. They came from nearly all sections of North America.

Dr. William Lagerquist, '90, who has had 30 years' service as a missionary in China under the China Inland Mission, accompanied by Mrs. Lagerquist, has returned to the field after a two years' furlough, necessitated by an attack of the sprue. The Emperor of China, and later the President decorated Dr. Lagerquist in recognition of his heroic services under civil war conditions.

Writing in the July issue of Inland Africa, Jesse E. Raynor, '07, says: "Recently at our Gathugu out-station we had a service that will be remembered by the people of that district for many years. One of the most feared poisoners of that district who had professed to accept Christ as his Saviour wanted to make a public confession and burn all his poisons. The day was set, and the meeting well advertised throughout the district; and although it was a rainy morning there was a large crowd present."

From Monga i'Uele, Congo Belge, Africa, Mrs. Rowena Becker, '21, writes: "I am very happy in my work. The next nearest Protestant missionary is fifteen days on the one side and about twelve on the other. God is wonderfully keeping me and blessing His Word to the salvation of souls. Recently completed a three weeks evangelizing trip. Many responded to the gospel. The Catholics forbid the people to come near us, telling them they will go to hell if they do. It seems most wonderful to me that no harm comes to a woman alone in the midst of a cannibal tribe, sleeping in a grass house without even a door, in the heart of Africa. All praise to our God who never slumbers or sleeps, but is faithful and does exceeding abundantly above all we could ask or think."

Alma Diller, '18 is working with Mr. Kensinger.

Rev. Paul Umlauf, who is conducting a class of about fifteen boys in Berlin, Germany, who are using the study materials of the Correspondence Department of the Moody Bible Institute, recently wrote a very interesting account of the activities of the boys and of their zeal in evangelistic work and their love for gospel singing. He sends us a sketch of a banner that they are using, which we here reproduce. The letters are initials of four German words, Freiwilliger Knaben Missions Bund which may be translated into English as Voluntary Boys' Mission Band.

THE DEATH OF BISHOP SAMUEL FALLOWS

This distinguished clergyman was the supreme head of the Reformed Episcopal church in North America, and was a conspicuous figure in Chicago's public life for more than half a century. He died in Chicago on September 5, at the advanced age of 87. Bishop Fallows was born in England, but while still a boy emigrated to America and became acquainted with prairie life.

He was graduated from the University of Wisconsin, and at a very early period of life was made president of the embryonic University at Galesville, Wis. He married a sister of former Bishop Frederick D. Huntington, of New York. When the Civil War broke out he volunteered and was lieutenant-colonel, soon becoming colonel of the forty-seventh Wisconsin, and afterward brevetted brigadier-general.

For years he was active in educational matters, and in 1875 was called to St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal Church of Chicago.

From his pulpit Bishop Fallows consistently preached strenuous good citizenship. He was a fervent admirer of Theodore Roosevelt, and lived a life little less strenuous than the late president's. He rendered his country important aid in the Spanish-American war and later in the war with Germany. He was very prominent in Grand Army circles, and affiliated with all men who were true Americans.

He was a trustee of the United Societies of Christian Endeavor, editor-in-chief of the Human Interest Library, chairman of the Grant memorial committee, president of the Chicago School for Home Nursing and president of the Society of the Army of Tennessee.

The passing of Bishop Fallows so soon after that of Bishop Cheney is a great blow to the Reformed Episcopal church in Chicago and the United States.

THE PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION

The forty-fifth anniversary of the organization of this famous mission was held September 15-17, the services consisting chiefly in prayer, praise and testimony.

Three great missions are operated by this central one. One at 67 W. Van Buren St., one at 1009 Wilson Ave., and one at 6342 Cottage Grove Ave. The superintendents of these missions are highly trained men, and they are offering their service to Chicago churches in the following departments: Boys' work, adult Bible classes, open air work, and Sunday-school singing.

Correspondence should be addressed to Louis A. Crittenton, general superintendent, Room 305, 123 W. Madison St., Chicago. Telephone, Randolph 3617.

BISHOP NUELSEN DOCTORED

Nothing is more indicative of the great changes taking place in Germany, especially in the religious life of the former empire, than the recent bestowal of the highest honor of the theological faculty of the University of Berlin upon Bishop Nuelsen of the M. E. church. When the degree of Doctor Theologiae Honoris Causa was bestowed upon Bishop Nuelsen, Germany formally accepted one of the "hated and despised sects," which but a short time ago were a thorn in the flesh to the State church authorities, as an equal. Dr. Nuelsen has been for a number of years bishop of the M. E. church in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, and has since the war been directing the magnificent welfare work the American M. E. church has been carrying on in Germany and Austria. It was in recognition of these services that the faculty of Berlin University did the unprecedented thing of bestowing the Doctor's degree upon some one outside the State church circles.

CHRISTIAN FUNDAMENTAL LITERATURE

The Colportage Association, 822 N. LaSalle St., has a few copies of Scriptural Inspiration vs. Scientific Imagination in stock. This book contains the messages delivered at the Christian Fundamentals Conference at Los Angeles in June.

MARY MORRILL AND GENERAL FENG

That which follows is the monthly "Pray for Revival" appeal from the Great Commission Prayer League in October, and is gladly given space.

The absorbingly interesting story of the conversion of General Feng, the "Chinese Christian Fighter," was told in The Literary Digest of August 12, quoting in part The Christian Advocate and The Sunday School Times. Mary Morrill was an American missionary, who in 1900, was beheaded by the Boxers; and Feng, at that time a young Chinese cadet, was one of the witnesses. The impression must have been similar to that which doubtless was made upon Saul when the latter witnessed the martyrdom of Stephen.

> "Feng heard the woman missionary plead for the lives of the missionaries and of the Chinese Christians. When that plea was of no avail, he heard her beg that they might slay her and spare the others. He saw her on the way to the place of execution, speaking quietly to some of the people who watched the procession, and giving silver from her purse to a poor creature in the crowd. He saw the fortitude with which she met her death. The sacrificial love which stood there revealed made an unforgettable impression on him."

It was Mary Morrill's martyrdom, together with other deeply impressive incidents, which finally resulted in Feng's conversion in 1911. During the eleven years that have since elapsed General Feng has probably been the most mightily used Christian in China. Not only has his own brigade, numbering not far from ten thousand men, been led in large part to Christ, but thousands of others have been pointed to the Lamb of God, and in addition many needed reforms have been successfully instituted.

When Mary Morrill went to China, she went with the spirit of revival in her heart. That spirit of revival was communicated to Feng, and later through Feng to thousands of other Chinese. And now the story is being told throughout America and all the world, and out of it will come, under God, flaming evangelists and revived pastors and missionaries. Think what it would mean for God if EVERY ONE of the 200,000 pastors and missionaries and evangelists of the world were as imbued with the spirit of revival as was Mary Morrill and as is today General Feng. Multitudes will be if you who read these lines pray persistently and believingly and prevailingly—if you pray for revival.

A FUNDAMENTALS CONFERENCE IN SAN FRANCISCO

This conference was held July 2-9 under the direction of W. E. Pietsch, '12, and on its program several present-day leaders of Fundamentalism, including Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D., and Rev. J. W. Lawrence, D. D., were found. The interest that was aroused in Bible study in these conferences on the Pacific Coast was to Prof. Robert Dick Wilson, D. D., of Princeton Theological Seminary, almost a revelation.

"SOME MOTHER'S GIRL"

Mrs. J. A. Gore, who is a student in the Correspondence Department of the Moody Bible Institute, has written a book with the above title expressly for the purpose of warning girls of the dangers of life, and to assure those who may be down in sin that there is a loving Saviour who can deliver and cleanse them. Her address is 1532 Euclid Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

MESSENGER'S PLANS MAKE MONEY for CHURCHES

Members of This Church Made $51.00 In Spare Time

Anna Holkeboer, 9th St. Chr'n. Ref. Church, Holland, Mich. says—"We decided to try your plan in order to raise money for missions. The 300 Calendars were distributed among 20 members and sold in their spare time in 10 days. We recommend the sale of your Calendars to any class or society".

Any Church organization can easily and quickly make $50 to $500 selling 1923 Scripture Text Calendars. We tell you how—our tried and proven plans are making money for churches every year. Richmond, Va., Church writes—"Calendars all sold. Wish we had ordered more". Detroit, Mich., Church, says—"In November we had 200; should have ordered 250 as we had so many extra calls". Certainly your Church can do what hundreds of others are doing. Now is the time to start.

Messenger's Scripture Text Calendars

Over 3,500,000 of these Wonderful Scripture Text Calendars were sold for 1922. Our 1923 Calendar is beyond doubt, the greatest work of its kind ever produced. The beautiful color work, the exact reproduction of famous paintings, make it greatly treasured in every home. By referring to the Scripture Text Calendar you can immediately tell what the Sunday School Lesson will be for any Sunday in 1923. Also a 200-Year Calendar by the use of which you can locate the day of the week on which you were born, or any important event in history and the Easter Sundays between 1860 and 1955. A Table shows the standard time around the world.

Scripture Text Calendar Plan
How It Works

Estimate the number of homes in your community that should have Scripture Text Calendars. Then send for the number you estimate your Church Organization can sell. Many churches arrange for a Special Calendar Week during which a big drive is made. Everyone helps. Twelve members can easily sell 250. Twenty-five members should quickly sell 500. Don't delay accepting this opportunity of raising needed funds and now is the time to act. Set your goal now and send order for all you can use.

REV. SIDNEY M. BERRY DECLINES

Dr. Berry was called to be the successor of Rev. J. H. Jowett at the Westminister Church of London, but has declined the call and will remain with the Carr's Lane Church of Birmingham, England. This call elicited wide-spread interest throughout the Christian world, largely because of the great prominence of the man called and the man whose place he was to take.

DR. SHELFORD'S NEW WORK

Rev. M. T. Shelford, D. D., who was dean of the Practical Bible Training School, Bible School Park, N. Y., has accepted a similar position on the Union Missionary Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y. The National Bible Institute under whose auspices the work is conducted reports an enrolment of students for next year that will make necessary the rental of an additional building.

REMINISCENCES OF SLAVERY DAYS

A special Bible was recently given to a church, by the Scripture Gift Mission, the membership being composed largely of the descendants of the last slaves who were brought over to the United States from Africa. Four of the members of the church were ex-slaves, natives of Africa and brought over in 1858 on the last slave ship. In Alabama there are 275 teachers who are studying, and a number of them are reading the Bibles that were given to them sometime ago by this mission.

AN EVANGELICAL COLLEGE

Taylor University, located at Upland, Ind., recently reorganized on an independent basis, is pushing forth most energetically, and announces that the institution stands for gospel truth and that the faith of young people who complete study there will not be destroyed. It fosters the revival spirit among the students; extravagance of all kinds is discouraged, and extreme athleticism is not permitted, although healthful physical exercise is required. The student at the university will not become narrow or sectarian. A new president is being chosen and a general forward movement is on the program.

PRESBYTERIANS PLAN TEMPLE

Plans for the erection in Washington of a great Presbyterian temple, or, as an alternative, a large Presbyterian building to house an auditorium and offices for other religious uses, have been announced by the Presbytery of Washington City.

The vision of a great Presbyterian cathedral was first conceived by the late John M. Harlan, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, and it was said to have been the disappointment of his life that he was unable to bring his ideal to fruition.

As furthered by a committee of Washington pastors, the plans include a building to be erected at a cost of approximately $10,000,000, to be contributed by members of the Presbyterian church (North) from every part of the country as a gift to the capital city.—Daily News (Chicago).

MODERN CHURCH TERMED LAX

The modern church was flayed for its laxity and indifference by the Rev. Paul G. Prokopy of Chicago in his sermon at the opening of the Thirtieth Annual International Walther League Convention here, July 16.

"There probably has never been a time when the world was so torn by doubts and fears; when there was so much deceit and fraud," he declared. "The disregard of law and order borders on mob rule. Pleasure madness and money madness are the great idols that engross the attention of countless thousands. There is something wrong with the world. Decay has set in. The so-called social gospel is turning churches into mere social clubs."—Daily News (Chicago).

DEATH OF ROBERT S. MARTIN

Robert Stephen Martin, former assistant district attorney, Pittsburgh, Pa., and husband of Mrs. M. A. Martin, a friend who has long been helpful to the Institute in many ways, died suddenly on Aug. 22. Mrs. Martin's friends in the Institute extend their sympathy and pray for God's grace to sustain her in this heavy sorrow.

The Gospel in Print

CHRISTIAN READING NEEDED!

Truth is to the mind and soul what food and drink and fresh air are to the body. Jesus Christ is the living Bread of Life. The Word of God, the Holy Scriptures, is food to be eaten daily, and many of God's children have found it to be more than their "necessary food." The preaching of God's truth is for the refreshing and nourishing of God's people. But there are many who do not come to church. There are many who will not read the Bible. There are multitudes who do not feast upon Christ in living and loving faith.

A most important thing it is to get religious truth before the people in a way that they will read it, and become savingly acquainted with Christ. The religious paper, tract, leaflet or book becomes a very important agency. It should be emphasized a thousand times more forcefully and persistently, than it is. Through the printed page many people may be reached, and there should be a constant campaign for reaching them in this way.

Many a person has been brought to Christ by being led to read a tract or a religious paper or book. We should be making our efforts to bring the truth to those who are not in the way of being reached by it, unless we make some special efforts to attract their attention and win them to notice and heed what they need to know about God and their souls.

Years ago the colporteur was one of the regular agents of the church in distributing the truth. Up and down throughout the land these men went, from home to home, selling and giving away religious books and tracts. One of these men, Harlan Page, rejoiced to know that he had led one hundred souls to salvation. This same work needs to be done today. Of course the secular papers and magazines are widely distributed, through sale on the street and on news stands, and carried everywhere by the rural free delivery of the mail service. But all of this does not take the place of religious truth, and there is, in many places, no way of getting this to the people, unless it is carried to them by the colporteur and sold or given away in their homes. There is nothing to take the place of the old-fashioned tracts, in such form as to attract the attention and to touch the heart.

The matter is worthy of profound consideration. It will not do to allow a generation to grow up feeding only upon the chaff of secular reading. If it is thus permitted, our nation will lose its religious tendencies and become shallow and secular.—From editorial in Herald and Presbyter.

Pray for colporters and "book missionaries" everywhere.

THE INFLUENCE OF A TRACT

A young Frenchman who had been wounded at the siege of San Quentin was languishing on a pallet in the hospital when a tract that lay on the coverlet caught his eye. He read it and was converted to God by it. You may see the monument of that man before the Church of the Consistory in Paris, standing with a Bible in his hand. He is known in history as Admiral Coligny, the leader of the reformation in France. But the tract had not finished its work. It was read by Coligny's nurse, a "sister of mercy," who penitently placed it in the hands of the Lady Abbess, and she, too, was converted by it. She fled from France to the Palatinate, where she met a young Hollander and became his wife. The influence which she had upon that man reached out into the reformation on the entire continent of Europe, for he was William of Orange. "How far yon little candle threw its beam!" Who knows what the power of this tract may be?

"As thy days thy strength shall be."
God has sent this word to me.
Are thy burdens hard to bear?
Does there seem no refuge there?
Ere you sink beneath the load

Give you strength upon the way,
Added strength from day to day.

A Thought on Thanksgiving

This is the season universally thought of as one of plenty. On the farm the crops are all gathered and the granaries are full. The good housewife has her basement shelves heavily loaded with canned goodies and is prepared to face the winter.

Naturally our hearts, therefore, turn in gratitude to God who has so wonderfully blessed us. But we are here reminded of the words of James, "Faith if it have not works is dead," (R.V.) so we believe also that true thanksgiving moves one to good works. Real thankfulness is always accompanied by a desire to do something for the one to whom we are thankful.

Shall we not therefore at this season give careful consideration to the matter of what we can give in return to the "Giver of every good and every perfect gift"? If it is truly our desire that our hearts be more inclined toward heavenly things, then we should be placing our funds in causes which are representing those things, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6:20.

If you would be interested in a plan of investment which would enable you to show your thanksgiving to God, and which in years to come would cause many others to be thankful, you should write for full information regarding our Life Annuity Contracts.

EDITORIAL NOTES

THANKSGIVING
By Bertha Wulf

This year has been a strange, sad year,
The days of which I can't recall;
A shadow dark has passed me by—
I see the shadow, that is all;
For this I thank Thee, Lord, that Thou
Hast heaped forgetfulness so blessed
Upon me, walking on the earth,
And quieted a troubled breast.

The shadow turns into a cloud,
A cloud that gives thirst-slacking rain;
'Tis watering the barren earth,
And now the flowers appear again.
For this I thank Thee too, O Lord,
That Thou dost change to cloud and rain
The dark gray mist, so that I now
May see the flowers bright again.

The Shadow of Mars

On this Thanksgiving Day in our great land, while we are assembling in our places of worship to praise God for overflowing harvests, busy industries, healthful and happy homes and international peace, the shadow of Mars is lying as black as ever athwart the earth and still dominating the minds of men. Experts estimate that there are a million more men under arms in Europe today than just previous to the world-war, and this in spite of the fact that the armies of Germany, Austria, and Hungary have been greatly reduced.

The World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches, from whose bulletin the above is taken, assures us that no material reduction of land armaments is at present in sight, indeed even the discussion of the question was ruled out of the Genoa Conference. It explains it all by the element of fear in the hearts of men and of "that form of megalomania known as economic and nationalistic imperialism."

"We are nearly all afraid of one another," the bulletin says; and it speaks the truth. But it is only the truth which our blessed Lord set before us as marking the days preceding the coming of the Son of man: "Upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity * * * men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; * * * And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory."

But mourning is turned into joy so far as the faithful children of God are concerned, since He added: "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:25-28).

Let Us Give Thanks

The approaching Thanksgiving Day finds this nation with so much to be grateful for! The President has tried to voice it in his Thanksgiving Day proclamation, but how could it be done? We have had our trials, many of them, but they have been largely of our own making, while, as we compare our condition with that of almost any nation of the old world, we are fairly dwelling in Beulah Land. No war, no famine, no pestilence, no poverty, no international intrigue to worry us, why should we not be glad, and above all, why should we not be grateful?

But within the sphere of the church, and addressing Christians only, let us be careful to count our blessings. It is true that the enemy of the Cross under the name of liberalism has never been bolder nor more active; but he has overreached himself as on other occasions and drawn together the defenders of the faith in a closer union than they have known for a generation. There has been a re-examination of the foundations, and a re-affirmation of the faith that spells the magic word revival, and already as a result evangelism is returning to its own, and souls are being begotten in the Lord.

Mr. Kemp's article on another page shows the moving of the Holy Spirit in the British Isles, reminding us that at least three times in our history the wave of spiritual blessing sweeping over England, Scotland, and Wales has broken upon our shores with quickening power.

The great awakening under Whitefield, the wonderful revival of 1857, and the season of refreshing we experienced in the Moody and Sankey days—all had their beginning across the water. Is this history to repeat itself? How profoundly we hope it may. And in how more likely a manner shall it be brought to pass than by our acting on the counsel of Mr. Kemp and obeying his exhortation?

"Revive Us Again"

We have given an important place in this issue to Mr. Kemp's article, because we believe it represents our greatest need—a revival, and Jonathan Edwards taught us that one of the best ways of promoting a revival is to spread the news about one.

Further along in the issue is an article by one of our editors on "The Deadline of Doctrine Around the Church," in reply to Dr. Fosdick's widely circulated sermon, "Shall the Fundamentalists' Win?" The editor has tried in a serious way to expose the sophistries of that dangerous teacher, and to prevent the unwary, especially among our younger ministers, from being entangled in his web. But we realize that after all, it is not argument and evidence that men need primarily, but life. Let a real revival come amongst us, such as Mr. Kemp is talking about, and the sophistries of liberalism will disappear as chaff before the wind.

It is a real revival that puts "the print of the nails in us" believers, as Gordon Watt expresses it in his contribution on page 95, and also that makes such men as Dr. Barnardo, whose work for the London waifs is so thrillingly described by Dr. Weddell's pen in "Up Against the Heart of East London," page 97. Do not fail to read it.

A Grateful And Sympathetic Nation

One good thing accomplished by the President's veto of the Bonus Bill was the concise and concrete information he set before us as to the actual treatment of our brave men since the war. The debate over the bill in the press has clouded this somewhat in the public mind, and therefore we are pleased in our Thanksgiving issue to impress it on the attention of our readers by the following extracts from the presidential message to the House of Representatives:

"In the current fiscal year we are expending $510,000,000 on hospitalization and care of sick and wounded, on compensation and vocational training for the disabled, and for insurance. The figures do not include the more than $35,000,000 in process of expenditure on hospital construction.

"The estimates for the year to follow are approximately $470,000,000, and the figures may need to be made larger.

"More than 99,000 veterans are now enrolled in some of the 445 different courses in vocational training. Fifty-four thousand of them are in schools or colleges, more than 38,000 are in industrial establishments, and a few more than 6,000 are being trained in schools operated by the veteran's bureau.

"Approximately 19,000 have completed their courses and have employment in all cases where they desire it, and 53,000 have deferred for the present time their acceptance of training. The number eligible under the law may reach close to 400,000 and facilities will continue to be afforded, unmindful of the necessary cost, until every obligation is fulfilled.

"Two hundred and seventy-six thousand patients have been hospitalized, more than 250,000 discharged, and 25,678 patients are in our hospitals today.

"Four hundred and sixteen thousand awards of compensation have been made on account of death or disability, and $480,000,000 have been paid to disabled men or their dependent relatives. One hundred and twenty-five thousand disabled ex-service men are now receiving compensation along with medical or hospital care where needed, and a quarter of a million checks go out monthly in distributing the $8,000,000 payment on indisputable obligations.

"I recite the figures to remind the congress how generously and how properly it has opened the treasury doors to discharge the obligations of the nation to those to whom it indisputably owes compensation and care."

"At the Mercy of the Workers"

That was an ominous remark in the President's address to Congress last summer that "the country is at the mercy of the United Mine Workers." Coming from any one else, and coming from him at some other time and on some other occasion, it would not have arrested the same attention, but circumstances being as they are, the words must not be forgotten until the cause of them no longer menaces the welfare of our country. The President indeed might have gone further and included the railroad workers in his complaint, for between the two we were held in a mighty vice.

Talk about trusts! It used to be the steel trust, and the oil trust, and the beef trust, and the sugar trust, and the railroad trust; and Gary was denounced, and Rockefeller, and Armour, and Havemeyer, and Harriman and the rest. But as between those trusts and the Labor Union trust, and those men and Gompers, Fitzgerald, Foster, Lewis, Jewell et al is there any choice?

How long is this going to last in this free country? Has the public any rights which such groups are bound to respect? Where is the Sherman Anti-trust Act? If it does not apply to such conditions as oppressed us last summer to what does it apply? Senator Cummins in the debate on August 24, declared that Congress ought to "look the existing emergency squarely in the eye and make it a crime to strike and tie up transportation and basic industry." Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, had more courage than most of his associates and declared that "we're afraid to meet the issue. You are all afraid to say anything about the unions." He would have had the government tell the anthracite operators to reopen their mines on an open shop basis and guarantee them full protection.

Perhaps the reason the government did not take the action suggested by Senator Nelson, was presented by Senator Calder, of New York, who said he would favor such a course were it not doubtful whether any anthracite miners could be found who were not unionized. That was the situation in Illinois. The Governor of Illinois said he was powerless because of the state law, that none but union miners could be employed because none others could obtain a state license. This illustrates what the President meant when he said "the country is at the mercy of the United Mine Workers."

The Labor Unions have been of great advantage to the workers of this country, and the country itself has shared the benefit. We have not a word to say against them in principle, but very much to say in their favor. We should have a wild orgy of profiteering on the other side of the house if they failed to function healthily. But, like Jeshurun they have "waxed fat and kicked," and until they learn that there is law for them to obey, there can be no such thing any more as our dwelling safely under our own vine and fig tree. The Government can not get busy too soon for the general public, and it will find that public behind it in good shape, including the self respecting membership of the unions themselves.

Government, Hands Off!

In the whole history of the railroad strike last summer, nothing stirred our hope for better things like a remark of Mr. W. G. Lee, president of the trainmen. It came at the close of the separate pacts that were supposed to be reached with sixteen lines, when he is reported to have said: "We are trying to get our wage problems and working conditions out of the hands of politicians. The lawyers and politicians just want to make a record, but we have been in this business all our lives and know how to handle it."

This last remark sounds good to us. We believe the workers on the one hand and the executives on the other, know how to handle their business with one another, and ought to be left alone to do it. This was the policy of President Cleveland in the Debs' strike, the first of its kind in this country, and to which reference is frequently made. Mr. Cleveland, guided by the advise of Mr. Peter B. Olney, the Attorney General of that day, said, "I will keep the peace, and will keep the mails going." There was no presidential arbitration as we remember. Indeed, it was the strenuous Roosevelt who first brought that innovation into the White House program, and though his motives were the best, yet his policy, in our judgment, has been a mischief breeder ever since.

We were surprised to have Mr. Lee say that railroad labor never requested passage of the Adamson eight-hour law, and that he personally, when the bill was under consideration, asked senators to keep their hands off. Nothing so injured Labor Unionism in the estimation of the public up until that time as the Adamson law, considering the crisis in the nation when it was forced upon President Wilson. His part in it was forgiven by many because it averted a strike when we were at war, but labor was not forgiven. If now it is found that labor did not sin, it is only another argument why employers and employes should be left to work out their own problems with as little interference as possible on the part of the Government.

"Do You Know?"

There is a small bi-monthly paper published in Philadelphia called The Herald of the Epiphany, whose editor, Mr. P. S. L. Johnson, has written a striking article, first serially, and later under one cover, entitled, "Do You Know the Signs of the Times?" In it he sets forth certain biblical and historical facts as to the papacy by a series of questions so constructed as to impress the information on the minds of Protestants and arouse them in defense of their principles against Romish aggression.

In the course of sixteen pages he raises the question, "Do you know?" about four hundred times, and with telling effect. We do not agree with him by any means in all the conclusions he draws, but we certainly do in this, that our forefathers won for us our present heritage of civil and religious liberty by their vigilance, labors, trials, suffering, and in many cases, martyr deaths."

We also agree with him that their children are now witnessing both in Europe and America a menacing effort to destroy this heritage by the Roman hierarchy, which we believe to be on the highway to greater power politically than it has enjoyed for a century. We were impressed recently by a contribution from the pen of David Baron, of London, showing the efforts of Rome to frustrate the full effect of the British mandate for Palestine.

Mr. Johnson feels that Rome's success is largely due to the ignorance of Protestants as to the principles which our forefathers expounded and defended, and he would lay upon Protestant papers and magazines the responsibility of educating the present generations in those principles.

Reformation truth has indeed been deplorably neglected of late years, but we feel that a revival of interest in its proclamation should begin with the Christian ministry. It is a matter of preaching and Bible exposition which has gone by the board like a good many other things since the New Theology came into vogue with evolution and social service as its slogan. This Thanksgiving time when we are supposedly taking stock of things, is opportune to put Mr. Johnson's inquiry to ourselves, "Do you know?"

For Better Preaching

We think it was the Watchman-Examiner that recently published the report of a church which had advertised for a pastor and received something like ninety replies. This would seem to contradict the statistics which show an unprecedented number of pastorless churches, but nevertheless, we think otherwise. Rather does it show that a large number of pastors are seeking a change.

And why are they seeking a change? Many would put the responsibility upon the people they serve, who are difficult to please, parsimonious, etc., and of course there are such things to be said. But recent circumstances have strengthened our conviction that the pastors themselves are frequently to blame because of poor judgment, tactlessness, absence of real interest in their work, and downright indolence.

Pastoral indolence is shown markedly in the poor preaching to which the people are often obliged to listen. We are not thinking of great oratory and culture, but such a practical and primary thing as clear enunciation, avoidance of disagreeable mannerisms, and thoughtful discourse. Dwelling particularly on the last, it is evident that many pastors give very little reading, to say nothing of study, to the Bible, or indeed to any other books that are even relatively worth while. They do not think half through their subjects, and are lacking in definiteness and intelligence of purpose and aim, so that without always being conscious of it, their people have no deep respect for or confidence in them as spiritual leaders.

These are plain words we know, but where they do not apply no offense will be taken, while in the other case we will risk the offense for the sake of the good they may accomplish.

If the criticisms were for the unavoidable, we would pass them over, but given a fair measure of brains and the common opportunities of education and training in these days, there is no excuse for some of the defects we have mentioned. Indeed, brains and effort are all that is needed, for where they are, the education and training will be acquired somehow.

Is not the cause of Christ, the welfare of the people, and for that matter, the betterment of your own prospects, worthy incentives, brethren? Why not turn over a new leaf and begin to exert yourselves this fall as never before?

Preaching In Court

Rev. George E. Guille, of the Extension staff of the Moody Bible Institute, was recently conducting a series of Bible meetings in a Kentucky town when the circuit court was sitting, and the judge invited him to speak for fifteen minutes each morning in the courtroom. He took for his general theme "World Movements in the Light of Scripture," and he reported that he never saw deeper interest anywhere. We mention the fact because it is so out of the usual, and in the hope that some other Christian judge learning of it may follow the precedent. Surely this is preaching the Word "instant in season, out of season" (2 Tim. 3:2).

A Christian Jailer

Our last issue contained a poem, "God Satisfies," whose author, we had intended to mention, is the deputy warden of the Oklahoma penitentiary. One usually looks upon jailers as cold and heartless men, but Mr. Garrett, is a channel of God's blessing to the poor souls who contemplate departing from this world by way of the electric chair.

Every penitentiary has its chaplains and Christian workers to be sure, but what a profound impression must be made upon the condemned when the warden, whose duty it is to mete out the mandates of the law, comes to them as a messenger of life, pleading as a mother for a wayward boy. In our supplications and intercessions for all men let us include those like him, whom God has stationed in the out of the way places of the world to witness to His saving grace.

For Smyrna Sufferers

In response to appeals from Constantinople and at the request of the State Department at Washington, the Near East Relief is making a special appeal for funds to aid the 500,000 or more refugees made homeless by the advance of the Turks, and the burning of the Christian sections of Smyrna. The condition of the innocent and homeless victims of this disaster, especially the women and children is most pathetic.

Supplies in the hands of the Near East Relief were at once rushed to the scene, but the situation which is growing worse daily makes these wholly inadequate to the great need. H. C. Jaquith, Near East Director at Constantinople, is now at Smyrna in charge of relief work. Contributions are transmitted by cable from the headquarters in New York.

Since the Smyrna relief must be an addition to the work of the organization in caring for its 100,000 orphan wards, contributors to this emergency fund are asked to mark their checks "Smyrna." Checks may be mailed to Near East Relief, Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, 151 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Dr. Dixon in China—The Home Going of His Wife

Translated from letter in Missions-Wannen, September 12, 1922, from Missionary Joel S. Johnson

"Kuling, China, Aug. 6, 1922.

"DEAR Brother—Peace!

"Knowing that you were a good friend of Dr. Dixon's during the time he was pastor of the Moody Church in Chicago, and being confident that today was one of his greatest days—the greatness and beauty of which we have all been sharing with him—I shall herewith send you a little greeting. I can truthfully say that we have today had the privilege of standing very close to the gates of heaven.

" . . . The past week has been Convention Week here at Kuling. This is an annual affair. Some renowned and Spirit-filled speaker from Europe or America is always invited for these occasions. This year Dr. Dixon was to be the principal speaker. He arrived in China six weeks ago, in company with his wife. They had already visited the great meetings at Peitaiho and Chikungshan, two other summer resorts where hundreds of missionaries gather during the few weeks when the weather is hottest.

"Just a week ago today the meetings at Chikungshan came to a close, and the journey to Kuling commenced. They were obliged to go by way of Hankow, through a section of the exceedingly hot Yangtse Valley. This was too much for Mrs. Dixon, who contracted meningitis, with other complications, so she arrived at Kuling—the place for which she had been much in prayer while en route from America, unconscious.

"But in spite of this fact, Dr. Dixon has been preaching in Spirit and in power. Never shall we be able to forget the meeting this morning. More than a thousan missionaries, as well as a large number o Chinese who understood English thronged the church to the utmost of its capacity. There were even some Chinese present who had received doctor's degrees at American universities. Dr. Dixon's subject was: 'Why I am a Christian, seen from an anti-Christian point of view'—a fitting subject for China today, when anti-Christian movements are arising and spreading faster than any one could have dreamed of a few years ago.

"At the beginning of the service a few minutes were devoted to prayer for Mrs. Dixon, who, we all knew, was in a critical condition. In mounting the pulpit, Dr. Dixon explained that he did so because he knew positively that it was in accordance with God's purpose, as well as the wish of his wife, to thus glorify God. Otherwise he could never have appeared in the pulpit that hour.

"His message was one which will never be forgotten but which will be sounded out all over China through the multitudes of missionaries and natives present. It seemed as though we stood in the very presence of God in eternity, as the wonderful words of truth rolled forth like mighty waves over the congregation, dispelling doubt, uncertainty and discouragement—especially toward the close of his sermon, when with all the power of his powerful voice he cried: 'I am a Christian because I am—and always shall be, yea, even in the darkest moment that can come to anyone—an optimist, even as Paul was on that last day of his earthly life, knowing that he was soon to be the victim of the executioner's axe. He was a Christian. And I am a Christian and ever shall be. The most dreaded? No! the most glorious moment for a Christian is when, like Moses, we are "kissed" from the earth to our home.'

"Even as he uttered these words the message awaited him that God had already 'kissed' his wife home from the earth and that her spirit had flown to the home above. What a testimony! This day shall be a memorable one. 'Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.'

"Burial will take place tomorrow in the little cemetery here in Kuling, but the spirit is home with God and forever loosed from the bonds of earth.

"Joel S. Johnson."

In the Glow of Revival Enthusiasm

By Rev. Joseph W. Kemp, Auckland, N. Z.

"THE history of the church flows on from one time of revival to another." wrote Principal Lindsay, and so it would seem. Any one who has read Henry Johnson's Stories of Great Revivals will need no further proof. What memories such a book recalls! What soul-thrilling scenes it suggests! The names of the Wesleys, Whitefield, Grimshaw, Berridge, Fletcher of Madelay, the Countess of Huntingdon and many more in the century before last, and of Weaver, Finney, W. C. Burns, D. L. Moody and others of recent years, make a panorama of revival work.

But the wise of the earth persist in telling us that revivals of the old-fashioned sort have gone out of date, and that revivals of the future must come through ethical and social reforms.

Such language is not new, and we need not be afraid of it. We have heard it often during the last twenty-five years, and while men have been thus airing their views, God has been sovereignly moving "in the midst of the golden candlesticks," kindling into a holy glow the lukewarm, anointing the blind with eyesalve, and quickening into life those "who having a name to live" were dead.

Scotland Stirred

Not for years has Scotland been so stirred with spiritual activity as at the present, and certainly not for two decades has the spirit of expectancy been more keen and widespread. The northeast coast of that stern land has yielded to the gracious influences of the spirit as the plastic clay to the potter's fingers. Fishing towns and villages have been cleansed of their moral filth and whole communities have leaped into a new life by the power of the vitalizing breath. We may fight shy of revivalism and quarrel with its irregularities, but tell me where we can find a city or town that would not be the better by such a baptism.

Fletcher, Brown and Pat Smith in London

In England too, the wave of revival is spreading. The great question which has been agitating the hearts of many, "Is London too hard for the Lord?" has received its partial answer in Paddington, where Lionel Fletcher, of Australia and more recently of Cardiffin, Wales, has been at work. On the opening day of his gospel campaign over one hundred came out for the Lord. In central London also, at Bloomsbury—the scene of the labor of Rev. Thomas Phillips; here Mr. Douglas Brown campaigned for a while, and so great was the interest that nightly the commodious building was crowded. The blessing was beyond all expectation, and now the members of the church "go out" to tell of "The Revival at Bloomsbury."

In East London tabernacle, where F. E. Marsh is pastor, one hundred and ten decisions for Christ took place in one night. These are less than a drop in the ocean of London's great sea of humanity, but such heart-warming news indicates a stirring begotten of the Holy One. In Exeter the churches have been crowded to hear Captain Gipsy Pat Smith. In fact no place was found large enough to hold all who pressed upon the evangelist to hear the Word, and great was the company who believed.

Sixteen Hundred Converts in Ulster, Ireland

From Ireland word reaches us of wondrous things being wrought in the name of Jesus. This movement goes back to October 1920, and has continued all these months until its progress eclipses the memorable movement of 1859. Under the preaching of W. P. Nicholson, Bangor has undergone a quickening and cleansing and reports not fewer than six hundred cases of conversion.

In Portadown such is the thrill of the movement that every section of the community has been moved. In one business house thirty to forty of a staff of sixty have been converted, while whole families and Sunday-school classes have found the Lord. In all, one thousand six hundred have registered their decision for Christ.

At Lurgan the crowds were so eager to learn the way of life that the evangelist was in the pulpit practically from 2 to 10:45, P. M. Buildings were no sooner emptied than they filled again with new congregations, keeping the preacher incessantly engaged. Here again great numbers were obedient to the faith. And so the story of revival enthusiasm might go on. Stated only in terms of arithmetic the results are impressive.

Where Revivals Begin

It is recognized that real revival never commences with its leaders, and in some of the instances cited it took two years to prepare, and in at least one case known to the writer, three years were spent in prayer for the blessing now enjoyed. There is only one way in which the longing that "these miracles of grace" may be realized in every town and village throughout the world. Human hands may repair the altar of the Lord that is broken down, and lay the victim on the wood; but if we try to organize a revival, to achieve by mere machinery that which belongs alone to the power of God, we shall be condemned to the helpless futility of the Baal priests of old. Let the prophet of the Most High but cry out with faith to the God that answereth by fire, and the fire of Jehovah will not tarry.

Beyond all other duties and opportunities there lies now before the church the call to instant and continued prayer that what has been so far local and partial may become universal and overwhelming. Shall we respond to this call? God is willing to grant us a universal rain of blessing. Let His supplicators unite in definite prayer for it. If the church will pray, and pray in reality and faith, He will multiply His blessing and revival fires will spread with resistless energy.

How to Get Ready

The set time has come for God to favor Zion. Why should the zone of the divine operations be limited? Why should not the fire kindled on Britain's shores burn and spread to the ends of the earth? Let us get ready for it. When Daniel found the time of blessing was at hand, he said, "I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting and sackcloth and ashes." Hosea announced the coming showers of blessing and commanded the people "to break up the fallow ground"—ground once cultivated, but neglected The fallow ground of the barren church must be plowed anew. The neglected Bible, the forgotten place of prayer, the despised fellowship—these constitute our fallow ground. Let us repent and return to the old paths. Let our beliefs be turned into practice, and we shall see the impossible become an actuality. Let us not make the application too wide, and so miss the very thing for which we wait

When Sam Jones attended a ministerial conference on "How to Secure a Revival," he told them there was only one way. Let every man go home, lock himself in his study, draw a circle with a piece of chalk, kneel down in it and pray this prayer till it was answered: "O Lord, revive Thy work, and let it begin inside this chalk line."

"Christ's servants humbled at His feet
Behold the longed-for blessing,
And quickened faith and hearts aflame
Are His dear name confessing.
While far and near the streams of prayer—
A world-wide interceding—
Are breaking round the throne of grace
In one great wave of pleading."

The Print of the Nails in Us

By Rev. Gordon B. Watt, Glasgow, Scotland

An address at the Moody Bible Institute, stenographically reported.

I AM to speak to you from the words of Thomas in John's Gospel chapter 21 and verse 25, "Except I see the print of the nails, I will not believe."

Thomas spoke these words in the upper room when the other disciples told him they had seen the Lord. He was a man of an unbelieving mind and a critical spirit. A Danish sculptor has represented him in a group as holding a measuring rod in his hand, suggesting that he was a man who would believe only what he found true in experience.

Men Who Demand Proof

I wish to take Thomas as a specimen of the men about us to-day who are not necessarily antagonistic to Christ and Christianity, but who must have the proof that Christ is living and that what we say about Him is true. After all, the best definition in the world today, and the best proof of the reality and power of the fundamentals of our faith is just a life. It is not what we say but what we are that proves the reality and power of these things.

The demand of Thomas was a legitimate one from his standpoint, or our Lord would never have answered it, and the demand of men today that the spiritual shall be practical in daily life is quite as legitimate. They ask and rightly so, that there shall be some proof in our lives that the truths for which we stand can touch the deepest bonds of the human heart; that the outburst of song which is heard is not passing emotion but the symptom of a permanent peace and joy; and that what we speak about is something that must be faced.

Are You a Type of Christ?

My dear brethren, I think I hear the world say to us who profess to be the children of God, "Except I see in you the print of the nails I will not believe." The word "print" is in the Greek "tupos" or type, and means a figure of something, a pattern. This is the thought underlying the expression, the "print of the nails," the pattern that is visible to others.

Are you and I of the type of Christ? As our neighbors come into contact with us in daily life, as they rub shoulders with us in our churches or in our easier intercourse, in our buying and selling, in the little details of life as well as the crises, in money matters, in the courtesies of daily instances, does the type give to them a correct impression? Is the pattern shining out clearly? Is it apparent to others that our lives are grouped with God's own character.

My brother and sister, you and I are going out to touch other lives, to speak to other lives in this city, in all parts of the world. I do not believe the people ever can believe in Jesus Christ, whom they cannot see, if they cannot see Jesus Christ in you and in me. They have a right to say, "Unless I can see Jesus Christ in you I cannot, I will not believe."

Now what is going to be worked out in this pattern of Christ in you and me? What caused the nail prints in the hands and feet of our blessed Lord? Not merely the nails. It was the four-fold relationship that His life bore in this world when He was in it; and just as you and I enter into some real experiences of that relationship will the print appear in us and become visible in the character of our lives.

I

The first is His relationship to the Father. Jesus Himself says, "I came down from heaven not to do my will, but the will of him that sent me" (John 6:38.) That was the supreme purpose of His divinity; that was the strong position of His life: "Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God." What did that mean for Him? The complete abasement of Himself to the carrying out of his Father's plan. You have noticed that the Lord simply gave up everything in that wonderful description in Philippians 2:6-8. You noticed how He gave up His position, which was God, to become man. He gave up His rights. He was the Son, yet He became a servant. He gave up His will. He was a King, but He became obedient. He gave up His life, and when He had done that He had nothing left. His was an absolute giving up of Himself. This is the pattern. Is it being worked out in you and me? Are we willing to do the will of God in the ordinary things of life as something so supreme that any sacrifice is worth making in carrying out that will?

Insisting on Our Rights

My dear friends, if others have something to say about us will it be that we are very selfish in regard to position? Do we ever take time to think that He who had the highest position in God's universe gave it up that he might redeem you and me? Have others to say of us that we are very careful to insist upon our rights in Christian work? Do we ever take time to think that He who alone had the right to rights gave them up in order that He might redeem you and me? What if others should say of us that we are much more certain in our church, in our missions, in our work, to get our own will done than to seek the best for others? Do we ever stop to think that He who was the King gave up His will in order that He might redeem you and me? Do others have sometime to say of our purpose, behind our backs, and as they look us through, that the care of our life is self-pity, self-love and self-preservation?

You see if we measure ourselves with others we get a wrong standard of measurement, but whenever we apply the touch of the absolute, warranted life of the Son of God to our lives then we begin to understand what we are and where we stand.

If I am speaking to some one who has become conscious even this very day how far he has failed, how often he has been defeated, how frequently he has allowed forces to enter into his life that have marred the pattern; if you and I can recall this afternoon actions that have poorly shown the pattern of our Lord Jesus Christ or given a poor impression of what Christianity really meant, let us hear in that the call to set things right, to understand better what the will of God claims for us. While we are here let the Holy Spirit remake us by His grace and power, and send us out of this place to let Jesus show more clearly in us the print of the nails, the character, the pattern of Himself.

II

The second is His relationship to the world.

Take for example Matthew 8:1-4, where the leper meets Him as He comes down from the mountain and says, "If thou wilt thou canst make me clean," and Jesus answers, "I will, be thou clean."

I think that just epitomizes the attitude of the Lord Jesus Christ towards the world. His was the attitude of perfect sympathy. Sinners gathered around him, lepers sought his face, no one too vile and loathsome for the Saviour's grace. It was because the world was such a place and that all of its needs were caused by sin that He went to the cross. His sympathy was poured out towards that world in this service.

Now this is the pattern for you and for me. Is it being worked out in our lives?

A Dirge or a Carol?

Someone said that life can be made either a funeral dirge or a burst of music. What is ours? Is our attitude toward this world, like a funeral or is it like the burst of music? What is our attitude to the outcast, the sinful, the needy? What do we see in men today as we look at them from the standpoint of Christ?

When I was a student at Aberdeen University, finishing my curriculum of divinity, my minister, under whom I was brought to Christ more than thirty years ago, gathered some of us into his house every Saturday evening to speak to us of the practical side of the ministry, how to deal with this one and that one. There was one phrase he used that I have never forgotten, "Cultivate the art of listening."

It is a good art and it has need to be cultivated. What the world needs today is listeners. People who understand its longings; people who are able to interpret the throbs of its weary heart; people who are in such close touch with God that they can penetrate beneath the hardness and show it a Christ-love and do something for it because of Jesus Christ.

The Woman Saved by Love

My country has often been swept by God with revivals. We are having a little bit of it now, just a little bit.

We want a great deal more of it. In the north of Scotland, quite into the Highlands, there was a mighty movement of the Spirit of God, and the crowds gathered there. It was on the Burn of Farendahl. Not far away was a little cottage where a a woman of terrible character lived. No one would go near her because of her evil ways. The Spirit of the Lord spoke to her, but she rejected and resisted. Then her body was afflicted with a most loathsome disease. At last a lady of high degree who was interested in the people in the district went in to see her and began to talk to her about the Lord Jesus Christ.

"You need not talk to me; if you want to show me that you are a Christian come and wash me, wash my body, look after my wounds."

It was a terrible test, but she went home to get her dressings and do what she was asked. She washed her body, tended and dressed her wounds, and shortly after she was startled by this woman calling out, "I hear it again, I hear it again, the voice that spoke to me at the Burn."

It was the Spirit of God. By the ministries of this lady to her body her dead conscience was awakened and her heart began to live again and she came to the Lord. That house became a Bethel, a temple of the living God, and she was visited by people from miles around to receive the testimony she gave through her lifetime to the power of Jesus Christ.

O beloved, there may be somebody outside waiting for you to do just something like that, to let the Lord Jesus Christ live through your fingers. There may be some one just waiting for that touch of the Holy Spirit, and if you will allow the Lord Jesus Christ to take possession of you from this afternoon on, then His own words will be fulfilled; then will flow living waters and the pattern will be all right. People will see that Christ is living.

III

The third is His relationship to sin. You will find what he did with sin in Colossians 2:14. He not only nailed the handwriting and everything that was against us on the cross, but He took evil and triumphed over it on Calvary. He went to the cross because of sin, and gave His life there in order that He might break down the barrier between us and the living God. His triumph over sin makes it plain that we can be free from the power of sin, and reveal to those who are in the grip of sin what Jesus Christ can do for it.

Christ died for sin that you and I might die to sin. Christ gave His body in death that you and I might be saved through death. How is it to be accomplished?

You will remember that when we are going to meet our blessed Lord in the air we shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye—changed. The same thing happens when Christ comes into the life. Old things pass away, behold all things become new; and it is the passing away of the old things in our lives that causes others to see Christ in us, and to see Christ as living. This is the Christ I want to have.

How To Be a Success

Am I speaking to some one this afternoon who has long been struggling with an evil habit, perhaps known to nobody but herself or himself? Do you not know that Christ can set you free? There may be some one here whom the Devil has taunted with being a failure again and again, and made you so depressed and miserable that you have said, "I will give the whole thing up."

Do not you know that the Lord Jesus Christ is living for the very purpose of making you a success, and will put your feet on the head of the Devil as the latter has been putting his feet on you? Perhaps there is some one stumbling in life, falling before some sin. Do not you know that Christ can make you the victor? Do you know that any child of God can be the greatest success that the world has ever seen, and so give to the world a pattern of Jesus Christ? Just by the same power by which He won the victory on the cross, by allowing the Holy Spirit to reveal to you the meaning of the cross, and then to work in you the full purpose and power of the cross.

Beloved, there is the great apparent fact of God—that your old man was crucified with Christ, and on that fact you are to stand. That is the direct, incontrovertible fact that was true two thousand years ago. This is a fact that does not depend upon you and upon me, but that fact is meant to call out an act from you and from me—the act of faith.

I believe that I am crucified with Christ. I stand there upon that wondrous fact of God, I reckon myself therefore to be dead unto sin. That act of God and that act of faith means that you and I must take our position in Christ, and in the face of every attack of evil reassert ourselves that we are dead to the old habit, that old force of evil.

Sin Does Not Die, But We Die to Sin

It is not sin that dies, nor self, that dies, but you and I that must die. This is God's way of victory over sin. Victory over sin is not going to come to you through the mere exercise of self-control, or in the mere strength of the will. We conquer by dying. O that we may learn that today and go on learning it from day to day!

We conquer our sins by learning to die. After that, and when we co-operate with the Holy Spirit, and He demands that for the children of God there shall be absolute truth and surrender to the power of the truth of God, then the truth must be in us. The Holy Spirit demands that in every child of God there will be absolute surrender in regard to everything, in our aims, actions, everything in our lives. We want to get back today in Christian living to the spirit of the old Puritans of England who said, "Let us do right though the heavens fall." The Holy Spirit leads us in absolute surrender, and when you and I have the victory over our own lives then people will begin to see, dimly it may be, the Christ that is the Saviour that will meet their needs. That is the Christ that I want, and He is living.

IV

The fourth is His relationship to His great enemy Satan.

Do you remember the temptation, the challenge that was flung in our Lord's face when He hung upon the cross, "Save thyself and come down from the cross?"

That was the old temptation. He had met it in the wilderness. He had met it once through Peter and had to rebuke Peter. In other circumstances many evil forces had striven to divert Him from the cross—the temptation in the wilderness, the temptation on the cross. It was to work an actual miracle which would have saved Him further suffering and lead the people to believe on Him.

Satan Did Not Send Christ to The Cross

Now I want you to see what our attitude must be as we go into full contact with evil. Behind every sin that dogs us a great enemy is at work, and his one aim is to make us shirk the cross. He never sent Christ to the cross. The cross meant his defeat and he knew it, and every ring of the hammers that drove the nails into those blessed hands and feet was the death knell in his ears; and those who are sending away Christ are throwing away their one chance to meet the Devil; and the one purpose of Satan for the Christian today is to keep you from the cross. It is to keep you from knowing the print of the nails in your character. Death indicates that the cross, the cross for you and for me means death to the old life, the self-life, our aims and our ideals. The grain of wheat does not die; and because the grain does not die there is no fruit. It is going into the place of death that opens the hard shell of our natures and grasps and gives the outlay to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Satan will use everything to make us shun the cross, the cross of pain of service, and put every temptation in our way and fill our lives with every suggestion that we might take the cross of self-pity, self-preservation.

The Fight Is Getting Hotter

If we are to be used of God we must brace ourselves. We are in a fight today. We all know it and it is getting hotter and still hotter. Powers inspired and controlled and directed by the powers of this world are out upon us as never before, and this challenge is being thrown in the face of every child of God, "Save yourself." You can do that, but it will be at the cost of the Lord, and the cost of others, and your own spirit.

O, beloved, Christ is calling; not to go alone, but in co-operation with His blessed Spirit, under a God that will lead to certain victory; for God is there and it means the nails for you and for me. Service, the magnificent service of unlimited possibilities are certain for children of God; but it means dying to those nails, dying to every thing that Satan can use.

We have just got to make up our minds that we can die and that we are to yield to the Spirit and say, "I am willing for all that the cross means."

Shall we live and take ourselves down from the cross or shall we give ourselves over anew and surrender in a fuller way to Him? If we do, we shall occupy from this hour a place of triumph with Christ and have the nail prints clearly seen. We shall have the joy of the Lord shining forth in our character so blessedly clear that many with weary hearts will find their way to the feet of the Saviour, and say what Thomas said, "My Lord and My God."

Up Against the Heart of East London

By Rev. John Weaver Weddell, D. D., Marietta, O.

COME, walk with me in East London, Its streets and closes, its factories and small shops, its mile upon mile of plain, meager homes, its throngs of men and women and little children out upon the streets are surpassingly interesting. It is the greatest sociological field of study in all the world. Here you see real London. London, old London, how we love the city!

It yet remains to be determined whether Caesar built its first quaint roofs, or the ancient Briton, but there stands the fine old city, starting with the Christian era. I have often wondered why adventurous and ambitious students of America should pass it by with all its stores of available learning for the doubtful findings amid the smoke and smell of Germany and Italy. Here is your treasure house of olden record and of new inspiration.

And if you want to mingle among the people go over into East London, along Mile End Road, Barnaby Rudge's Town, no aping of other cities here. The West End tries to be like New York, at least for traveling folks from across the water. Not so beyond Aldgate. Sir Christopher Wrenn in his new plan for London after the fire, had no thought of East London, it was marsh and mystery in his day; but today its two or three millions of population that have sprung up have laid out a city at their own sweet will, and settled themselves in it as they will; it is a good place to ramble, fancy free.

The Patron Saints

The historian of East London is Sir Walter Besant, who knew its "all sorts and conditions of men," as no one else. But its patron saints are Commander Booth and Thomas J. Barnardo, broad minded philanthropists both of them, living and working for the common people.

May I remind you of the latter? It was mine to spend two summers in ministerial charge of the well known "Edinburgh Castle," his evangelistic and institutional plant at Rhodes Well Road in the East End—his last American guest, ere God called him home in 1905.

The story of the humble but providential beginnings of this work are worth telling again. I had it from his own lips. An enthusiastic Christian young man from Ireland, of excellent family connections, and well to do, but seeking to invest himself to the best advantage for his Lord and Master, he had come to London to study in the medical school and then launch out with Hudson Taylor in Inland China.

While pursuing his studies in connection with East London hospital he sought and found opportunity to be helpful, in mission work in the vicinity. And one night when locking up his mission station he saw little Jem Jarvis, a ragged urchin, hovering around.

"Time to get home, my boy," said his teacher.

"Haven't got no home," replied the lad.

"Well, get to your folks right away."

"Haven't got no folks."

"Where do you live?"

"Most anywhere."

"I'd like to see the place," said Dr. Barnardo, turning on the boy.

"All right," said his plucky little friend, "when do you want to go?"

"Right now," answered the mission worker, ready to see it through.

Off they started together toward Radcliffe and White Chapel's perlieus, and down a narrow way Barnardo saw his guide disappear over the edge of an overhanging roof. The next moment a hand was stretched down, and in a minute the young medic found himself upon a shed roof, and lying about in all postures, asleep and half asleep, a dozen or more boys of the street, their poor bodies showing through their torn garments, under the moon light.

It was like a sharp summons from the skies to Dr. Barnardo, and there and then, trembling with emotion, he said, "God helping me this is my work. I'm going to take care of these fatherless boys!"

That was the first but effective call to the man who came to be familiarly known as "The father of nobody's children."

A Dress Suit Party

The next evening the medical student, who was popular in the West End, was with his companions in one of the fashionable but reputable clubs there, and he told of his strange experience.

"Take us to see it," cried his friends, young men of the "Quality," not only on the earth beneath but in the heavens above—they have them in old England.

Dr. Barnardo was nothing loath. They called carriages, and clad as they were in dress-suits and all, they were presently following their leader up the East End alley way.

But to the chagrin of the young doctor when he climbed up on to the roof—"I have feared it," he said—there was no one there.

But the officer who was with them saved the situation.

"They are hiding for some reason tonight," he said, "Offer them something, and they'll turn up."

And so the cry was lifted "A tuppence for all who will tumble out!"

And here they came, from ash bins, cellar ways and hid places, at leass thirty boys, clamoring for their largest, but keeping an eye on the cop.

It was enough. "Barnardo," they said, "You are right, go ahead, and we will stand by you."

When it is known that one of those large-hearted young men was Shaftesbury, we are prepared for what followed. The consecrated wealth of England from rich and middle class came pouring into Dr. Barnardo's hands for this great service to the homeless lads and lasses of East London, the royal family itself giving generously.

The work began by careful steps. Homes were built. Matrons and masters installed, school teachers secured, where the free school system was not yet known. The spacious Stepney Cause—way shops and the factories, out of time house way, were set in motion, and the boys and girls of the street were picked up, cleansed, clothed, taught their letters, and trained, each of them, in some useful occupation—making brushes, brooms, shoes, articles of clothing, handling the saw, the plane, the lathe.

Soon there sprung up the Girls' Cottage Homes, each cottage a family circle under a competent mistress; needles flying, kitchens installed, young girls taught to be good housekeepers and helpers in the homes of the realm. They went out welcomed and respected in all directions, ship loads of them regularly to Canada and all lands, skilled workers, upstanding young men and young women in every sphere of wholesome activity.

Five thousand a year were in residence when I was there, and it had been going so for the better part of a half century. It cost something, a million dollars that year, they said, but it paid. All the nations have had the benefit of it, and all the world has reason to thank God for the consecrated courage and prowess of Dr. Thomas J. Barnardo, and his noble company of attendants, a vast selected army of them.

Peter Bilhorn Cured of Homesickness

It was mine to have modest but convenient rooms in the upper floors of the "Castle" where I could see and hear all that was going on. The smoke of the factories, the tramp of the school children in the rooms below, the rattle of the cups and saucers in the coffee rooms, that had taken the place of the Bass ale house. The gathering of the people for their bank deposits, and several times a week for their social clubs, particularly the assembling of the Christian evidence band for their study of the Word, and pre-eminently the thronging of the great congregation, three and four thousand strong, for the great song and preaching services in the tabernacle at the center.

I think I can hear them yet as the boys come marching down the street, thousands of them from the near-by homes, headed by their band of music playing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and the answering chorus going up from the vast assemblage, a choir of a hundred men leading them, with such volume as only an English or Welsh congregation can give us.

May I tell you of one afternoon service? There were three on a Sunday, besides the great Saturday night peoples' prayer meeting.

It was the P. S. A. (Pleasant Sunday Afternoon). Peter Bilhorn had come over to take dinner with me in my rooms; we had been together long before at Dearborn chapel, Chicago. He was a bit lonesome and depressed, and I said, "Stay with me till the next service, and we'll give you a good time."

It needed only an intimation to the famous choir master, and when my friend went down the steps and onto the great platform they were singing one of his own hymns—they loved American songs—and they kept on as they caught sight of us and sang nothing else that whole hour, but Peter Bilhorn's songs, till at last, lifted out of himself, he raised his voice and gave the high tenor of his own "Sweet peace, the gift of God's love," as I have never heard it sung, before or since.

The P. S. A.

The "P. S. A." or Pleasant Sunday Afternoon, called also "The Men's Own," is not unknown in this country, but it took its initiation and found its best demonstration of religious freedom and fraternity in those regions of East London. There is nothing like it in spontaneous religious enthusiasm. A big round English penny lets you in and pays all the expenses, which are slight. But once in, you are in the thrall of a great men's meeting which is something unique and impressive—unconventional speech, direct, passionate prayer, and song, song, song—that lifts the roof. I declare the thrill of those thousands, of faces and voices is with me yet. Why should we not have more of it? There is something in Christ's religion that appeals particularly to men and there is something in men, met en masse and in glad accord, to give it full and adequate expression.

And at Dr. Barnardo's they had the "Women's Own" to correspond. Shall we ever forget their songs in the quaint racial accent of the streets—I like to hear it—

"Praise Him, Praise Him, Jesus our blessed Redeemer," and

"Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise."

And they meant it. Religion, Dr. Barnardo's type of religion, was understandable to them, and it had put a new inspiration into their otherwise somewhat prosaic lives.

A Day in Epping Forest

And may I tell you of a day with the people in Epping Forest? It is hard by, out beyond Stratford, and heavy wagons or "breaks" as they are called, carry the men and women, who flock to the "Castle" at the morning hour, to the picnic in the historic woods, which Shakespeare made familiar to us all. It was a great procession of happy, shouting people, singing and waving banners as they went through the busy streets, four horses to the wagon, each labeled for its familiar source or its destination, a fine popular advertisement for the schools and homes.

I chanced to be sitting by the driver who flourished his whip in the first drag, filled to overflowing, and all eyes were bent in our direction.

"I hope they are not imagining this is Dr. Barnardo," was the fearsome and unwary remark ventured.

Quick from behind came the answer of an English housewife, under her hood, "You might be taken for a worse mon, sir."

They loved the man who had done so much for them. He was the little laird of the realm of East London.

Then came the pretty swards and leafy lanes of the forest; kept trim and neat, flocks of deer, here and there. "Green pastures, still waters" in every direction, bowers of pleasantness, dainty parks and bosky dells, is there anything more inviting or more delightful—when the way is open—than the "forests of Arden"?

And now the humble folks themselves—music and games and laughter and copious refreshments, mainly "tea and sweets"—till all were satisfied. It was the one great day of the year.

These too ambitious feet carried the writer once so far into the depths of the inviting solitudes that he was like to be left in the evening as a veritable babe in the woods; only the distant music of the leave-takers wafted to his ears saved him from so unaccustomed and undesirable an experience. But what a day it was and what a capacity for enjoyment there is in every breast! And how it brings us all together, and makes us love one another!

Another day with the children of the Sunday school, 2000 of them carried afield by countless railway carriages from Burdett Road, taught us the singleness and simplicity of heart there is among the boys and girls of every land when on pleasure bent; bubbling over with the joy of free speech and free action, when the bars are all down. They had their own childish games, but they were quickly responsive to anything a sympathetic visitor might suggest.

And how they clamored for their tea! It was given to them for once, all they wanted. One boy, asked if he would take more, answered, "I think if I stand up, I can."

Open Air Preachers

Something has been said of the "Christian evidence bands." I wish we had them in every church.

Dr. Barnardo conceived the idea of a kind of seminary extension in Bible study among his own people to fit them to know the Scriptures, and to meet the hecklers and skeptics of the way-side in open-air work, so liberally resorted to in England. You look in on them in the lower rooms of "Edinburgh Castle," and there they are, strung along either side of a long table, book in hand, a teacher at either end, leading them into the ready explanation of the way of salvation, and a swift deftness in meeting the sharp arrows of the enemy.

And it is wonderful how the witnesses are developed. I counted six bands of them after one of the early evening preaching services, each with its portable organ and platform, and speakers and singers, at convenient corners and courts, each ready not only to deliver the Word but to defend it and enforce it.

And happy? I never saw more healthful, happy Christians in all my life. It would put wholesome life and energy into any young people's society, to have such work to do. Was there ever a louder call for it in our own America than today! And the signs are strong that we are going into it as never before. With the diversive tendencies that we see today, how else than in soul-winning work are we going to get hold of the multitude!

Then those Edinburgh Castle social meetings! I saw something of them not only here but at Charrington Assembly Hall down the way where my friend Dr. W. A. Waldo continuously ministers in the summer time, and nearer by at East End Tabernacle, Dr. Archibald Brown's old preaching station. Their idea of sociability is of a religious sort.

Did you ever see an English prayer meeting? I have found it to work well occasionally, on this side of the water. This is it. First part of the service given to the people—song, testimony, requests, prayer. The closing word is from the preacher, and the flock go home with a bit of Scripture truth expounded to them. It leaves a good taste in the mouth.

I have given but a glimpse of one phase of the varied efforts for meeting the insistent spiritual need of this people. Our English brothers are alive to it. There are seventy-five establishments for the poor in East London alone. Inns, and alms houses and charity stations are everywhere.

But best of all is the helping hand and the helping home, thrust under Christian auspices into the midst. We must get under the load. And Dr. Barnardo and the men he left behind him are doing it. Thirty thousand lodged in one year, 119,000 fed, 57,000 clothed, 17 ever open doors, 37 schools, 44 homes, doubtless a hundred thousand rescued from the start—it was 60,000 while Dr. Barnardo lived, and the work is going on. And the best of all is the personal soul-winning work right in the midst. To do this kind of saving work one must take the path of Jesus, who left his glory throne to live with the people and make them His own.

Love Wins Out

Brave, noble little father of the poor! He had to fight his way in, as with Commander Booth. But love at last won out, love and respect. Four mottoes Dr. Barnardo taught the members of his school and shops,

"Never do a mean thing."

"Always speak the truth."
"Keep honest and straight and clean."
"Don't forget to pray."

But most of all he got under the load, and he stayed by.

No more impressive or beautiful spectacle was ever seen in London, not excepting the great cortege of their lamented queen, than when at the death of their noble benefactor and friend the people gathered on the streets to pay him their tribute of respect; signs of mourning everywhere.

Said the bus driver, pointing to the crepe on his arm, "I was obleeged to wear a bit of it for the little father."

All Mile End was black with silent throngs, as the vast procession of workers and beneficiaries moved down to Liverpool station. Nothing needed to be said, the tears on all faces were the tribute, that and the little children out at Barkinside under drooping skies, singing their sweet song,

"There's a home for little children,
Far beyond the bright blue skies."

So passed Dr. Thomas J. Barnardo

"Time's sentries cry, halt!
Hark the sturdy reply:
'Be ye lifted, ye gates,
The Commander goes by.'
Pass on, grand Crusader!
Hearts beat at thy name,
Goodnight, to thy form,
And good morn, to thy fame!"

Rev. P. W. Philpott Replies to an Open Letter

Mr. Philpott recently accepted the pastorate of the Moody Church, Chicago, after twenty-five years of blessed and fruitful ministry in Hamilton, Ont. For about a third of that time there was another pastor in that city who is now the editor of The Congregationalist, Boston. This journal used to be a true witness to the faith delivered to the saints once for all (Jude 3), but in late years has gone with the tide of liberalism in the other direction. When the editor learned that his former acquaintance had accepted the call to the Moody Church, he addressed him an open letter in the pages of his paper, appealing to him to put the strength of his new position "upon the side of love and brotherliness!" That Mr. Philpott correctly interpreted the meaning of this exhortation is seen in his reply to the editor, a copy of which follows, and which gives assurance to the friends of Moody Church the world over, that its traditions will be faithfully conserved under his pastorate, for which they will give thanks.—Editors.

"The Moody Church, Chicago,
Sept. 13, 1922.

"MY DEAR Mr. Gilroy:

"You write me an 'open letter' in The Congregationalist, issue of August 3, 1922, the purpose of which, as I gather it, is to suggest how, as the pastor of Moody Church, Chicago, I may help, with yourself, in establishing in the United States, to use your own words, not mine, such relations between conservatism and liberalism in the evangelical churches as 'would be a gain to love and brotherhood and no loss for truth.'

"You mention also the 'Moody School,' by which I presume you mean The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. It is necessary therefore to inform you that the Moody Church and The Moody Bible Institute are separate enterprises, located more than a mile apart, with happy fellowship existing between them, but with no official connection one with the other. Personally, I bear no relationship to the Institute.

"Let me remind you also, that as I bear no relation to that educational institution, neither do I sit in the editor's chair of a denominational journal, my constituency being restricted to such as choose to come to hear me. I am coming to Moody Church therefore with no ambition to exercise 'a position of commanding influence' as you picture it, but to save souls, and when the Lord cannot use me here to this end, I shall cease to be the pastor of Moody Church.

"My reply to your letter was written nearly nineteen centuries ago, when the Apostle Paul laid bare the purposes that moved him when he changed his field of labor from the city of Athens to the city of Corinth. It is, 'And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God; for I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.'

"There is a truth, brother, without which love, brotherhood, everything to be desired in time and eternity fails, and that is, 'There is none other name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved.' I come to Moody Church to preach a personal, crucified, risen Saviour—and God's promise of salvation to as many as accept and believe in Him as such; and the fear of man, God helping me, shall not prevent my faithfully holding up the converse truth that refusal to accept and believe brings eternal condemnation.

"This, as I understand it, was both the spirit and the faith of Dwight L. Moody, and the doctrine which he preached. Speaking from a long and somewhat intimate acquaintance with the Moody Church and the Moody Bible Institute, I can assure you the spirit, the faith, and the purpose of their founder lives unchanged in both; otherwise, I would never have responded to the call.

"If the preaching of this truth, in both aspects, will conduce to the 'relations' you desire, I shall be happy; if it will not, I take you to witness, the fault is not mine. I can preach no other.

"Heartily do I agree with you that the Christian's fight is 'against sin and the Devil.' I also believe that the greatest sin of men is persistent refusal to believe God and accept the salvation He has provided in the person and by the shed blood of His Son in the flesh, Jesus Christ. This sin, I must fight, and I do not know how otherwise to fight it than by holding it up as sin, and plainly declaring its eternal punishment.

"O brother! This is the great fight, this mortal combat 'with sin and the Devil,' as you say. When we enter the fray in our own wisdom and strength, what failure and defeat! But One to whom was given a revelation of the final conflict and its triumphant issue, has given us the song of victory. 'And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony.'

"There is no other path to victory. I have found it so in my own life. I have personally seen it in the lives of some thousands of others. You, yourself, brother, have seen and know that the Gospel Tabernacle, Hamilton, Ont., has had this preaching, unchanged for twenty-five years, and under it the congregation grew from thirty-five members to more than fifteen hundred.

"To sound forth this testimony is my one commission, and the one goal of my ambition.

"Believe me,
"Yours sincerely,
"P. W. Philpott."

SHADOWS

By Rev. Howard W. Pope, Chicago, Ill.

Dark shadows flit across the sky
Of every living man;
Afraid to live, afraid to die,
Some—hoping that they can.

A guilty conscience is one foe,
Which waketh many fears;
It follows us where'er we go,
And seldom disappears.

A child born blind, reveals to some
What cannot well be said—
That their own sin at last has come
In judgment on their head

And some are filled with constant fear—
Employment soon will cease,
A son go wrong, disease appear,
And trouble thus increase.

The Bible, which few would dare to doubt
Most plainly doth declare,
"Be sure your sin will find you out"—
For this you must prepare.

For all these clouds upon our sky,
One blessed hope we see;
The cross of Christ, who once did die
To give us victory.

He ushers in eternal day,
And darkness doth defy;
He drives the shadows all away,
And leaves a cloudless sky.

No man or woman of the humblest sort can really be strong, gentle, pure and good without somebody being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.—Phillips Brooks.

The Poet Gives Thanks

THANKSGIVING

By Herman Bernhart, Chicago, Ill.

I thank my Saviour and my God,
That though my feet have often trod
In paths not chartered for His own,
He never left me all alone;
That Jesus Christ is still my guide,
And ever watches by my side;
That He will hear me when I call,
That He will lift me when I fall.
For peace and joy He gives me still,
For strength enough to do His will,
For words of kindness I can say,
And deeds of love to do each day,
For burdens that He helps me bear,
For friends He gives me here and there,
For all the daily needs of life,
For comfort through the storm and strife.
I thank Him for the birds and flowers.
For this most wondrous world of ours,
For all of nature's harmonies,
For rivers, mountains, fields and trees.
But best of all I thank Him for
The love which He to mankind bore,
That He has paid the penalty
For all my sins on Calvary.
That by believing on His name,
I may be saved from sin and shame,
That I may thus be wholly free,
And dwell with Him eternally.

WITH THE PSALMIST

Psalm 117

Mrs. Jean Palmer Nye, Shenandoah, Iowa

O praise the Lord,
O praise the Lord,
Ye nations of the earth!
Ye people, praise His holy name,
To joyful song give birth!
Upon the green tops of the hills,
And from each snow-crowned peak,
His praise shall rise
To Paradise,
While men His praises speak!
The valleys shall give forth a sound,
The trees shall joyful be,
As all the people praise the Lord,
Who built eternity!
To His great name shall ever rise,
The perfume of each flower—
The noise of many waves shall be
An emblem of His power!
The roll of thunders shall be heard
In His deep harmonies.
O praise the Lord, ye people, praise,
And sing His melodies!
Toward us His kindness shall be great,
His truth shall never fail—
Praise ye the Lord,
Praise ye the Lord,
Before whom devils quail!
Arise, arise, and praise His name,
Let all the people sing!
Arise, proclaim His holy name,
Arise, arise, and sing!

LOVE'S BLESSINGS

By Fred Scott Shepard, Toronto, Ont.

Thanks be for Love's bestowals!
Blessings which seemed not great,
But great became, as time revealed them—
Work worth the doing, and the doing well;
Life's conflicts, calling for the true and strong;
Goals worth the effort and the stress of gaining;
And victories worth the winning and the fight;
For grace of God, vouchsafed that I
Might live, and love, and serve,
Thanks be!

Thanks be for Love's withholdings!
Things I desired, which time's unfolding
Has proven of the smallest worth—
Wealth, which if gained, might have impoverished;
Power, with its very might o'erpowering;
Fame, sought as children seek for baubles,
Which, if attained, would just as useless prove;
For things which ignorantly I sought,
Which God in gracious love denied,
Thanks be!

Thanks be for Love's revealings!
For vision clarified to see
The deeper meaning of God's ways and plans;
For heart attuned more perfectly to hear
The wondrous sweetness of life's melodies;
For wisdom to adjudge more nearly right
The value of the things God places first;
For faith to trust, when clouds obscure the sight,
And will too gladly leave all things to Him,
Thanks be!

The Truth About the Christian Reformed Church

By Miss Jacoba G. Tibma, Chicago

A reply to Rev. H. Bonnema

AS A GRADUATE of the Moody Bible Institute and a member of the Christian Reformed Church I write a few words in reply to Rev. Mr. Bonnema in the September issue of the MONTHLY.

One unacquainted with the Reformed churches in general and the Christian Reformed church in particular, would get a one-sided conception of them by reading his article. As a student of the Institute I was taught to have respect for the confessional standard of any church based on the Word of God.

Being convinced that the confessional standards of the Christian Reformed church are based on the inspired Word of God I would say that it is the same standard which has: (1) Prevented destructive criticism from gaining root and growth in the church; (2) kept politics and a social gospel out of its pulpits; (3) required its ministers to preach one sermon every Sabbath on one of the fundamental doctrines of our Christian faith; (4) maintained church discipline in obedience to Holy Writ; (5) given God His right place as Sovereign, Christ Jesus as only Saviour, and man as a hopeless sinner without Christ Jesus the Saviour; (6) held and kept the faith once delivered to the saints by accepting the Bible as the Word of God.

If every evangelical church would adhere strictly to its confessional standards then there would be more power issuing from them; then men who deny the truth of the virgin birth, the incarnation of the Son of God and inspiration of the Scriptures, would not be occupying pulpits as is the case today in many churches, and destructive criticism would not be able to make such inroads upon the church of God as it is doing.

As to the warnings in the church papers against the Moody Bible Institute, Mr. Bonnema has again given but half the truth, having failed to mention the Banner which commends the Institute for the stand it takes for the fundamentals of the faith; for the spirit of love and Christian fellowship manifest there, and mentions the Dean as a "prominent orthodox Bible teacher" and the MONTHLY as being one of the periodicals which is "uncompromising in its attitude towards a destructive higher criticism and the new theology, etc."

And let me conclude by saying that the Christian Reformed church believes in the personal and glorious return of the Lord Jesus Christ: and though as a whole it is not premillennial, it hears the promise of Jesus who said, "Behold I come quickly," and in love and longing responds, "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus."

May God give grace to His children to pray more in the spirit of Christ exemplified in John 17:21. Then would the world have less occasion for scoffing at the church of God; then would their ridicule be turned to envy; and then would they be compelled to exclaim, as did the early Christians, "Behold, how they love one another."

The Deadline of Doctrine Around the Church

By James M. Gray, D. D.

A reply to Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's sermon entitled "Shall the Fundamentalists Win?"

I DO NOT call myself a Fundamentalist, not because I lack sympathy with the Bible truths for which that name now stands, but because I think the name itself is unnecessary and perhaps undesirable.

It is unnecessary in my judgment because the body of truth for which it stands has always had a name which requires neither explanation nor defense. And it is undesirable for the reason that it is needlessly irritating to some opponents, and also gives them a two-fold advantage before the public. It enables them to speak of Fundamentalism as something new, and not only new but divisive in the churches which are said to be already "sufficiently split and riven."

And yet there is nothing new in Fundamentalism except, it may be, its name. It is the same old "offense of the cross" which Paul's words to the Galatians imply shall never cease. It is the same old "stumbling block to the Jews" and the same old "foolishness to the Greeks."

It was Fundamentalism under another name, and perhaps without a name save that "name which is above every name," which explained the martyrdoms of the Diocletian era and of the middle ages. To be a Fundamentalist cost life then. The Waldenses and the Hussites were Fundamentalists. The most succinct, and yet comprehensive statement of Fundamentalism of which I know is the Apostles' Creed, and surely this has never been divisive of the churches? It has not "split and riven" them. We have always regarded the Apostles' Creed as a bond of union, and have praised God for it as a near-inspired expression of the evangelical faith.

That is what Fundamentalism is, namely, the evangelical faith, the > "Faith of our fathers, living still,

> In spite of dungeon, fire, and sword."

And it is in the light of that fact that I desire, in all fairness and charity, to examine Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's sermon of last May, entitled, "Shall the Fundamentalists Win?"

Misapplying the Scriptures

I select this sermon as a text because it is an authoritative statement of the present opposition to the evangelical faith, and because it has been published and circulated with a definite request for comment. For the time being its author seems to be considered as an accepted spokesman for the liberal school of theology.

With strange infelicity, however, he commences his sermon with a reference to Gamaliel's advice to the Jewish council as recorded in Acts 5. The Jewish council, as he says, had haled before it Peter and the other apostles because they had been "preaching Jesus as the Messiah." They proposed to slay them, when in opposition Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, rose up and said: "Refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counsel be of God ye will not be able to overthrow them; lest haply ye be found even to be fighting against God."

The preacher makes the Jewish council to represent the Fundamentalists, and Peter and the other apostles to represent himself and his brother Liberalists. But is not the opposite nearer the truth? Peter and the other apostles who "had been preaching Jesus as the Messiah," were Fundamentalists. One has only to examine the content of their preaching in the preceding chapters of the Acts to be assured of that.

Moreover, the preacher claims that the Fundamentalists are dividing the churches, but if so, they could not be represented by the Jewish council. The council was not the dividing body, but the body that was being divided. And what a happy thing it has been for the world and the church that it was divided! Yes, blessed be God, Peter and the other apostles kept right on "preaching Jesus as the Messiah," until before long the council was very seriously divided, "and the Word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith" (Acts 6:7).

Therefore let not the Fundamentalists slack their hand nor forego their testimony; but at the same time let them have their behaviour seemly among the Liberals, that wherein they speak against them as evil doers, they may by their good works which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation (1 Pet. 2:12).

What Justifies Liberalism?

Dr. Fosdick justifies the Liberalism he represents on the ground that "there have been strange new movements in Christian thought," "new knowledge about the physical universe," "about human history, and in particular about the ways in which the ancient peoples used to think in matters of religion, and the methods by which they phrased and explained their spiritual experiences."

He assumes all this so-called new knowledge to be truth in the same sense that the Bible is the truth, a revelation from the God of the Bible, and of the same value as the Bible. The Christian faith must now be seen and stated in the terms of this new knowledge, he affirms. In other words, if he is understood correctly, the revelation in the Bible must now be qualified by modern philosophy, by the evolutionary hypothesis, and by comparative religion.

He offers only one analogy to support his affirmation, however, and that is the change in the planetary system from the Ptolemaic to the Copernican. But does he mean that the evolutionary theory of the universe is to be accepted on the same scientific ground as the conviction that the sun is the center of our system? Will a gentleman of his distinction in the religious and educational world stand sponsor for that opinion in the face of the testimony of noted specialists to the contrary? And will he at the same time affirm that the concepts of modern philosophy are in themselves so superior to those underlying the Christian faith of all the centuries as now to be substituted for them?

"By their fruits shall ye know them." What have these "strange, new movements in Christian thought" yet accomplished for the world? The late world-war and Bolshevism are a correct answer. "Strange" indeed are these movements, and perhaps relatively "new"; but while they may be in Christian thought, as Christians themselves are in the world, yet they are not of it, but absolutely alien to it.

And about the ways in which the ancient people used to think in matters of religion, what call have we Christians, having "escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," to be again entangled therein and overcome? Shall it happen unto us according to the true proverb, "The dog is turning to his own vomit again, and the sow that had washed to her wallowing in the mire" (2 Pet. 2:20-22)? If this is what the Liberals are disposed to do, are not the Fundamentalists entitled to respect at least for standing by the old faith?

Is Liberalism Christianity?

Dr. Fosdick notes four stakes which the Fundamentalists are driving "to mark out the deadline of doctrine around the church" he says, every one of which he and his liberalistic school would uproot. But one may appeal to the consciousness of regenerated men and women to say whether these four stakes are not only biblical but vital to the Christian faith.

The first he names is the virgin birth of our Lord; the second, the plenary inspiration of the original Scriptures; the third, the substutionary atonement of Christ; the fourth, the second coming of Christ to set up a millennium on the earth. He claims that no one has a right to deny the Christian name to those who do not hold these doctrines, or to shut against them the doors of Christian fellowship.

"To the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20). In other words, "What saith the Scripture" about the Christianity of such men and the shutting of the doors of Christian fellowship against them?

Paul was a Fundamentalist surely, and he testified against the false teachers in Galatia, saying, "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we preached unto you, let him be accursed." He repeats the anathema twice to make it the more sure (1:8, 9).

Writing to Timothy, he says: "This charge I commit unto thee . . . that thou mightest war a good warfare, holding faith and a good conscience, which some having put away, concerning faith have made shipwreck; of whom is Hymeneus and Alexander, whom I delivered unto Satan, that they might learn not to blaspheme" (1 Tim. 1:18-20).

Peter stands with Paul. "There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction" (2 Pet. 2:1).

John stands with Peter. Writing unto the elect lady, he says: "Many deceivers are gone forth into the world, even they that confess not that Jesus Christ cometh in the flesh. This is the deceiver and the antichrist. . . . If any one cometh unto you and bringeth not this teaching, receive him not into your house, and give him no greeting; for he that giveth him greeting partaketh in his evil works" (2 John 7:11, R. V.).

It is not therefore a question as to whether the Fundamentalists so-called, I use the term simply for convenience, it is not a question as to whether they shall withhold the Christian name to and shut the door of Christian fellowship against deniers of such doctrines, but the question rather is whether they can consistently and conscientiously do otherwise?

I

Argument For and Against the Virgin Birth

But now on what grounds would Dr. Fosdick question the virgin birth of our Lord? Two are named. For one he goes back to "the ways in which ancient peoples used to think in matters of religion," and for another he mentions the silence of John and Paul on the subject.

He tells us that "to believe in the virgin birth as an explanation of great personality is one of the familiar ways in which the ancient world was accustomed to account for unusual superiority," . . . especially in the case of founders of great religions. Buddha, Zoroaster, Lao-Tsze, according to the records of their faiths, were all supernaturally born, he says. "That is to say, when a personality arose so high that men adored him, the ancient world attributed his superiority to some special divine influence in his generation, and they commonly phrased their faith in terms of miraculous birth." In this way large groups of people in the evangelical churches came to think of Jesus as coming especially from God, "but they phrased it in terms of a biological miracle that our modern minds cannot use." So far, Dr. Fosdick.

But would he permit a few questions?

1. Would he consider it as making any difference in Jesus' case that men and angels also did not wait until His personality arose "high" before they adored Him, but that they actually adored Him while He was yet a new born babe? Or, would Dr. Fosdick possibly deny the historicity of the song of the heavenly host, and the visit of the wise men from the east, and the prophesying of Simeon and Anna, to say nothing of Elizabeth, the virgin's cousin, who recognized her even before the birth of Jesus as "the mother of my Lord" (Luke 1:41-43; 2:8-38; Matt. 2:1-10)?

2. Touching those records of the pagan faiths of which he speaks, were they contemporaneous records as in the case of the Gospels, or were they written hundreds of years later? Was the claim of virgin birth made by them in the very period and in the very place when and where the founder of the religion lived and toiled and was best known, as was true of Jesus? Were those records filled with other evidences of the supernatural in the lives of those men as the Gospels are filled with such evidences concerning Jesus? Did any of those men cast out evil spirits with a word and heal all that were sick with all manner of diseases? Did the winds and the sea obey any of those men (Matt. 8:23-27)? Did any of them raise the dead, or perchance, did any one of them himself arise from the dead? In other words, was the supposed biological miracle in their case a logical and consistent event in an otherwise unique life, or was it an isolated and contradictory occurrence in comparison with their subsequent history? Moreover, has Dr. Fosdick himself perused these records, and will he affirm that any of them make a distinct claim of virgin birth comparable with that recorded in the Gospels? Was it not rather a birth resulting from the supposed carnal intercourse of a pagan god with a victim of his lust?

3. Is Dr. Fosdick fairly well acquainted with the biblical description of Satan? And would it occur to him that possibly the prince of darkness might wish to forestall the effect of the biological miracle of Jesus' birth by counterfeiting it in the annals of paganism? And would Satan have had any reason or suggestion for doing so arising out of the divine promise in the Garden of Eden concerning the seed of the woman that should bruise the serpent's head, or because of Isaiah's prophecy that the Messiah should be born of a virgin, which was known some seven hundred years before the event?

4. Does Dr. Fosdick believe, and would he have his hearers believe, that Matthew and Luke, who so explicitly record the circumstances of the virgin birth, are guilty of actual fraud? Is that his real position? And would he in so far give aid and comfort to the Jews who charged Jesus with imposture and with being a bastard, and would he in so far justify them in His crucifixion?

5. Finally in this particular connection, just what kind of an impression is Dr. Fosdick seeking to make when he speaks of "large groups of people in the evangelical churches as coming to think of Jesus as coming especially from God," and phrasing it "in terms of a biological miracle?" As one not unacquainted with church history, would he deny that the virgin birth was from the beginning a criterion by which genuine and spurious Christianity were distinguished? Or, would he question the primitive origin of the Apostles' Creed, and assume to say that practically the whole church was not back of the article, "Who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the virgin Mary"?

Does Science Prove Anything?

To pass now to the silence of John and Paul, Dr. Fosdick says that these "two men who contributed most to the church thought of the divine meaning of the Christ, never even distantly allude to the virgin birth."

Even if this were absolutely the case (which it is not), could it nullify the plain and unmistakable testimony of Matthew and Luke? In the mouth of two witnesses a fact must be established in Jewish law, and Matthew and Luke are two witnesses to the fact. If one discards their testimony to this fact for any arbitrary reason, why not do the same with any other fact that does not run alongside of his mind?

There are four Gospels, and each is different from any of the others. Each was written with a particular object and for a particular class of people. John's Gospel, up until the record of the passion at chapter nineteen, is almost entirely new in its relation of facts, as compared with the other three. For example, he omits all reference to the life of Jesus prior to His baptism. Does this silence cast doubt upon everything else that Matthew and Luke wrote covering that period?

And reversing the situation, shall we say that John is not to be believed in the marvelous events he relates because Matthew and Mark and Luke are silent to them?

Dr. Robert Dick Wilson has discovered that William Cullen Bryant's History of the United States with its 3,500 pages quarto, makes no mention of Thanksgiving Day, nor of the days of fasting and prayer during the Civil war, nor of the Bible, except in the relation of the Bible Society to slavery. Shall some destructive critic later on affirm therefore that this nation ignored God in that sad chapter of its history?

The work of Bryant has fifty-three pages of index, double column, and yet the word "Presbyterian" does not occur in it, nor the word "Christian" except in the title of the Christian Commission, and the word "church" only occurs twice. And yet as Professor Wilson remarks, that work is a history of a republic founded by Christians, observing the Sabbath, devoted to foreign missions, and full of churches and their activities. The argument from silence therefore proves nothing absolutely.

But Dr. Fosdick errs when he says that these two men, John and Paul, "never even distantly allude to the virgin birth." For instance, John says: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God . . . And the Word was made (or became) flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

It did not occur to Dr. Fosdick to mention these words of John to his hearers, but had he done so, might his hearers have surmised that while John did not definitely name the virgin birth, he certainly did more than "distantly allude" to it? Surely if God became man, as John says, there must have been a biological miracle of some kind.

And a similar conclusion is almost equally obvious from Paul's words to the church at Philippi: "Let this mind be in you," he says, "which was also in Christ Jesus; who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." If this is not an affirmation of the virgin birth, does it not, as in John's case, at least "distantly allude to it"?

Paul's epistles, like John's Gospel, were penned for a very distinct purpose, not to recite the history of Christ's life already familiar to and believed by the whole church, but to build up a great body of truth on the basis, not of His incarnation, but His atoning death and resurrection.

Quoting Professor James Orr, of Glasgow, "Did not Paul know of Christ's birth from a virgin? Certainly he did, for Luke, who narrates it in his Gospel, was the traveling companion of Paul, and everything Luke knew, Paul knew."

The same inquiry might be made of John. Did he not have the other Gospels before him when he wrote his Gospel? And was not the virgin birth of Christ an already accepted article of belief in the church? But does he repudiate or contradict it? And if not, on the supposition that it was untrue, how could one believe anything else that John wrote? When it comes to an argument from silence, if it proves anything in this case, it proves that the record in Matthew and Luke is correct.

II

Argument For and Against Inspiration

But passing from Dr. Fosdick's views about the virgin birth of Jesus, let us consider those which he entertains about the inspiration of the Scriptures.

First, he reminds his hearers that the original documents of the Scriptures are no longer in our possession. This is true, of course, but it does not invalidate their inspiration.

The Declaration of Independence may be taken as an illustration. How many American citizens now living ever saw the original document, or even know whether it exists? And yet it is important to know that there was such a document, and that we possess accurate copies of it. We are zealous for its very words, for all the significance and authority attaching to the original attached to the copies. Is it unreasonable that as much importance should be attached to the original of the sacred Scriptures which furnish the foundation for the Christian faith?

Dr. Fosdick's idea of inspiration is confused. He thinks that the verbal or plenary inspiration of the original documents means, to quote his words, that "whether we deal with the story of creation, or the list of the dukes of Edom, or the narrations of Solomon's reign, or the Sermon on the Mount, or the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, they all came in the same way and they all came as no other book ever came."

On What Does Inspiration Terminate?

But this is not so, and it is difficult to believe that so intelligent a gentleman wishes to be taken seriously in saying it. He must know that the inspiration of the Scriptures terminates on the record. They who maintain its plenary character may leave others to determine the human source of the story of creation, for example. It is not incumbent upon them to say, nor is it with them a primary matter to determine, just how, or where, Moses obtained that story. They merely say that the story has the stamp of God upon it, that as a record it is correct and the story of creation which God desires man to believe.

The same is true of the list of the dukes and the other examples which Dr. Fosdick names. All of them did not come in the same way but in different ways, and yet putting them all together in the one book, it is competent to say that the book came as no other book ever came. That is, no other book as to its record is inspired of God (2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

To illustrate this from another point of view, Dr. Fosdick says the Fundamentalists believe that everything was "inerrantly dictated—scientific opinions, medical theories, historical judgments, as well as spiritual insight, all is infallible." And the way he says it we fear is intended to make Fundamentalists appear ignorant and silly.

But his remark should be qualified. There may be scientific opinions, medical theories, and some other utterances in the Bible which are in themselves untrue, and yet the record of them may be an inspired record for all that.

The True and the False in the Bible

Take the book of Ecclesiastes as an example. It contains some statements that are only partially true, and some that are altogether false, yet the record that its author said, and thought, and acted in accordance therewith on the different occasions named is an inspired, and hence an absolutely true record.

If Dr. Fosdick knows this to be the Fundamentalists' view of inspiration, and it is reasonable to suppose that he does know it, how can he justify the placing of the Koran on the same level as the inspiration of the Bible? He finds things in the Bible which he dislikes and he finds the same things in the Koran; and he scarcely saves himself from something approaching blasphemy by saying that in the Bible they are not final, that "they are always being superseded, that revelation is progressive."

This last remark, "revelation is progressive," as he uses it, is another evidence of his misunderstanding of the subject, inasmuch as he confounds revelation with inspiration. Revelation in the Bible is indeed progressive, "dynamic," to quote a favorite word of his, but inspiration in contradistinction thereto is static. Revelation in the Bible progresses from the first promise of the Redeemer in the Garden of Eden to His closing words in the apocalypse, "Surely I come quickly." But the inspiration of the record, from the writing of Moses in Genesis to that of John in the apocalypse remains ever the same, so that we have precisely the same reason and the same authority for accepting the divinity of Moses' writings as we have for accepting the divinity of the writings of John.

How Far Is Revelation Progressive?

Dr. Fosdick says that to him and to those he represents the Bible "is more inspired and more inspiring than it ever was before." More inspiring it may be, but more inspired we wish to say, it can never be, inasmuch as it is and always has been God-breathed.

But this part of the subject should not be left without a cautionary word. We have admitted that revelation is progressive. But we mean revelation as contained in and limited to the Bible. We are not talking about a progressive revelation outside of the Bible.

The Bible is now a completed revelation. "If any man shall add unto it, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in it, and if any man shall take away from it, God shall take away his part out of the book of life" (Rev. 22:18, 19).

There was progress while that revelation was in process of delivery to men, but the progress ended where the process ended. And that which was thus delivered to the saints, was delivered, as Jude instructs us, once for all, and it is this which constitutes the reason why we are commanded to earnestly contend for it against false teachers who have come in amongst us unawares. Jude 3, 4.

III

Argument For and Against Christ's Second Coming

Dr. Fosdick does not enlarge upon his objection to the substitutionary sacrifice of Christ, but proceeds to do so with reference to the second coming of Christ, approaching the subject with his customary preconceptions. Instead of coming to the Bible as the Word of God to ascertain what is therein revealed concerning the second coming of Christ, he begins to tell his hearers what the ancient world thought and did not think. For one so ambitious to be progressive it is astonishing how he loves to linger in the teaching of the ancient world, the heathen world at that.

"No one in the ancient world had ever thought as we do of development, and gradual change as God's way of working out His will in human life," he tells us. That is, no one in those days ever thought of evolution.

"They thought of human history as a series of ages succeeding one another with abrupt suddenness."

Thus would he forestall on the part of his hearers any acceptance of Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream of history as visioned in the metal image. It was not in his opinion a divine revelation, but "the Hebrew way of expressing hope for the victory of God and righteousness." And "when the Christians came they took over that phrasing of expectancy, and the New Testament is aglow with it."

In other words, the second coming of our Lord is not a divine promise ever to be literally fulfilled, but merely "the early Christian phrasing of hope," a remark which, for Simon-pure rationalism, can hardly be surpassed.

He says that the literal coming of Christ externally on the clouds of heaven, to set up His Kingdom here, was a teaching that he never heard in his youth, as if that proved anything. There are many who never heard it in their youth, and yet like him presumably, were brought up in Christian homes and in the habit of attending church. Some of them, however, have since come to learn that it is one thing to believe the Bible in a general way, and quite another thing to know what the Bible actually contains.

In other words, there is such a thing as progress in the knowledge of God's revelation and in the knowledge of what really constitutes the Christian faith, and it is lamentable that one should increase in years and in general erudition and yet make no progress in that direction.

On What Shall We Base Our Thinking?

He tells us that the group to which he belongs believes that Christ is coming, "but they are not thinking of an external arrival in the clouds."

Why are they not thinking so, may one ask in all sincerity, inasmuch as Christ Himself witnessed before the Sanhedrin, saying: "Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power and coming on the clouds of heaven" (Matt. 26:64)?

Why are they not thinking so, when the angels on Mount Olivet said to the waiting disciples: "This same Jesus, which was taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11)?

Why not, when Paul writes to the Thessalonians: "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:16, 17)?

Why not, when John says: "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him, and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him" (Rev. 1:7)?

If the preacher is not thinking of an external arrival on the clouds, of what kind of a second coming of Christ is he thinking?

He explains the kind he is thinking of by saying that man's music has developed, man's painting has developed, man's architecture has developed, development is the way in which God works. Therefore the second coming of Christ simply means that "slowly but surely His will and principles will be worked out by God's grace, in human life and institutions."

This is the evolutionary hypothesis applied to the "Blessed Hope," the underlying principle of which is that of continuity, no break, no abrupt change, no cataclysm.

Now, this is beautiful and interesting if it were only true. But it is not true if the Bible is to be taken at its face value, or, if Christ Himself is to be believed.

A Solemn Warning

Moreover, there is at least one passage of Scripture that squarely opposes it and does so in connection with a most solemn warning to any who are tempted to believe it.

That passage is where Peter says "that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts," or as the Revised Version puts it, "mockers shall come with mockery, and saying, Where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation." "For this they wilfully forget," he adds, "that there were heavens from of old, and an earth compacted out of water and amidst water, by the Word of God; by which means the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished."

In other words, the theory of continuity, no abrupt changes, no cataclysm, is contrary to history, contrary to fact.

Then follows the warning: "But the heavens that now are, by the same word, have been stored up for fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. Forget not this one thing, beloved, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise (the promise of the return of our Lord, he means) as some count slackness; but is long-suffering to you-ward, not wishing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Pet. 3:3-9).

It is a solemn matter, indeed, in the face of this warning to deny, and to lead others to deny, the "Blessed Hope," for as the same apostle says in another place: "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty" (2 Pet. 1:16).

The Question at Issue

It remains only to inquire into the meaning of the title of this sermon,

"Shall The Fundamentalists Win?"

Win what? It might be supposed that the preacher was thinking primarily of Christ and the Scriptures. Would it eventually be found that the Fundamentalists are right as to the inspiration of the Scriptures? Would it eventually be found that Christ is more than a religious teacher, that He is the Very God, conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary, and that He died as a sacrifice for human guilt, and that He is coming again personally and visibly in power and great glory? It might be thought that these were the questions uppermost in the use of the word, "win."

But not so. The inquiry is more mundane and personal than that. For, after distinguishing between the view of the Fundamentalists and the Liberalists on the virgin birth, the preacher says: "Here in the Christian church are these two groups of people, and the question which the Fundamentalists raise is this: "Shall one of them throw the other out?" He repeats the question after distinguishing between their views of inspiration, and again after distinguishing between them as to the second coming of Christ, "Shall one throw the other out?"

In his opinion "the Fundamentalists are not going to succeed," i. e., they are not going to be able to throw the Liberalists out, and doubtless he is a true prophet in saying so. If the Liberalists will not go out of themselves, as they did in John's day (1 John 2:19), if their sense of fairness and consistency and honor will not lead them to relinquish their hold upon the treasure and the institutions which Fundamentalists of other generations have accumulated and built up for the furtherance of the truth, the latter, we prophesy, will not lay hands upon them. Fundamentalists have suffered the loss of all things to follow Christ in other days, and if necessary they will rejoice to do the same again.

The preacher pleads for tolerance and Christian liberty, but on that score of what can he complain? He is a Baptist minister who, over his signature, has renounced and denounced the evangelical faith; and yet he is occupying a pulpit in the Presbyterian church whose confession of faith affirms the four essential doctrines which it is the purpose of his sermon to refute.

A preacher, therefore, who is permitted to do this and be generously compensated for doing it besides, so far from suffering intolerance or the curtailment of spiritual liberty, must feel rather that the lines have fallen unto him in pleasant places, and that he has a goodly heritage.

The Preacher's Idea of These Great Doctrines

He tells us that if we are to reach a happy solution of this problem, what we need "is a clear insight into the main issues of modern Christianity and a sense of penitent shame that the Christian church should be quarreling over little matters when the world is dying of great needs."

But the question will not down as to who introduced this "quarreling" if it so be, and who is responsible for this controversy over the inspiration of the Bible, the God-hood, the atoning sacrifice and the second coming of our Lord? To seek to fasten it upon the Fundamentalists would be like Germany laying the blame for the world war upon Belgium because she defended the forts of Liege. If the Liberalists, in other words, had not sought to introduce their strange and subversive doctrines among God's saints, would the latter have need to contend for the faith delivered unto them once for all?

And really are these little matters over which they are contending? Is the preacher justified in calling them as he does in a further sentence, "the tiddledywinks and peccadillos of religion?" Is that a sane or reverent estimate of the importance of the Bible and the truth as to the person and the work of Christ?

He speaks of the world as "dying of great needs" while the quarreling is going on, and he cites Armenia. "They are killing the Armenians yet," he says, "the Turkish deportations still are going on; lately they crowded Christian men, women, and children into a conventicle of worship and burned them together in the house where they had prayed to their Father and ours."

Why the Armenians Suffer

Yes, the name of the Armenians belongs in the inspired Hall of Fame which Bible lovers recognize as the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. But has Dr. Fosdick paused to think why the Armenians are willing thus to suffer the loss of all things? Has he reflected that they might escape their afflictions if they would? Does he know that if they were not Fundamentalists in principle they would not be persecuted?

If the Armenians could take the position of the Liberalists, if to them Christianity were only a religion and not the religion; if the origin of the Bible, if the nature of Jesus Christ, if the atonement of the cross, if the second coming of the Lord of glory, bringing His reward with Him, if these truths were to them the "little matters" which they are to Dr. Fosdick and his sympathizers, if they were merely "the tiddledywinks and peccadillos of religion," if, in other words, they were not to them the "main issues of Christianity," ancient as well as modern, and modern as well as ancient, would they consent to be "made a gazing stock by their reproaches"?

The Armenians have been "tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. They have had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment; they have been stoned, they have been tempted, they have been slain with the sword; they have wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented, of whom the world was not worthy" (Heb. 11:33-38). But let not twentieth century Liberalism add the remaining grief of professing to minister to their deepest needs. That can be done only by the Saviour whom Liberalism rejects.

PRAYING ON THE GROUND OF THE CROSS OF CHRIST

Against

The Professing Church's Apostasy

("For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day."—Eph. 6:12, 13.)

"The prayer-warrior" says Rev. Gordon Watt in "The Strategic Value of Prayer," "is not to accept any fatalistic position that, because evils are prophetically revealed as certain, it is therefore needless to oppose them. That would be to allow the prince of evil to have his way. Rather is it to remember the meaning of Calvary, and to translate it into the most determined action on the battlefield.

"It is in this sense that prayer must be considered as a warfare. Real prayer is opposing a great spiritual force to the onslaught of evil, and asking God to put into operation the work done by His Son on the Cross, which was not only the redemption of man, but the defeat of the prince of this world.

"The condition of the Church is extremely perilous. We are in a perfect landslide of apostasy from the faith once delivered to the saints."

Also, says the same author, "We are in a confused world, driven on by evil powers; but we are in it to claim that Christ shall have His way, and that the will of God shall be done."

For

The True Church's Revival

("Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit . . . for all saints;" that spiritual life and utterance may be given unto believers who are now paralyzed or indifferent, that they may open their mouths boldly, to make known the saving power of the Gospel of Christ.)

"The secret of revival," writes Mr. Watt in a brief article for publication, "is both Divine and human. The Holy Spirit uses the Cross to produce the conditions in which revival becomes a reality.

"The human element is the measure of our yieldedness to the blessed Spirit. As He works out, in the members of the Body of Christ, the purpose of the death of the Lord Jesus, the life of Christ is imparted to them, the very life which is His now in heaven.

"The Church needs Cross-moulded Christians, who will allow the Holy Spirit to do all His will in them through the Cross. Will YOU be one of these?"

Furthermore, says Mr. Watt in his little book on prayer, "The supreme power on the battlefield today is the prayer which wages war upon the rulers of darkness. . . . . Revivals ought to create a spirit of aggressive prayer. The past is an encouragement for the present. There is a throb of hope among the children of God. The expectations of coming victory fill many hearts. There are movings among men which only the Spirit of God can produce."

Accompanying the foregoing is this earnest appeal for intercession: "Prayer is our weapon with which to rally to the side of the Lord. And just as the defectiveness of human governments is leading up to the revelation of the man of sin, so effectiveness in prayer-warfare is preparing the way for the coming of Christ, and the establishment of His millennial government over the whole earth. . . . . The Church may yet triumph, and hasten the dawn of earth's glad morning, if, here and there, led by the Spirit of God, there are those who will cooperate with Him . . . . . through the weapon of prayer."

Again, as above, we ask, WILL YOU be one of these? Are you ready for the coming of the Lord? Is the Church ready for His coming? For remember that "Every one that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure" (1 John 3:3). Do you not, and does the Church not, need a heaven-sent, purifying revival in preparation for the Lord's return? Does it not seem that Revival must come before Rapture can come? Therefore, Pray! Pray on the ground of the Cross!

Pray Against Apostasy! Pray For Revival!

Note—The American edition of Rev. Gordon Watt's valuable little book, "The Strategic Value of Prayer," from which many of the quotations on this page have been taken, is published by "The Sunday School Times," 1031 Walnut Street, Philadelphia. Price, 25 cents. Multitudes of Christians were blessed through Mr. Watt's personal and public ministry in America last summer. These and others will be glad to know that arrangements have been made for his return from Scotland early this coming year to labor under the direction of the Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute. Pray for his enduement. This notice, as well as the prayer appeal above, are entirely without human solicitation or suggestion. The writer has only in view God's glory in the spiritual welfare of the Church of Jesus Christ. In common with multitudes of others, he rejoices that there is a growing burden of intercession in many quarters.

WHY NOT?

Eastern Methodist

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 30.—The memory of Thomas Paine, author of "The Age of Reason," was honored today in exercises held under the auspices of the Thomas Paine National Historical Association on the site of what was formerly his home here.

Inasmuch as nearly every criticism of the Old Testament record taught in Methodist theological seminaries and Book Concern publications and found in the course of study for our English speaking young preachers and styled "Modernism" and "New Theology" can be found in "The Age of Reason," it would seem to have been a fitting thing to have had the Methodist church represented at the memorial services at New Rochelle. Why not? Fifty years ago Bradlaw, Ingersoll and Conway were doing the same work as Paine, Voltaire, Bolingbroke and others had done long before. These men were all outside the church and called infidels. There are no such characters outside the churches now. The men who are contending as they did are inside the church. Mr. Ingersoll was asked: "Why are you not lecturing against the Bible as you used to?" He replied, "Preachers and teachers in the church are doing that now, and they have audiences and influence that I never had." Certain it is, the criticisms he made of the writings ascribed to Moses are believed and taught in nearly all Methodist schools, and he taught what Paine did of this matter.

SINN FEIN METHODS HERE

The Tribune (Chicago)

William Coote, a member of the British and of the Ulster parliaments, is making speeches in the United States and asking for contributions to the Irish Protestant cause. He made a speech in the Western Avenue M. E. Church. Sinn Fein sympathizers interrupted him. Disorder in the church resulted. Several women were knocked down. Several fainted. There was a fight and the disturbers were thrown out. Then bricks were thrown through the church windows.

Mr. Coote denounces the Sinn Feiners. He does what Americans generally believe is useless and mischievous. He attacks a religion. Ireland has religious war, to its injury. Mr. Coote offends Catholic Irishmen, but he does not offend American law, and if the congregation of an American church wishes to hear him and wishes to give money to the Protestant Irish, it has that right, and the church edifice is entitled to respect and to protection.

The Sinn Feiners have had every liberty in America. They have talked where and how they pleased. They have raised money. They have denounced everybody they wanted to denounce. They have been accorded every privilege of speech and action, and they have been organized in and out of politics to attack their enemies from American soil.

Now if an Ulsterman comes along and says things which offend them they have the privilege of staying away from the meetings where they would be offended. They cannot exercise the rights of American freedom and then throw bricks into a church where the other side of the fight is being discussed.

HIGH MINISTERIAL STANDARDS

Literary Digest

Placing highly educated ministers in backward communities is like trying to fit a square peg in a round hole for all the good it may do, since the raw fact of the matter, we are told, is that very few preachers trained and familiarized with the conveniences and comforts of modern home life in prosperous communities can ever be persuaded to become pastors of the little broken-down churches in these exceptional districts. Not only are such preachers discontented with their lot, but their high degree of literacy illy suits them to pastorates where much learning is neither appreciated nor understood. It works like a two-edged sword. Yet, says The Herald of Gospel Liberty (Christian), practically every denomination has grown into the habit of thinking so chiefly of its churches in the city and in the more favored communities that they are requiring a complete college education for all of their ministers, and on top of that perhaps a seminary training. The Herald makes the point that:

"This program, which is being adopted by nearly all denominations, is making it almost impossible for backward communities to secure pastoral oversight from other than the preachers of backward denominations which require no educational standard for their ministry. These are usually the advocates of peculiar dogmas—such as the 'holy rollers,' for instance. Thus the religious situation of these neglected sections becomes more serious every year, and is likely to be turned over almost entirely to freak sects unless larger denominations devise some plan of furnishing a type of minister who will be willing to work under such conditions and live in such communities. It is a wonderful field for the genuine mission spirit—and a field against which the larger interests of the denominations are militating quite seriously just now."

Religion is the tie that connects man with his Creator, and holds him to His throne.—Daniel Webster

THE NEGRO PROBLEM

Buffalo (N. Y.) News

Why should there be such a problem? Color of skin and servitude have marked off the Negro from the American Caucasian. The race barrier is extreme. But color of skin should not blind men to the natural rights of the human being covered by that skin. In round numbers about one-third of the population of the globe is white, about one-third is yellow, and another third is black and brown. That is, two-thirds of the human race is colored. There are over ten million blacks in the United States and they are here to stay.

This Negro problem was initiated by the Anglo-Saxon and not the African. The Negro was lured to America under constraint. He did not choose the time or way of his coming. From African villages the natives were driven with slaughter to slave pens on the coast. In chained gangs below deck, with a brutality allowed no beast today, these victims were shipped to the American shores. Since 1885 over 4000 Negroes have been lynched or murdered by mobs; that is, over one hundred a year within the United States. Neither in India, nor China, nor Japan, nor West Indies, nor South America are human beings lynched. In East St. Louis not long ago 6000 Negroes were driven from their homes, 700 shot, burned or beaten in race war.

Negroes may be low in the scale. Only a half century has elapsed since the Negro was the white man's chattel. But in these fifty years Negro home owners have grown from 12,000 to 650,000; men in business from 2000 to 165,000; literacy has risen from 10 per cent to 80 per cent; school teachers from 600 to 4300; churches from 700 to 7500; church property from $1,500,000 to $90,000,000. The Negro needs not to be boosted or coddled, but given a fair human chance and a square deal in an atmosphere cleansed of race hatred.

MENTAL INDIGESTION

The Tribune (Chicago)

A public librarian says there are too many cases of "mental indigestion" among children, due to choosing "all sweets and desserts" in reading. That sounds reasonable; but why confine it to children?

Carrying the comparison further, we find that too many sweets and desserts consumed by children are not so likely to cause indigestion in youth as to reveal themselves in bad skin, bad teeth, flabby muscles, and so forth. Physical infirmity in middle age is more likely to be the result of improper feeding in youth than in acute indigestion. So with books, mental deficiency in middle age is more likely to be the result of poor selection of youthful mental pabulum than is any noticeable evil effect at the time of selection.

But the important conclusion is that results of poor selection of books for children inevitably are bad. It is even worse that these bad results should become evident in middle life, when the sufferer should be vigorous, than in childhood, when at best the mental powers are formulative, not constructive.

Children can be taught good taste in reading. An interest in good reading can be inculcated as well as interest in reading of no mental nutritive value. It is as certain as that satisfaction of a childish appetite with oatmeal and cream can be used to reduce the appetite for chocolates and bon bons.

But it requires some effort on the part of parents. Many men and women who realize their own mental deficiencies due to lack of cultural reading, and who wish to see these deficiencies corrected in their children, fail of their desire. They do so partly because they have not the knowledge necessary to proper selection of books which would start the children on the right path, but more so because they fail to show their children a good example. The selection of books is fairly simple. Any good public librarian can satisfy that need. But the example is more difficult.

THE KU KLUX KLAN AND POLITICS

The United Presbyterian

It was thought a few months ago when some leading newspapers of the country made an expose of the purpose and methods of the Ku Klux Klan that the light thus thrown upon its activities would be sufficient to destroy its influence. However, there are many indications that in certain parts of the country, particularly in the South, the membership of the Klan has reached such proportions and its influence has become so strong as to create a real problem. The recent primary for the selection of candidates to be voted on at the fall election for the United States Senate in Texas, resulted in the nomination of Earl B. Mayfield, a Klan candidate for the Democratic nomination, which in that state is practically equivalent to election. Mayfield won against the candidacy of the venerable senator Culbertson, who has represented the Lone Star state in the upper house of the American Congress for twenty-three years. The campaign in Oklahoma terminating in the primaries of that state last week was waged largely on the Klan issue particularly with respect to the office of governor. Mayor J. C. Walton, of Oklahoma City, the anti-Klan candidate, was nominated on the Democratic ticket by a substantial majority, although the Klan candidate, R. H. Wilson, polled a very heavy vote. Whatever may be the secret of the popularity of the Klan it must be admitted that it is growing in power and influence. Reports of many initiation ceremonies coming from such widely separated parts of the country as Los Angeles, Chicago, Massachusetts and Ohio, indicate that many new members are being received. The Tulsa, Okla., Tribune for June 24 states the following with reference to an initiation: "One thousand and twenty men pledged allegiance to the Klan at a ceremony which lasted long into the night." More than 30,000 motorists from Tulsa and surrounding towns tried to reach the scene of the spectacle. It is estimated that there were more than 10,000 automobiles on the roads leading to this point. Cars were lined three deep on the broken arrow road for nine miles on the way to the amphitheater. In Texas the Klan has openly announced in a public statement that it will hereafter function as a political organization. In the Lone Star state it is being opposed by a citizens' league formed to combat the Klan's political activities.

Better Thinking
Philippians 4:4-8

The sins of the flesh are many, the sins of the mind are more. Both of these are mentioned in Ephesians 2:3. Many people who escape the former are enslaved by the latter.

In many quarters the badge of distinction desired above all others, is to be regarded as a thinker. The test question of character, however, is not, "Are you a thinker?" but, "What do you think about?" The mental machinery should certainly be in good working order, but the material which goes into the loom of thought determines the quality and usefulness of the finished product.

"What shall I think about?" some one asks. "Think on these things," says the Apostle. "Whatsoever things are true"—that is, essentially true; things revealed by God, therefore true as He is true. "Sanctify them by thy truth," our Lord prayed for His disciples, and then He added, "Thy word is truth." "Whatsoever things are honest," or honorable, or worthy of regard and reverence —that which is worthy and serious as opposed to that which is trivial and worthless. "Whatsoever things are just," or equitable in human relationships. Think not of gaining advantage over another, but of fairness and square dealing instead. "Whatsoever things are pure," that is, the things that lead to victory over temptation. "Whatsoever things are lovely," or lovable, or worthy of one's love; "Whatsoever things are of good report," or as it appears in the Revised Version margin, "Gracious things, or winsome, and winning." "Think on these things," says the Apostle. Meditate on them; set value upon them; invest in them. Here is the material out of which the mental tapestry may be woven, to adorn the rooms of the soul and to beautify and enrich the whole being.

There is a vital relation between all this and the things that are found in the preceding verses. Thinking on the plane of verse 8 is possible only to those who have the peace of verse 7, and this peace is in turn the possession of those only to whom verse 6 is real in experience. The mind set upon God, and crowned by His peace is free to follow the better thinking suggested by this Scripture lesson.

The Meaning of Church Membership
Matthew 10:32, 33

The words of Bishop J. C. Ryle are pertinent to this topic,—"There is hardly any subject in religion which is so much misunderstood as the subject of the church. There is probably no misunderstanding which has done more harm to professing Christians than the misunderstanding of this subject."

We should be clear concerning this matter—there is but one church; many names, many denominations, many assemblies, but only one church is in the world. That church is known in Scripture as the body of Christ. This name is suggestive. As in the human body there are many members, animated by one life and controlled by one head, so is it in the spiritual body of Christ—the church; one body, indwelt by one spirit even the Holy Spirit, and controlled by one head, our divine Lord. In this body we are given a place, when we put faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour. Then it is that I Corinthians 12:13 becomes actually true in personal experience. See also Ephesians 1:13 and John 7:39. No one except the Holy Spirit can put us into the body of Christ. This is his special prerogative. "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Spirit."

Uniting with the local church in any community, is simply a confession of a great spiritual fact; namely the fact of our spiritual union with Christ through faith. The implications issuing from this fact are many: the Lordship of Christ, loyalty to Him, fellowship with his people, a common interest in the prayer life of the church, and in its purpose to make Christ known to the world in order to hasten His coming and His Kingdom. This involves the giving of time, strength and money to the work of the Lord in the local church, where that church is true to the Scriptures, so that its power for salvation and all that is good may be felt throughout the community, and extend to the uttermost parts.

How We Can Help Home Mission Work
Galatians 6:6-10

We can help home mission work first by remembering that the field is the world; by lifting up our eyes and looking out upon the field. This we can do through the reading of the Bible and other missionary books. A study course in missions spiritualized by prayer and directed by a competent leader adds greatly to our knowledge of the field. We must not forget that missionary facts are the fuel for the kindling of missionary fires. Get hold of a few home missionary facts; present them wisely to your society and you will do much to help home missionary work.

We can help missionary work by giving proper emphasis to the present Scripture lesson which says "Be not deceived; God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." The Apostle is not simply laying down a general principle but is speaking especially about penurious giving or stinginess and its baneful effect upon life. Be not deceived in this matter of giving. God is not mocked. The law of the harvest operates here; sow much, reap much. Invest in the things of the flesh and you get a harvest of ashes. Invest in the things of the Spirit and behold, great is your reward in heaven, and great is your joy on earth. If returns seem slow be not weary in well doing. Sacrifice is the law of spiritual progress. It is enough for faith that God has said, "In due season we shall reap if we faint not."

How can we help mission work? By looking forward to a definite place and part in that work. The harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few. "Is it vain," asks a recent writer, "to hope that there may be found, young men and young women with hearts prepared and souls afire to step forth from the ranks and say, 'Ready?' Surely not. The need of the world is met by contact with that need rather than by any contact on the part of others far removed from the need. Both are necessary, but he who can have personal contact with darkened hearts and give them the message of Christ and His salvation is doing the most for mission work whether it be in home or foreign lands.

Praise God
Psalm 145:1-21

What God is and what God does is the burden of this Psalm and the basis of its praise. "The Lord is great" (v. 3). "The Lord is good" (v. 9). "He is gracious" (v. 8). "Righteous and holy" (v. 17). These qualities find perfect expression in Him who is our God. He is to be praised and loved for what He is in the perfection of His own being. "All thy works shall praise thee." They do so even now, especially in those places where their primitive beauty has been preserved. As another has well said, "Take for instance the gladness of one summer day, when from the little green lizards upward, there is a perfect murmer of enjoyment in the stilly heat." In the coming day, the time of restoration, God's works shall show His power and His praise in even greater measure. See Romans 8:21-23; Acts 3:21; Matthew 19:28.

"Thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power." Let us do this. To man alone has speech been given through which he may express the praises of God. Praise God for salvation from sin—the salvation that meets every obligation involved in our sinning and every need of the human soul. Praise God for restoration. Often have we failed, but just as often have we been lifted up. Forgiveness and cleansing from God always follows confession on our part. Praise God for the peace that keeps one when everything around is going to pieces. Praise God for hope in a world of confusion and strife. He is our hope. Praise God for health and home, liberty of conscience, and the joy of service. Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord.

OPEN AIR PREACHING IN THE CHICAGO "LOOP"

The loop of Chicago is the center of its business section, and is roughly bound by the loop that the elevated railroads make in the down-town district, covering more han fifty of the most populous blocks of the city. For years the Night Church, an organization that is directed by Rev. Ernest E. Bell, has held meetings on Quincy St. at State. The Volunteers of America hold meetings Sunday mornings in Monroe St. at State. The Central Y. M. C. A., in cooperation with the Church Federation, holds noon meetings on Thursdays during the summer in Arcade Court, beside the Y. M. C. A. building on La Salle St. They also frequently cooperate with services on Quincy St. at State.

Chief of Police Fitzmorris has given police protection to these meetings and has promised the same protection to a meeting to be held on Saturday nights at Clark north of Washington St., under the shadow of the City Hall, the first meeting having been held September 23. It is well known that for many years there has been but one Christian church in the loop, the First Methodist. This church has been torn down and a great structure, to be known as the Chicago Temple, under the control of the Methodists of Chicago, is now being erected on its site.

Older Chicagoans will recall the days when Dwight L. Moody preached from the steps of the Court House, which was located where the City Hall now stands, and that some of his experiences were not of the most pleasant character.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE AND BODILY RESURRECTION

L. A. M., Duluth, Minn.

Question: Does Christian Science deny the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ?

Answer: In Science and Health (p. 292, 1913 edition) the resurrection and ascension is referred to, but is vaguely explained away upon pages 313 and 314. Since death itself is merely a "mortal illusion" (p. 289), what more could the bodily resurrection of Jesus be? Resurrection means only "spiritualization of thought" (p. 593).

THE GOSPEL AND THE CHURCH

J. E. M., Verona, Neb.

(1) It is unscriptural to say that the good news of salvation must be preached in all the world before the Church is translated, for we are taught to be watchful for Christ's return at any time (Luke 12:36; 1 Thess. 1:9,10). (2) The Bride is composed of both Gentiles and Jews (Acts 1:8; 15:14; Eph. 2:12-15). (3) We cannot say what proportion of Bible scholars regard the tribulation saints as part of the Bride. (4) Apparently the gospel will be proclaimed by Jews during the tribulation period. Rev. 7:9 gives the results of their testimony. (5) Those who proclaim the gospel of the kingdom (Matt. 24:14) may be Jews who live towards the end of the age, but in a sense it is now being proclaimed by all who know how to rightly divide the word of truth. (6) We do not believe that reaching a few of the heathen in the various countries constitutes witnessing to that nation. (7) This dispensation does not end with any single event, but with a series of events. (8) Missionary work should be done with a view to saving men, not merely to complete the Bride.

CRIME, CHILD DELINQUENCY, WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

S. H., Newport, Wash.

(1) If we may judge from newspaper reports of crime in our large cities and from the spirit of lawlessness that is abroad, we would say that crime is on the increase; but we are not in possession of the necessary statistics to prove this.

(2) In cities where a great amount of social welfare work is being carried on there is a consequent reduction of delinquency. There is probably less than there was ten years ago. Upon the other hand the tendency to disregard certain proper and healthful kinds of work which boys and girls are fitted to do is being fostered by reprehensible moving pictures.

(3) International and nation-wide traffic in white slaves was broken up some years ago. Since the war many cities have become exceedingly lax in their enforcement of the laws. This was especially true in the city of Chicago, but recently conditions have been greatly improved owing to pressure brought to bear by the Illinois Vigilance Association. It is reported that in Europe thousands of women have given themselves up to prostitution, prefering vice to starvation.

THE FATHER OF CHRIST

N. F. and G. T., New York City.

Questions: "We, two Jews seeking enlightenment, respectfully submit the following questions—(1) Who was the father of Christ? (2) What is meant by the "virgin birth" of Jesus Christ? (3) Does the Old Testament say anything about a virgin birth? (4) What do Christ, Mary, Joseph, and New Testament writers teach about the birth of Christ? (5) How can God be the father of Christ since God is not a man? (6) Since God is invisible and Christ was visible, how could Christ be God?

Answers: (1) Christ has no human father. He always said that God was His Father, and that He and the Father were one (John 14:9, 10). (2) That Jesus Christ was born of a virgin who had never known a man (Luke 1:34). (3) The phrase "the seed of the woman" (Gen. 3:15) is thought to so intimate, for no seed of the woman by natural generation could possibly utterly crush Satan. The clear statement of the "virgin birth" is found in Isaiah 7:14 and 9:36, Micah 5:2, Matthew 1:22, 23. (4) Christ said nothing about His birth, but he spoke about His pre-existence before He was born of Mary (John 17:5, 24), and how He had come down out of heaven from God (John 6:38, 62). Mary's testimony is very clear (Luke 1:31, 34); also that of Joseph (Matt. 1:18,19). For John's testimony see John 1:1-3, 14. For Luke's testimony see Luke 1:26-35. For Paul's testimony see Philippians 2:5-7. (5) God is not the father of Christ by natural generation. Christ is the eternal Son of God, who existed with God in perfect equality and likeness from the beginning (John 1:1). (6) The person of Christ was visible because He took the form of man (Phil. 2:6-8).

QUESTIONS UPON BIBLE TEXTS

A. J., Muskegon. Mich.

(1) Amos 8:11, 12. This prophecy has been fulfilled.

(2) To us the Oberammergau play seems sacrilegious, but many earnest Christians would not agree with us.

S. M. C., Crum, W. Va.

1 Peter 3:18-20. Nothing is said about Jesus' preaching the gospel to the spirits in prison. The "spirits in prison" may have been fallen angels to whom the victory of Christ was proclaimed as a part of His triumph. Ephesians 4:8; Colossians 11:15.

Tabernacle Hymns No 2
SONG BOOK OF QUALITY FOR PARTICULAR PEOPLE

I. G., Guelph, Ont.

(1) 1 Kings 22:20-23. Such language probably is not to be interpreted literally. A "lying spirit" was permitted to mislead Ahab who already was determined upon an evil course.

(2) 2 Kings 2:23-25. "Young lads" rather than "little children." They might even have been full grown. Their punishment was none too severe when all the circumstances are taken into account.

J. T. L., Mounds, Minn.

(1) The book of Daniel is not classified among the major prophets on account of its size, but probably because of the great sweep of its prophecies.

(2) Lamentations may have a proper literary classification as a poetical book.

(3) Ecclesiastes 9:5-7 does not teach that souls are not consciously existent in the next life, but only that they cease to function in relation to this life.

(4) 1 John 1:8-10 is applicable first of all to Christians, but does not exclude any repentant sinner who comes to God through Christ.

(5) The character of the contents of the Apocryphal books excludes them from the list of those which are divinely inspired.

(6) Roman 6:18-22 refers to victory over present sin because of the new life which we have in Christ.

L. J. C., Cedar Falls, Iowa

(1) The tribulation saints are raised at the close of the tribulation and then receive their rewards.

(2) Revelation 2:17. The "hidden manna" symbolizes the overcomer's spiritual satisfying and unfailing food. The "white stone" with the secret of the "new name" would suggest not only reward but credentials, entitling the holder to special further benefits and privileges.

(3) Mark 14:51. We do not know the name of the young man, but some have supposed that he was Mark.

(4) Mark 5:6. The man himself did not worship Jesus, but under demon control he took the attitude of worship in order that the "unclean spirit" might make his request (v. 7).

(5) Matthew 25:5. The wise virgins were sleeping, but prepared beforehand for the call of the Bridegroom.

(6) Deuteronomy 4:19. "Imparting" the hosts of heaven to all the nations probably means that the stars and constellations were given to them for their common blessing and guidance, and not for worship.

BRIEF MENTION

M. T., Berwick, Pa.

We know of no Scripture making it wrong for us to eat meat.

W. S. T., Beebe, Ark.

While true that most of the promises in the Old Testament relate to this life, yet belief in the resurrection of the body and in eternal life was also taught. Luke 10:25, 28 and Matthew 22:23-29.

W. T., Sand Lake, Mich.

John "the Baptist" was probably so-called to distinguish him from John "the apostle."

G. A. F., West Tisbury, Mass.

The Law of the Offerings, by Andrew Jukes is wholly reliable, although some others may disagree with him as to some interpretations.

R. M., Minneapolis, Minn.

As an official of the government a man would not be guilty of murder should he kill a mail robber. Neither is an individual held guilty for a similar act who is in the service of a private concern. Likewise it is right for a Christian to go to war in defense of his country or in a righteous cause.

J. M., Whitestown, Ind.

We are not sufficiently familiar with the association you mention to pass judgment upon it, but too much super-organization is not good.

O. S., Racine, Wis.

The so-called "Mispah benediction" is not strictly a benediction as we now make use of the term, but approaches to the spirit of those in the Epistles. See Ephesians 6:24, etc.

L. E. F., Nashville, Tenn.

Thank you for the appreciation of our answers in this department of the MONTHLY but no "compilation of the cream of our replies" has been made.

W. S. B., Sandwich, Ont.

(1) Praying in Christ's name means praying according to His will or asking for such things as will honor His name. Hence it is proper to end our prayers with "for Jesus sake."

(2) Luke probably got his information concerning the birth of John and of Jesus from Mary herself, or from some member of her family or from intimate friends of the families.

Jesus the Great Teacher

Luke 6: 20-49

Golden Text: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Luke 6:31.

I. Characteristics of the Subjects of the Kingdom (vv. 20-26).

Only those who are subjects of the kingdom know what blessedness is. The spiritual experience of the subjects of the kingdom are marked by the following steps:

1. Poverty of Spirit (v. 20). This means consciousness of one's lost condition and worthlessness. It is spiritual bankruptcy. It means to come to the end of oneself and to show sorrow for sins.

2. Hunger for Righteousness (v. 21). The one who has come to know his poverty desires the true righteousness of Christ.

3. Weeping because of His Lack (v. 21). This is the godly sorrow which worketh repentance (2 Cor. 7:10).

4. Treatment Which the Subjects of the Kingdom May Expect (vv. 22, 23). When the subjects of the kingdom become like the King they incite the hatred, contempt and persecution of the world. Those who pass through this for Christ's sake should rejoice, for there is great reward laid up in heaven for them. Those who are rich, self-centered and seeking the applause of the world have woes pronounced upon them (vv. 25, 26).

II. The Governing Principles of the Kingdom (vv. 27-38).

1. Love Your Enemies (v. 27). To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been made partakers of the divine nature.

2. Do Good to Those Who Hate You (v. 27). Love acts according to its own nature. Enmity only stimulates love to act in harmony with its own laws.

3. Bless Them that Curse You (v. 28). Injury by words is hard to let go unchallenged.

4. Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You (v. 28). Christ's own example is the best commentary on this precept (Luke 23:34; cf. Acts 7:60).

5. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury (v. 29). The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights, but rather to suffer insult, injury, and even loss. This should not be pressed so far that evil-doers can go on unchecked. It expresses the law which should govern individual action.

6. Give to Every One that Asketh (v. 30). We should give to every one that asketh, but not necessarily the thing asked for.

7. Do as You Wish to Be Done By (v. 31). This is called the "Golden Rule." If men were to live by this rule the labor problem would be solved. An end would be put to war. International relations would be peacefully adjusted and all profiteering in business would end. This is the grand and unfailing test of all that calls itself Christian. The practicing of this precept proves that we are children of God (v. 35).

8. Be Merciful (v. 36). The mercy of the Heavenly Father is the grand example.

9. Censorious Judgment Condemned (v. 37). We should not seek out the evil in others for our satisfaction. This should not be interpreted to prohibit the estimation of another's character by his deeds.

10. Danger of Following False Teachers (v. 39). The one who does not know God and the way to heaven will lead others to ruin. Happily we have the Scriptures, and the Holy Spirit is ready to make His meaning known, so there is no excuse.

11. Those Who Reprove Others Should Strive to Live Blameless Lives (vv. 31-46). It is easy to see others' faults, but hard to see our own. We should remove evil-doing from our lives before bringing others to account. This should not be so interpreted as to prevent from reproving another until his own life is faultless.

12. The Sin of Profession Without Fruits (v. 46.) The one who professes a life and fellowship with God should practice the principles which reveal the nature of God.

III. The Judgment to be Applied to the Subjects of the Kingdom (vv. 47-49).

1. The one who hears and does the sayings of Christ the King shall be as secure as the house built upon the solid rock. The storms of the judgment cannot destroy him, for the Rock of Ages is immovable.

2. The one who hears and does not Christ's sayings shall be overwhelmed in the judgment and go down to utter ruin and destruction.

Jesus the Friend of Sinners

Luke 7:37-48

Golden Text:—"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Timothy 1:15.

I. A Penitent Woman's Act of Love (vv. 37, 38).

1. The Place (v. 37). It was in the home of Simon the Pharisee while Jesus was sitting at meat. When she knew of Christ's visit in this home she came to lavish upon Him her affection.

2. The Act (v. 38). She washed Jesus' feet with her tears and wiped them with her hair. Through some means she had heard of Jesus' pardoning grace, and God had opened her heart to receive Him as her Saviour. Out of a heart of gratitude she kissed His feet and anointed them with precious ointment.

3. Who She Was (v. 37). Her name is not mentioned. There is no good ground for assuming that she was Mary Magdalene. She was of a notoriously bad character. Though known to the public as a bad woman, something had happened which transformed her. She was now a saved sinner because she believed on Jesus Christ. The moment one believes on Christ he is saved regardless of what his former life has been.

II. The Pharisee's Displeasure (v. 39).

Simon felt scandalized by such a happening at his table. He was a respectable man. For Jesus to tolerate such familiarity on the part of a woman of such evil repute greatly perplexed him. Though he believed Jesus enough to invite Him to dine with him, he questions within himself as to whether after all he was not mistaken. He reasons if Jesus were a prophet he would have known the character of this woman and would have either withdrawn His feet from her or thrust her back with them, or if He knew her character His tolerance of such familiarity proved that He was not a good man. Simon's righteousness was of that sort which gathers up its skirts and gives the sinner a backward push into his filth. If he had known who Jesus was and what a change had been wrought in the woman's heart he would not have been so severe.

III. Jesus Teaches the Pharisee (vv. 40-48).

He taught him by means of the parable of a creditor and two debtors. Observe that Jesus made it very clear that he not only knew the woman, but knew Simon also.

1. The Common Debt (v. 41). The woman was a sinner, so was Simon, though he was not the same kind of a sinner that she was. There were two debtors, though the one owed ten times as much as the other. This is representative of all sinners still. The Bible declares all to be sinners, yet recognizes degrees of guilt. Full credit ought to be given to the man who is honest, virtuous, generous and kind. Yet such a life will not secure entrance into heaven. Much harm has been done by even evangelical preachers by failure to recognize the essential difference in human character. On the other hand the Saviour's words are a severe rebuke to the respectable Pharisees who are sitting in judgment against the sinners of a coarser type.

2. The Common Insolvency (v. 42). "And when they had nothing to pay." Jesus freely granted the difference in the degree of the woman's sins and those of the Pharisee, but drove home to him the fact that they were both debtors and had nothing with which to pay (Rom. 3:23). As sinners we may quit our sinning and hate our deeds, but that does not make satisfaction for the sins of the past. What we have done is irrevocable—it has passed from our reach. Every transgression shall receive a just recompense of reward (Heb. 2:2). We must come to our Creditor, God Almighty, and acknowledge our insolvency and accept the kindness of Jesus Christ who bore our sins in His own body on the tree (1 Pet. 2:24). We are all paupers, and instead of judging each other as to relative guilt, we should come to God and sue for pardon.

3. The Relation of Forgiveness and Love (vv. 44-48). Simon's reluctant answer to Jesus' question shows that he got the point of Jesus' teaching. In order to make His teaching concrete He turned to the woman, calling Simon's attention to what she had done in contrast to what he had done. Simon had neglected to extend to Jesus the common courtesies of a respectable guest, but this forgiven woman had lavished upon Him her affection and gifts. The measure of one's love is determined by the measure of the apprehension of sins forgiven. The one most forgiven will love most. Frequently the worst sinners make the best saints. The wasted life of the sinner often spurs him on to the utmost endeavor; but let no one think lightly of sin. Through the grace of God forgiveness of sins is possible, yet sins leave their scars.

Jesus the Great Missionary

Luke 8:1-39

Golden Text:—"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost."—Luke 19:10.

I. The Great Missionary's Field (vv. 1-3).

He went throughout every city and village. The true missionary goes to everybody, for all need the gospel.

1. His Message (v. 1). He preached the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. The gospel message is truly good tidings, for the great King is offering to rebellious sinners salvation through Jesus Christ.

2. His Helpers (v. 1). The twelve apostles were with him. The missionary should utilize the help of others. Those who have heard the good tidings of the gospel gladly join in preaching it to others.

3. Supported by Saved Women (vv. 2, 3). Out of grateful hearts certain women who had experienced the saving power of the gospel ministered unto Jesus of their substance. This throws light on how Christ and the apostles were supported. Saved men and women delight to supply the temporal needs of God's missionaries.

II. The Great Missionary Teaching (vv. 4-21).

Jesus was not only a gospel preacher, but a great teacher. When the people from every city gathered unto Him He taught them.

1. The Parable of the Sower (vv. 4-15). (1) The sower—Jesus (Matt. 13:37). (2) The Seed—the Word of God (v. 11). (3) The kinds of ground (vv. 5-8). This shows the condition of the human heart as the Word of God is preached. (a) Wayside (v.5). This foot-trodden path pictures the hard-hearted upon which no impression can be made. The preached Word finds no entrance, and Satan snatches it away as birds pick up the grain from the hard-beaten path. In such cases faith cannot spring up and result in salvation (v. 12). (b) Stony ground (v. 6). This is not stones mixed with earth, but a thin layer of earth on a ledge of rock. The seed falling upon such earth springs up quickly, but the plant soon dies when exposed to the sun. This pictures the hearer who receives with joy the message of the gospel, but when persecution and trials come because of following Christ they give up and desert the cause (v. 15). (c) Thorny ground (v. 7). This ground is good but it has thorns growing in it. The seeds spring up but the plant has no room to develop. This pictures the Christians who bear no Christian fruit because of being preoccupied with cares, riches and pleasures of this life (v. 14). (d) Good ground (v. 8). The seed here sprang up and bare fruit to the full measure. This pictures the honest heart which receives the gospel message and allows it to produce in its life a full harvest of grain (v. 15).

This parable graphically represents the different classes of hearers wherever the gospel is preached. The application of this parable is found in verses 16-18. The Word of God is compared to a lamp or lighted candle. A Christian who has received the seed in an honest heart is as a lamp. A lamp is of use only as it sends out light. One who hears God's Word and does not witness for Christ is as a lamp covered up. Moreover, to fail to witness for Christ will result in having his light taken away. May this be a warning to everyone!

2. Kinship with Jesus Christ (vv. 19-21). Jesus teaches here that there is a relationship to Him which is closer than the tie of blood. Only those who receive the message of God's Word and render glad obedience to it can claim relationship with Christ.

III. The Great Missionary Doing Wonders (vv. 22-39).

1. Calming the Storm (vv. 22-25). (1) Jesus asleep (v. 23). While the disciples were sailing the ship, the Master fell asleep. (2) The frightened disciples (vv. 23, 24). The storm was an unusual one. These sturdy men were used to the storms, which were common to that sea, but as their ships were filled with water they awoke Jesus with their cry of peril. (3) Jesus rebuked the wind and water (v. 24). At His word there was a great calm. (4) Jesus rebuked the disciples (v. 25). After rebuking the raging elements, He turned to the disciples. He did not rebuke them for wak-

"And the greatest of these is love."

That wonderful love chapter, as rendered in the American Standard Bible, gives you a clearer insight, does it not, than does any former version? The greatest thing in the world—love—surely means more to you than just "charity." And yet this is only one of the thousands of passages that take on a richer meaning, a deeper significance as more accurately rendered in the

For your study or your devotions no other version speaks with such accuracy, authority or beauty of language. No home or institution, no Sabbath School or Church is completely equipped without a copy of Nelson's American Standard Bible.

The American Standard Bible text has been adopted by all leading Colleges, Theological Seminaries, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and Bible Schools throughout the United States.

The American Standard Bible text is used by over 13,000,000 scholars from which to study the International, graded or other Bible lessons.

Charles Gallaudet Trumbull, Editor of the Sunday School Times, says: "The American Standard Revision of the Bible, has for many, even in England as well as in America, replaced the earlier revision. In view of its clear revealing of the meaning of the text, the more thoughtful Bible student of today does not feel really safe in studying a Bible passage unless he works with the American Standard in hand. It has been the accepted standard for the columns of The Sunday School Times since its first appearance in 1901."

2. Casting Out Demons (vv. 26-39). Demon-possession was in that day, and is today, an awful reality. The characteristics are so similar to cases of insanity that usually we fail to discern a difference. Many are called insane who are really demon-possessed. (1) Jesus met by the demoniac (vv. 26-29). This poor man's suffering and nakedness were awful. Sin imposes upon its victims anguish and shame. He was helpless under the demon's power. His cry of anguish shows his consciousness of torment. There is no doubt in the minds of demons as to the reality of a place of torment. The Devil blinds men's minds as to it. (2) Jesus' question (v. 30). The purpose of this question doubtless was to bring the real man to consciousness to enable him to distinguish between the demon and himself. The answer shows that the man thought his case hopeless. He said that many demons were entered into him. If he had known just who was speaking to him he would have known that deliverance from even so many was possible. The Devil delights in getting men to believe their case is hopeless.

3. The demons' request (vv. 31, 32). They asked permission to enter into a herd of swine. It seems that the demons have a dislike for disembodiment. In the presence of Jesus the demons quaver and beg permission to act. The Devil cannot act without divine permission. (4) The request granted (vv. 32,33). Just why this was done we do not know. Since Jesus did it we must believe that it was wise. (5) The effect upon the people (vv. 34-37). (a) The keepers of the swine went and made it known in the city and country. (b) The people made investigation. They saw the man clothed and in his right mind, and heard the testimony of those who had seen what was done. (c) Besought Jesus to depart from them. How sad in the face of the mighty works of Jesus that men will not open their hearts unto Him! (6) Request of the man whom He healed (vv. 38, 39). He desired to be with Jesus. This was natural and right, but his responsibility was to go home and show them what great things God had done for him. He went his way and published throughout the city what great things Jesus had done unto him.

Jesus Sending out Missionaries

Luke 10:1-24

Golden Text: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye, therefore the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into his harvest."—Luke 10:2.

I. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).

1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). Only those should go forth who are appointed by the Lord.

2. Sent forth Two by Two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel and support each other. This is a good policy today. These seventy were to be pioneer missionaries.

3. Reason for Their Appointment (v. 2). The harvest was great, but the laborers were few. Missionaries should have an intense realization of the enormous task set before them. The task before the Christian church after more than 1900 years is still great. Not only the workers who go forth, but the church itself should have this vision.

4. Pray the Lord to Send Forth Laborers (v. 2). The realization of the prodigious task before us will cause us to pray to the Lord to send forth more laborers. The church will never have the necessary number of missionaries until she realizes her obligation before God and earnestly prays Him to send forth laborers.

II. Instructions Given (vv. 3-16).

1. He Reveals the Dangers Confronting Them (v. 3). They were thrust forth by the Lord to proclaim His name, though by so doing they would expose themselves to deadly peril, even as lambs surrounded by hungry wolves. It matters not what the dangers are if the Lord sends forth.

2. Free from All Encumbrance (v. 4). The mission was urgent, so all that would in any way hinder the speedy execution of the task was to be left behind.

3. Distraction of Social Intercourse to be Omitted (v. 4). Eastern salutations were long-drawn affairs. To go into such formalities would greatly delay Christ's messengers. This does not mean that Christ's ministers should not be courteous.

4. Behavior in the Homes where Received (vv. 5-9). (1) Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessedness in preaching the gospel. Even when the message is rejected the effort is not wasted, but comes back to the one who has made the effort. All efforts to bless others bless ourselves. (2) Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than what is commonly provided. However, that which is given should be gratefully received, for the laborer is worthy of his hire. (3) Healed the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

5. The Awful Fate of Those who Reject Christ's Message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. The thought of those who would reject Him through rejection of His messengers reminds Jesus of those cities which had already rejected Him. The measure of one's judgment is determined by the measure of his privileges. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ and reject the Heavenly Father who sent Him. Where they were not received they were to turn away shaking the very dust from their feet, showing that they would bring away not one thing belonging to the city.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their Report (v. 17). They were highly elated. They seemed to be agreeably surprised. They not only found that they could heal the sick, but cast out demons also. They seemed to be filled with self-satisfaction. It is easy, even in Christian service, to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' Answer (vv. 18-24). (1) He told them that it was no surprise to Him (vv. 18, 19). With prophetic eye He saw their success as indicating that time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of His mighty triumph over Satan He assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. Nothing could harm them. Nothing could prosper which opposed them. Indeed, nothing can harm the servant who goes about his Master's business. (2) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. That above all which should provoke gratitude is the fact that God has chosen in Christ and saved us, inscribing our names in heaven. (3) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The consciousness that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto Him, and that only as men received Him could they know the Father, caused Him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (4) Congratulates the disciples (vv. 23, 24). He assured them that they were sharing privileges which had been denied to many of the prophets and kings. To share in the opportunity of making known Jesus Christ is greater than being king.

"What is that in thine hand?"—Exodus 4:2.

God has appeared to Moses at the burning bush to call him to undertake a difficult mission to Pharaoh. But Moses, thoroughy cured of his self-confidence of forty years ago by the humbling discipline of the desert, shrinks back and begs to be excused. And so God seeks some means to show Moses His mighty power and thereby encourage His servant. But note the means God chooses—not anything apart from Moses, but something which Moses has. "What is that in thine hand?" He asks. It is a rod which Moses holds, a thing of no intrinsic value, a mere trifle; but God asks Moses to yield that worthless rod to Him, and when Moses does so God makes it the medium of displaying His mighty power. Moses' rod surrendered becomes "the rod of God" (v. 20), a miracle-working instrument, a mighty talisman of victory.

What lesson lies here for us? You say the lesson that God is necessary, for Moses can do nothing without God. Quite so. This is one lesson, and a very obvious one. But there is another lesson, not perhaps so obvious but equally important, namely, that Moses is also necessary, for God will do nothing without Moses.

Listen to the divine word: "I am come down to deliver them . . . . . come thou therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh" (3:8-10). It is to be God's deliverance, but wrought through Moses.

When William Carey voiced his plea for missionary effort in a ministerial meeting more than a century ago, the venerable moderator silenced him by crying: "Young man, sit down. When God pleases to convert the heathen, He will do it without your aid or mine." But the moderator was wrong. God does not work that way. He has made man indispensable to His working. He has "chosen the weak things." He needs you, and He is saying just now to you, "What is that in thine hand?" Is it a life, little and ordinary? Is it some latent talent, undeveloped? Is it a coin, small and insignificant? Whatever it is, it matters not; if only you yield it to Him in utter surrender, He will take it, as He took Moses' rod, and charge it with His mighty power, and use it to lead afflicted souls out of the bondage of sin into joyous liberty in Christ the Saviour.

The Truth Tersely Stated

"Christ alone can save the world,
But Christ can't save the world alone."

Renewed Massacres in Asia Minor

The victory of the Turkish Nationalists over the Greeks in Asia Minor has been attended by fresh massacres of the most horrible kind. Eye-witnesses of the destruction of Smyrna by fire and sword speak of the scenes as indescribable. Many thousands were fiendishly murdered, a large percentage of them being women and children. There is all too good reason to fear that the cruel Turks, flushed with victory, will continue to indulge their fury and attempt to wipe out the remaining Christian population within the conquered area.

The Bible Lands Gospel Mission has issued an earnest appeal for prayer for these imperiled Christians and for God's restraining hand upon their relentless enemies. Mr. Vartan Atchinak, the head of this mission, who is just now in Chicago, sees the need and opportunity of rescuing many orphaned children of the slain Christians and caring for them in their school in Mt. Lebanon, Syria. He asks prayer for the Lord's guidance and provision in this matter. His present address is 2136 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Spiritual Famine Also

The bearing of the famine situation in eastern Europe upon spiritual interests is a vital one. Mr. Palmer writes that the relief work being carried on is affording a glorious opportunity of giving the gospel to the people under conditions which make for its greatest effectiveness. The Government officials have granted the privilege of shipping in and distributing Scriptures and hymn books, for which there is a great need and call.

A real spiritual hunger is in evidence among the people of eastern Europe. An earnest appeal comes from Czechoslovakia, where there has set in such a sweeping movement away from the corrupt and formal Roman Church toward Protestantism. It is pointed out that these seceders from Rome are not necessarily converts, but only inquirers. But they present a rare opportunity for a great spiritual harvest which, however, must be seized or it will recede, perhaps never to return.

There is urgent need for workers of undoubted spiritual experience and power, to labor as evangelists, personal workers and Bible teachers. And there is a similar need in Finland, Roumania and other parts. "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore."

Freedom for 50,000 Slave Girls

British territory would seem the last place in which to look for slaves. Yet in Hongkong, a British Crown Colony for eighty years, a system of child slavery has been allowed to go unchecked and practically unchallenged until within the past year. Little Chinese girls were sold and bought for domestic service and evil purposes under the camouflage of "adoption," although it was an open secret that they were owned and treated as slaves.

All this was winked at by the British authorities as being Chinese custom, in spite of the fact that the Republic of China itself had forbidden the practice, and an anti-slavery society, consisting of educated Chinese gentlemen in Hongkong, had addressed an appeal for its prohibition in the Colony.

The public exposure of this evil came about through the wife of a distinguished British naval officer who had been stationed in Hongkong. Her agitation was so resented by the authorities that her husband was compelled to resign from the service. Returning to England they made the matter known, and public feeling was so stirred that the British Home Government was forced to take it up. The result is that the Hongkong authorities have been instructed to put an end to this shameful practice within a brief limit of time. It is estimated that 50,000 slave girls are affected.

Those Starving Millions in Eastern Europe

Reference was made in the August issue of the MONTHLY to the visit of Rev. O. R. Palmer, Mr. H. L. Hellyer and two other brethren, to Russia as a committee to investigate famine conditions there and in adjacent countries, with a view to more effective relief efforts by Christian agencies in America.

Letters written by Mr. Palmer from stage to stage of their tour, as well as reports from the missionaries laboring in those parts, have revealed more of the terrible conditions prevailing. The descriptions given by these reliable eye-witnesses are truly heart-rending. Straw from the roofs, dogs, cats, crows and dead cattle were being used as food, and even cannibalism was being resorted to in desperation. The people were lying like skeletons awaiting death, with no relief in sight. In the Province of Ukrainia alone 6,000,000 are declared to be starving, none of whom can possibly survive till spring unless help reaches them very soon. Raging epidemics of typhus and cholera are adding to the horrors of famine. Among the sufferers are many Christians, there being in Ukrainia 5,000 congregations of believers of simple apostolic faith and practice.

To meet this appalling situation two well known missionary organizations, The Russian Evangelization Society, of New York, and The Christian Testimony to Jews, of Philadelphia, have united for relief work under the name of the American Christian Relief Mission. Brief Missionary Items

Rev. A. H. Birkel, '12, of the American Presbyterian Mission at Chenchow, Hunan, China, tells how the first thousand mark in the number of converts on that station has recently been passed. It has taken twenty years to reach that mark, but when the favorable conditions of today are contrasted with the unfavorable conditions of those early days, so that 200 of these 1,000 converts were brought in during the last year, the prospect is bright for the winning of the second thousand within a very short time. To this end Mr. Birkel requests the supporting prayers of many at home.

Eldon J. Carter, '11, writes a most interesting account of a journey taken by him and Mr. Berner, '21, from Brussels in Belgium to Digne in France. They traveled most of this long distance on foot, carrying packs of Gospels and tracts for distribution. They recount many impressive experiences and providential features. They had good opportunity for testimony everywhere and found very many open minds and hearts for the gospel. Mr. Carter is now located at Digne, the center of the earnest evangelical work of Mr. and Mrs. Henri Contesse, and Mr. Berner is doing gospel work in Germany.

Mrs. Rowena Becker, '20, writes from Monga, Congo Belge, Africa: "Am very happy alone in my work here. The nearest missionaries are fifteen days on one side and twelve on the other. God is wonderfully keeping me and blessing His Word to the salvation of souls. A three weeks' evangelizing trip covering one hundred miles was recently completed. Many responded to the gospel. . . . . Excuse this hasty scrawl, but with preaching, teaching, doctoring, nursing, mothering, clearing the jungle, building mud houses, planting garden, and a dozen other things, one pair of hands is mighty busy, as must needs be in such pioneer work."

J. P. Barkman, '11, writes from his Congo Inland Mission station, West Central Africa: "We started the new year in a very interesting way. Quite a number of young people here were ready for baptism. So we spent the last week of the old year in examining them, and on New Year's morning we baptized twenty-five in the Kasai River. In the afternoon they were received into church fellowship, along with two others who had been set aside some time before but were now restored. And then we closed a happy day in partaking together of the Lord's Supper. Not a few more young people have accepted Christ, and we expect to hold another baptism soon. The Spirit of God is working mightily in this field."

Rev. S. D. Lommasson, '10, who with his wife is laboring in an isolated field among the Subano pagan tribe in the southern Philippines, in a letter dated July 19 writes: "Two weeks ago we baptized thirteen. Six men will be ready at next communion service. Thus far we have baptized twenty-seven this year, and feel sure there will be many more before the year ends. Most of the first converts have left us for other places, but all are standing true. Piay, our very first convert, is now our evangelist giving his whole time to the work. He is at present organizing seven Sunday-schools, and is happy and earnest in his work." This is cheering news, for Mr. and Mrs. Lommasson have fought a long, hard fight under most trying conditions in a new field among the degraded people.

"OFFER UNTO GOD THANKSGIVING"

Psalm 50:14

I. What is Thanksgiving?
   Thanksgiving is a hearty and cheerful acknowledgment of gratitude to God for His mercies and favors, spiritual, temporal or eternal, bestowed on ourselves or on others.

II. Who May Offer Thanks?
   1. Those who have responded to the drawing power of Christ. John 12:32; Song of Sol. 1:4.
   2. Those who show a due appreciation of the forgiveness of sin. Luke 1:41-50; Acts 13: 38, 39.
   3. Those who have accepted the challenge of Christ. John 21:15-17.
   4. Those who voluntarily offer thanks. Lev. 22:29.
      Such an experience is due
      (1) To the enjoyment of unlimited grace. Eph. 6:24.
      (2) To the unspeakable joy of a living faith. 1 Pet. 1:8.
      (3) To the settled residence of Christ in the heart. Eph. 3:17.

III. How God Estimates Such Offering of Thanks.
   "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me."

MESSENGER'S PLANS
MAKE MONEY

CHURCHES
Members of This Church
Made $51.00
In Spare Time
Anna Holkeboer, 9th St. Chr'n. Ref. Church, Holland, Mich. says—"We decided to try your plan in order to raise money for missions. The 300 Calendars were distributed among 20 members and sold in their spare time in 10 days. We recommend the sale of your Calendars to any class or society".

Any Church organization can easily and quickly make $50 to $500 selling 1923 Scripture Text Calendars. We tell you how—our tried and proven plans are making money for churches every year. Richmond, Va., Church writes—"Calendars all sold. Wish we had ordered more". Detroit, Mich., Church, says—"In November we had 200; should have ordered 250 as we had so many extra calls". Certainly your Church can do what hundreds of others are doing. Now is the time to start.

Messenger's Scripture Text Calendars

Over 3,500,000 of these Wonderful Scripture Text Calendars were sold for 1922. Our 1923 Calendar is beyond doubt, the greatest work of its kind ever produced. The beautiful color work, the exact reproduction of famous paintings, make it greatly treasured in every home. By referring to the Scripture Text Calendar you can immediately tell what the Sunday School Lesson will be for any Sunday in 1923. Also a 200-Year Calendar by the use of which you can locate the day of the week on which you were born, or any important event in history and the Easter Sundays between 1860 and 1955. A Table shows the standard time around the world.

Scripture Text Calendar Plan

How It Works

Estimate the number of homes in your community that should have Scripture Text Calendars. Then send for the number you estimate your Church Organization can sell. Many churches arrange for a Special Calendar Week during which a big drive is made. Everyone helps. Twelve members can easily sell 250. Twenty-five members should quickly sell 500. Don't delay accepting this opportunity of raising needed funds and now is the time to act. Set your goal now and send order for all you can use.

THE CLASSIFICATION OF CHURCHGOERS

To which do you belong?

First, the Social Class—These attend sociables, but are too busy for worship.

Second, the Spasmodic Class—These attend when they feel like it, but they do not control their feelings.

Third, the Periodic Class—These attend Christmas, Easter and festival days, but are afraid of the habit.

Fourth, the Occasional Class—These attend when "nothing prevents," but are easily satisfied with an excuse.

Fifth, the Faithful and Loyal Class—These attend, well, all know them, may they increase, God bless them.

THE OLD-FASHIONED PREACHER

By P. H. Kadey

How dear to my heart is the church of my childhood,
Where I took my first step in the straight, narrow way;
The little white church "near the thick-tangled wildwood,"
Where mother and I went on each Sabbath day.
There was no large pipe organ, no high-paid soprano,
The singing was scarcely the best ever heard,
But the man in the pulpit, divinely commissioned,
Poured out his whole soul in proclaiming the Word.
An old-fashioned preacher, a real Bible-preacher,
A Spirit-filled preacher who honored the Word.

How thrilling it was just to see him in action,
A soldier of Christ with a keen trusty "sword,"
Who wielded his weapon with zeal and devotion,
And backed up his thrusts with a "Thus saith the Lord!"
No uncertain sound ever came from his trumpet,
His hearers were moved—yea, convicted and stirred,
And bowing the knee in wet-eyed confession,
Accepted the truth as revealed in that Word,
Through this old-fashioned preacher, this full-gospel preacher,
This Spirit-taught preacher who honored the Word.

Sometimes as I list to the ramifications
Of science (?), that twist my poor brain out of shape,
Or hear the consensus of scholarship's findings
Regarding our old friend the anthropoid ape;
As my mind reels, confused with drives, plans and programs,
And world-federations toward which we are spurred,
Sociology, politics, internationalism—
I sigh for the sermons my infancy heard
From that old-fashioned preacher, that soul-stirring preacher,
That heart-warming preacher who honored God's Word.

The Actual Death of Christ—"Christ died."
Necessary Death of Christ—"Christ died for sins."
Substitutionary Death of Christ—"Christ died for our sins."
Prophetic Death of Christ—"Christ died according to the Scripture."
Victorious Death of Christ—"Raised the third day.'

CHRIST'S CHOSEN ONES

"And they came and held him by the feet, and worshiped him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid; go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me (Matt. 28:9, 10).

The Approach:

1. He Drew Their Worship—
   "They held him by the feet, and worshiped him."
2. He Dismissed Their Worry—
   "Jesus said unto them, 'Be not afraid.'"
3. He Directed Their Work—
   "Go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee."

The Analysis:

1. They were sent by a Great Authority.
   By Jesus Himself.
2. They were sent with a Glad Announcement.
   "There shall they see me."
3. They were sent to a Good Assembly.
   "My brethren."

While we are sent to preach the gospel to all men,—to be witnesses to the whole world, it is nevertheless true that we are in a very real sense sent to the chosen ones; to men who are not yet numbered among the saved, but who, in the foreknowledge of God, are destined to be saved.

1. They have been Predestinated.
2. They are now Predisposed.
3. They will yet be Perfected.

But not arbitrarily—not in a fatalistic sense, or apart from human agencies, but

The Application:

1. God will persuade us to pray for them.
   (Our supplications will be respected).
2. God will prepare us to preach to them.
   (Our services will be required).
3. God will permit us to praise in their behalf.
   (Our satisfaction will be realized).

(1) They are now the Hidden Ones.
(2) We are now the Helping Ones.
(3) Both will be the Happy Ones.

Praying for, Preaching to, and Praising with God's chosen ones, we are with a good assembly, to be manifested in due time.
—Adam Murrman.

GRACE

The believer is not merely a pardoned criminal, he is a child and son of God, and that by a new birth which is as actual in the sphere of the spiritual as his natural birth was in the sphere of the physical. He is a son of God, not by some far-off fact of creation, but by the immediate and personal fact of a divine begetting. He no longer traces his descent from God through Adam, but is, as Adam was, a son of God with no intervening ancestor.

This, the believer is told, brings him into the wonderful privileges of access to the Father, and of fellowship with Him. Christ is not ashamed to call him "brother," he is raised to joint heirship with Christ in all things, and is to share the power and glory of Christ in the coming kingdom.

Grace confers upon the believer the great offices of priest and king. As priest he is set free from the ancient formalism in the worship of God "entering into the holiest by the blood of Jesus," and offering, without regard to time or place, "spiritual sacrifices acceptable unto God through Jesus Christ." His worship, freed from ceremonialism, is a son's adoration of a Father who is infinite in holiness and benevolence and power, but who is none the less a Father because He is God.—C. I. Scofield.

FAITH AND ACCEPTANCE

Two friends were walking home from an evening service.

"Frank," said one, "Can you explain to me what faith is? We are always told to believe on the Lord Jesus and I believe, just as you and others do. But somehow my faith doesn't seem to make me happy."

"You believe that Jesus died on Calvary for your sins and offers you His righteousness?"

"Yes, the Bible teaches that."

"Then why not accept it?"

"Accept it? How? That is exactly my trouble."

"You have received some land, a gift from your uncle."

"Yes, a good farm."

"Did you accept it?" inquired Frank.

"Accept it? I should say I did."

"And the farm is now your property?"

"Surely."

"You are so sure that you would be willing to pay taxes on the land and build a house upon it?"

"I would."

"Would you be sure if you had never seen the land, nor met your uncle?"

"His written word would be sufficient."

"That is faith. 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.'

"That is the written word of God, which guarantees your salvation. It is written and sealed with the blood of Jesus Christ. Can't you believe the Word of God, as well as you do the word of your uncle?"

"I see now, that all I need to do is to believe God's Word as fully as I believe the word of my uncle. How simple it really is. Thank you for opening my eyes."—Ex.

Do not forget to pray.

CUTTING LOOSE FROM SIN

Seamen tell us that, in capturing the whale, the boat's lines sometimes become entangled with the flukes of the fish, so as to join the two together. When this happens, all depends on instant action. These lines must be severed, or the whole boat's crew will be drawn to the bottom by the prowess of the monster. But one thought possesses all, and that is to find and cut every rope that ties them to their enemy. So it is that the lines of carnal desire bind us to the world. Sometimes there is but one; sometimes there are many. Sometimes they are plainly in view; sometimes they are hidden from any but the closest search. But few or many, visible or hidden, they must be all searched out and severed, or the soul is dragged downward to death.—Kashgar.

The requests we make to God are not unheard because we do not receive the answer when we expect them. "If the ships of prayer do not come home speedily," says a writer, "it is because they are more heavily freighted with blessing."

TIME FOR THE "QUIET HOUR"

It is never the supremely busy men who have got no time. So compact and systematic is the regulation of their day that whenever you make a demand upon them they seem to be able to find additional corners to offer for unselfish service. I find that when I have comparatively little to pack into my portmanteau it appears to be full. There is many a man who says he has no time, who proclaims his day to be full, but the fulness is the result of careless packing. I confess that the men to whom I most hopefully look for additional service are the busiest men. They are always willing to squeeze another item into their bulging portmanteau. If we cannot find a corner of the day for meditation in the school of Christ then we must take something out and make room for it. —J. H. Jowett.

Fenelon says that it is "better to be a good living book than to love good books." Such a man can never, like a book, be put upon a shelf, for he is himself a whole circulating library .

SUGGESTIONS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.
Evangelists and other Christian workers reporting items or contributing any matter for this department will please arrange to have copy reach the magazine not later than the 2d of the month preceding date of issue.
"The Evangelistic Field" department is intended for news in concise reports of revival meetings, soul-winning campaigns and a record of evangelistic work in general. We do not invite statements eulogizing the leaders or participants in this line of work nor can we promise to print them.—Editors.

Dr. H. P. Dunlop and wife have opened their season's work at Azuza, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clare Harding report changes in some of their engagements giving them some open time. Their address is Mexico, Mo.

Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Jack Linn report blessings in their recent meetings in North Dakota, Iowa, Ohio and Wisconsin.

T. D. Franklin reports closing a successful meeting at Coster, Iowa, on September 10. One special feature of interest was the unusually large number of young men among the converts. He next went to Salem, Iowa.

The Prestons write: "We had a great time at Epworth and Lena camp meetings for Dr. Crawford of the Rock River Conference (M. E.), and we were unanimously invited back for next year to take charge of the music."

A very successful meeting closed September 17 at Avena, Ill., with the Methodist church, and the altar was filled with young people coming to Christ. The pastor, Rev. J. K. Haase, was assisted by Evangelist Geisenheimer.

Clarence M. Keen reports helping in a campaign at Hampton, Va., October 1-15. Thence he was to go to Temple Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., and in November to Lebanon, Pa. He asks for prayer in his ministry and testimony to the Word of God in these days.

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie, singing evangelists, report having been in some fine meetings in Missouri, assisting pastors. In a meeting closing September 17, thirty-five were added to the church by conversion and confession. Their next meeting was at Stanberry, Mo.

Dr. Arthur J. Smith, who for fifteen years has been general secretary of the Evangelistic Committee of New York City, resigned October 1 to enter the evangelistic field. Dr. Smith had a wide reputation as an evangelist prior to becoming general secretary of the New York City movement and was at one time associated with Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray G. Swartzbaugh, who were associated with Dr. John B. Andrews during the summer, report the closing of a series of successful meetings in the South. At a meeting at Hornersville, Mo., the power of God was manifested in a remarkable way, resulting in a large number of conversions. At the time of writing they were preparing to assist Dr. R. A. Torrey in his October campaign in Kansas City, Mo.

Rev. Robert L. Selle, Winfield, Kan., evangelist of the Oklahoma Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, reports a good year in the evangelistic field. He has held meetings in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. He says: "In every meeting held this year the Holy Spirit has been present in a marked way. Not a dry service. Deep conviction and happy conversions. Many mature men have been reached."

The Vom Bruch Evangelistic Party report having opened their season's work in Rochester, N. Y. This was their fourth campaign in that city. They were scheduled to go to the Park Street Evangelical Church, Harrisburg, Pa., for the next campaign in October. Mr. Vom Bruch is assisted this year by Mr. Fred Mills, song leader, and James F. Harrison, pianist and Bible teacher. Walter E. Vom Bruch, brother of the evangelist, announces a full year's work ahead with R. W. Fenton.

We have received a sworn affidavit from Mrs. B. Sterling of the State of California, County of Los Angeles, to the effect that the car in which Evangelist Paul B. Taylor, Lawrence R. Taylor and Edna L. Taylor were riding when a small amount of liquor was seized in it at Tia Juana, Calif., was a car owned by herself and that her guests were without any knowledge of the presence of the liquor. We mention this at the request of the Taylors, who have informed us of a newspaper report charging them with the violation of the Volstead Act.

Rev. Wm. Cross, who is conducting the Mississippi River Gospel Mission on a house boat, thanks the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY for supplying a number of copies for distribution amongst the people along the river. During September they were at Brickeys, Mo., where they were holding services in a dance hall, the attendance averaging about forty. There are two stone quarries and a lime kiln in the town, but no services or Sunday-school for the people or children. Mr. Cross desires prayer in behalf of the Mississippi River Gospel Mission.

Book Notices

Any book favorably mentioned below may be secured from the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 822 North La Salle Street, Chicago

The Colportage Association announces that they have in stock "God's Prophetic Program," by Mr. J. Charleton Steen, who was for a long period the representative of the Moody Bible Institute in England. The book contains colored diagrams of the "Wild Beasts of Daniel's Vision" and "Daniel's Seventy Weeks."

God's Prophetic Programme, by J. Charleton Steen.

A clear and popular presentation covering the most important aspects of God's program as it relates to the future. In our judgment the work is scriptural. It also deals discriminatingly with certain disputed interpretations of prophecy. The various chapters are reprints of articles which first appeared in "The Witness."

132 pages. 7 x 4 ¾ inches. Pickering and Inglis, London. 75 cents. G. S.

Lord, Teach Us to Pray, Rev. Alexander Whyte, D. D., LL. D.

Selected discourses from this great preacher and Bible expositor. The second section of the book deals with outstanding Bible types of prayer which naturally leads to certain aspects of the way of prayer, such as costliness, reverence, the pleading note, concentration, the secret burden, the endless quest. These sermons glow with intensity.

292 pages. 7¼ x 4¾ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $2.00. G. S.

Every Member Evangelism, by Rev. J. E. Conant, D. D.

A book not only for pastors but for laymen. Part I deals with "The Divine Program"; Part II with "The Divine Purpose"; Part III with "The Divine Power." Unless the church of today thoroughly grasps these great truths and acts upon them, her work will remain undone. Dr. Conant has performed a much needed service in so clearly and strongly setting forth God's method of evangelizing the world.

202 pages. 7 ½ x 5 inches. The Sunday School Times Company, Philadelphia. $1.50. G. S.

Next-Door Neighbors, Thumbnail Sketches from Home Missions, by Margaret T. Applegarth.

Twenty-six short fascinating tales of typical representatives of the various foreign classes in America—Jews, Poles, Bohemians Orientals, Latin-Americans, etc.—told ingeniously by a well-known adept at story-telling for children. Each chapter points out a moral or spiritual lesson, and the book cannot fail to sow seeds of missionary conviction in the hearts of its youthful readers, and older ones as well.

160 pages. 7½ x 5 inches. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago and New York, $1.25. R. H. G.

The Life of Robert Laws of Livingstonia, by W. P. Livingstone.

Without doubt one of the greatest missionary biographies ever written. Doctor Laws and his colleagues were the direct successors of David Livingstone in the work of opening up Central Africa, and Livingstonia, the center established by them on Lake Nyasa, was the forerunner of several other mission centers and undertakings which have followed under various auspices. Seldom if ever did men face a sterner task, or suffer greater hardships and surmount graver difficulties in the path of its accomplishment. The story is another example of facts which are stranger than fiction. The fact that Doctor Laws, the central figure in this remarkable missionary drama, still lives is an added feature of interest. There are sixty-nine illustrations, plans and maps.

385 pages. 8½ x 7½ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $3.00 net. R. H. G.

In Many Pulpits with Dr. C. I. Scofield.

This is a book which ought to be hailed with delight by many thousands of Christians all over the English-speaking world. It contains twenty-seven characteristic sermons preached by the distinguished editor of the Scofield Reference Bible in representative pulpits of America, Canada and Europe. This ministry took place for the most part during the period of his editorial labors on the famous reference Bible bearing his name. This book will be prized by the many thousands of Christian laymen who have come to know and love the Holy Scriptures in a new way through the author's reference Bible, and especially by ministers who desire to unfold the vital truths of God's Word to the people. There has not appeared a finer example of biblical preaching in these modern times than Dr. Scofield furnishes in these sermons.

317 pages. 8½ x 6 inches. Oxford University Press, 35 West 22d St., New York. $2.50.

On the Trail of the Peacemakers, by Fred B. Smith.

This book contains impressions of this well known Y. M. C. A. secretary as he journeyed around the world on a mission of friendship to the nations. The reading of this book produces mixed emotions. The author sets down certain findings, and in some instances confesses that he may be mistaken, admitting that others may find just the reverse. Withal it is interesting reading until he comes to continental Europe and finding things topsy-turvy and the nations in a state of nervous prostration, he charges the guilt of all this to America. Just as good Americans and Christians as Mr. Smith would frankly take issue with him.

The fallacy of his reasoning is astoundingly shown when he points out the bungling and unrighteousness of the Versailles Treaty, and at the same time condemns America for not accepting a mandate under it.

Wake up, Smith, just as good and wise men as you are do not see it that way! Then why bring in the Baptist squabble at Indianapolis? You seem to want a brotherhood on the basis of the Sermon on the Mount. If so, practice what you preach! That sermon says, "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

Why do you sit in judgment upon Senator Lodge and others, and the conservative wing of the Baptists, if you want a brotherhood on the basis of the Sermon on the Mount?

The Christian Workers Commentary

On the Old and New Testaments

By

REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.

What The Life of Faith (London) says of it:

"A new book by the Dean of The Moody Bible Institute is something of an event in these distressing days. * * * * *

"His book is not only a tribute to a singularly clear and penetrating mind, but also to the inexhaustible power of Holy Scripture. * * * *

"It is as comprehensive as it is sound and reliable. It seems incredible, but every chapter of the Bible receives attention; and at the end, lest the reader should let slip the things he has learned, there is appended a series of questions on the portion covered.

"With too many commentaries we can not see the way for the trees, but in this we can see a way through, which is often denied us elsewhere. We warmly commend it."

THE FRONTISPIECE is a very worthy reproduction of the famous painting by Irlam Briggs entitled,

IN THE WORKSHOP AT NAZARETH

In setting forth Jesus in His boyhood life in the carpenter shop at Nazareth, the artist has endeavored to picture forth something of the altogether loveliness of Christ our Saviour.

Inspired by love and with divine humility, He, the Son of God, with all the host of angels subject unto Him, came to earth as a child. He entered into the joys and sorrows of the everyday life of the average child, fellowshipped with the common people in their struggles and trials, chose the humble home of a carpenter and his occupation rather than a palace with the rich.

He was "tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin," in order that he might offer Himself unto God a holy and acceptable sacrifice for the sin of the world.

The Frontispiece is well worth framing and may be readily detached without spoiling the Calendar.

THE TWELVE ART REPRODUCTIONS

have been selected for their appropriateness in illustrating some phase of Bible Teaching or Christian work.

A NEW INSTRUCTOR IN MUSIC

With the commencement of the Fall Term, Miss Vera F. Richards entered the Educational Department as a special instructor in piano in order to lighten the schedules of some of the members of the Faculty.

Miss Richards studied for three years with Madame Rive-King at the Bush Conservatory, and three years at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. She also spent some time coaching with Arthur Friedheim, of the New York School of Music and Arts. She has had considerable experience in teaching as well, having spent three years at the Evansville College (Wis.) and two years at the Seattle Pacific College.

She has accepted a call to the Institute, among other reasons because of its spiritual atmosphere, which as an earnest Christian she deeply appreciates.

ANOTHER NEW FACULTY MEMBER

Rev. Clarence H. Benson has accepted the call of the Trustees of the Institute to become a member of the Faculty of its Educational Department.

Mr. Benson was born in Minneapolis, and represents the fourth generation of a line of Moravian ministers and missionaries which came from Bohemia in the settlement days of our national history. He united with the Westminister Presbyterian Church of Minneapolis at the early age of eight under the pastorate of Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., who later was his teacher in homiletics in Princeton Seminary.

His college training was received at Macalester College and the University of Minnesota, during which time he did reportorial and editorial work for the Twin City newspapers, and subsequently became manager of the Carver County Journal. Also during his college career he specialized in astronomy and mathematics, assisting in the observatory of the state university, and later taught mathematics in Macalester College.

After graduating from Princeton Seminary he occupied pastorates in the Reformed (Dutch) and Presbyterian churches, his last pastorate being that of Bethlehem Presbyterian Church, Buffalo, N. Y.

During this pastorate he served as chairman of a Presbyterial committee, which gave him supervision of the missionary and benevolent work of the churches, and brought him into contact with the Anglo-American Committee directing work among the English-speaking populations in foreign countries, He finally accepted their invitation to take charge of the Union Church at Kobe, Japan, from which city he has returned to take up work with the Institute. He is scheduled in the Bible Course, the Sunday-school Course and the recently inaugurated Pastor's Course.

RESOLUTION PASSED AT MENNONITE CONFERENCE

"Be It Resolved, That we recommend the following schools with the approval of the Educational Committee, for Bible training knowledge: The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Ill.; Fort Wayne Bible Training School, Fort Wayne, Ind., for college training; Bluffton College, Bluffton, O.; Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., for seminary work; Witmarsum Theological Seminary, Bluffton, O."

—Zion's Tidings, Sept. 1, 1922.

MR. PHILPOTT AT THE EVENING CLASSES OPENING

Rev. P. W. Philpott, pastor of Moody Church, delivered the address at the opening exercises of the Fall Term. Space is lacking to give more than a few brief extracts from his stimulating and instructive message. He said in part:

"I assure you I deem it a great privilege to face a company of men and women who are dedicating themselves to, and preparing for, the biggest business on earth. When we as Christians are pressing the claims of Christ upon our fellow-kind, we are making our largest possible contribution to the welfare of society.

"To destroy the faith of the young people of our day in the inspiration of this Book, seems to be the highest ambition of many who call themselves ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"I am reminded of the story Mr. Spurgeon used to tell of the two little boys—one a very bad little boy and the other a very good little boy. The bad boy went out to throw mud at the moon, and the good boy took a basin of water and went out to wash it off. 'But what do you suppose the good old moon was doing all the time that the little boys were throwing mud and splashing water,' asked Mr. Spurgeon. 'Why it was just shining all the time!'

"And so it is with the Word of God. Unaffected by all criticism and assaults, it is still with us, and we have no fear for its future, for 'till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, 'till all be fulfilled.'

"I say to you, young men and women, consecrate yourselves to the great work of preaching this Book. God honors the man that honors His Word.

"There is one passage of Scripture that Mr. Charles M. Alexander made famous in nearly all Christendom: 'Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth' (2 Tim. 2:15).

"I want you to observe that it does not say, Study to show thyself a workman approved, but 'Study to show thyself approved unto God.'' My spiritual state, the condition of my inner life, concerns Him more than the service I can render. So I must study, first of all, to show myself approved. Like Enoch, I must have the testimony that I please God.

"I like that word 'workman.' God is looking for men and women in this day, who will do things."

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

During November Mr. Harry D. Clarke will assist his former pastor, Rev. A. G. Flexer, at Trinity United Evangelical Church, Allentown, Pa.

In October Dr. J. E. Conant gave several lectures in the Institute, and also conducted a Bible conference at the Baptist church of Big Rapids, Mich., and of Spencerville, O. Early in November he assists the pastor of Calvary Moravian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., and from November 19 to December 8 will have charge of an evangelistic meeting at the Baptist church, Albion, Mich.

Rev. George E. Guille will participate in a Bible conference at Americus, Ga., November 7-12, and also at Quitman, Ga., November 19-24, following which he will return to the Washington and Compton Ave. Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, Mo., for a week.

During his recent engagement at Pineville, Ky., Judge Forester invited Mr. Guille to open court each morning with Bible study, which was so well received that the pastor of Memorial Presbyterian Church, Rev. C. L. Nisbet, has asked for his return to Pineville next fall while circuit court is in session.

Miss Elinor Stafford Millar was greatly blessed in her meetings with the Y. W. C. A. at Johnstown, Pa.

Dr. Henry Ostrom will be one of the speakers in a conference on Jewish work in the Wealthy Street Baptist Church, Grand Rapids, Mich., October 25-29. The following week he will commence a series of evangelistic meetings in the Second Presbyterian Church, Petersburg, Va.

Rev. Gordon Watt, whose article on "The Print of the Nails in Us" appears elsewhere in this issue, expects to return to America for an oral ministry next February to remain until September 1. His engagements during his stay here are being booked by the Extension Department.

The Y. W. C. A. where Miss Virginia C. Williams was General Secretary until recently, writes: "Her ability as a Bible teacher in this community is unquestioned, and we are planning to have her with us whenever possible." True to this purpose the Austin (Tex.) Y. W. C. A. has already engaged her for a week of Bible teaching in February.

MRS. BOWMAN'S CLASSES

Mrs. Alvaretta W. Bowman, '06, is conducting fourteen Bible classes in the Northwest with a membership of more than 1,400. The cities touched are Seattle, Everett, Tacoma and Vancouver, Wash. At first the work was confined exclusively to women, but men are now admitted, and an organization has been formed. Rev. George Randal, pastor, Rainer Beach Presbyterian Church, is chairman of the Executive Board, A. W. Hogue is secretary, and S. W. Henderson is treasurer.

and you will be delighted with the progress which will reward your faithful effort.

A great university educator, who writes of the Bible merely as literature, has testified that knowledge of the Bible without a college course is more valuable than a college course without the Bible.

"Let us boldly declare," says another, "that the Bible is the true university."

For men and women who are well trained in the knowledge of God's Word and able to impart it to others, there is endless opportunity for service, the fruit of which shall abide forever. Such workers are in great demand.

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS:

"The course enabled me to be a local preacher and Bible class teacher."

"The knowledge gained from the Synthetic Course was like opening the shutters on a darkened, secluded house and letting the light and sunshine of truth enter in."

"Your practical Christian Work Course has given me a longing to win souls, made me a better companion, a better mother, a better church member, a better Sunday School teacher."

"The Bible Doctrine Course was of inestimable value to me. It opened up to me a veritable gold mine of Scripture truth."

'The benefits I have received from the Synthetic Course are beyond estimate and above price."

"The Scofield Bible Course has been of greater value to me than any other training I have ever had, though I spent four years in college."

No matter what your occupation you can study the Bible by correspondence—a better method than oral teaching can possibly be.

Personal direction is given every student by the Correspondence Department. Time, place and amount of study are under your own control. At the Wyoming State Industrial School thirty men accepted Christ. A Free church was organized and dedicated at Casper following a month of meetings.

Marion Flint, '19, writes from Hotchkiss, Colo.: "I am thanking God for the training I received at the Institute. My biggest heartache has been the inability to meet the requests of many hungry people for religious services. The students of your Teacher Training classes cannot appreciate the value of that work until they face a situation like this."

J. H. Davies, '00, American Sunday-school Union missionary, spent the past summer working in northern Michigan. "One of the most important features of our work is visiting the homes, where we can pray, counsel with the people, give them tracts, and sometimes sing with them," he writes.

Arthur G. Peterson, '19, La Victoria, Venezuela, writes: "Again we wish to send in a word of thanks for the INSTITUTE MONTHLY. It certainly is a welcome guest at our mission home. The Lord has blessed us this past year with the salvation of many souls. The work among the Catholics is hard and at many times discouraging, but all power is with the Lord and we have Him."

Prof. Leander S. Keyser of the Hamma Divinity School, Springfield, O., thus speaks of the book, The Church, the Schools and Evolution, by Dr. Conant of the Institute Extension Department: "It is as closely knit an argument as I have ever seen on the subject of evolution. I hope and pray that it will have a wide circulation. If only the people who are obsessed with evolution would read it."

Florence L. Logan, '21, writes from Peitaiho, Chihli, China: "I have been through my first war. Pekin's walls took on new significance as a real means of protection. The gates were kept closed and the streets fairly bristled with guards carrying very business-like guns. Refuges were opened to care for 30,000 women and children if the worst came. Several nights we went to sleep with the booming of cannon not many miles away. It ended with miraculous suddenness; in answer to prayer not a few think."

Floyd T. Holland, '18, has completed his first year as pastor of The Church of the Open Door, Greensburg, Pa. This church is made up of Fundamentalists who withdrew from other congregations because of rationalistic tendencies. One of them writes: "I thank God that you sent our pastor to us. He has already been the means of sending out five young people to train for Christian service, a thing previously unheard of in this community. Three of us will be at the Institute this winter."

B. B. Sutcliffe, '04, formerly of the Extension staff of the Institute, now pastor of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Portland, Ore., is teacher of the Portland Union Bible Class which meets five days a week in his church. This work was started under the auspices of the Institute in April, 1921, and resulted in the call of Mr. Sutcliffe to the pastorate a year later. The total attendance the last four months was about 8,000, and represented more than twelve denominations and upwards of twenty-five churches. The Bible is the only text-book used. Many have been soundly converted.

A DANCE HALL BECOMES A RESCUE MISSION

The Pekin Cafe, 85-87 Broadway, Buffalo, N. Y., long used as a notorious cabaret and dance hall, now to be used as a rescue mission.

The City Rescue Mission of Buffalo N. Y., Mr. E. C. Clark, superintendent has recently secured a building that is well fitted for its work. This building has a remarkable history. It was known as the Pekin Cafe and was operated for years by Nate Fenton, well known to the sporting fraternity of the country. The place was notoriously bad and known for its cabaret and dance hall and was patronized very largely by crooks in high life.

Somewhat recently the building was raided several times, and just after a certain raid, while Fenton was in one of his depressed moods, he gave the mission an option on the plant. Within a few minutes of midnight of the day the option expired, Mr. Fenton was offered $1,000 in cash for the property. He begged the holder of the money not to show it fearing he would be robbed in his own place. However, the sale was negotiated and the building hereafter will be used by the mission in its great work.

Books of Compelling Interest

EDUCATION FOR SUCCESSFUL LIVING

By JAMES E. CLARKE, D. D.

Cloth, 152 pages, $1.00 postpaid; paper, 75 cents, postpaid

The writer . . . . opens up the thought that there is a culture to be obtained that is better than merely making a living. Above all he impresses the desirability of the religious element in education, without which an education is devoid of all its best life and intention. The book is worthy of attention from young people themselves, and from instructors and parents. The foundation truth is that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." —Herald and Presbyter.

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL PUBLICITY

By HERBERT H. SMITH

Cloth, 176 pages, $1.25, postpaid

There is no phase of church publicity that has not been touched upon, but in no case has thoroughness erred on the side of verboseness. Not only are church bulletins and papers given attention but chapters are devoted to oral announcements, posters, letters, the use of newspapers and the writing of advertisements. The mechanics of advertising are explained and the correct use of technical terms. The book is splendidly illustrated."—Continent.

THE BELLS OF THE BLUE PAGODA

By JEAN CARTER COCHRAN

Cloth, 282 pages, $1.75, postpaid

"I think this is the best story of life in China that has been put out thus far. A million copies of it should be read by the young people of America. It is true to life—to every phase of life you touch. Nothing is overdrawn. All the characters are true to what has happened in recent years; all the incidents are true to life." —Isaac Taylor Headland, author of "Chinese Mother Goose Rhymes," "Chinese Boy and Girl," "Court Life in Peking"; lecturer on China.

THE HOME GOD MEANT

By GEORGE N. LUCCOCK, D. D.

Cloth, 205 pages, $1.25, postpaid

"In this day and age of revolutionized home life, lack of family discipline, jazz marriage and easy divorce, it is truly refreshing to read the sound, sane, and safe words, of the author who himself, with his partner in life, has made the very kind of a home he so ably and attractively describes and who for this reason is the more entitled to be heard on the home. As for substance the book is unsurpassed, if indeed equalled, by any other on the same or similar themes."—The Christian Statesman.

OUR REASONABLE FAITH

By PARK HAYS MILLER

Cloth, 224 pages, $1.25, postpaid

"Mr. Miller has made a fine contribution to the literature necessary for this day in presenting the claims of the Christian religion to young people, and a pastor or teacher wishing to place in the hands of his young people a book to stimulate thought and secure appreciation could find no better means for it than by the use of this book."—*Rev. THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

This organization with headquarters in Washington, D. C., President Harding being president, will have its annual roll call within November 11 and Thanksgiving Day. This is the only appeal that the organization makes each year and is for the purpose of maintaining its membership at such point as will enable it to perform its duties which are placed on it by Congress. This organization is now especially effective in connection with the distressing calls for relief from Asia Minor, especially at Smyrna.

THE BAPTIST BIBLE UNION OF AMERICA

A call and manifesto signed by 123 Baptist ministers and 11 laymen, representing many states of the Union, has just been issued. The preamble of the call follows:

WHEREAS, There has arisen within the bounds of Baptist denominationalism an ecclesiasticism, dominated by Modernism, which has turned away from the integrity, finality and sole sufficiency of the Bible as the inspired Word of God and from the simplicity of apostolic evangelism—the message and method of our fathers, and

WHEREAS, Within the bounds of Baptist denominationalism this ecclesiasticism, dominated by Modernism, has forced the orthodox into an unholy and God-forbidden alliance with the heterodox, and

WHEREAS, There has arisen from every side, both from churches and individual members, a call loud and long for a new f llowship in Christ Jesus wherein those who hold to the integrity, finality and sole-sufficiency of the Bible as the Word of God, and who hold to the simplicities of apostolic evangelism, may meet in communion, apart from unholy collusions which gender strife.

Here follows an appeal for signatures to membership application.

Provision is made in the manifesto for the organization of the union, and its aims are thus presented:

1. To "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints," and the presentation of a united witness to the Bible as not only containing and conveying, but as being in itself the Word of God.

2. The maintenance of the evangelical faith, and especially of those essential and clearly revealed doctrines which, at the present time, are being assailed, questioned or ignored in certain circles.

3. To promote a deeper fellowship and a closer cooperation amongst Baptist churches and Baptist believers who hold a like precious faith, and who walk together in their conception of the mission of the church.

4. To oppose any federation of Baptist churches or believers upon any basis which involves the sacrifice of principle, or which discredits the Bible and dishonors the Lord Jesus Christ.

5. To promote such missionary, evangelistic and educational work as the Union may feel led to undertake or desire to encourage.

6. The maintenance of the right of each local Baptist church to manage its own affairs, under the sole authority and rule of the Lord Jesus Christ, and apart from any outside demands.

The doctrinal basis is that of evangelical Christians of all communions, but special attention is called to the divine inspiration, integrity, finality and sole sufficiency of the Bible as the Word of God; to the virgin birth; to the resurrection of the body, both of the just and unjust, and each in his own order; the premillennial coming of the Lord, and baptism of believers by immersion.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE

Many children lose their lives each year from tetanus or lock jaw caused by stepping on the points of nails thoughtlessly left protruding from boards which are thrown down and left where barefoot children or children with worn thin shoe soles can step on them.

It only takes a few moments to remove the nails from the boards.

Better be safe than sorry.

OMAHA BIBLE CONFERENCE

This conference was held October 20-26 in the Third Presbyterian Church of Omaha, Rev. W. H. Jordan, pastor, who also acted as president of the conference.

The speakers were practically all from Omaha, eastern Nebraska and western Iowa, indicating that a Bible conference of worth-while consideration can be held without importing foreign speakers.

Among the speakers were Rev. H. Ellis Lininger, a correspondence student of the Institute, who gave four addresses, and Rev. William L. Cain, a former Institute student, who delivered an address on the work of the Holy Spirit.

TOGETHERNESS

The essential thing in preparing for an effective canvass is organization. An illustration heard at a recent colored convocation will explain the point. A colored servant was driving with his master along a farm road and, grasping his whip, he said: "Marse Charlie, I can take dis whip and snap dat bee out o' dat flower and not hurt de flower." He did it. A little later he said: "See dat fly on de horse's ear? I can snap dat fly off and not tech de horse's ear." He did that and the horse did not feel the touch of he whip. A short time after, his master saw a hornet's nest. "Jim," he said, "Can you snap that hornet off without touching the nest?" "Naw suh, Marse Charlie," said Jim, "dem hornets is unified."

THE BRITISH POLICY IN PALESTINE

This policy, which is found below, was confirmed by the League of Nations sitting at Geneva, Switzerland, July 24, 1922.

(1) His Majesty's government reaffirm the (Balfour) declaration of November, 1917, which is not susceptible of change.

(2) A Jewish National Home will be founded in Palestine. The Jewish people will be in Palestine as of right and not on sufferance. But His Majesty's government have no such aim in view as that Palestine should become as Jewish as England is English.

(3) Nor does His Majesty's government contemplate disappearance or subordination of Arab population, language or culture.

(4) Status of all citizens of Palestine will be Palestinian. No section of population will have any other status in the eyes of the law.

(5) His Majesty's government intends to foster establishment of full measure of self-government in Palestine, and as the next step a Legislative Council with a majority of elected members will be set up immediately.

(6) Special position of Zionist Executive does not entitle it to share in any degree in government of country.

(7) Immigration will not exceed economic capacity of country at the time to absorb new arrivals.

(8) Committee of elected members of Legislative Council will confer with administration upon matters relating to regulation of immigration. Any difference of opinion will be referred to His Majesty's government.

(9) Any religious community or considerable section of population claiming that terms of mandate are not being fulfilled will have right of appeal to League of Nations.

MORMON PROPAGANDA

The Evangelical Christian and Missionary Witness, of Toronto, Ont., in its issue of June 19, 1922, printed the following Sunday-school leaflet showing the Mormon teaching as to Jesus Christ and Joseph Smith, comparison being made between these persons in seven particulars. Notwithstanding such teaching many seemingly good people are accepting Mormonism, not only in the United States but in Canada and beyond the seas.

A PARALLEL

Jesus the Redeemer

The Advent of Christ.

At the time of the birth of Jesus Christ the national religion, which had satisfied the parents, no longer proved satisfactory to the children.

The parents of Jesus were of humble origin.

The voice of God proclaimed the Christ at His baptism, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Christ presented Himself for baptism, and He was baptized by John the Baptist in the river Jordan.

Christ demonstrated the power of the priesthood by healing the sick, etc., and He bestowed this power upon His disciples.

Christ was persecuted and the message that He gave to the people was rejected.

Christ sealed His testimony with His blood on Calvary.

Joseph Smith, the Prophet

The Advent of Joseph Smith.

At the time of the birth of Joseph Smith the world was convulsed with religious discord, and the people were not satisfied with the teaching offered by the churches.

The parents of Joseph were of humble origin.

The voice of God spake unto Joseph Smith, saying, "This is my beloved Son —hear him."

John the Baptist appeared to Joseph Smith and conferred the Aaronic priesthood upon him, and by the authority of that priesthood he was baptized.

Joseph Smith by the power of the priesthood healed the sick, and he conferred this priesthood and power upon his disciples.

Joseph Smith was persecuted and the message that he was sent to deliver to the people was rejected.

How Determined Women Earn Money at Home

By Eustine Erne

I think it would be a little difficult to explain exactly what first got me so interested in this matter of home occupation for men and women and led me to write this message.

Perhaps it was a deep-rooted recollection of childhood days when a crisis in the family fortunes made it desirable, yes, necessary for Mother to earn some extra money. I never think of it without a feeling of regret that she could not have known about the Gearhart Knitter and Allwear Hosiery.

When I undertook to investigate and write about home knitting I did so with the understanding that I was to be allowed to present the facts as I found them, in my own way.

It makes me very happy to be able to say that in Gearhart Home Knitting there exists a pleasing, spare time, extra-money opportunity for most any woman who is determined to succeed.

I have seen with my own eyes letters from legions of women (men, too, for that matter) expressing thanks and gratification that they were able to earn money at home in the Gearhart way.

Some needed the extra money to pay pressing bills, to care for a sick husband, clothe the children or themselves, and others wanted a vacation, to refurnish the parlor, etc., almost as many reasons as there were women. But my point is that they got what they wanted, seeing in the opportunity Gearhart offers the solution of their difficulties or the fulfillment of their desires. The spare time which most women can profitably utilize in knitting Allwear Hosiery is the money-making formula which Gearhart will tell you about on request.

You simply make arrangements for one of the knitters, under an iron-clad, three-year contract which binds Gearhart to accept and pay for all the Standard Allwear Hosiery you can produce. After mastering the simple principles of operation you begin to knit in comfort and privacy. If you wish, no one need know how you are making your extra money. Then you make up a dozen or a hundred dozen pair of Standard Allwear Hosiery according to instructions (how much you do rests with yourself), you pack them up and send them to the Gearhart Company. Quickly comes a generous check for your work.

I earnestly believe that there is no home occupation for the average woman who wants additional practical income at once so profitable and fascinating as Gearhart Home Knitting, and so I say, "If you are a determined woman, really serious in your desire to devote your spare time to earning money, write the Gearhart Knitting Machine Co.. for their Profit Guide Book, which explains everything, and free samples of knitting, Box MBN, Clearfield, Pa., today."

When we asked Miss Erne to write the above request for home workers we told her that we wanted to reflect the reputation of an old established house which for 36 years has manufactured what we know to be a truly wonderful machine, highly perfected, simple, and of absolutely guaranteed quality. In the simplicity of the above and absence of exaggeration Miss Erne has succeeded admirably. (Signed.)

have observed that the articles in Moody Bible Institute Monthly are for the most part, from living contributors who write expressly for our pages, thus bringing the old truth into the most vital contact with present affairs. Reprints from older publications are few, valuable as many of them might be, for the reason that our supply of current material is always greater than the space to use it. It is one of our regrets that some manuscripts are kept so long before being placed before our readers.

The next two or three issues, those of December and January particularly, will be marked by the strength, the timeliness and the lively interesting character of their contents. It is a special occasion for our friends to push for subscriptions, and particularly for church members to consider whether they could send a more valuable Christmas gift to their pastors, Sunday-school teachers or Missionary representatives abroad than a year's subscription to the Moody Bible Institute Monthly.

Our Christmas Issue

will have a contribution from our editor-in-chief, Dr. James M. Gray, showing the great and practical importance of clear views on The Divine-Human Personality of Christ.

Mr. Philip Mauro contributes an article of unique apologetic value pointing out that

The Spread of Christianity Is a Greater Miracle Than Its Start.

We have been successful in obtaining a stenographic report of what Prof. Robert Dick Wilson of Princeton Seminary, calls his "pet lecture," which was given in the Special Summer Course of the Moody Bible Institute, and which demonstrates the value of Foreign Words in the Bible As a Witness To the Truth of the Bible.

Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of Park Street Congregational Church, Boston, gave a great address before the same body which also is awaiting publication, and is entitled, Modernism and the Minimum of Faith.

The same is true of a thrilling message from Dr. John Roach Straton of Calvary Baptist Church, New York, on

The Relation of Rationalism in the Pulpit to Worldliness in the Pew.

We have a contribution of deep merit from Dr. Curtis Lee Laws, Editor of the Watchman-Examiner, on

The Doctrine of Holiness.

And a highly descriptive article from Rev. A. W. Payne, of Haifa, Palestine, entitled,

A Journey on the Field of Armageddon.

But there are some of our ministerial readers who will be particularly interested in a presentation by Mr. J. Richard Olson, editor of the Minneapolis Journal, of the theme,

The Pulpit and the Press.

We have many more of the same general kind but to name them all would limit the value of this announcement. Tell your friends about these good things and help the great cause along.

THE MINISTER AND HIS BOOKS

The effectiveness of a minister on the human side is largely determined by the quality, intensity, and breadth of his reading. Books are his tools and, other things being equal, the better the tools the higher will be the quality of the work he does. There is still significance for the preacher in the words of Paul to the young minister Timothy, when he said, "Bring the books, especially the parchments."

We all have heard of men who pride themselves on getting along without books, "doing their own thinking," as they call it. The same assertions are often made concerning all self-made men. A sound thinker knows that in these assertions there may be subtle fallacy. Many a man's intellectual and spiritual history is recorded in the pages of a good book. The reading of it starts impulses and reflections that could originate in no other way. Stimulus and assurance come to the man who knows what other men are thinking and writing.

It goes without saying that books and reading can be abused like other privileges, but on the whole nothing is more salutary in moral influence than books and the use of books.

To know what other men are thinking and to preserve the sense of proportion in his own message, a minister should cultivate a perpetual interest in books and make judicious selections for his own possession and scholarly use.—Watchman-Examiner.

TRACT WORK IN SOUTH AMERICA

There is probably no more effective way of spreading the gospel in Latin-America than by press and post. Vast distances, poor roads, few railway lines, and sparse population make itineration a difficult, costly, and not very effective way of evangelizing. But the mail-bearer reaches most parts, periodicals (religious as well as others) go at low rates of postage (or free); and the general lack of literature causes a reading-hunger, and gives a high value to tracts.

These facts, along with the lamentable fewness of workers, relatively, in South America, caused the staff of the Evangelical Union of South America in Arequipa, some two years ago, to devise a means of using tracts and the mails on a greater scale than ever, and at the same time, of endeavoring to set to work as many as possible of the native converts throughout the continent.

The plan decided upon was to circularize the native churches of all the Latin Republics, through their pastors and the foreign missionaries, suggesting to them that they should use their influence to persuade the members of their flocks to give out with regularity a minimum of "one tract or gospel daily." A certificate of membership, along with a button-badge, was prepared, and the result has been that, in slightly over two years of the existence of this "One-a-Day Band" (in Spanish: "Liga Uno por Dia"), more than one thousand believers have joined.—The Christian.

WHAT AN OHIO STATE PRISONER WROTE HIS CHAPLAIN

I desire to report that I have read the little book, the Emphasized Gospel of John through several times and have found it contains 78 pages of Scripture, divided into 21 chapters containing 341 verses, composed of 17425 words, and 66,604 letters. The word God occurs 81 times, but is not found in the 2d, 12th, 18th, and 19th chapters. The word Father occurs 135 times; 120 times referring to God, 12 times to man, and 3 times to the Devil.

—[No. 33487.

If all Christian people were as busy circulating religious literature and teaching gospel truth as errorists and infidels are in impressing their wrong views, there might be more progress in the right direction. The trouble is that too many Christians have a needless feeling of timidity.—Herald and Presbyter.

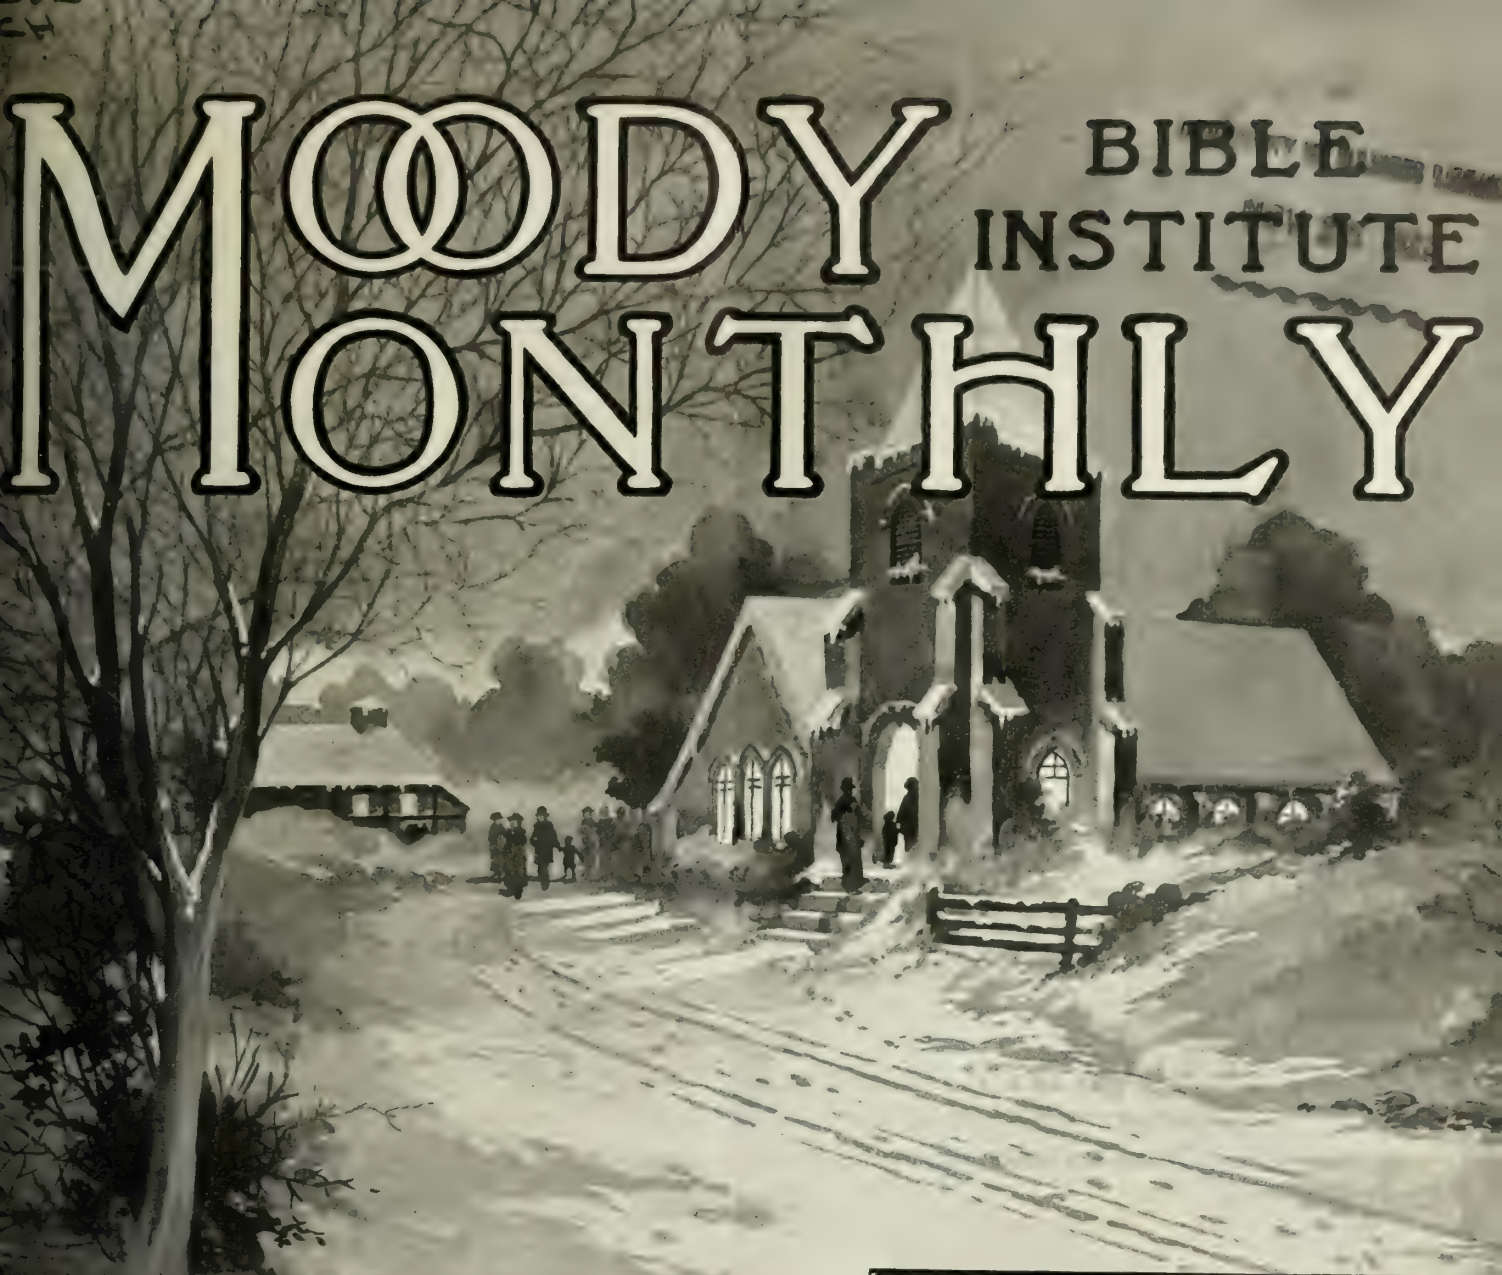
MOODY MONTHLY

BIBLE INSTITUTE



The virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ is today the focal point of the Adversary's attacks. But the people of God need not fear. The Bible which contains that record has triumphantly withstood all the attacks upon it hitherto, and the evidence of its truth is today stronger than ever before. All that the Church needs is a knowledge of the facts which are abundant and convincing.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A ROYAL GUEST

By Fred Scott Shepard, Toronto, Ont.

A child is born, a child divine,
Whose birth angelic hosts acclaim!
He came the Father's love to show;
He came that men God's grace might know;
He came 'mid darkest gloom to shine,
His heart with gracious love aflame.

A son is given, the Son of man—
Flesh of our flesh, yet God divine!
Who came from heaven in lowly birth
To live among the sons of earth,
That they might know Love's wondrous plan,
Might learn, through Him, God to define.

The Wonderful, the Counsellor,
On whom the government shall rest,
Descending, seeks with wondrous grace,
Within each heart a resting place;
"No room within!" Fling wide the door,
And Christ receive—a royal Guest.

Honoring Jesus Christ

All that we know authoritatively about Jesus Christ, "He whom we fixed our hopes upon," is learned from the Bible. Hence the feverish desire of the destructive critics and their satellites, the liberal preachers, to destroy faith in the Bible as a divine revelation that they may destroy faith in Him of whom all the prophets speak. Hence also the value of such incontestable testimony to the historicity and truth of the Bible as is found in the contribution on another page from Professor Robert Dick Wilson. It represents many years of hard and costly toil on his part, and is certainly learned and scholarly, yet it is plain and simple enough for a high school boy or girl to understand and appreciate. We trust many of them will read it, for we feel assured that by God's blessing, it will fortify them against later attacks of the enemy of souls in their college career.

By a happy providence we are able in the same Christmas issue to present our readers with a masterly argument from the legal mind of Mr. Philip Mauro, showing that the spread of Christianity is a greater miracle than its start. These two articles offer a valuable suggestion to young preachers on a line of instruction which they should pursue this winter with their people. Apologetics, i. e., the defense of the Christian faith, and exposition, the explanation of the text of the Bible, are the two things vitally necessary in the pulpit today.

The Great Commission Prayer League quotes an English editor to the effect that at least seventy-five per cent of the pastors of Great Britain are unsound in doctrine. What the proportion is in this country one cannot say, but it is a safe assertion that if only twenty-five per cent were sound they could put the others on the run if they knew how to shoot straight and had the right kind of ammunition. In other words, the rank and file of the laity in our churches are still sound so far as they know the truth, though not a few may be bewildered by some of the things to which they are obliged to listen. Give them the truth in the right way and they will respond to it. In this connection read the correspondence in this issue between the Council of Church Boards of Education (impressive title) and the stalwart editor of the Manufacturers Record. We have entitled it, "What Thinking Men Go to Church to Hear."

Is The World Growing Better?

Dr. Frederick Lynch, educational secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches, in a five months' visit to Europe last summer, conducted a canvass of educational and religious leaders on important subjects. One of the results of the canvass is that in his opinion, "the status of Europe as a whole, as regards religion and ethics and public and private morals, is lower than before the war." To quote him further, "the religious and moral revival so confidently predicted and hoped for during the war has never materialized."

And, we take the liberty to add, it is not likely to materialize simply by pushing "international friendship through the churches," which as it seems to us, is beginning at the wrong end. Ethics and public and private morals which have the strength to endure, grow out of right views of God and His truth, which are found only in the Bible, His revealed Word. Let the shoemaker stick to his last. Let the churches preach the preaching that God bids them. The statesmen of the world can take care of international friendship, if only the gospel be proclaimed in power to regenerate men's hearts and change their lives.

There are strong men in the World Alliance movement who know how to write and talk in a way to produce results, and they are sorely needed at this time to wield their pens and open their lips in an appeal to all men everywhere to become reconciled to God. The money that sends them to Europe annually would be well spent if their time was employed as that of Moody and Sankey when they went abroad, or that of George Whitefield when he used to come over to this country to proclaim the gospel of peace. Nothing would promote international friendship like the world-wide revival Dr. Lynch is talking about, and he and his associates could do much to bring it about if they went at it in God's way. 2 Chronicles 15:1-15 would give them the idea.

Textbooks on Biology

We are frequently asked to name reliable textbooks on this subject, suitable either for secondary or college grade. By reliable is meant those which are free from the teaching of atheistic evolution. Unable to name such textbooks ourselves, we recently inquired of Professor George McCready Price, who replied that Hegner's College Zoology and his Introduction for secondary schools, and Garong's Textbook of Botany for Colleges are about as free from the doctrine as any. He also mentioned the sections on zoology and botany which he furnished for the "Modern American Education" series but which unfortunately are parts of a twelve-volume set which the publishers will not sell separately. He does not know of any textbook on biology as such which he would dare recommend. Most of them are for academies or secondary schools, and are often more objectionable than if written for college students. That is, more baldly dogmatic and doctrinaire.

Professor Price does not look for any improvement in textbooks on zoology or botany until the science of geology is put on a truly scientific, that is, non-speculative and non-evolutionary basis. This is a task on which he has been working for many years and hopes to bring to fruition before very long.

Meanwhile, if any of our readers can help us with other suggestions of textbooks on biology, we shall be glad to publish the information.

The following paragraphs from the private letter of a scholarly pastor in Canada, has editorial interest and value:

"It Would Spoil Things"

"There is tremendous need in these days when certain brands of destructive criticism are working such havoc for a sane and loyal testimony to the vital things of our faith.

"My own feeling is that a much vaunted scholarship which practices mental reservation and which, while professing loyalty to the Scriptures, questions the necessity and consequently the actuality of the virgin birth, repudiates what it terms the "crass materialism" of the orthodox view of the atonement, casts doubt on the literal, historic resurrection of our Lord, and almost scoffs at the idea of a personal corporeal return of Christ, is not only dangerously unsound but is neither intellectually nor morally honest.

"Another sign of the times is what appears to be a strong drift toward non-millennialism. In its evolution the religio-political program of some prominent church leaders would scarcely tolerate the interference which would result from the personal return of the Redeemer. In the words of an eminent preacher—as reported in the press—'If Christ came it would spoil things.' Well, I guess it would!"

A Pastor's Testimony

"One year ago I came here as a pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. These were the conditions as I found them:

"Sunday-school picnics on Sunday, church first and movies after on Sunday nights, nearly every one belonged to from one to three lodges, dance crazy, social clubs, etc.

"Like Jonah I wanted to run, but God held me here. What was I to do?

"I took the 'sword of the Spirit' and sallied forth with the words, 'Thus saith the Lord.' God gave us a revival with the result that people quit the lodges, dances, movies, tobacco, clubs, etc. In our prayer-meetings some who only a few months or weeks ago couldn't offer a prayer, now bring heaven and earth together.

"We have a Tuesday night Bible class and after spending some time on the doctrines of the Bible and studies on the Tabernacle, I gave them an examination, and issued diplomas to all who passed a grade of seventy-five. It was wonderful to see the answers coming in.

"Last night we had an examination in personal work, and after examining the papers this morning I found that every one passed.

"The things they once loved now they hate, and the things they once hated now they love. All glory and praise to God."

Feeding Christ's Lambs

"Man once walked on all fours and climbed like the monkey. Like the monkey too, he had a natural coat of hair and had no need of clothes. It was by covering the body more and more with clothes that mankind gradually lost the hairy covering."

Do you believe the above, dear reader?

Does it agree with God's Word?

Is it a statement of Christian truth?

Should it appear unchallenged in a Sunday-school paper?

Should you wish your little child to receive such instruction in the Lord's house?

The paragraph is taken from a story entitled "Hoofs, Claws, and Paws," by Maude Burbank Harding, in Picture Story Papers (May 14, 1922), published monthly by The Methodist Book Concern, H. H. Meyer, editor, and distributed in Sunday-schools.

The White Man's Peril

A month or two ago a writer in the New York Call, speaking of soviet Russia's friendly relations with the Turks, Persians, and Central Asiatics, and also with the German Republic, added, "Should these nations act together, and should the yellow races effect an alliance to include Turkey, India, Japan, and China, the white men would face a situation that might well result in their extinction."

Our readers may recall that on occasion within the last few years we have spoken of Ezekiel's prophecy in chapters thirty-eight and thirty-nine as forecasting a military combination closely tallying with the above. It is one in which Russia is seen to be in the lead, and which may contribute to that federation of the nations of the Roman empire with the Antichrist at its head, of which other prophets have spoken.

In this same connection there is serious interest for us in the fact that while allied discords and jealousies are fundamentally responsible for the Turkish triumph and the menace of a new war, it is the teaching of the prophets that those discords and jealousies will be put aside some day when the kings with one mind, "shall give their power and authority unto the beast" (Rev. 17:13) for the accomplishment of their purpose.

Do They Wish Another War?

"Keep the Turk out of Europe," "The Armenians and other Christian populations must be protected against extermination," "The Turks must be forever wiped off the map," "No Turkish army should be permitted within striking distance of the straits." These were the slogans of the press early this fall.

Meanwhile our Government was blamed for doing nothing to aid the situation or to maintain peace and its policy of isolation was scorned. Dr. Barton, of the Near East Relief and the American Board of Missions wrote Senator Lodge, "We cannot hold aloof now." Bishop Cannon, of the M. E. Church South, cabled our Secretary of State from Paris, that we must protect Christians in Asia Minor, "if necessary with army and navy." The Secretary was obliged to reply to the Bishop that if the United States was to determine the problems that have vexed Europe for generations there was nothing now left for us to do but to declare war, which was the prerogative of Congress and not the President.

This raises the question as to whether our country is in a condition to declare war against any considerable nation, to say nothing of a combination of nations. Congress will have to be converted first to Theodore Roosevelt's idea of "universal military service, based on universal military training." The policy of non-isolation which the doctrinaires are zealously proclaiming in these days means nothing less than this. It seems to us that Secretary Hughes is right, and that the only way to make the recalcitrant nations behave themselves and pay their debts is the way of force. Do these gentlemen wish us to apply that remedy?

Why Observe "Watch Night"?

"Watch Night," the last night of the old year, is so called because of the time-honored custom of "watching and praying" the old year out and the new year in. It is not too early to begin planning for it now. Some of the reasons for observing it are given below from the literature of the Great Commission Prayer League.

(1) Because it is the one night in the year, more probably than any other night, when God's people of every name and church and land gather simultaneously in their respective places of worship for prayer.

(2) Because in all the history of the church, the need of prayer for spiritual awakening has never been greater than now. Not only evangelical leaders, but thoughtful laymen and far-seeing political leaders, are becoming more and more alarmed at the present godless trend.

(3) Because infidelity as to both doctrine and practice has invaded and is invading our pulpits and churches to an alarming extent.

(4) Because Protestantism is at stake.

(5) Because the entire church of Jesus Christ needs a revival, and it will come when God's people unitedly ask for it.

(6) Because every Christian bears a personal responsibility to God, to his family, to his church, and to the world at large to do all in his power, in season and out of season—by prayer, by life, and by exhortation—to point to "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

The Importance of Faith in the Divine-Human Personality of Christ

Sermon by Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

"WHO, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." Philippians 2:6, 7.

Paul, the apostle, is inculcating a spirit of humility on the part of Christian believers, enforcing the duty that "nothing be done through strife or vain-glory," by the example of Jesus Christ, who although God, condescended to become man. The statement is remarkable for its clear and forcible declaration of the two natures in Christ. There are others equally conclusive as to His divine nature and His human nature considered separately, but none which, in a single view, gives the union of these two natures in the one person, as this does.

There are four points to be kept in mind. (1) Christ was truly God; (2) he was truly man; (3) the God-head and the manhood were united in the one person; (4) the Godhead and the manhood, the deity and the humanity, were distinct and separate, so that there was no mixture or commingling of the two natures in the one person—the divine did not permeate the human and the human was not swallowed up or absorbed in the divine.

Source of All Error

All the errors extant concerning the person of our Redeemer, have arisen from a failure to combine these elements in one view.

First, there are those who deny the deity of Christ. To them He was a holy and just man, the holiest indeed who ever lived, but nothing more. A few will admit a little more, that He was greater than man, yet He was not God. He existed before His human birth, they are prepared to say, but not from all eternity. He is not everlasting as God is. He is not God.

There are not a few again, who grant the deity of Christ but question His true humanity. The person of God became united to a human body they would say, but not to human nature as such. To them Christ had no human soul, the divine reason supplying the place of a soul. A declaration this, which is contradicted by the fact that the material body of man is not the man by any means, but only the shell of the man, the house in which he dwells, and that if Christ became a man as the Scriptures uniformly say He did, then He must have become a whole man, body and soul.

A third class agree as to the true and substantial deity and humanity of Christ, but are confused as to the relationship between the two. One school holds that the human nature was transmuted into the divine, and that after all Christ had but one nature—a mixed nature; the other maintains that He had two natures but that He was also two persons.

The truth is, however, as Bishop W. R. Nicholson has somewhere said, that the deity of Christ is just as pure and simple deity after the incarnation as before, while His humanity is just as pure and simple humanity as that of His mother Mary, sin excepted. The result of the incarnating act in other words, gives us a person who is neither divine nor human considered separately, but God-man.

We may be helped to grasp this mystery by a consideration of our own nature, although of course the illustration is seriously lacking. Each of us realizes that he is but one person, and yet he knows that his personality is composed of two natures, a material nature and a mental nature. It takes both of these to make the man, and yet both only make one man. A man is tall and fair and healthy as to his material nature, but learned and wise and good as to his mental nature. And so when Christ is spoken of as holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, as having died, risen, and ascended, it is as to His human nature; but when He is said to be in the form of God, to have created all things and to be the brightness of His Father's glory, it is as to His divine nature. It is the one person in both instances acting in different spheres (Burnet).

The Proof of These Things

Let us investigate, the Bible being our standard of truth.

Is Christ God? He created all things, and without Him was not anything made that was made. His goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting. He is the same yesterday, today and forever. He is with His disciples always even unto the end of the world. All power is given unto Him in heaven and in earth. He forgives sins. He claims supreme worship. He will judge the quick and the dead. Can one be less than God, and possess such attributes and do such works?

Consider certain express declarations of Scripture touching the deity of Christ. He is addressed by Jehovah in the forty-fifth Psalm thus: "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." Isaiah calls Him "The Mighty God," unto whom every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. In Acts twenty it is stated that God purchased the church with his own blood. Could anything be plainer?

But there is equally clear proof of the true humanity of Christ. In sixty-seven different instances He speaks of Himself as the Son of man. He grew physically and mentally as a man. He ate, drank, slept, hungered, thirsted, grew wearied, and was troubled as a man. He was dependent to a certain extent on human friendships and shrank from pain and suffering as a man. In all things it behooved Him to be made like unto His brethren, sin excepted.

In the same way the union of the two natures in the one person is demonstrated The text says: "Who being in the form of God, took upon him the form of a servant." The pronoun "who" represents the subject of both verbs—"being" and "took." The person who was already in the form of God is the person who at a point in time took upon Himself the form of a servant.

See John 1 in further illustration In the first verse, the "Word" is said to be God, and in the fourteenth He is said to have become flesh and dwelt among us Sometimes again, the attributes of one nature are predicated of the person, while the person himself is designated by a title derived from the other nature. For example, "a virgin shall conceive and bare a son, and his name shall be Emmanuel," i. e., God with us. In one place Christ speaks of Himself as being in Heaven and on earth at the same time (John 3:13), which is inexplicable on any other theory than that of the two natures in the one person.

It is in this union of the humanity and deity that we have the only key to unlock the meaning of countless passages in the New Testament, which otherwise present insuperable barriers to the understanding. This is a great mystery, something that the finite cannot understand, but which does not make it unbelievable. On the other hand, it may even add to the reasons for its credibility.

Daniel Webster's Testimony

It is said that when Daniel Webster was in his best estate, he was one day dining with a company of literary men in Boston when the conversation turned upon Christianity. As the occasion was in honor of Mr. Webster, he was expected to take a leading part in the conversation and he frankly stated his belief in the Godhood of Christ, and his dependence upon His atonement. A Unitarian minister opposite him said: "Mr. Webster, can you comprehend how Jesus Christ could be both God and man?"

Webster fixed his eye on him, and replied:

"No, sir, I cannot comprehend it; and I would be ashamed to acknowledge Him as my Saviour if I could comprehend it. If I could comprehend Him He could be no greater than myself, and such is my conviction of accountability to God, my sense of sinfulness before Him, and my knowledge of my own incapacity to recover myself, that I feel I need a superhuman Saviour."

The Deed Rests on the Creed

Let us remember at this point that correct doctrine is the basis of correct living, and inquire for a moment into the practical importance of our knowledge of and belief in the deity of Christ. There are at least four things which that doctrine does for us.

In the first place, it deepens our apprehension of the evil of sin. For how terrible must sin be when it was not enough that some great prophet should come to exhort us to amendment of life, but that the very God should descend from His throne to the squalor of the cave stable, not merely to exhort or teach us concerning righteousness, but actually to die for us on that account!

In the second place, it affects the views we entertain as to Christ's dying on our behalf. As a mere man His sufferings would have been only an admirable heroism, which could have done nothing towards fulfilling our personal obligations to God. But as being God Himself He could satisfy divine justice and grapple in His own person with the first principle of human wretchedness.

In the third place, it affects the disposition of our hearts toward Him as our Saviour. How could we commit our souls to one or trust Him to secure our acceptance, as sinners before God, if He were not Himself God?

And finally, belief in the deity of Christ is essential to any strongly developed feeling that God loves us. Men sometimes speak of the love of God as expressed to us in nature and in providence, but what is that love which ministers to the pleasures of the eye, or the appetite, or the intellect, or the social relations of men in comparison with that which gave His only begotten Son to die for us? This removes our conception of the love of God from the region of theory to that of fact, and from a matter of sentiment to an inward conviction. We are now able to love Him, because we know that He first loved us (Bishop Nicholson).

But just as we find a practical value in our knowledge of and belief in the deity of Christ, so is the same true with reference to His humanity.

In the first place, it is only as we thus believe in Him that we can be sure we have a High Priest who can be touched with a feeling of our infirmities, and who is able to succor us when we are tempted.

It is only when we know and believe in the true humanity of Christ that we can truly accept Him as our perfect and proper model. If He were only God, and not also man, would we not utterly despair of attaining to His example? But as it is, He is all mankind's epitome. Every movement after Him is performed with ease, and His likeness sits becomingly on all who bear it. Think of the comfort and consolation to be found in the truth of Christ's humanity! Are we poor in this world's goods? He ennobled poverty. Are we lonely for the want of sympathetic friends? He showed us how we are never alone, for the Father is with us. Are we afflicted? He has made perfect through suffering. Are we dying? Behold in Him the Conqueror of death (W. G. Moorehead).

But just as there is this practical importance in our knowledge of and belief in the deity and humanity of Christ so also with reference to the union of the two natures in the one person. It is here that we find all the significance and glory of the atonement. Were Christ God, and not at the same time man, could He suffer and die as the sinner's substitute? Were He on the other hand man, and not at the same time God, could His sufferings and death have availed to take away our sins?

We do not know of course, how the Godhead shared or sympathized in the agony of Calvary, but we know that He whose law had been broken by us, did in Jesus Christ Himself pay the penalty. We know that He against whom we had sinned took upon Himself in Jesus Christ the weight of those sins. We know that when there was no eye to pity and no arm able to save, that when He saw there was no man and wondered that there was no intercessor, then His arm brought salvation unto Him, and His righteousness it sustained Him. Well may we take up the apostle's language therefore, and exclaim, "Glory be to God for his unspeakable gift!"

But now

What Is This Gift to Us?

As a current writer expresses it, "To keep Christmas with no clear recognition of what Christmas is is an irreligious absurdity. Whoever does this may have an agreeable domestic, or social, or spectacular, or musical festival in a church building or out of it; but it would be much like celebrating Washington's birthday on the theory that Washington was a respectable private citizen only, or the Fourth of July with no faith in the Declaration of Independence or in the events that gave birth to the Republic."

Our eyes, our hearts, our thoughts, are turning toward the birthday of the Second Adam and of the new creation. What do our eyes see, or our hearts feel, or our thoughts lay hold of, chiefly?

Do we personally appreciate the fact that unto us there was born in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord? Do we realize our need of such a Saviour? Are we one of the lost whom He came to save? Are we anxious for deliverance from sin? Do we long for the love and the peace of God? Have we personally accepted Christ or do we still reject Him? How can this anniversary be truly joyous to one who is even in doubt about this matter, and who does not know that his transgression is forgiven, and his iniquity is covered?

The shepherds after they were told of the birth to them of a Saviour, went to the manger and verified the word. Shall this story be told year after year without you, dear reader, following their example?

The Star and The Song

By Ella M. Reitz, Brookville, Pa.

The bright, illuming star
  That signals Jesus' birth,
The wise men, from afar,
  See and rejoice for earth.
They follow in its light
  To find the Saviour-King—
They worship in His sight,
  And treasures to Him bring.

The winging-angels' song
  Floats out in accents clear;
Though, of the world's great throng,
  The shepherds only hear.
While keeping vigils low,
  They catch the joyous strain
In its descending flow,
  And echo the refrain.

When will the world in night
  Behold the gleaming star,
The only hope of light
  To cast world darkness far?
When you and I, who see,
  Point others to the light,
Till all, from darkness free,
  Stand in the glow of light.

When will the angels' song
  Be heard by all mankind?
The day how distant, long
  Ere peace the world shall find?
When you and I, who hear
  The song of "Peace, Goodwill,"
Repeat the notes of cheer
  O'er every vale and hill.

The Spread of Christianity a Greater Miracle Than Its Start

By Philip Mauro, Framingham, Mass.

"FOR God so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten Son" (John 3:16).

"For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through him might be saved" (John 3:17).

"God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself" (2 Cor. 5:19).

The greatness and blessedness of the gospel lies in the fact that it proclaims God's love—not for a particular nation only, or for a special people only, but—for the whole world; and that it proclaims also the manifestation of that love of God in the gift of His only-begotten Son, to be the propitiation for the sins of "the whole world" (1 John 2:2).

The world's debt to God for the gift of His Son is incalculably great; and it is of that we wish to speak. For we are not now thinking of the few in the world (yet not of it) who through the faith of the Son of God have received pardon and eternal life, but of "the whole world," in all its darkness, corruption, unbelief, and enmity against God. It is this great "world" which God has created, and which He declares to be the object of His love. It is to this great world that He has sent His Son on the mission of reconciliation and salvation.

What then does "the world" owe to God for this "unspeakable gift"? In what way, and to what extent has the world at large been a gainer through the coming of Jesus Christ into His own creation? Surely if one would reflect upon the influence which Jesus Christ has exerted, and does still exert, upon the conditions of human life the world over, he would be forced to acknowledge that it is impossible to measure its extent, or find words to describe its character.

There are two points we desire especially to notice, first, the extent or range of the influence of Christ in the world; and second, the character of that influence.

I

The extent of the influence of Jesus Christ upon the world is limited geographically only by the dimensions of the world itself. Here indeed is a marvelous and supernatural thing. In some form and some measure the influence of Christ has penetrated to every part of the earth, to the depths of dark Africa, to the remotest islands of the sea, to the regions of the frozen north.

Before His departure from this scene of His brief ministry, He charged His few followers to go into "all the world," to "make disciples of all nations," to "preach the gospel to every creature." It was, therefore, His own settled plan and purpose that the whole world should receive, or have opportunity to receive, the benefits of His gospel.

Why "The Son of Man?"

Though as pertaining to the flesh He was an Israelite, and as Son of David the heir to David's throne, yet He manifested no partiality or preference, but purposed that one people as well as another should partake of the blessings of His redemption. He sought nothing for Himself from man, but rather to give Himself for man. He came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." He would accept no racial name or designation. He would not be called the Son of Abraham, or of Jacob, or of David, but the Son of man. And such was He; just as ready to go to heal the servant of a despised Gentile, as to heal the daughter of a ruler of Israel.

History, outside the Bible, will be searched in vain for the record of a lover of men who recognized in his service no national boundaries whatever, who was without partiality or preference, who had no selfish aim, no personal ambition; who sought only and ever to secure the good of others at His own expense, and that absolutely without discrimination.

No One Else Cared

Never did a man, upon departing from the world, leave behind him such a message for humanity, and such a commission for his followers to execute—"that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations" (Luke 24:47). Who but He ever cared about the sins of men, or whether they be forgiven or not? It does not lie in the nature of man (until he has received by grace something of the Spirit of Christ) to be seriously concerned about the sins of other men—much less of men afar off, whom he has never seen, and of men yet unborn.

A man's natural concern about sins is limited (when he has any at all) to his own. His natural desire is to see punishment inflicted upon others, and to escape it himself. But here is One who had no concern whatever for sins of His own, who could look His observant enemies in the face and ask, "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" and who yet had such concern for the sins of others as to be willing to die for them.

This unique message of Christ, and the commission He gave to His apostles, is what has "turned the world upside down" (Acts 17:6), and has imparted a distinctive character to the civilization of the past nineteen centuries.

Think of this, and then consider the source of that commission, the circumstances under which it was given, and the instruments chosen for executing it!

It was given by One who had lived but thirty-three years in this world, and who had been but three and a half years publicly before His own people (and they a subject and despised race). Moreover, He had, in that time, so aroused their hatred and enmity by His teaching, that they cast Him out, caused Him to be put to death as a malefactor, and still execrate His name and memory. His commission was given to a few obscure, ignorant, timorous Galileans, who, when the emissaries of the priests and rulers came to seize their Master, all forsook Him and fled.

A Movement Without Parallel

Did ever a movement which gained headway in the world have a beginning like this? Yet such was the beginning of a movement which, in its extent and duration alone (not to speak now of its character) has no parallel in human history. From its insignificant and shameful origin (for it was to the people among whom it arose a "scandal" and to the cultivated Greeks among whom it was first spread "utter foolishness") its influence steadily advanced, regardless of hatred, calumnies and persecutions without parallel in all history, until the foremost nations of the earth have been so far dominated thereby that they have come to be known as the "Christian nations."

And when we now look abroad upon the face of the earth and compare the nations which are called "Christian" with those not so called, we see a marvelous contrast. And this contrast is all the more wonderful in view of the facts, (1) that there are but very few in any nation, in comparison with its entire population, who are really disciples of Jesus Christ; and (2) that even such non-Christian nations as China, Japan, India and others, have been in later times influenced more or less by that peculiar civilization which has sprung up under the aegis of Christianity.

Who Can Be Compared With Christ?

But the extent of the influence of the gospel of Christ is not to be measured only in a geographical way. It has extended itself into the sphere of government, shaping the laws and practices thereof; into the sphere of society, erecting standards of honesty, truthfulness, kindness, benevolence, decency, etc., theretofore unknown; into the sphere of education and culture, into the home life and the individual life.

Every time we look at a church-building, a school-house, or a charitable institution, we see the effect of the influence of Jesus Christ; and this is true notwithstanding the fact that in many things the "churches" of Christendom have departed from His doctrine, and that many "Christian" institutions are quite contrary to His mind.

Much more might be added as to the extent to which the influence of Christ has reached; but enough has been said to show that there is not one, no nor a score of the children of men combined whose influence upon the course of civilization, upon the laws and customs of nations, and upon the lives of individuals, can be even mentioned in comparison with that of Jesus of Nazareth.

II

Coming now to the character of the influence which Christ has exercised in the world, it were a still more difficult matter to find in earth's history anything wherewith to compare it.

In order to describe what has been the nature of that incomparable influence in and upon the world, and how it has affected the lives of men and of communities, and the whole course of human affairs, we should have first to set forth clearly what was the condition of mankind at the time He came into the world; and we should have to show also what it would have been had things continued on their downward course for nineteen centuries without the counter effect of the gospel of Christ.

It is far beyond the knowledge and powers of man to set forth the pertinent facts of the case. Yet we can apprehend them sufficiently to realize that the coming of Jesus Christ and His brief sojourn in the world, and what He thereby accomplished, have wrought results of a nature different in kind, as well as in degree, from those of the life-work of any other. No one before or since has exerted upon individuals and peoples, the same kind of influence as that of Christ, an influence always to the unspeakable advantage of those who have been under it.

At the time of His birth the civilized part of mankind lay in three great divisions, each having its distinguishing characteristics. They were the Hebrew, Greek and Roman sectors of humanity; and beyond them lay the barbarians and savages, who were regarded only as objects of conquest and slavery, when they were not strong enough to be objects of fear.

The Civilized World in Christ's Day

1. The state of the Jews subsequent to their return from Babylon had steadily deteriorated until, at the birth of Christ, their spiritual leaders were in such a condition that He likened them to whited sepulchers, outwardly garnished and made pleasing to the eye, but inwardly filled with loathsome corruption. The law had become to them simply a thing to boast of, their divinely-appointed religion, but an affair of empty rites and ceremonies, and their magnificent Temple a den of thieves.

2. The Greeks had devoted themselves to the cultivation of wisdom, art and literature. But their culture had long passed its apex, and had declined to a low point. The world by its wisdom did not attain to the knowledge of God (1 Cor. 1:21). The gods conceived by the highly cultivated minds of the Greeks, though they had carried philosophy to a height never since attained by any people, were moral monstrosities, having all the vices, criminal propensities and meannesses of depraved human beings, only on an exaggerated scale.

This, by the way, goes to prove that the conception of God set forth in the Bible did not have its origin or its development in the mind of man. To Greek mythology we must look if we see what ideas of God are spontaneously generated in the most cultured human minds.

Romans Copied the Greek Gods

3. The Romans had devoted their energies to the art of government. In the development of civil law and its administration they had excelled all other nations.

But the laws and conquests of Rome served no more than the culture of the Greeks to preserve the nation from destruction through moral decay. Indeed, imperial Rome would no doubt have perished speedily had not its life been most surprisingly prolonged by the vitalizing influence, within its fast rotting corporate system, of that despised and persecuted "sect" which was "everywhere spoken against."

The deities which were formally acknowledged by the Romans were but copies, simply re-named in some cases, of those worshiped by the Greeks. In Rome we find Jupiter instead of Zeus, Mercury instead of Hermes, Diana instead of Artemis, etc. But the intelligent classes of Rome had an unconcealed contempt for the gods; and hence there had developed a cynical atheism, which had displaced, to a large extent, the worship of their preposterous deities. That these were fabulous was generally recognized; but how to exchange them for better, they knew not.

Such was the deep and awful darkness which enveloped "the whole world" just prior to the Christian era. But into that darkness came One in humble guise, as quietly as comes the first gleam of dawn, who, while as yet He was all unknown beyond the narrow land of Palestine, said, "I am the light of the world."

And now nineteen centuries stand up to bear witness that His saying is truth itself. This light has enlightened the world; and other light, moreover, the world has none.

But neither the Hebrews, nor the Greeks, nor the Romans, were aware of their condition and need. Nor were they willing to learn the truth about themselves, nor to accept God's remedy.

The attitude of each and all was that of opposition to Christ and His gospel, quickly mounting up to bitter and murderous hatred. Though antagonistic, one to the other, they could heartily unite for the one purpose of resistance to God and to His Christ (Acts 4:27, 28).

The Debt We Owe

To what then do we owe it that we, sinners of the Gentiles, the descendants of debased idolaters, are not at this moment worshiping with filthy rites and ceremonies the egregious gods of Greece or Rome, or the more abominable idols of the barbarous races? Not to any natural progressive forces; for all the forces of nature tend the other way. Corruption cannot put on incorruption, nor can it better itself.

Therefore, had mankind been left to itself, and to "resident forces" or "evolution," the degradation and moral ruin would have long ago reached the point of complete putrefaction and dissolution.

We owe our present condition of superiority wholly and solely to Jesus Christ, to the life He lived, to the death He died, to the gospel He sent forth after His resurrection, and to the Holy Spirit of God whom He sent down from heaven.

And even at this very hour all that is needed to plunge the world into the convulsions and calamities foretold in the last book of the Bible, is for God to withdraw His presence, and to leave men once more to go their own way.

If therefore, the start of Christianity was, under the circumstances of its origin, a stupendous miracle, its growth and spread, with no force to back it, but against the combined opposition of all the powers of earth and the passions of the human heart, were even a greater.

For we need only the broad and well known facts of human history to assure us that men and nations, if left to themselves, can "evolve" only in a downward direction. For the natural progress of mankind is not toward better and better conditions, as is supposed by many. It is not toward the development of nobler characters, toward the increase of righteousness, virtue and benevolence; but just the reverse.

And if improvements in the material side of human affairs have taken place; if the state of womankind and of children has been bettered; if slavery has been abolished; if the rigor of certain laws and the treatment of petty criminals have been ameliorated; and if peaceful arts have flourished, and many useful inventions have been perfected and applied to the service of mankind; all this is solely because of the influence which the gospel of Christ has exerted upon society as a whole, through the few who have yielded their hearts and lives to Him. These things are but the by-products of Christianity, but their testimony to the beneficent character of Christ's influence upon the world is the stronger for that reason.

"We Want a Bible"

All that we are here claiming as to the character of the influence of Christ in the world has been conceded recently in print by Mr. H. G. Wells, though he himself is an anti-Christian socialist. Speaking of the Bible, he candidly acknowledges "the wonder of its influence over the lives and minds of men," owning that "it is the Book that has held together the fabrics of western civilization." Again he declares that "the civilization we possess could not have been sustained, without it."

What Mr. Wells here attributes to the Bible is more properly to be attributed to Christ. For it is the gospel of Christ and His teaching that have created those conditions which have made the rise and development of "western civilization" a possibility. And what is threatening at this time the collapse of western civilization, which Mr. Wells foresees as an imminent event, is the fact that Christ is being repudiated, and every cardinal point in His teaching is being set aside, in the very "churches" which bear His name, and in the very seats of learning where men are trained for the "Christian ministry."

Mr. Wells has a sufficiently clear apprehension of the present state of things and of what has brought it about to realize that, as he puts it, "we want a Bible." What he should say is that we need more of "the faith of the Son of God," more of the faith of those men who laid the foundations of national prosperity in this western hemisphere four centuries ago. For it is impossible that there should be either another Christ, or another Bible.

We conclude then, that God's love for the world, manifested in sending His Son to be the propitiation for our sins, has had an effect upon mankind as a whole, incalculably greater in extent and more beneficial in kind, than anything that has ever happened since the hour of creation. Countless millions have benefited all their lives from God's "unspeakable gift" who have refused to accept Jesus Christ as their own Saviour. "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."

No Room for Christ

By Ralph A. Brown, Manton, Mich.

The tree was bright with tinsel light
And toys hung from each limb;
But no Christ there could enter in,
There was no room for Him.

The sky was bright with heavenly light
When Jesus entered in;
But He was born in manger low,
No room in Bethl'hem's inn.

We sing of "Peace on earth, goodwill."
How can there be this peace,
Except we let Him enter in,
Our captive hearts release?

The Prince of Peace to this world came,
Eternal peace to bring;
But it has neither time nor room
To own Him Saviour-King.

Amid the babel and the strife
That fills the world today,
We are not far from Bethl'hem's inn;
We still turn Christ away.

Above the din and noise of earth,
Be still, my soul, and hear
The ancient song the angels sang—
Redemption draweth near.

Age of the Bible Told by the Foreign Words It Contains

A stenographic report of an address by Robert Dick Wilson, D.D., Professor of Semitic Philology and Old Testament Criticism, in Princeton Theological Seminary; one of a series in the Special Summer Course (1922) of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

THIS is my pet lecture. As I told you some time ago, it is my baby and therefore my pride.

I want you to consider now a young man who went to Siam. If you would read his letters you would find that proper names and various Siamese terms had crept into his vocabulary.

Suppose afterwards he went over to China. For a while you would find his letters still containing words which would indicate clearly that they originated in Siam.

And again suppose he went to Japan. You would find presently that his letters would still contain traces of the other countries.

It has been said you could trace the history of a diplomat through a dozen countries by the foreign words which were contained in his correspondence.

You notice how missionaries in making an address or in writing a letter, use a number of foreign words in their discourse. Give a man a dozen letters from a dozen missionaries and he will tell you without knowing where they are, where they came from by the foreign words which appear in them.

The Test of a Literary Document

Now here is the test of a literary document. Apply this test to the whole literature of the Aramaeans. You know I am somewhat of an authority on the Aramaean languages.

We can go back to the ninth century B. C. We have documents in the eighth century B. C. and from the sixth century, and the fifth, and then again from the first century B. C. and the first century A. D. passing down to the present time. And from these sources we have Aramaean documents from different parts of the world, Egypt, Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, Palestine, Syria, the Sinai peninsula, all together covering the whole period from 850 B. C.

Give me any document in Aramaean which sometimes contains only a word, and I can tell you approximately the age of the document from the kind of foreign words contained in it.

Give me a document written in northern Syria like the Septuagint, and I will tell you it must have been written during the Assyrian period in about the seventh century B. C. because such documents contain Assyrian words such as the names of kings and other common terms.

Give me a document from Egypt in the sixth century B. C., or the fifth, and I will tell you it was from Egypt because it has Egyptian words in it.

Then give me a document like Ezra written in Aramaean and I will tell you it must have been written in the Persian days because of the large number of Persian words in it.

Go on down to the later days and you will find the inscriptions full of Greek and Latin words, the names of the Caesars and Constantines, and one Persian word only.

You can tell the age of a document and where it comes from by the foreign words in it.

Come down to the day of Joshua and a number of later writers, you will find the works of this next period full of Greek words and the Persian words of the Assyrian period.

Come down to the day of Babylon and that part of the history of the world, and you will find that now the Arabic comes in. In the writings of that day you will find a great many Arabic words.

Come to the time of the Turks, you will find the Aramaean documents contain a large number of Turkish words.

In the modern Syriac spoken by the Presbyterian missionaries, you will find African words and Persian words, etc.

You can trace the history of the whole literature of the Armaeans from 850 B. C. down to the present by the foreign words contained in the vocabulary of the different documents. That is the natural way. The written language would be that written in that period and the people writing them under the domination of foreign powers would be found to contain evidence of this domination in the literary documents.

I can also take up the English documents and show in our language and in our own history all the various elements that entered into its production.

But now come back to the Old Testament. One half of Daniel and Ezra, all of Jeremiah and Genesis are in Aramaean. We are going to take up the Hebrew documents of the Old Testament as evidence of the historicity of the book, based upon the foreign words which are contained in the different documents.

A Tribute to Moody Institute Students

But before entering upon the discussion and giving a resume of the history of the Old Testament, I want to say it is a pleasure to me to be addressing an audience that has read the Old Testament. The great trouble in discussing the Bible with an ordinary audience is, that it does not know its Bible well enough to know whether I am telling them the truth or not.

I was lecturing in Toronto some years ago, and four young men from the university came to call on me after a lecture on the Pentateuch, and began with one accord to make dissent.

After talking a little while I surmised that their knowledge was rather their ignorance. You know there are two ways of looking at knowledge and ignorance. Knowledge which you do not know is ignorance. Those fellows did not even know that, and I said,

"See here men, have you ever read the Pentateuch?"

And they all began again with one accord to say, "Nay! Nay!"

I was a little provoked at that, and said, "Do you mean to tell me you are going to take up my time discussing the literary structure of a book when you say you have not read it? What would you think of a young lady discussing a novel she had never read?"

I knew a young fellow at college who liked to be considered literary. He called a great deal on the young ladies, and did not have time to read all the novels that came out, so he read the first chapter, a little in the middle, and then the last chapter to see how it turned out, and then talked intelligently on it. Some people discuss the Bible just about like that. They read a little of it, but do not know what is in it. I find whole classes down at the university, not one of whom have ever read the Bible, and yet some of them talk very glibly about the Old Testament.

I am making the presumption here that you young ladies and gentlemen have read the Old Testament and know whether I am telling the truth or not. Therefore I am going to try in these short periods to follow a plain line of thought beginning with the creation and fall; the flood and the distribution of the nations; down through the history of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph from the going out from Ur of the Chaldees—that is the time of the Babylonians, down to the time when the children of Israel were in Egypt, and show that the first part of Genesis might be called the Babylonian period, and the second part the Egyptian period.

Then come as you know the other books telling how they came up out of the land—Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy, containing the law of Sinai, and the history of the nation until they came to the Jordan, and then Joshua, and Judges, giving the rule of the Judges, and then Saul, David and Solomon, the division of the kingdom into Judah and Israel, the long line of kings, the ending of the northern kingdom with the destruction of Samaria about 721-2 B. C., and the southern ending with the destruction of Jerusalem 586 B. C.; the captivity, the return, the building of the Temple and the walls of Jerusalem, and a few other little facts, ending about 400 B. C.

How the Theory Works

The first part of Genesis is the Babylonian period, and the second the Egyptian period; then comes in a long period where we have the Hittites and the other mountain tribes and the long time of Solomon's kingdom which extended from the Euphrates to the river of Egypt; then comes a long period, the longest period of all the time of Tiglath-Pileser, Assurbanipal, the kings of Assyria down to Sargon, Sennacherib, kings of Babylonia, and then Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Cyrus, Darius, Xerxes, and Artaxerxes, and that covers the general line of Old Testament history.

Now if we take that history as it is said to have been made, and if the books which tell of the different periods were written in the periods of which they treat, then we would expect in that first of all periods, the first of Genesis, which treats up to the time of Abraham exclusively, to find Babylonian words. And in the next period which treats of the time of Joseph and the time when the children of Israel were in Egypt, we would expect to find Egyptian words. The next great empire was Assyria, then Babylonia, and Persia, and the general order of literature would be Babylonian, Egyptian, Assyrian, Babylonian (Second) and Persia.

That would be the general line of the Old Testament periods and of Old Testament literature. In the different stages of that literature as documents were produced, and if produced in the periods of which they treat, we would expect to find, according to my general thesis, the foreign words of the nations that influenced Israel in that period. And so I say these foreign words crept into documents of each successive period—Abraham—Babylonian, Joseph—Egyptian, Solomon—foreign words of various kinds beginning with Assyrian, Assyrian coming on the stage one hundred years before Solomon; and then more Assyrian words when we come to the time of Shalmaneser, for the Babylonian language was very closely allied to the Assyrian. From then on down through the captivity, and then the power of Medo-Persia came and we would expect to find the Hebrew language showing the effect of the Medo-Persian domination under which they were for so many centuries from, say 747 B.C. to 400 B.C.

After the children of Israel were carried to the cities of the Medes by Tiglath-Pileser II, about 747 B.C., we would expect to find that the literary works after that, and down to the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, would be more or less tainted with the Persian vocabulary, especially in the names of persons and nations.

How to Test It for Oneself

Now then on taking up the literature, and for those of you who do not read Hebrew you will have to depend on me, but those of you who do read Hebrew I would advise to just read the first two chapters of Genesis, and at least the book of Daniel and Ezra—or any book you may choose, as a test of what I have said, because it will be more wonderful to you and you will be more able to follow what I say, in the original. You have only to read a Hebrew dictionary through beginning with the first letter, and following on to the end with a concordance and look up every word in the Hebrew language and see where it comes from and where it is found. That is a good way of testing what I say. If there is any man here who knows Hebrew and has any doubt about what I am going to say to you, he has no excuse if he does not look it up. If you are an honest man, before denying what I say that is what you are going to do. If you do not know Hebrew you cannot do it.

Why, I had a man the other day out in California who came up after the lecture and said,

"I don't believe what you said."

I said, "Why don't you believe what I said? Do you mean to tell me that what I said about the history of the language of Israel isn't true?"

"I don't mean that. I mean I don't believe what's there."

"That's a very different thing. I can't give you faith. That is the gift of God."

There's a big difference between saying you don't believe what I say, and you don't believe what is in the Bible. But I want to tell you that if you believe what I say, you better believe what the Bible says too.

Now taking the first period, here we would expect to find Babylonian words, and what do we find? Down to the end of the time of Abraham there is only one Persian word in the Hebrew Bible. Down to the end of the life of Abraham only one Egyptian word in the Hebrew Bible, and that is the word meaning man, but it is just full of Babylonian words, the first part or it. In fact, I might say the word "create" goes back of Babylonia to the language which preceded Babylonia. You know the ancient Babylonians conquered Babylon from the Sumerians and spoke naturally a different language and not Sumerian. The word "bara." means "to make" and is used many times in the account of creation. It is almost certain that "bara" is a Sumerian word taken over into Hebrew. Then we find the word for "abyss" is Babylonian. The ordinary word for sea, lake or ocean is "tohab" found in the second verse of the first chapter of Genesis, but this is not the word used in the second chapter of Genesis.

Genesis 2 Not an Account of Creation

In my opinion the second chapter is not an account of creation at all. The only account of creation in the second chapter is the one verse which speaks of man having been made out of dust and having breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. The rest is not an account of creation. It is the account of the construction of a garden.

We have an account or a description by Nebuchadnezzar of his making a garden and it resembles very closely the account in the second chapter of Genesis. The words for plants are Babylonian and are not the word used in the first chapter at all. The whole chapter bears the evidences of Babylonian origin and contains Babylonian and also Sumerian words, which you remember preceded Babylonian.

Take the word for "mist." It is not the Semitic word or Babylonian, but the ordinary word in Sumerian for river or canal. We know they used an irrigating plant or watering canal, and water used to flow in all parts of the land.

Go down to the time of the flood and here again we find Babylonian words. Come down to the life of Abraham. Was Abraham a myth? Take the proper names in the account of Abraham given in the Bible and compare them with the proper names found on the Babylonian monuments of this period. There is more literature from the period of Hammurabi, than from that of Tiberius Caesar. There is more literature throwing side lights on the time of Abraham than of Christ.

Now this account of Abraham in the Bible contains a large number of proper names, and they exactly coincide with the composition of the proper names found in the Babylonian monuments of the time of Abraham.

And then consider the laws and customs of the day, that singular custom of Abraham marrying Hagar. That was a Babylonian custom, not a law. He had a perfect right to take the hand-maiden for a wife, and her children should be his sons if he chose to adopt them, and Sarai's too. It was a perfectly proper, well-known law.

Now take the second half of Genesis. We find the proper names are Egyptian, and many other words are Egyptian found in the time of Moses, but there is not one Babylonian word found in the law of Moses. We will come to that again. Some of you who read on higher criticism will know the importance of that statement.

The Monuments Favor the Bible Record

Now the children of Israel come to Palestine. All the evidence from the monuments are in favor of the Israelites being in Palestine in the time of Moses, so the Israelites had no necessity of introducing foreign words in that time.

Solomon conquered the Hittites and ruled all the way from the Euphrates to the river of Egypt and gained domination over the Hittites and Aramaeans and other peoples. Further, Solomon had commerce extending not only over the Mediterranean but to the Red Sea, and the Persian gulf, as far as India and to the center of Africa.

It was said Solomon had apes and peacocks. Now the names of apes, and peacocks, and ivory are foreign terms. One of them and probably all three are Hindu words. At least the critics cannot object to my saying that in as much as they themselves say it, and I think they are right in regard to two of them and perhaps three. They are Sanscrit words and brought into Judea in the time of Solomon. The words were brought in with the things. They did not have a word for elephants and so could not speak of the teeth of elephants, but ivory goes down as the word for it. They did not have a word for apes, and so they brought in that word. And those peacocks in the same way. They had to bring in the words with the things, and they came in there at the right time, the time of commerce under Solomon. There they were found in the Bible.

The chairman, at the head of the table nearest the reader, is Professor Robert Dick Wilson of Princeton. At his left, passing down to the other end of the table are, in order, Professors Raven, of New Brunswick; Creelman, of Auburn; Robinson, of McCormick; Kyle, of Xenia; and Dr. C. I. Scofield. At his right moving in the same direction are the Rev. Thomas J. Packard, of Maryland; Professor Hayes, of Garrett Bible Institute; Dean Crawford, of Virginia Theological Seminary; Principal O'Meara, of Wycliffe College, Toronto; and Dean Gray of the Moody Bible Institute.

Here comes in an interesting question. There is, you know, a question among scholars whether Solomon really wrote the book of Ecclesiastes and the Song of Solomon. Most of us have naturally supposed that Solomon wrote these books. The critics, objection hitherto has been the presence in the books of a word said to be Persian. Now as you will notice from my resumë and from what you already know, that the Persians did not come directly on the scene until about 538-747 B.C., so I hardly see how a Persian word could get into a work by Solomon.

Well, that is just a case of supposing these are Persian words, but you look at the evidence as to these two words which are said to be Persian, and see how vital the evidence is. They are two words you can remember easily. "Pardese" in Hebrew and the other one means "command." You will find them in a Hebrew dictionary. Give a look at it if you read Hebrew.

What Is the Worth of a Dictionary?

I do not care that, (snapping his finger), for a Hebrew dictionary! A Hebrew dictionary is no better than the man that made it.

Do you know how Hebrew dictionaries are made? I remember when about twenty-five or thirty years ago in making a Hebrew dictionary at Union Seminary, New York, they asked me to write on one word.

You know in making a dictionary that the work is distributed around among various professors, giving those words to one man, these to another, and when they get a very difficult specimen they will try to get some innocent young fellow to take it.

Suppose I had taken that word and written on it, do you not see the account written in that dictionary would be no better than what I am giving you here?

A dictionary is not inspired, and does not contain revelation. There are some splendid people who think that all they need to do to prove anything is to quote the Encyclopedia Brittanica or Encyclopedia Biblica, or Hastings Dictionary of the Bible.

Well, who wrote the articles in the encyclopedia? One of the men who wrote the last one was Dr. Driver. I would not believe any article of his at all just because he wrote it. You had better look to see who signed an article, and if you find it is by Dr. Driver, you can accept it if you want to, but he is no authority for me.

I made a dictionary of geographical terms to be used with one of the geographies used in the schools when I was a junior in the seminary. A classmate of mine, whom I had known for some years, was asked to make a dictionary of geographical terms for one of the geographies used in this country. Some of you have heard of it; some of you have studied it; all your fathers and mothers did at any rate. Well, he came to me and said, "Listen, will you help me?" So we got to work, the two of us, and between us we fixed it all up for you. We looked over those geographical terms —French, German, Chinese, you know, and they had to be pronounced somehow, and I do not know but that ours was as good as anybody else's at any rate.

Oh, I have great respect for dictionary makers, writers of articles, but I have passed through the stage where I believe anything because I have read it in a book.

Some people take anything that is given to them. That is the way some people are in school. Thank the Lord we do not have that kind very much. But that is the trouble with dictionaries. You cannot believe what is in them unless you know it.

Look in a Hebrew dictionary and you will find these are all Persian words. What is their evidence? They say you will find "pithgong" in modern Persian. Not "pithgong" but "pagong" is found there. And so they say it is a Persian word, and this fellow back here 2500 years ago borrowed a word from Persian 2000 years later.

Suppose it was about money that was to be in existence about 2000 years from now. Can you go into a bank and say, "Just transfer the money to me now"? Is not that silly? But that is just what they said. That word is modern Persian. And so they say "pardese" is derived from Sanscrit, and they find a word "paradise," but mind you, that does not mean park or garden, in the Sanscrit. It means "a fence."

I like that old quotation which means, "Out of nothing comes nothing." If the Sanscrit had a word meaning "garden" like that word, they might have borrowed it but it has not the same meaning at all. You will find words in almost any language that sound almost like words in your language, but they may mean very different things. In reading Latin for instance you often come across words that sound very similar to English words, but may have a very different meaning, and very laughable mistakes are made by assuming because they sound alike they must mean the same.

Such things happen in all colleges. Stories, or college jokes, are founded by the score on this point. Imagine some young college fellow seeing some connection between Latin and English words!

Discovery of the Hittite Tongue

Now I am coming to this, and it is rather a hard point. The Hittite language has been discovered. Read what Professor Meyer of the University of Berlin says. He has found that the Hittites proceeded in the conquest, and then came the Aramaeans, the Medes, and then the Persians. The Aramaean language is closely allied with the Hittite.

Now in the Aramaean language take "pardese" and "pithgong" and you will find they are exactly the same. "Pithgong" is a word of command, and "pardese" means garden or park. Being influenced by the Hittites they spoke a language very much like the Hittites, and likely these two words are Hittite words. You can see how appropriate it would be for Solomon to use Hittite words, for Solomon's mother was Bathsheba, and as her first husband Uriah, was a Hittite, and Uriah had a garden, called a "pardese," Solomon copied after the Hittite and made a garden of his own.

JERUSALEM—A VIEW FROM BETHLEHEM ROAD LOOKING TOWARD JAFFA GATE
This view shows a street scene at one of the busy corners. The Tower of David on Mt. Zion is at the right. New Jaffa Gate or "Breach in the Wall" made in 1898 for the Kaiser to pass through, is seen between the incongruous new German clock tower and David's Tower. To the left of the clock tower was the original Jaffa Gate which was walled up.

It was the most natural thing in the world for him to take over the name of that, just as we have "boulevard" and "avenue." They are certainly not English at any rate, we had to go to Paris for them, and so with "park," he took the name for park from where he got the idea of a park.

And again, the Hittites were in the land of Northern Syria for one thousand years almost, before Solomon, and when David conquered them and added them to his kingdom, he very likely adopted this one word from them, or Solomon may have gotten it from his mother, but there you see the historic approach and the advantages for the word to get in.

But if you do not believe in that, tell me where words that were never discovered in the Persian, could be derived from the Persian by the Hebrews? I have given you at least enough so you can see how the words could have come in in the time of Solomon.

Now the next period is the Assyrian period. Here we have the names of Assyrian kings, or their names and titles. This covers the Assyrian and Babylonian empire. No Persian words in this period.

Daniel the Best Book for Illustration

Then we come to the Babylonian period. The greatest work of this period is Daniel. Now if Daniel was written at Babylon at that time, 520 B.C., what would you expect to find? Why Sumerian, the old language of Babylon, Chaldean, for Nebuchadnezzar the Chaldean, conquered Babylon. Then the Hebrews were carried captive, and then came in Cyrus and the Persians, and then in the neighborhood were a great many Jews and Aramaeans under the dominion of the Medes at least from the destruction of Nineveh 606 B.C., and many from 747 B. C., and then we find three Greek words, the names of musical instruments.

These are the various languages of Daniel. It is the finest book in the Old Testament for the illustration of my theme. Now then, I need say nothing to account for the Sumerian words of which there are a goodly number.

The names, of course, are in Babylonian and Hebrew. The only question is about the Persian and Greek words. The Persian language is the same as that spoken by the Medes. The empire was called the Medo-Persian. The Persian and Median languages were simply dialects of the same language.

The children of Israel were carried away first in 747 B.C., more than 200 years before Daniel wrote the book of Daniel. During all those 200 years and more, a large part of the ten tribes at least were under the domination of the Medo-Persians. It was not necessary to suppose that Daniel introduced an entirely new number of Persian words after Cyrus came to Babylon. There had been Persian words in the Hebrew vocabulary for one hundred years—since 606 B.C. How account for the Persian words in Daniel? You can do that. I have accounted easily enough for the Medo-Persian words in Daniel.

Now we come to the three Greek words. They were names of musical instruments. Wherever things of this kind come, the names come with them. You have a ukelele perhaps. Where did it come from? From Hawaii, and the name came with it. Perhaps you have a pianoforte. That is Italian. Maybe you have an organ. That is Greek is it not?

Where did we get the names for the instruments in the homes of the English? They were imported from foreign countries, and the name came in with the thing, and not merely the name only came with the thing, but the girls that played the instruments went with the instruments, because the girls that played instruments in that day were slave girls. That is true still in the orient. They train girls from their youth up to play and sing for the delectation of tyrants, and it is a rich man who can afford to hire them. Talk about self-players. Those ancient Greek girls were self-players for tyrants.

It is no trouble at all to get around the names of musical instruments. They were there in the time of Nebuchadnezzar the Great.

The monuments show indeed they were there in the time of Sennacherib, 350 years before the time of Cyrus. He engaged in a great sea battle with the Greeks and captured all the cities on the Black Sea, and that was hundreds of years before the time of Cyrus. They took the people down by the thousands into Babylon as prisoners and the ancient people sat themselves down there, and when they asked of them a song, the Greeks remembered Athens, just like the Jews remembered Jerusalem. There were thousands of them in Babylon, and there seems to be no question that those three Greek words could have gotten into Babylonia in the time of Nebuchadnezzar.

They were in the Aramaean anyhow, and that was the language of many of the people at that time. They were found in inscriptions all over the country. They were found in Sardis. It is perfectly absurd to suppose there could not be three Greek words in the language at that time.

Putting It Up to the Critics

Now just two minutes. What becomes of the proposition those critics use so much. If the first chapter of Genesis belongs to one period, and the second chapter to another, how does it come that both the first and second chapters have Babylonian words in them. If the first chapter was written four hundred years B.C., I can see how they could have gotten in, but how about the second chapter? If it was written about 700 or 800 B.C., how are you going to get foreign words in literature written 700 or 800 B.C?

That is not for me to correct, that is for the critic to correct. If he is enough of a corrector let him correct it, I cannot.

Then another thing. How does it come there are no Persian words in the whole Pentateuch, if a large part of it was written down there in the Persian time? They call themselves literary critics; why not tell us that? Why is there not a Persian word in it? Can they answer that?

I can ask questions too, you know. The trouble with some of us is we are not asking enough. We are letting the other fellow do it all. When they have answered those questions, then ask one of these critics how it comes that there are no Persian words, and no Babylonian words in the Pentateuch except in that first chapter!

An Interesting Journey on the Field of Armageddon

By Rev. A. W. Payne, Haifa, Palestine

PAUL DOANY and I left the mission room of the Mount Carmel Bible School at Haifa at 6 A.M. for the train to the plain of Esdraelon.

On the journey we had the opportunity of testimony to a Moslem boy and a young Persian railway official. It was interesting to see the former with the Arabic Bible we had loaned him, reading the story of Ahab in Naboth's vineyard, especially in view of the present political situation in Palestine.

We left the train at Afule station and seeing some Jews loading up a market cart, we greeted them and handed them tracts and Scriptures in Hebrew and Arabic, which they readily received.

The gospel is to the Jew first, but also to the Gentile, so stopping the rest of the day in the Moslem village of Afule, the Lord opened many doors of witness. We went to the guest room, of which the host is a Greek Christian, who welcomed us warmly and a little company gathered. We engaged in converse, and gave out Arabic tracts. The tract which made the most impression was Mr. Blackstone's message to the Jews, How Shall I Know Him?

Mr. Blackstone's Tract

We were surprised what effect this tract had upon our host. He read and re-read it, and said, "I am going to read it for two months." He seemed to think that it was an unanswerable argument for the people of Israel, but alas, because of the fulfillment of prophecy in the return of the Jews to the Land of Promise indicated in the booklet, he declared that we were being sent by Zionists and liberally supported by them for the purpose of political propaganda!

Leaving this group, we made our way to a Bedouin encampment where a tent was visited and, as the women were spinning from the wool of sheep and goats, while the children were gathered around, we gave further witness. This led to quite a stream, especially of young people, mostly Moslems, coming to us for literature. When we retired for the night a few gathered in the guest room and I was requested to sing, and I sang a number of hymns, Paul sometimes joining in in Arabic, or translating for me the meaning. The local policeman was interested, listening through the window and then coming in and sitting with us.

Gideon's Traditional Stream

Early the next morning, driving over the plain of Jezreel, we distributed tracts and Scriptures by the way among Jews and Arabs. Leaving the modern Zerin (Jezreel) on an eminence to the right, we came to the new Jewish colony of Ain Harod. Here there was an abundance of fresh water springing out of the rock, which was being made good use of by the colonists. It is the traditional stream associated with the story of Gideon, and we were struck by seeing a Bedouin drop on his knees and lap up the water with his hand.

We went to the tent of the leader of this community, an energetic Caucasian Jew who was kindness itself, and who conducted us around the colony. First we went to the agricultural experimental farm plantation and saw thousands of trees. We saw the school for the children and the various workmen's shops, carpenters, blacksmiths, tin-smiths, and even millinery. Finally we went to the chart room and saw a magnificent design covering the whole district dealing with the water supply for this and the neighboring colonies, for which we had seen many large pipes lying about, and the deep channels that had been cut for their use.

Leaving Ain Harod, we went on to the colony Tel Jusef, which is named after one of the martyrs of the early Jewish colonization movement in Palestine. Here our guide was a young Jew from Haifa.

Armageddon's Fortifications

We were now much impressed with the fact that we were in the Armageddon district as we looked at the unusually high observation tower, with trenches and imbankments of sand bags covering the surrounding district. We find that practically all the new colonies have some defenses of this character, as though prepared for an expected siege.

From there we went on to the railway station of Shatta. Here we found a Californian Jew who was having his mid-day rest with the Arabs who were helping him in his contract. He gladly received an English New Testament and spoke of his difficulties because of lack of education of his workmen. He had asked one of them his age, and received the indignant reply:

"How should I know? Do you think my head's a book?"

This colony is in the district of the tribe of Issachar, and as we witnessed the energy and determination of the young men and women alike in developing their settlement, even making long stretches of railway, we thought of the words of their forefather Jacob in Genesis 49:14, 15, "Issachar is a strong ass couching down between two burdens; and he saw that rest was good and the land that it was pleasant, and bowed his shoulder to bear and became a servant unto tribute."

We were asked here if we had come to hold a meeting, and when we replied "No," they then invited us to be their guest for the night. Of course we had opportunity for individual talks and converse over the supper table.

We visited next Tel Habena where a stone-crushing machine was being worked very vigorously. Here we looked over the settlement and left some silent messengers before we made our way towards Merchawja (Enlargement).

The Story of the Shunammite

Here we stopped at the hotel, before driving to Shunem, which I had visited some thirty-two years ago. The village seemed absolutely unchanged, with its walls of prickly cactus and its mud habitations. The sheik's room where we were received was airy and comfortable, and his two handsome sons were most courteous, and we were treated very handsomely. A number of Arabs from the neighborhood had just come in as a case of theft was to be decided, so they made a good congregation for us, and brother Paul read the story of the Shunammite's son being raised from the dead by the prophet Elisha, as recorded in 2 Kings, chapter 4. It seems stranger than truth to say that not one of them apparently knew it. Of course we were able to give the gospel message as well.

Journeying over a very rough road, we reached the village of Nain, associated with the raising of the young man by our Lord Jesus Christ, a prophet greater than Elisha. In the church we read the story from Luke 7, lads and older villagers gathering around, and had prayer, leaving Arabic New Testaments and tracts, which we prayed the Lord to bless.

Jews from Winnipeg and Glasgow

The next colony visited is one of the latest, named Balfouria, after Lord Balfour. The leader of this community was energetic and kindly, and in the dining room, where he gave us refreshments, we met the sheik's son from Shunem and a Nazareth Christian effendi, and together in complete friendship, we visited the buildings and examined the splendid machinery used for threshing and other purposes. A Jew from Winnipeg was most delighted to receive the New Testament in both English and Hebrew, and others of the colony, including the director, were glad of our literature.

We spent the evening after visiting the Jewish settlements at Afule, and leaving our testimony there, at Merchawja. Brother Paul knew the aged Jew who owned the hotel as a former neighbor of his in Haifa, and so he was warmly greeted. Before the night came on some Jews gathered round our supper table, and one with a broad Scotch accent from Glasgow vigorously maintained that as Christianity had been a failure, the war being the special proof, the Jews must now set an example to the world. He did not deny the value both of the work and teaching of Jesus Christ, and seemed really in heart to long for a fuller understanding of salvation, both individual and national.

My heart became heavy as one of the fine young men spoke of work as his religion, and seemed regardless of the need of divine help. His thoughts were so fixed on earthly and material things that I referred him to the first words of the Jewish Scriptures, quoting the Hebrew: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." The divine and the heavenly came first; neither man nor Israel nor the Zionists created the heaven or the earth.

I also referred to Isaiah 49:22: "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people; and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders." This is the true mandate and cannot be gainsaid. But I pointed out that all blessing is associated with a suffering Messiah who is to return and reign over the house of Jacob forever.

Celebrating the Mandate

During the night we were aroused by unearthly yells and anything but musical sounds from all sorts of instruments, and we came to the conclusion, which afterwards proved correct, that they were celebrating the signing of the British mandate.

Starting off in the fresh, sweet morning air, we made our way over the plains towards Tel Addas. We gave a young Jewish ex-soldier a lift, and he eagerly read in my Hebrew Old and New Testaments, asking us searching questions. Turning aside from the road, we visited a Bedouin encampment, and after the usual formalities and the preparation of black coffee, the message of love was listened to by men and women alike.

On reaching Tel Addas we found a group of Moslems and Christians sitting under the shadow of a farm house wall, and there we had another meeting and gave out tracts. The Hungarian Jew in charge of the colony was most open-minded, and seemed to understand the Arab situation. He showed us round the settlement, and we left with him a "Scripture Gift" gospel.

A Moslem man and child journeyed with us to Nazareth and we scattered messages by the wayside. In this city where our Lord lived for thirty years we were glad to find a tea and rest room just being opened by a Syrian brother for the British gendarmerie or the "Black and Tans." We had a little dedication service there and left for the Baptist mission, where we took part in the singing and testimony in service conducted by Pastor Shukri Musa. I met four Jewish Halutzim in the streets of Nazareth and gave them tracts. This is a remarkable sign, as for four decades no Jew has been allowed to live in this fanatical Christian center.

At the hotel we left Scriptures for both Jew and Gentile, and driving through the perennial green of the hills around Nazareth, we left literature at Japnia, and made our way to the colony of Malul. A Jew from St. Paul conducted us around, gave us a good breakfast, and showed us the striking plan for this settlement. We were asked for New Testaments before we left. Having only one in English, we gave that with a promise to send others by post.

On reviewing our experiences on this missionary journey, we realize that Emmanuel's land can never be "the glory of all lands" until Emmanuel Himself comes and enters the hearts of its inhabitants. The heroic efforts of these builders of the land of whom we read in Isaiah 49:17 that they "shall make haste; thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee," are still lacking the highest of all motives, the religious.

Communistic Settlements

We inquired more than once whether there was a synagogue, and were told that these communistic settlements were in no way to be associated with religion.

No doubt individual pious Jews are to be found among them, but one sees dark clouds ahead as the development of the anti-Christian apostasy creeps over the world. We hear the voice of the Lord through the prophet in Jeremiah 46:18: "As I live, saith the King, whose name is Jehovah of Hosts, surely as Tabor is among the mountains, and as Carmel by the sea, so shall he (Antichrist) come."

Are we really feeling and facing the solemn facts of the hour and the place in which we are? we ask ourselves. The whole civilized world is increasingly centering its gaze on Palestine and the Jew. The fig tree is blossoming vigorously. What does it mean to us? What does the Lord of the prophets, the God of heaven and earth, think? Are we as those who wait for our Lord Jesus Christ — praying, giving, and living according to the need of this solemn situation?

May it be true of us: "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following." Amen.

SIR HERBERT SAMUEL BECOMES HIGH COMMISSIONER OF PALESTINE

The ceremony of the reading of his Majesty the King of England's appointment of Sir Herbert Samuel, K. B. E., as High Commissioner and Commander-in-chief in and over Palestine, took place in the reception room of the Government House, Mount of Olives, Palestine, to a representative gathering of the ecclesiastical heads and notables of the Communities and in the presence of Field Marshal Lord Allenby and His Highness Emir Abdullah. The King's commission was read and translated into Arabic and Hebrew.

Praise God for the twenty-seventh verse of the same chapter: "But fear not, O Jacob my servant, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid."

A WARNING TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

"The Judicial Section of the American Bar Association ven turing to speak for all the judges, wishes to express this warning to the American people:

"Reverence for law and enforcement of law depend mainly upon the ideals and customs of those who occupy the vantage ground of life in business and society.

"The people of the United States, by solemn constitutional and statutory enactment, have undertaken to suppress the age-long evil of the liquor traffic.

"When, for the gratification of their appetites, or the promotion of their interests, lawyers, bankers, great merchants and manufacturers, and social leaders, men and women, disobey and scoff at this law, or any other law, they are aiding the cause of anarchy and promoting mob violence, robbery and homicide; they are sowing dragon's teeth, and they need not be surprised when they find that no judicial or police authority can save our country or humanity from reaping the harvest."

Unanimously adopted by the Judicial Section (composed only of Judges) of the American Bar Association at the Annual Convention at Cincinnati, August 31, 1921.

We can show our gratitude to God in a beautiful way by showing kindness to his needy children.

In the Track of Revival Fires

By Rev. Joseph W. Kemp, Auckland, N. Z.

NEWS continues to come over the seas of the Lord's doings in the homeland. The fires of revival continue to blaze in many parts of Great Britain and Ireland. Whole communities are being swept by the holy conflagration and expectancy is running high that before long the eagerly looked-for universal awakening may be at hand.

Satan's Counterfeits

It is not to be wondered at that Satan will counterfeit any divinely given movement and allure the unwary to forbidden paths. From one center there comes the surprising bit of information that a Canon of the Church of England has opened his Tyneside Church to an innovation which must surely be unique in the history of any religious revival. "Smokers" are periodically held when shipyard workers and others interested in this forward movement meet in church, and amid the smoking of pipes and cigarettes revival is discussed. While the men smoke the women drink tea usually prepared in the vestry. Hymns and sacred music are provided either by soloists or glee parties

A writer in The Life of Faith says, "in visiting two such gatherings, one was impressed by the keenness for a revival that emerged from these social religious gatherings among the fumes of tobacco and tea. It was strange and interesting to see the blue smoke curling amid the handsome pillars and beams of the church."

It is a good sign that the need of revival is gradually soaking into the souls of the clergy and laity alike, but it may be doubted if such a movement as that indicated does not reveal a lamentable ignorance of the divine laws controlling revival movements. There may be no written law prohibiting "smoking in church," but the practice seems alien to the spirit of genuine revival and its introduction may do more in the long run to retard the work of God than help it on.

Elsewhere throughout the old land revival work of a more encouraging kind is going on. The leading revivalists, Douglas Brown, Gipsy Pat Smith and W. P. Nicholson, are all fully engaged and under their ministry thousands of souls are being brought out of darkness into the light of God. At a great tent mission in Exeter, (which city Captain Smith is visiting for the second time) some 54,000 persons attended the services notwithstanding excessive heat and torrential rains. In the grounds of the Bishop's palace, by the invitation of the Bishop, Captain Gipsy Pat Smith addressed a gathering of nearly 4000 people, the mayor of Exeter presiding, and the Bishop and others speaking. Every day the huge tent has been crowded, and hundreds have found their way from outlying districts to the revival center.

Carrying the Fire

"One incident is worth recording. The Rev. Perry Oliver of Okehampton, 25 miles away, reported that a party from his district motored to the service, and returning with the fire became definite soul-winners, and that on the following Sunday seven persons decided for Christ. Between three and four hundred decisions have been recorded, and we are more than delighted that among this number so many men and women have yielded themselves to Jesus Christ. It was specially inspiring to find at the close of the men's mass meeting last Sunday afternoon quite a number of men definitely decided for Christ. 'Shut Ins' service was arranged for Friday week, and a grand, glad time we had. Some 200 aged and infirm friends, who seldom if ever get to public worship, were brought in motor cars kindly lent for the afternoon. One dear lady who was 96 years of age responded to the questions publicly put to her by Gipsy Pat in clear tones, and with the other special visitors seemed greatly to enjoy the meeting."

Several "missions" which have been in progress in Wales have passed from missions into revivals, a distinction which we must keep well before us. We may organize and carry to a successful issue a mission or an evangelistic campaign, but a revival is a divinely spontaneous thing, and when it comes, men everywhere recognize the movement to be of God.

At Leith, in Scotland, all the evangelical churches have been meeting as one body. Open-air marches have been held and led by various ministers, some of whom confessed that they had never before witnessed for Christ in the open air. These marches attracted a good deal of attention.

"What's a' the stir aboot?" asked one interested spectator.

"D'ye no' ken? The Auld Kirk has joined the Salvation Army," was the reply.

Gradually the revival fire is burning its way into new territory and blazing a track for the King of kings.

Is the Long, Dark Night Passing?

The church is awaking. No well-informed, and clear-sighted observer can deny it. Everywhere in the old land there are evidences of the fact. Is the long dark night passing? So it would seem. The coming dawn is announced, and the promise of the morning is sure. What shall we do? Shall we sit in listless indolence with folding hands, or shall we bestir ourselves and call upon God, giving Him no rest until He make His name a praise in the earth? Encouraging as the signs are, the movement is by no means universal. As yet there is no great cry, but we can discern a widespread awakening sense of helplessness and the need of God which is the precursor of fuller blessing.

It is impossible to hustle the people into a revival. There is a lot of difference between a revival worked up and one prayed down. In the absence of the supernatural, earnest souls may be tempted to turn to substitutes believing they are doing God's service. If the power to transform sinners and save souls is wanting, there are other ministries within reach. When the fires of spiritual devotion burn low it is no unusual thing to resort to the flare and fizzle of the fireworks of a fuzzy activity. Let us beware of mere stage lights which dazzle, but do not burn. Churches destitute of divine fire may devote themselves to good works, but a painted fire warms no one, and few are deceived by it. Earth kindled fires do but allure into deeper darkness. Ideals are not kindled and no sacrifice is inspired. We need the fire of the Holy Ghost and earnest believers, while lamenting its absence, are praying earnestly for its kindling in all our churches. It is the one vital need of the church. We do not need to be afraid of it. It is better to be too hot than lukewarm. We have more than enough of cold Christians—men without passion, emotion, urgency or enthusiasm In the church, prayer is limited to a few, and soul-saving seems relegated to a handful of faithful workers. If the whole church is to be firetouched, there must be repentance and renunciation on the part of the individual. Whatever it involves it must be faced. Our own hearts must be filled and over flow.

A visitor to Wales, during the revival, took his ticket to a place, the name of which he could not pronounce. When he got there he found the place practically deserted, but seeing a burly policeman, he asked him, "Can you tell me where the revival is?" Putting his hands upon his broad chest, the policeman replied, "Yes, sir, it is inside these buttons."

Have we caught the passion?

"While the fire of God is falling,
While the voice of God is calling,
  Brothers, 'Get the Flame!'
While the torch of God is burning,
Men's weak efforts overturning,
  Christians, 'Get the Flame!'

"While the Holy Ghost is pleading,
Human methods superseding,
  He Himself the 'Flame';
While the power hard hearts is bending,
Yield thy own, to Him surrendering,
  All to 'Get the Flame!'

"For the world at last is 'waking,
And beneath His spell is breaking
  Into living flame.
And our glorious Lord is seeking
Human hearts, to rouse the sleeping,
  Fired with heavenly flame."

What Thinking Men Go to Church to Hear

Council of Church Boards of Education
111 Fifth Avenue, New York.
September 20, 1922.

"MR. R. H. EDMONDS,
"Baltimore, Md.
"My dear Mr. Edmonds:

"For some months the writer has been directing a study of the theological schools of the United States and Canada, under the auspices of the committee on Social and Religious Surveys, whose members are Dr. Mott, Professor Ernest D. Burton, Raymond Fosdick, President Faunce, and Dr. James L. Barton. The chairman of our large advisory committee is Bishop Brent of Buffalo. We hope to have the report ready before long.

"As supplementary to this study and at the motion of the director and the staff of workers, we are asking five hundred laymen, members of the various churches, whose loyalty to the kingdom is unquestioned, to give us their suggestions for improving the methods of preparation of ministers. Will you please give me your judgment as to the elements of strength and the elements of weakness in the equipment of the present day ministry?

"We will greatly appreciate as prompt and full a reply as you may feel led to give. Your name will not be used in the compilation of replies unless you so authorize. Will you please write on your business letterhead or indicate your 'line.'

"Very sincerely yours,
"R. L. Kelly,
"Executive Secretary"

The Manufacturer's Record

Baltimore, Sept. 28, 1922.

"Mr. Robert L. Kelly, Exec. Sec.,
"Council of Church Boards of Education,
"111 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.

"My dear Mr. Kelly:

"Acknowledging the receipt of yours of Sept. 20 in which you state that you are asking 500 laymen in various churches to give you their judgment as to the elements of strength and the elements of weakness in the equipment of the present day ministry.

"On this point I have some very sincere convictions, and the most important one is that the ministry loses its power for winning souls to Christ to the extent that it drifts away from the teachings of the Bible, when it either denies the miraculous birth of Christ or the reality of the miracles wrought by Him.

"The man who cannot preach from a deep hearted conviction the great truths which for the last 1900 years have wrought a change in the lives of hundreds of millions of men and women through the acceptance of Christ, and the new birth which has thus come to them, should in my opinion cease to pose as a minister of the gospel and turn his attention to some other work.

"Paul, one of the most learned men of his day, abundantly able, if he had so desired, to discuss politics or economics or any of the other issues of the hour, determined that in his ministry he would know nothing save Christ and Him crucified. But today thousands of men professing to be the ministers of the gospel of Christ, spend their time in the pulpit discussing economic theories, with which they have very little acquantance, or social service as though social service alone would save the souls of men, forgetting that the man who would render the right kind of social service must seek for himself first the kingdom of God, and then seek to carry that kingdom unto others.

"It has been my good fortune during the last twenty-five or thirty years, or more, to sit under the ministry of men whose souls have been fired with a love of Christ and who have preached with no uncertain sound the gospel of man's sin and of the power of the redeeming blood of Christ. These men have without a single exception been successful in leading many souls to Christ. None of them has made the pulpit a forum for the discussion of the political or economic questions of the hour. They have centered their whole service upon trying to lead men to Christ and so teaching them to follow after the teachings of Christ that they will know their duty as citizens and how to meet the problems of the hour in the business world.

"I shall never listen to any other kind of preaching. If I should ever by some accident be so unfortunate as to hear a sermon of any other kind, I would take care not to listen to the same man again.

"The ministers of the gospel under whose preaching it has been my privilege to sit, have been such men as Rev. Robert Stuart MacArthur, Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, Rev. Curtis Lee Laws, the late Dr. John W. L. Williams for forty years pastor of the First Baptist Church of this city, and others here and elsewhere. I make it a rule whenever at home or in other cities, never to attend a divine service where I am not entirely certain that I will hear the gospel of Christ preached in all of its purity, without any of the skepticism of the hour which dares to deny the virgin birth of Christ, or the reality of the miracles mentioned in the Holy Scriptures as having been wrought by Him.

"When every theological seminary in the country teaches these doctrines, and when every pulpit proclaims them, we shall, I think, see a revival of true religion on a scale such as the world has not known for many years.

"Thinking men do not go to church to hear any other doctrine preached, and when they hear some of the skepticism of the day, some of the attempts to distort the plain meaning of the Scriptures, or hear the political and economic questions of the hour discussed, they leave the church in disgust and avoid further attendance.

"Men and women seek in their church attendance to get away from the problems which have harassed them during the busy hours of week days, hoping to hear the story of the Cross—that old, old story which has illuminated the lives of hundreds of millions, brought peace and comfort to troubled hearts, and given to them a new realization of what salvation through the sacrifice on the cross means to mankind.

"Sincerely yours,
"Richard H. Edmonds."

A DOCTRINAL STATEMENT

The Maranatha Baptist Church of Detroit, Mich., Rev. C. Edw. La Reau, pastor, has adopted the following doctrinal statement:

I. We believe in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as verbally inspired of God, and inerrant in the original writings, and that they are of supreme and final authority in faith and life.

II. We believe in one God, eternally existing in three persons, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

III. We believe that Jesus Christ was begotten by the Holy Spirit, and born of the Virgin Mary, and is true God and true man.

IV. We believe that man was created in the image of God, that he sinned and thereby incurred not only physical death, but also that spiritual death which is separation from God; and that all human beings are born with a sinful nature, and, in the case of those who reach moral responsibility, become sinners in thought, word and deed.

V. We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures as a representative and substitutionary sacrifice; and that all that believe in Him are justified on the ground of His shed blood.

VI. We believe in the resurrection of the crucified body of our Lord, in His ascension into heaven, and in His present life there for us, as High Priest and Advocate.

VII. We believe in "that blessed hope," the personal premillennial and imminent return of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

VIII. We believe that all who receive by faith the Lord Jesus Christ are born again of the Holy Spirit and thereby become children of God.

IX. We believe in the bodily resurrection of the just and the unjust, the everlasting blessedness of the saved, and the everlasting, conscious punishment of the lost.

"You Drink, I Die"

By W. H. Morse, M. D., Hartford, Conn.

"ARCHESI. Dead. Cadore."

It was nearly three weeks before the post-card was elucidated by the letter. Then it was still March, and the letter was from one of the Red Cross nurses, and written from Trentino.

"My substitute!" said Willie, trying to look proud, and yet with tears.

"R. Keezer dead!" said Selectman Hall. "That means that we'll not git his poll tax this 'ere year."

The letter was read in church on Sunday morning, March 31, by the pastor. It followed the reading of 2 Samuel 23:14-17.

"That is my text," he said. "Now you shall have the sermon. It is said that there are ministers who, for one reason or another, have not prepared a sermon, and will read one of those of Spurgeon or Phillips Brooks. I have a reason this morning for reading a sermon by another. You have heard the text."

Then it was the letter that he read as the "sermon."

The date was the eighth of the same month and Trentino is in the Isonzo district. It was clearly a business letter.

"By his request, made some months ago when he thought that he might fall in battle, I write as per post card sent by Tuesday mail, to inform you of the death on the Cadore pass of A. Archesi, late of TG, Alpini. He was wounded, legs shot away, in action about eleven in the morning. The ambulance, gathering up the wounded, brought him in. He realized from the first that he could not live, but spoke lightly, saying.

" 'Wonder if Ellis Island will admit a legless man! Guess I will have to sell pencils on the sidewalk for a living, now!'

"After the surgeons were done with him, he lay there quite peaceful, perfectly rational, refusing the opiate. At his left they had laid another Italian, who died soon after noon. On his right lay an Austrian, gunshot wound, shot through lungs, considerable hemorrhage, high fever. I was attending this case, when the man, throwing up his hands, cried.

" 'Bereuh! Ich bereuen!' (That is, 'I repent!') Then, 'Bere! Bere! Geben!' (That is, 'Drink! Drink! Give me drink!').

"A. Archesi moved on his cot, then in a weak voice, said,

" 'O, man, leave beer alone!'

"He spoke in English. He had made a mistake, and thought the other was calling for beer.

" 'Bere geben! Bere!' the man repeated.

" 'O, no!' A. Archesi said with an effort, very low. 'Drink no beer. Drink water. Here!'

"Then with much difficulty, he pulled his water bottle from under his side, detached it, and attempted to hand it to the other. I saw what he wanted, and took it from his hand. The Austrian, seeing that he had got what he wanted, still hesitated about applying the rubber neck to his lips. Evidently A. Archesi thought that the man was reluctant to take his water. Then he whispered.

" 'You drink. I die.'

"The Austrian drank, and as I laid the bottle down, a gurgling sound from the other cot told that which needs no words. A. Archesi breathed his last.

"Twenty-two minutes after three.

"Effects: A handkerchief, one knife, a comb, several buttons, one Italian New Testament, some string. He was buried proper. When the men in TG heard of it, they told me that he (A. Archesi) was accustomed to read from that Testament to the men in the evenings. Much to my surprise, a soldier who is a Roman Catholic, and carried a crucifix, asked for it, and said he would read it aloud as A. Archesi had done.

"A. Archesi, age 24. Burial place marked. Buried during heavy snow storm. He and sixteen others."

That was all. A letter? A sermon.

Back by the door some one started to sing,

"Safe in the arms of Jesus."

The congregation sang. Something seemed to intrude, but it did not break the tune. It was a woman's voice. As the chorus concluded it came plain,

"L'anima mia riposa
All' ombra dell' amor!"

It was Gretta, singing the hymn in Italian, Gretta who was to have married Archesi. Not a tear, but they let her go away from the church without a word after the benediction.

Selectman Hall, reckoning that the assessors would lose two dollars poll tax by the death of the barber who had been called to his colors, took snuff.

"Really he was my substitute, wasn't he, ma?" Willie repeated, walking home by his mother's side. "You know I always want to go as a missionary," he continued, and—I can't, because—But Archesi went to his war, and took that Testament, and the letter told what he did with it! After all, isn't it all right?"

"All right, my dear," his mother returned. "We will go this way."

It was the way that did not lead by the cemetery. Willie coughed. She could not walk that way with him. It was Selectman Hall's orchard off to the north, and the snow was fast disappearing.

They both remembered. It was three years before. Mr. Hall had called at Willie's father's one evening, and had patted him on the head.

"Lookin' kinder pindlin', eh?" he said. "Guess you won't be tough 'nough to go as a miss'nary, as I heard you wanter be! But say, Willie! I'll tell yer! Yer know my golden sweet apple tree. Wal, them city folks allus like them apples. Now you can have ev'ry apple fur two year to sell to 'em."

Wasn't that nice in the man who was sometimes called "skinflint"? Willie thanked him.

Some time in May Mr. Hall's hired man told a neighbor that he "didn't see what the s'lec'man was up ter! He had dug a whole load of manure inter the sile under the golden sweet, and sure as shootin' he then took a ladder an picked off the blossoms!" Willie heard of it, and his father with difficulty consoled him. "Just like Sam Hall!" he said. "Thinks he is bothering you! Knew he never meant it when he said he'd give you the apples."

"Tree didn't bear this year nary an apple!" Mr. Hall remarked dryly. Willie said nothing.

But there came another May, and never in its history had the tree bloomed as full. And in late July what a crop!

"You thort me kinder mean when Pat tole yer I picked off them flowers," he said to the boy. "But I enquired was the St. Georges coming up from York last summer, an' they said they wasn't. An' it is Miss St. George as always wants them apples. So, I knew she'd come this year, an' as it makes a big crop in an off year if you pick off the flowers, I did it, I did! An' now see that crop! Go up an' sell to Miss St. George."

Willie did so, and Miss St. George and her city friends paid well for the apples.

" 'Bout how much didge'r git?" asked Mr. Hall.

It was more than nine dollars. The boy was elated with his contribution to missions. He had made it five dollars for foreign work, and was planning the balance for home missions, when he heard that the barber had been called to his colors.

"I think I should like to give Archesi a real Italian Testament to take with him," he said; and with pride he sent for it, and presented it.

"In about six weeks the orchard will be in bloom!" Willie said.

"In May, dear!" was the mother's reply.

The May of Massachusetts blushed in pink and white luxuriance of bloom when mid-spring was reckoned, and as the petals were being showered they laid away in the cemetery all that was mortal of Willie.

Enclosed find $1.00 for subscription to new subscriber. If you know any poor missionary or Christian Worker that would like your splendid Magazine send it to them, they will receive much blessing from same as I did from the last number (March). I praise God with all my heart for these Conference numbers, as I am unable to hear anything preached, not having the instrument. These are wonderful, full of enlightenment, the gift of the Spirit. Some things are just what I needed. God bless His faithful servants.—Mrs. Kathering Smedley.

The Committee of Seventy Commends the Baltimore Conference

Baltimore, Maryland,
October 16, 1922.

"THE Moody Bible Institute,
"Chicago, Ill.
"Gentlemen:

"The Committee of the Union Bible Conference wish to express their gratitude to God, and their appreciation to you for the conference you recently conducted in our city.

"We all feel that it was the most helpful conference we have had for some time. We have had many encouraging expressions from pastors and people in all our evangelical denominations. The spirit of fairness and brotherly love which characterized all the speakers was especially delightful.

"The idea of greatest value, it seems to us, was the building of the conference around one teacher and supplementing his teaching with addresses on Biblical criticism, the evidences of the Christian faith, practical methods of work, and inspirational addresses.

"Surely God has put His stamp of approval upon this plan. We were delighted with the attendance, and with the fact that He not only brought the people, but that He supplied all the need without our resorting to any undue urging.

"We cherish the hope that this testimony of ours may lead to similar conferences in other cities, feeling assured that they will serve to bind together the evangelical churches in a united witness to 'those things which are most surely believed among us,' and to stir Christian people to a real study of the Bible as God's revelation, thus preparing the way for the showers of blessing whose droppings are beginning to fall in some dry places in other lands.

"On behalf of the Committee,
"Nathaniel G. Grasty, Chairman,
"T. Roland Philips, Secretary."

The Committee includes seventy ministerial and lay representatives from the following denominations: Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal (English and German), Methodist Protestant, Presbyterian (North and South), Protestant Episcopal, Reformed Episcopal, and United Brethren; also officials of the Maryland Tract Society, the Missionary Alliance, city missions, and schools for boys.

THANKSGIVING AND HUMILIATION

LET US GIVE THANKS—For another year of the infinite patience and mercy of God. For every victory in our individual and national life of the Spirit of Christ. For the sense of failure revealing the greatness of our task; for the break-down of worldly policies and the emptiness of earthly success, revealing our need of Christ and His sufficiency. For every adventure of faith through the overcoming of fear and doubt; and God's response to it.

LET US CONFESS—Our failure in past resolves; our lack of obedience; our denial of the spirit of fellowship; our feeble grasp of the range and glory of Christ's kingdom on earth; the closed mind and the hard heart and the censorious temper.

AND LET US PRAY—for the spirit of utter sincerity; the open mind to truth from whatever quarter; the ready heart to carry burdens in fellowship with Christ; the spirit of practical service and sacrificial sympathy; the willingness to accept rebukes and to learn from those to whom by temperament or conviction we are opposed. That being stripped of pride and searched in heart before the Cross, we may claim no standing but in His mercy and grace.

SCRIPTURE READINGS—Ps. 40; Matt. 17: 1-21; II. Cor. 4.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 9

THE CHURCH UNIVERSAL—THE "ONE BODY" OF WHICH CHRIST IS THE HEAD.

LET US GIVE THANKS—For all increase in charity through a new sense of what lies behind our differences. For an awakening social conscience throughout the Church, and a braver claim to spiritual leadership. For a clearer vision of the things in which we can work together for the dominion of Christ. For all scorn suffered through our loyalty; and for all criticism through which we have come to see and confess our failure.

LET US CONFESS—Our frequent blindness to spiritual issues in temporal things; our resentment of rebuke; our bigotry and prejudice; our want of faith in new enterprises; our foolish fears for the truth; our failure to explore and employ the powers which are ours in Christ Jesus; our want of the marks of the Cross, reflecting the spirit of the Lord.

AND LET US PRAY—For a new and burning conviction of the world's need of Christ and of His glorious appearing; for a love that will win its way through all hindrances into the hearts of men; for a new fearlessness and hope; for a message without confusion and a heart without despair. That the desire for unity among the branches of the one church of Christ may be strengthened; that movements towards reunion may be guided by the Holy Spirit in all things; that a new confidence in the evangel of Jesus Christ may pervade the whole fellowship of faith.

SCRIPTURE READINGS—Isa. 42: 1-12; Luke 22:17-30; I. Cor. 13; Eph. 4: 1-16.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 10

NATIONS AND THEIR RULERS

LET US THANK GOD—For the deepening desire of peace; for the settlement of questions in the Far East which have long threatened the future; for efforts towards the restoration of Europe; for a closer international unity; the willingness to forget the past and to try new paths; for the quickened sense of responsibility among rulers in the maintenance of world peace.

LET US CONFESS—The defects of our patriotism; our false ideas of national greatness; our want of sympathy with the difficulties of other nations; the cruelty and inhumanity which have mingled with progress; our slow emancipation from the spirit of national selfishness.

AND LET US PRAY—For all rulers, that they may be fitted for spiritual leadership; have a clear eye for moral issues in political questions, and courage, at all costs, to follow the light. For all nations, that the strong may increasingly respect the right of the weak. That the rising spirit of nationality throughout the world may be safely guided; that a vision of God as holy may be granted to cleanse from vice and selfishness; and a vision of God as love to deliver from disdain or strife; that all nations may come to see their mutual dependence in the family of mankind; that the kingdoms of the world may soon become the kingdom of God and of His Son, Jesus Christ.

SCRIPTURE READINGS—Ps. 33; Ps. 72; Zech. 2: 1-5; Eph. 2: 13-22.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 11

MISSIONS

LET US GIVE THANKS—For the courage and loyalty of mission staffs amid tremendous difficulties. For the rallying of the church to meet the strain. For the power of Christian ideas in the outlook of native governments; and the witness of the Spirit in countless heathen hearts.

LET US PRAY—For true conceptions of the kingdom of Christ and for His coming to reign. For union on the mission fields, and deliverance from intolerance and narrowness, from carelessness and disloyalty. For all missionaries, that grace may be given in the application of Christianity to the practical guidance of life among their converts. That the march of Islam may be stayed; that national movements may become a new Christian opportunity; that Christian men may find an increasing place in native governments. For the deepening unity of all nations in the fellowship of missionary service.

SCRIPTURE READINGS—Is. 35; Acts 4: 5-12; Rom. 10:11-21.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 12

FAMILIES, SCHOOLS, COLLEGES, AND THE YOUNG

LET US THANK GOD—For the increasing demand for education. For the fresh interest awaking in many quarters in the teaching of the Bible. For the growth of movements for child welfare, and the training of the young; for all Christian movements in our schools and colleges, and all they have accomplished.

LET US PRAY—For the recovery of home religion and the practice of family prayer. For the restoring of reverence by which love is purged from passion and base caprice. For the capture by Christ of the student mind and a new recognition of Him as Leader and Friend of youth. For the uplifting of ambition in youth from the spirit of gain into the spirit of service. For increased efficiency in Sunday schools; that the church may lay the burden of the young upon her heart to bring them to God.

SCRIPTURE READINGS—Matt. 19: 13-22; Prov. 3: 1-17; Ps. 119: 9-16; 33-40.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 13

THE HOME BASE, AND THE JEWS

LET US PRAY—That the Church may make a fresh discovery of Jesus Christ, and be delivered from lukewarmness into a spirit of daring and loyalty up to the point of sacrifice. That Christian men and masters may witness for Christ in business and industrial life. That Christ may become real to His church as in the early days, and find the same response of utter surrender. That work among the Jews may not be hindered by past prejudices and race feelings: that the spirit of Christ's forgiveness and yearning love may replace the ancient hostility. For patience to wait God's leisure in results, and zeal that knows no tiring; for deliverance from material values in results; for a new sense of our own resources in Christ and faith to use them; for a love which refuses to be content with an individual or national salvation.

SCRIPTURE READINGS—Isa. 60:1-5, 18-22; John 15:1-17; Eph. 3:14-21; 1 Cor. 1:18-31.

What Other Editors Are Saying

J. H. Ralston

The purpose of this department is to give the views of editors of periodicals, chiefly religious, on matters of interest to our readers. In publishing what they say, we are simply endeavoring to give information with no intention of endorsing or repudiating the views printed, although from time to time, comment may be made upon them in our editorial pages.—Editor.

THE VITAL IN RELIGION

Journal-Courier (New Haven)

The masses want less head and more heart, more that is vital in the religion of the church. Themselves intensely personal in their spiritual experience, they crave a Bible less punctuated with human comment and more literally a sword of the Spirit. There are some things a university cannot teach. Obedience is the organ of spiritual vision—to do the will is to know the doctrine—and here the college campus is on an equality with the shop and factory and field where toil abounds. Feeling that the faith of which they deem themselves the custodians is being refined and explained and illuminated until it becomes an academic exhibit and fails to convict of sin, these influential masses strike but blindly, it is true, but passionately. In their ranks are infinite resources of loyalty and service. Where they lack spokesmen, young champions should rush to interpret their protest.

FUNDAMENTALISM

Evangelical Messenger

The age-old conflict between the liberal and the conservative wings of Protestantism has reached an acute stage in some denominations. Exasperated by the extremely revolutionary teachings of the "new theology" advocates, the conservatives have organized for a determined, aggressive campaign in behalf of "the faith once delivered to the saints."

Ultra liberals who seem to regard the movement as a carefully advertised heresy hunt led by a few prominent religionists, and who decry the recrudescence of "medieval theology," "benighted literalism," "fanatical intolerance," etc., have themselves largely to blame if doctrinal differences in modern Protestantism should issue in unbrotherly asperities and divisions. For consummate arrogance, iconoclastic impatience and air of finality commend us to some of our theological moderns. New crop theologians who expect views confirmed by centuries of veneration to surrender instanter at their ipse dixit; ministers of religion who chisel the name of the Redeemer from their churches; and who reduce the Bible to a collection of fables; who deny the atonement and the resurrection of Jesus Christ; college professors who accept the church's money for undermining the church and who send church-trained students back to their homes scoffing at the religion of their parents—these are the ones responsible for the present unhappy division and for the dissipation of the church's strength in internal conflict.

THE OLD-TIME RELIGION

Daily Bee, (Omaha)

Certainly no one would thrust this country back to the conditions that obtained a generation or two ago, but who among us will deny that we could, as a nation, reach back into the past and bring into the present a few of the things that our fathers and grandfathers had, and which we have neglected of late years. Time was when the family altar was the rule, not the exception. In that time, the family Bible was far more than a mere ornament or family record. Its well-thumbed pages testified to a spirituality and a religious devotion that nerved the pioneers to sacrifices of which the present generation of Americans knows nothing.

Around that family altar in the days long gone by, father, mother and children knelt in humble devotion and gained that help and inspiration that nerved them to splendid deeds and sacrifices. In those days parents were not content to leave to an hour of Sunday-school once a week the religious training of their children. In those days men and women daily lived their religion, and were members of the church militant. Doubtless, we have more polished sermons from the pulpits today than our fathers had, but who is there to assert that these carry more heart appeal, a clearer summons to better living, more conviction of brotherly duty, than were carried by the simpler sermons of Peter Cartwright, Raccoon John Smith, and the circuit riders immortalized by Edward Eggleston?

Might it not be well to re-establish the family altars in this republic? Would we not profit as a nation if we placed less reliance upon man-made laws and earnestly sought to get back to the plain and simple teachings of the Carpenter of Nazareth? That way lies help for the solution of our national ills.

CIVILIZATION NOT EVOLVED FROM BARBARISM

The Eastern Methodist

A. H. Sayce, Professor of Archeology in Oxford University, and admittedly the foremost living archeologist, in summing up the results of Egyptological research among other things has this to say: "Neither in Egypt nor in Babylonia has any beginning of civilization been found. As far back as archeology can carry us man is already civilized, building cities and temples, carving hard stone into artistic form, and even employing a system of pictorial writing. And of Egypt it may be said that the older the culture the more perfect it is found to be. The fact is a very remarkable one in view of modern theories of development and of the evolution of civilization out of barbarism. Whatever may be the reason, such theories are not borne out by the discoveries of archeology. Instead of the progress we should expect we find retrogression and decay; where we look for the rude beginnings of art, we find an advanced society and artistic perfection. Is it possible that the Biblical view is right after all, and that civilized man has been civilized from the outset? If so, we can no longer go to the savage to learn how our first ancestors lived and thought, for the savage will represent either degeneracy from a higher type or else a different race. In any case, the culture and civilization of Egypt and Babylonia appear to spring into existence fully developed, as Greek mythology averred that Athene had sprung from the head of Zeus. Archeology, at all events, has failed to discover the elements out of which, according to the doctrine of evolution, they ought to have grown."

Will the noisy advocates of Darwinism continue to deny the historicalness of the Bible account of creation and the fall of man? We think so, for the reason that a man who accepts and advocates an undemonstrated theory that is in conflict with what the Bible says on any subject, is seldom broad and honest enough to abandon his theory, even when it has been proven to be unscientific and untrue.

PRESENT DAY INFIDELITY

Evangelical Messenger

The irrepressible Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church of New York, has publicly designated by name seven distinguished Baptist theologians connected in one position or another with various institutions of learning throughout the country as infidels. He also includes under this head two eminent Baptist theologians who are now dead. They represent of course the school of liberal theology. Reading quotations from the writings of these men he made this caustic comment:

"I do not wish to be unjust, but in the face of what I have read to you, I do declare that these men who are teaching these things have departed from the faith and, their form of infidelity is far more subtle and seductive and ruinous than the old outspoken, sneering infidelity of the past.

"When we examine it thoroughly within, I wish to ask you, what is the difference between the teaching which these men are giving and the teaching of Voltaire and Bolingbroke, and Tom Paine, and Bob Ingersoll?

"The only one that I can see is a difference of degree and not of kind. These men are simply not believers in the old-time sense at all. They are rationalists, and at best are groping in the darkness of uncertainty.

"And when I use the word 'infidel' I believe I have a right to use it and to apply it to such teachers. Not all of these men have gone as far as some of them, but they are all on the same road, and when they come to their logical

"Professor ———— says that when we teach heaven as the Bible pictures it we are merely 'pushing wind.' I would say to him that since he has manifestly rejected the authority of Jesus as recorded in the Scripture, he is doing more than 'pushing wind.' In all honesty he ought to resign his position and leave the Baptist school where he is now teaching. And if he doesn't do this, then I, for one, feel that he ought to be pushed out."

MODERNIST IS NEW HEAD OF SOOCHOW UNIVERSITY, CHINA

Southern Methodist

Dr. John W. Cline, former president of Soochow University, Soochow, China, has resigned. Rev. W. B. Nance, D.D., has been elected to take his place. Dr. Nance is a leading modernist in China. It was he who, in a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the University, rebuked another member who was contending for the necessity of a belief in the virgin birth of Jesus, by saying to this other member, "B———, I am surprised at your ignorance. Belief in the virgin birth is like a belief in the bodily resurrection of Jesus," (B——— himself not believing in the bodily resurrection of Jesus).

Prof. T. C. Chao, who is at the head of the Bible Department of the University, is also a leading (Chinese) Modernist—a graduate of Vanderbilt University. Brother Chao has appeared in the public prints in China suggesting the need for a revision of the Apostles' Creed which he says "contains certain unessential elements which debar many serious-minded persons from confessing Christ openly." And in stating his own creed, among other things, he said of Christ, "I believe in Jesus, who through holy living and sacrificial love achieved character and became God's only begotten Son," etc.

Brother Chao as head of the Bible Department of the University, is responsible for the Christian ideals of the nearly 500 students in the school.

With a leading missionary "Modernist" of China as head of our University, and with a leading Chinese "Modernist" in charge of instruction in the Bible —not to mention other Modernist instructors in the school—will not God some day ask those of us who are paying the bills to give this kind of teaching to the young men of China who came trustingly to us for Christian instruction, whether we have not defrauded them of their rights?

It is bad enough thus to defraud our own—as we are doing at some institutions in the homeland. But to go to a heathen land and give what we are giving, under the guise of bringing the Christian light and life to a darkened, starving people—God pity us.

Better Speaking

Proverbs 10:10-21, 31, 32

The first topic of each month during the present year has been devoted to a study of "Better Things"—as for example, Better Meetings, Better Purpose, Better Home Life, Better Bible Reading, Better Sabbath Keeping, Better Friendships, Better Training, Better Recreation, Better Giving, Better Work, Better Thinking, and now Better Speaking. Evidently the biggest room in the world is the room for improvement. The hardest of all these topics has been left until now. It is written, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man and able to bridle the whole body" (James 3:2). The modern rendering of this verse from Weymouth's translation is, "If there is any one who never stumbles in speech, that man has reached maturity of character and is able to curb his whole nature." What an achievement is embodied in these words! The questions arise, Is it possible? May it become actual in experience? In the power of human resolution, No, "For the tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil full of deadly poison." No laws or rules can regulate and master it. But what human resolution or device cannot accomplish can yet be done by the power of Him with whom all things are possible.

"Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." All the statements found in the verses comprising the Scripture lesson go back to this principle. Whether one shall be a "prating fool" as in verse ten or a "well of life" as in verse eleven; whether one's words shall be wise and acceptable or whether they will be froward and perverse (vv. 31, 32) is determined by the condition of the heart as representing the inner life. "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." But how shall the heart be kept? Only as the prayer of Ephesians 3:17 is realized in experience. In this matter as in all other matters, "The Lord Himself is thy keeper."

Some Things I Believe

John 11:17-27, 41-46

Such a topic as this is indeed a challenge. These are the days in which all the positive and outstanding things of our historic Christian faith are negatived or denied by a system that calls itself by the name of "Liberalism" or "Modernism." It professes to know a lot of things that are "not so," especially about matters which throughout the past centuries have proved to be "the power of God unto salvation." It is destructive and not constructive. It refuses to answer such a question as the one suggested by our topic, "What do I believe?" and prefers to talk about "What I do not believe." And in talking of this, every great and grand doctrine of evangelical faith would in its turn be denied.

Looking now at our Scripture lesson, let the question be asked in all honesty, What do I believe? Do you believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, the one promised and sent by the Father, as clearly expressed in verse 27, and do you believe that the result of faith in Him is eternal life and a new position as a child of God, as clearly set forth in John 20:31, 1 John 5:1 and Galatians 3:26? Do you believe that Christ is the Lord and Giver of life as in verses 43 and 44? That He will some day raise all the dead, just as surely as He raised Lazarus, simply by speaking a word? Do you believe He is able to save to the uttermost? All of these things ought to be most heartily believed because they are declared to be so in the Word of God. See John 5:28, 29; Hebrews 7:25 and Philippians 3:20, 21. Do you believe in the Sermon on the Mount as practical for regenerated people? The worldly cannot live such a life, but you can if you are a child of God, by faith in Christ Jesus. For the Holy Spirit now dwells within you and the fruit of the Spirit as recorded in Galatians 5:22, 23, meets all the requirements of the Sermon on the Mount. In closing look carefully at John 16:31 and answer as in the Lord's presence, the question found there.

The Glorious Gains of Fidelity

Revelation 2:1-10

All through these seven letters to the churches there rings out the promise of reward to "him that overcometh." The glorious gains of fidelity, or in other words, the rewards of over-coming are found in 2:7, 10, 17 and 25, and in 3:5, 12 and 21. A careful reading of these verses will show that the incentives to overcoming are powerful and the rewards for it are precious. Without stopping to inquire into the meaning of all things implied in the promises here made, it is evident that such things as righteousness, honor, promotion, power and fellowship with the Lord are to be expected and realized.

The hindrances to fidelity mentioned in these letters will be easily recognized as the outstanding obstacles of all time, the lack of love as an impelling force, the presence of tribulation, the danger of covetousness, slothfulness and half heartedness in our devotion to Christ, are the pronounced obstacles. Against these we need to be warned just as much as our fellow-Christians did when these letters were written.

If the gains of fidelity are glorious, how shall we secure the glory? What principles are vital in order to overcome? The answer may be found in Revelation 12:11. "They overcame him (that is Satan) by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony and they loved not their lives even unto the death." In the example of those of whom these things are recorded we shall discover the three-fold secret of victory, and by the adoption of the three principles contained in this verse, we too shall be numbered with the overcomers.

First, we must know the sufficiency of the blood of Christ to deal with sin. The death of our Lord meets every requirement involved in our sinning. The guilt of sin is removed, the power of sin is broken and deliverance from the very presence of sin, as the ultimate outcome of salvation, is assured. Secondly, our Christian testimony should have no uncertain sound. Assert in the power of faith of what God declares to be true of you. As a Christian believer, declare your position as one who is in Christ, a member of His body, infilled by His spirit and whenever opportunity affords, testify that you are in Christ and for Christ now and forever. In the third place, sacrificial service must be recognized as an essential for the overcomer. There is a sense in which all Christians should enter into the purpose and feeling of the Apostle when he said, "I count not my life dear unto myself." The willingness to spend and to be spent for Christ's sake must possess the heart of him who purposes to stand with those who overcome.

How to Have Christmas All the Year

Luke 2:20

The only way to have Christmas all the year is to have a Saviour who saves all through the year. "Unto you is born a Saviour which is Christ the Lord." This is the angelic message which concerns a Saviour who saves from sin (Matt. 1:21), and this present evil world (Gal. 1:4), who saves from the dominion of the law, (Rom 7:6); who saves from the powers of darkness (Col. 1:13), who saves from the fear of death (Heb. 2:15), and who saves from the wrath to come (1 Thess. 1:10). This is the kind of a Saviour that God provides for every sinner and who may be received in simple faith as a sinner's sufficient Saviour. Is He yours? Have you received Him? Do you know Him and rest in Him, and endeavor to serve Him? If you can answer these questions in the affirmative then you will have Christmas all the year.

Notice now the song of the angels, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, goodwill toward men." There is order as well as gladness in these words—"Glory to God—on earth peace." This is the order of experience. Not until one can say, "Glory to God" for salvation, for sonship, and for service; glory to God for the ransom price that Christ paid and the righteous redemption resulting from that ransom; glory to God for the salvation that satisfies the heart and meets the demand of conscience; glory to God who made Christ to be unto us righteousness, santification and redemption, not until some such song or shout of "glory" ascends to God, can one know what it is to have peace, the peace of God that passeth understanding.

The Shepherds believed the message concerning the Saviour and acted upon it. They did not go to Bethlehem to see whether the message was true but in the words of verse 15 they said one to another, "Let us go and see this which has come to pass." As a consequence they found Him of whom the angels had spoken and as an inevitable result they returned praising God for all they had heard and seen.

Lessons for the New Year
Psalm 90:1-17

This is a Psalm of meditation. The writer contemplates first the greatness of God as the Infinite and Eternal One. Then he thinks of the frailty and brevity of the life of man. Compare verses 1, 2, and 4 with verses 3, 5, and 6.

It is well to think of these things at this season, so that we shall be sobered and steadied amid the folly and frivolity that mark and mar the incoming of the New Year. Heathenish New Year customs largely prevail. Noise and feasting predominate in social observances. But with these the true child o God has nothing to do.

Meditation leads to petition. Impressed by the greatness of the divine and the littleness of the human, the writer prays in verse 12, "So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." A timely and fitting prayer is this. In view of the brevity of life here and now, teach us Lord, to be wise, wise in the use of our time, wise in the use of our strength, wise in the use of our money, wise in our choices, wise in our decisions. Could one pray for anything more desirable or more necessary as another year approaches and as we enter into it? Observe that this petition is supplemented by others as found in verses 14 and 17. The cry to be satisfied is the cry of the heart seeking satisfaction at the right place. "Satisfy us early with thy mercy that we may rejoice and be glad all our days." The satisfied heart rejoices, especially when it is God who satisfies. For He it is who satisfies not only with good things but with Himself. In this way the prayer of verse 17 finds its fulfilment. "The beauty of the Lord our God is upon us and the work of our hands is prospered." Over against verses 8 and 9 we should place Hebrews 9:12, 24 and 10:17, 18. This will give us the proper Christian view, the view of those who have put faith in Jesus Christ and to whom He is personal Saviour and Lord.

Lessons from the Psalms
Psalm 1:1-6

The first Psalm presents a picture of the blessed or happy man. To be blessed in the Scripture sense is to be happy—righteously, that is, to be in harmony not only with one's surroundings but to be right with God, having the sin question settled and the heart confident and happy in Him. There is a fourfold view of the happy man in this Psalm.

First, the negative side: "He walks not in the counsel of the wicked." "He stands not in the way of sinners." "He sits not in the seat of the scornful." In other words he has made the great decision, he has chosen God and godliness and turned his back upon evil and that of itself brings blessing.

Secondly, the positive side: "His delight is in the law of the Lord and in His law he meditates," not merely on Sunday but continually—"day and night." The testimony, or the Word of God, is not only a rule of conduct but the delight of his heart; it affords him joy as well as instruction. In it he finds the necessary comfort and strength. See Joshua 1:8.

The third point of view is the figurative. This happy man is like a tree, a planted tree, not a seedling. Moreover he is planted by the rivers of water and as a result he brings forth fruit in season. His life is a blessing to others and God is glorified in Him. In the time of drought, when spiritual conditions about him are disappointing and distressing, his leaf does not wither, for he is not dependent upon external conditions, but draws upon the hidden and inner resources, and his soul is constantly refreshed.

Last of all this happy man is looked at comparatively. He is presented in contrast with the ungodly who are altogether unlike himself; they are unstable, easily moved like the chaff which the wind driveth away. In the judgment they shall not stand the test, nor have any place with the righteous in the ultimate destiny of things.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

Grant Stroh

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

MEETING THE RURAL SITUATION

C. W. R., Dodge City, Kan.

Question: What are you doing to save the situation in rural communities? The condition in most churches is extremely distressing.

Answer: It is not the "situation" that needs saving, but the men and women who make the situation. This cannot be done by teaching improved methods of agriculture or by more attractive social features. A spirit of worldliness and indifference has control of the situation. Nothing has power to change this but the gospel. Therefore the Moody Bible Institute is training men and women in the Word of God and in methods of practical efficiency, to go into these rural districts and get people saved and devoted to the Lord Jesus Christ.

IMPORTANCE OF BAPTISM

A. R. M., Etna Green, Ind.

Question: Do you believe and teach that baptism is necessary to salvation? See Mark 16:16 and Acts 2:38. You do not seem to lay much importance upon baptism.

Answer: In the sense of "baptismal regeneration," which is a doctrine of the Romish church, we do not believe that baptism is essential to salvation; but we do believe that it is necessary to be baptized for it is an evidence of our faith in Jesus Christ, since He has so commanded. In Mark 16:16 baptism is the external "signature" of belief on the Lord Jesus Christ, just as in Romans 10:10 the "confession with the mouth" is an external evidence of personal faith. Likewise in Acts 2:38 baptism does not procure the the remission of sins, but is the "visible seal of that remission." Only God can forgive sins, and He can do it, and has done it, apart from baptism; but repentance for sin and submission to baptism is an evidence upon our part that we are worthy of forgiveness.

RECOGNITION IN HEAVEN

F. B. Edmonton, Alta.

Questions: (1) Have we any Scripture proof that we shall recognize our loved ones in heaven? (2) Kindly explain Luke 16:8. (3) Will the Jews be gathered to Jerusalem and be converted before Christ comes?

Answers: (1) While we have no positive Scripture proof the alternative is unthinkable. What would "mansions" suggest if not fellowship with friends? Paul's great desire was to depart and be "at home with the Lord" (2 Cor. 5:9, R. V.). When the heavens were opened to Stephen he saw and recognized Jesus (Acts 7:56). If Jesus was recognizable in his glorified body, shall not also they be recognizable whose bodies shall be made like unto His own glorious body (Phil. 3:21)? (2) "Wiser" or "shrewder" in respect to their own interests in the acquisition and use of the things of the present world. Our Lord would thus stir up "the children of light" to a still wiser use of the mammon of unrighteousness in view of rewards in the next world. (3) Many, not all, Jews will be gathered to Jerusalem prior to the return of their Messiah, but not all will be then converted. The general conversion follows (Rom. 11:25, 26).

THE LAST TRUMP

R. K. C., Lashburn, Sask.

Questions: (1) Is there a relation between the "last trump" of I Corinthians 15:52 and the seventh trumpet of Revelations 11? (2) What advantage have the saints of the Rapture over the Tribulation saints? (3) Is The True Meaning of Prayer, by Harry Emerson Fosdick, a sound book?

Answers: (1) Some Bible students make them identical, but in our judgment they are not the same. In I Corinthians 15:52, the trumpet is to summon the dead saints and to change the living. It is called "the trump of God" in I Thessalonians 4:16 and has nothing to do with wicked men. In Revelation 11 all the trumpets bring judgments upon the world for its wickedness. The seventh is "last" in the series and introduces the kingdom of the Son of man upon the earth, while the trump in Corinthians and Thessalonians calls God's people away from this earth. (2) Escape from the terrors and sufferings of the Great Tribulation would surely be a tremendous advantage. (3) While we would not wholly condemn The Meaning of Prayer, yet since its author has now openly confessed that he is upon the side of the rationalists and in a sense their spokesman, we feel it unsafe to endorse any of his writings.

CHRIST AT THE RIGHT HAND OF GOD

W. S. B., Sandwich, Ont.

(1) God is omnipresent, yet the throne of God is in heaven. There also Christ now is, so far as His bodily presence is concerned. This is what He had in mind when speaking of His going away from His disciples. Although absent in body, at God's right hand, He is spiritually present in the heart of every believer in the person of the Holy Spirit. This indwelling also includes the Father, for they are three in one.

(2) Your question about the source of Moses' knowledge is well answered in a phamphlet, Did Moses Know? by C. E. Putnam, published by the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 826 LaSalle Ave., Chicago, Ill.

(3) The only way we can love God supremely and our neighbor as ourselves is to have His love shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit. This love is not a natural affection, but a supernatural.

(4) God is "a jealous God" in the sense that He will take no second place in our worship or in our affections.

(5) God is not unjust to visit iniquity unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Him; especially when we consider that He shows mercy unto thousands of generations of them that love Him and keep His commandments.

2 THESSALONIANS 2:1-9

A. J. F., Carthage, Ind.
O. G. K., Richland Center, Wis.

Read the passage in the Revised Version. In verse 2 the expression is "the Day of the Lord," which so often is alluded to and described in the Old Testament as introduced by judgments and terror. It probably includes the millennium. In 1 Thessalonians Paul had said that the Day of the Lord would come as a thief in the night, and as a day of wrath so far as the world is concerned, but it would not take instructed Christians by surprise (I Thess. 4:2-4,9). But false teachers were disturbing the church by teaching that this Day of the Lord was at hand, even now present (2 Thess. 2:2, mar.). The apostle calms their fears by telling them that before that day comes there will be an apostasy, the revealing of the Antichrist, and the removal of a restraining influence which was preventing the revealing of the Man of Sin and also checking the spread of lawlessness. We ought not to confuse the fact of the coming of Christ and our gathering to Him with the coming of the Day of the Lord. The one truth is a message of comfort for the Christian (I Thess. 4:18), while the other is a warning for the unbeliever. First, the Lord descends into the air for His saints, who at that time are gathered to Him (I Thess. 4:16, 17). Later He descends to the earth "with all His saints" (I Thess. 3:13), at which time He will judge Antichrist and His followers and set up the kingdom of the Son of man. We do not know when Christ will come for His Church, but certain events are to intervene before the coming of the Day of the Lord, such as indicated in these verses.

(1) The Flood lasted one solar year. (2) The Bible does not mention the color of Adam or Eve or of Noah and his family.

The probable reason why the slaughter of infants in Bethlehem is not mentioned by Josephus is that it was of minor importance in comparison with the far greater atrocities of Herod. A fact in the Bible is not less true because uncorroborated by contemporaneous witnesses or by secular history.

M. H. B., Searcy, Ark.

The "Sabbath rest," mentioned in Hebrews 4:9, is a spiritual rest in the present time for those who have faith in God to take it, and in which there is a cessation of resting in our own works (v. 10).

In Genesis we have the fatherhood of God by creation, but we should not go to the writings of Moses to prove that God was the Father of the human nature of Jesus Christ.

The Story of the Good Samaritan
Luke 10: 25-37

Golden Text:—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself,"—Lev. 19:18.

I. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-28).

1. The Lawyer's Question (v. 25). "Lawyer" here means one versed in religious law, the Scriptures—not lawyer in our modern sense of that term. It would more nearly correspond to a theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trap Jesus—to induce Him to take such a stand as would weaken His influence as a teacher. He expected Jesus to set forth some new ceremonies which would conflict with or disparage the law.

2. Jesus' Question (v. 26). Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer he did not evade his question. He sent him to the law, the field which was familiar to him. He thus was robbed of his own weapon.

3. The Lawyer's Reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man. This expresses the whole of human duty.

4. Jesus' Reply (v. 28). This straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had or can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. Man's failure to measure up to this requirement is his condemnation. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust He was defeated on his own grounds and convicted of guilt.

II. Who Is My Neighbor (vv. 29-37).

1. The Lawyer's Question (v.29) This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience, and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a captious question. Lawyer-like he sought to get off by raising a question as to the meaning of words.

2. Jesus' Answer (vv 30-37). This more than answered the lawyer's question. In the parable of the Good Samaritan He makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor, or what loving a neighbor means Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear who is my neighbor, but made it clear that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor. He thus was convicted of not having been a neighbor

(1) Who is my neighbor? This destitute and wounded man left on the highway by the robbers is the man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door or on the other side of the world. Those who have the Spirit of Christ can see their neighbors on every hand. (2) What being a neighbor means. Our supreme concern should not be "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is, (a) To be on the lookout for those in need of our help (v.33). (b) To have compassion on the needy (v.33). Christ's compassion was aroused as He came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. All those who have His nature will be likewise moved. (c) To give to those in need (v.34). Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy, but are unwilling to personally minister to them. Many times the personal touch is more important than the material aid. We should give ourselves as well as our money. (d) To bind up wounds (v.34). (e) To set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v.34). This is proof that love is genuine. Christians will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those who have need. This kind of sympathy is greatly needed today. (f) To bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v.34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. Much Christian service is spasmodic, helps and then leaves a man to take care of himself. (g) To give money (v.35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God His only Son. It cost Christ His life. May we go and do likewise!

Jesus Among Friends and Foes
Luke 10: 38-42; 11: 14-54

Golden Text:—"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you,"—John 15:14.

1. Jesus in the Home of Friends (Luke 10:38 42).

There is no place where true character is so clearly revealed as at home. The world is much richer because of this scene in the Bethany home.

1 His Reception (v 38). Martha was the head of the home, therefore she received Him. We are not told as to why it was her house; perhaps it was because she was the oldest of the family. Jesus must have greatly appreciated the fact that there was one home into which He was welcome. It would be a fine thing if all homes were opened to receive Jesus.

2. Mary Sitting at Jesus' Feet (v.39). She, of fine spiritual discernment, knew that sitting at the Lord's feet and hearing His Word was that which would please Him most. He was more concerned with opportunity to reveal Himself to human hearts than with the eating of well-prepared meals. Mary's way of entertaining Jesus was more acceptable with Him than that of Martha. She was getting that for which her heart yearned, and at the same time pleasing the distinguished Guest.

3. Martha Cumbered About Much Serving (v.40). Both sisters loved the Lord. It would be impossible to say which loved the more; but Martha was bent on providing a fine meal for Him. She was trying to do so many things that she was on the verge of distraction. This had so completely got on her nerves that she found fault with Jesus for permitting Mary to leave the kitchen to listen to His teaching. Not only did she criticize her sister and Jesus, but she assumed the authority to command Him to send Mary back to the kitchen to help.

4. Jesus' Answer (vv. 41, 42). (1) Rebuked Martha (v. 41). He did this tenderly, for He knew that she loved Him sincerely. Many today who truly love Jesus are distracted with the many things in serving. (2) Defends Mary (v. 42). He declared that but one thing was needful and that Mary had chosen that good part which could not be taken away from her. The one thing needful is a heart for the Lord which brings to Jesus its possessor to hear His teaching. Those who have chosen this good part can never be robbed of it. Because of this choice and what she gained through the Lord's teaching, in the day when death entered the home she was calm, and in the hour when all the rest of the disciples were slow to discern she rendered loving service to the Lord in anointing Him in anticipation of His burial.

II. Jesus Among Foes (11:14-23; 29-32; 37-54).

1. Charged with Being in League with the Devil (vv. 14-23). Being unwilling to receive Him as the Son of God and yet unable to account for His mighty works, they declared that He was casting out demons through Beelzebub, the chief of the demons. He exposed the fallacy of their reasoning by showing that such would array Satan against himself and therefore would destroy his own kingdom.

2. Refused to Believe His Miracles (vv. 29-32). They asked for a sign, to which He replied that they would have a sign from heaven in His death and resurrection. He reminded them, however, that their request showed unbelief surpassing that of the heathen queen of the South, and the wicked people of Nineveh

3. Wickedness Denounced (vv. 37-54). He pronounced six woes upon those who were opposing Him and seeking His destruction; three upon the Pharisees and three upon the lawyers Religion with these people had degenerated into matters of form and ritual. This should be taken to heart by all, for it is ever the tendency among us. Sometimes there are to be found unrealities in our lives of which we may not be conscious. (1) The Pharisees (vv. 37-41). These He denounced for (a) punctiliously observing some minute rites while at the same time breaking the Ten Commandments. They carefully tithed the small herbs of the garden while practicing injustice to their fellow-men and withholding love from God. He pointed out to them the folly of attending to these external acts while the heart was filled with wickedness. It was as absurd as merely washing the outside of an unclean cup. A more important preparation for eating would be to make some gift to the poor, rather than the washing of the hands. However,

Program for Founder's Week Conference Next Issue.

He does not disregard the desirability of washing before eating. "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." (b) Desire for public recognition (v. 43). This is a common sin today. Vanity and pride may be asserting themselves while we are unconscious of their presence. Love for titles of respect and position of prominence is a very common sin. (c) Feigning humility (v. 44). He compares their hypocrisy to graves which are on a level with the ground and may be stepped upon unconsciously by some one and thus defiled. We can avoid those who made their vanity known by arrogant boasting, but some are filled with this same wickedness who do not thus make it known.

(2) The lawyers (vv. 45-54). Jesus' strictures on the hypocritical Pharisees aroused the lawyers, one of whom indignantly declared, "You are insulting us also." In replying to this Christ pronounced three woes upon them: (a) for placing burdensome requirements upon the people to which they themselves would not submit (v. 46). Religion should not be made irksome. To do so is displeasing God. (b) For the murder of God's prophets (vv. 47-51). He shows that their attitude toward Him was the same that was shown to the prophets by their fathers. Their diabolical murdering was done in the name of religion. Religious fanaticism has done much wickedness, even killing God's holy prophets and messengers. Jesus declares that their guilt was the same as that of their fathers and that their generation would be held responsible for all that the fathers had done. (c) For keeping back the knowledge of God by false interpretation of the Scriptures (vv. 52-54). There is no wickedness perhaps so great as that of supposed teachers of God's Word who keep its precious truths from the people by perverting its meaning. These woes apply to many professed teachers today. What awful judgment must befall those who are thus withholding the knowledge of God from the people! This exposure of their hypocrisy set them in a rage, causing them to more violently hate Him.

A Lesson in Trust and Preparedness
Luke 12:13-40

Golden Text:—"The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment."—Luke 12:23.

The Lesson Committee has given the choice between a Christmas lesson and this one. Since on October 8 we had a lesson on the birth and childhood of Jesus, many will doubtless prefer to have this new lesson. However, those desiring the Christmas lesson can go back to the month of October for helps on the lesson.

1. A Warning Against Covetousness (vv. 13-21).

1. The Occasion (vv. 13-15). One of the company requested Jesus to be umpire in a disputed estate. Two brothers were in trouble over an inheritance. We are not told who was to blame, perhaps the trouble was the result of covetousness on the part of both. Christ refused to enter the sphere of the civil law and warned against the spirit of avarice. Christ's mission was preeminently spiritual. His action is a warning against the church or against the minister departing from the spiritual to perform a civil and commercial service. His teachings embrace principles which will adjust all such matters. The minister who devotes his attention to inculcating these principles into the hearts of the people will accomplish infinitely more than to invade the realm of the civil and commercial. The church and state should be separate.

2. Enforcement of the Warning (vv. 16-21). The parable of the rich man shows clearly that to be concerned with earthly riches while neglecting God is the height of folly. The Lord's warning is of great importance today; for many are seeking gold and forgetting God. Note (1) his increase in goods (v. 16). His riches were rightly obtained, for the ground brought forth plentifully. This shows that a man may be rich because of the Lord's blessing upon Him. It is not sinful to be rich. The money of some rich men is unquestionably without taint. (2) His perplexity (v. 17). His land was producing more than his barns would hold. His perplexity was to know what to do. He did not want it to go to waste. No frugal man wants to see the legitimate fruits of his toil perish. If he had possessed right views of life and a sense of stewardship before God, he would have seen that his barns, at least, had enough for his personal needs, and that he could have distributed his surplus to the needy and for benevolent purposes. He could have found pleasure in this service and escaped the task of building larger barns. Many honest and honorable rich men have been caught in the trap of avarice. (3) The fatal choice (vv. 18, 19). He chose to enlarge his barns and give up his life to ease and luxury. It ought to be a delightful task for men whom God has made rich to devote their time and energy to the distribution of their possessions to benevolent purposes. How sad to see capable men the victims of their circumstances! Man owns nothing; he owes everything to God. (4) The awful indictment (vv. 20, 21). God calls him a fool. This is no arbitrary judgment. Riches furnish neither contentment in life nor guarantee continuance of life. It is not only foolish, but madness to forget God while engaged in heaping up riches. Soon the man must die, and his riches may get into the hands of unworthy men or even curse the lives of the children who inherit them.

11. The Certain Cure for Anxiety (vv. 22-34).

Having shown the folly of the rich man who gained gold and lost God, He now urged the disciples to trust God and dismiss all anxious care. He assures them that they need not be anxious even for the necessities of life. Note:

1. The Argument (vv. 22, 23). This is summed up in one brief sentence, "The life is more than food, and the body is more than raiment." The God who gave the life and made the body should be trusted to provide food and clothing.

2. The Illustrations (vv. 24-28). (1)

Real Bible Scholarship

Brains and belief often go together—though some would have us believe they do not. Some of the world's greatest Bible scholars are today making masterly contributions in defense of "the faith once for all delivered." The Sunday School Times brings you the most illuminating findings of:

Sir William M. Ramsay, D. D., D. C. L., LL. D., the greatest living authority on the archaeology of the New Testament, who will write, on the lessons in Luke, on "Closing Events in Our Lord's Life-time."

Professor Robert Dick Wilson, Ph. D., D. D., of Princeton Theological Seminary, master of twenty-six languages, who will continue his amazing exposure of the weakness and unscholarly methods of the Higher Critics.

Professor A. T. Robertson, Ph. M., D. D., LL. D., of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, the recognized authority on New Testament Greek, who will write, on the lessons in Luke, on "Some Elements of Greatness in Christ's Teachings."

The Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D. D., formerly of Oxford, Eng., who can "deal with the most subtle difficulties of scientific and theological thought and at the same time present a message fitted to the understanding and heart of a little child."

Few men have done or could do what Professor Melvin Grove Kyle, D. D., LL. D., does in bringing the choicest results of Bible research in every field of the world promptly before Christian men and women in his Archaeological Department in God's care for the fowls (vv. 24-26). The ravens do not sow nor reap—they have not storehouse nor barn, yet they live, for God feeds them. If God does not forget the fowls certainly He would do more for His children, created in His likeness and image, and redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. (2) God's care for the flowers of the field (vv. 27, 28). If God is so careful of those flowers which appear but for a day, how much more will He clothe His children!

3. The Exhortations (vv. 29-34). (1) The getting of food and clothes should not be the chief concern. To give these things anxious concern is to imitate the heathen, who lacks the knowledge of God's care over His children. (2) Seek the kingdom of God (v. 31). Those who make God's kingdom first shall have all their needs supplied (Phil. 4:19). (3) Be not afraid (v. 32). God's good pleasure is upon His own, and all good things He will give. (4) Practice self-denial in order to be able to give gifts to those in need (vv. 33, 34). The doing of such deeds will tend to lift the thoughts upward to God—to trust Him.

III. Be Ready for the Coming of the Lord (vv. 35-40).

Having warned the disciples against the acquisition of worldly goods, while forgetting God, and shown them the needlessness of anxiety for food and clothes, He shows them the blessedness of being in a state of readiness when the Lord shall come. Conviction as to the certainty of the Lord's coming is the sure cure for worldiness and anxious care. This attitude of heart He made clear by two parables—that of the returning of the Lord and that of the thief. The Lord will be so pleased with those who are waiting for Him that He will take delight in sitting at the banquet with them, and even serve them. The parable of the thief shows that the time of the Lord's coming is not known. The only way to act is to be ready at all times.

Review

Golden Text:—"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor."—Luke 4:18.

Since all the lessons of the quarter, save one are from Luke, and the central and unifying theme is Jesus Christ, a profitable way to conduct the review, as suggested in Peloubet's Notes, would be to assign the following topics to the members of the class upon which to make a brief report:

1. Christ's Mission to the World.
2. Christ's Helpers and How He Used Them.
3. Christ's Divine Power and How He Exercised It.
4. Christ's Methods of Teaching.
5. Christ's Love in Its Many Manifestations.
6. Christ's Courage and How He Showed It.
7. Christ's Foes and His Dealings with Them.
8. Christ's Pity for Sinners.
9. Christ Passing Through Human Experience.
10. Christ as a Missionary and an Organizer.
11. Christ's Relation to the Father.
12. Christ's Preparation for the Climax of His Life.

Another way would be by summarizing each lesson, stating the outstanding topic and teaching of each lesson. The following suggestions are offered:

Lesson 1. The birth of John the Baptist, when from the human standpoint it was impossible, was announced to his father Zacharias. For his unbelief he was smitten with dumbness. God expects of his servant unquestioned belief in what He promises.

Lesson 2. Jesus was born in Bethlehem just as the prophet had foretold some 700 years before, and at the age of twelve years he consciously entered into the services of God's house. Though conscious of His divine being and mission, He lived a life of filial obedience.

Lesson 3. John the Baptist's ministry was a preparation for the coming of Christ. He fearlessly preached repentance and pronounced judgment upon the impenitent. Though a mighty preacher, he humbly declared that Christ was immeasurably greater than himself.

Lesson 4. Jesus Christ after His baptism was led by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the Devil. The purpose was to test the reality of the incarnation. The result was a complete victory—a demonstration of His ability to save to the uttermost all who trust Him.

Lesson 5. Isaiah foretold the golden age upon the earth when Messiah shall reign. The coming of Jesus Christ will mean awful judgment to the wicked, but Lesson 6. While Jesus was here He healed all kinds of diseases and cast out devils. He authenticated His mission and proved His power to forgive sins by miraculous deeds.

Lesson 7. Jesus taught the disciples the principles which should govern in His kingdom. Only those who have been born from above can love their enemies.

Lesson 8. While in Simon's house at dinner, a woman who had been a notorious sinner anointed Jesus' feet and wiped them with her hair. The sinner's gratitude to Jesus for forgiveness is measured by the apprehension of sins forgiven.

Lesson 9. Jesus went forth throughout every city preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. The fact of salvation for sins through a crucified Redeemer is truly glad tidings.

Lesson 10. Jesus sent forth missionaries with the realization of the big task before them, and with power to perform supernatural deeds to authenticate their mission. Those who realize the bigness of their task will earnestly pray that the Lord will send forth laborers into His harvest.

Lesson 11. Jesus' reply to the question of a certain lawyer, "Who is my neighbor?" shows that the all-important consideration is not, "Who is my neighbor?" but, "How can I show that I am a neighbor?"

Lesson 12. A certain rich man in his perplexity over his prosperity decided to provide larger stores and settle down to a life of sensuous indulgence. The one who lays up treasures on earth and is not rich toward God is a fool.

Jesus Healing on the Sabbath
Luke 13:10-17

Golden Text:—"It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day."—Matthew 12:12.

What Jesus did on the Sabbath frequently brought him into serious conflict with the Pharisees. Through the petty rules and regulations they had made this holy day which God designed as a day of rest and the doing of deeds of mercy a day of burden and hardship. Jesus did not disregard the Sabbath, but broke through their traditions and showed that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. Religious rites and ceremonies should not be hardened into fetters to bind the worshiper.

1. Jesus Teaching on the Sabbath Day (v. 10).

It was the Lord's custom to go to the place of worship on the Sabbath day. His disciples will imitate Him in this. At the place of worship there is opportunity to be nearest to God to worship Him, and to our fellow-man to sympathize and to show mercy and kindness.

II. Jesus Healing on the Sabbath (vv. 11-13).

Jesus was first a teacher and afterward a healer. It is the business of the ministry of the church today to make known God's will by preaching and teaching.

Room 307, 1701-1703 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

1. A Woman in Need (v. 11). This poor woman's back was bowed down with eighteen years of great suffering. Though thus afflicted she found her way to the place of worship. Men and women are in great need today. Their bodies may not be bowed down with physical suffering, but there are many bowed down with the burden of sin and sorrow.

2. Called to Jesus (v. 12). He is always quick to discern those who are burdened. He spake a word of healing to her. How welcome must have been His words. He is calling today to the many who are weighed down with guilty consciences to come to Him.

3. Laid His Hands upon Her (v. 13). At His touch she was made straight and glorified God. It was not enough to teach. He showed His sympathy by coming into touch with the suffering woman. Christ's followers are to imitate Him in teaching and also in coming into direct touch with the needy, sinful and burdened world.

III. The Indignation of the Ruler of the Synagogue (v. 14).

This man feigned indignation. Under a pious pretense of loyalty to God he showed that ritual is of more importance than mercy and love. It was not primarily concern for ritual, but hatred for Jesus that moved him to indignation. He was too cowardly to attack the Lord directly, so turned to the people and struck at Him over their backs. He pretended great concern for the healing of the people but advised that they come in the six days and not thus have the Sabbath profaned by such a sacrilegious act as the healing of this poor woman. This man is a type of the many hypocrites among us today. The liquor interests today are hypocritically talking of the sacred rights of personal liberty. They go on trampling down the sacred rights of men and women until their own interests are involved. Their claim is as hollow as that of doing away with the Ten Commandments because they interfere with the personal liberty of the murderer and thief. We should all examine ourselves as to whether there may not be a hypocritical Pharisee lurking in our own bosom, when even in the ministry a rival appears with gifts exceeding ours. Sometimes the charge of heresy may be an utterance of the old Pharisee. The party accused may be more orthodox than the accuser.

IV. The Lord's Reply to the Ruler (vv. 15, 16).

Jesus removes the mask of hypocrisy from the ruler as He points out their own custom as a condemnation of their pious pretense. He argues from the lesser to the greater. If it was right to take animals which had only been tied for a few hours, to water on the Sabbath day, certainly it was right to bring relief to this woman who had been bowed for eighteen years. Human beings are of more value than animals. This woman was a daughter of Abraham and not a sinner of low-down character. The principle which Jesus set forth restored the Sabbath to its true purpose.

V. Shamed Adversaries and Rejoicing People (v. 17).

The tide was now turned. Their exposure was so great that their consciences smote them. The arguments against morals and the church are of the same type today. The opponents of the so-called blue laws are hiding behind the same hypocrisy. The exposure of this hypocrisy will bring joy and rejoicing to multitudes today.

"The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light."—Isaiah 9:2.

So wrote the inspired Isaiah as he foresaw and foretold the advent of the Saviour, whose natal day we are once more about to celebrate—the gladdest day of all the year.

The primary reference is to the Jewish nation and land, but the words apply also to the whole world, which lay "in darkness" when Christ came. He was "the light of the world," "the true light which, coming into the world, enlighteneth every one." As the old, familiar hymn puts it:

"The whole world was lost in the darkness of sin,
The light of the world is Jesus."

And how glad-heartedly we sing the refrain:

"Come to the light, 'tis shining for thee;
Sweetly the light has dawned upon me."

Ah yes, this last line is true, through the infinite goodness of God. We "who walked in darkness have seen a great light." But that is not all, for He who said "I am the light of the world" followed on to say, "Ye are the light of the world." When once lighted by this great "light of life" we are to be light-bearers to others. Are we being such? To how many have we passed on the light by personal testimony or endeavor? Think most of all of those millions in heathen lands who still "sit in darkness and in the shadow of death," upon whom the first ray of gospel light has never yet shown. No joyous Christmas bells and carols there, but only dark ignorance, vice, superstition, violence, misery, and despair. Shall these not have a share in our thoughts and plans of "good-will toward men" at this blessed Christmastide? And shall we not resolve, God enabling us, to do something by which some of these poor souls may before another Christmas rolls round have a chance to see that great light and absorb its blessed rays?

A Logical Conclusion

"If our religion is not true, we ought to change it;
If it is true, we are bound to propagate it."

"The Joyful Messenger" in Palestine

Such is the name given to the motor-van shown in the illustration on this page. The car was the gift of English friends to the Nile Mission Press for its colportage work in Palestine. It is in charge of Rev. Archibald Forder, that veteran itinerant among the Arabs of the Near East, who writes of what a boon it is in enabling him the better to reach and supervise his corps of colporteurs in every part of the land. The van attracts much attention, and its name calls forth constant queries and thus creates excellent opportunities to explain the gospel.

Mr. Bowen in South Africa

Good reports continue to come from Rev. A. J. Bowen, American Secretary of the South Africa General Mission, who is on a year's visit to the extensive field of that mission. Besides taking a part in the General Conference of the mission at Cape Town, Mr. Bowen at last writing had visited the stations in Gazaland, Nyasaland, Northern Rhodesia and Angola, a trip of 800 miles, and had reached Durban. Visits to all the stations in Zuzuland, Natal, Swaziland and Pondoland, were still before him, and he was expected again at Cape Town in the beginning of December. The meetings held had been productive of real results among both Christians and unsaved. From two stations come reports of a deep spiritual revival.

Mr. Archibald Forder and the Motor-Van of the Nile Mission Press for Colportage Work in Palestine

The Andrew Murray Memorial

The South Africa General Mission is responsible for the evangelization of 220,000 square miles of Angola (Portuguese West Africa), that vast region said to be the largest unevangelized land south of the Equator. Their section contains a native population of 2,500,000. This western wing of the S. A. G. M. work is to constitute a fitting memorial to the late Dr. Andrew Murray, who, with Mr. Spencer Walton, organized the mission in 1889 and was president until death in 1917. Prayer is asked for this great undertaking. More workers are urgently needed, among them doctors, nurses, qualified teachers to train the natives, and others qualified to translate the Scriptures into the native languages.

The God of Elijah Still Lives

The following inspiring testimony to answered prayer for rain comes to the MONTHLY from a missionary in Nigeria, West Africa:

"We had had no rain for a long time, and some of the corn fields were all but dead. The natives held one spirit-worship after another, but no rain. At our meeting on Sunday, August 13, we had a long talk about prayer and how God was able to answer us. We decided that we would give the spirit-worshipers two days in which they could invoke their spirits, and during these two days we would not so much as mention rain in our prayers, but if they did not get rain they should then give us two days and abstain from their spirit-worship for those two days. As all the people were not at our meeting we thought it only fair to announce publicly what we had decided to do. So next day the king's head man and a Christian went about the town telling the people. The spirit-worshipers' two days went by, but no rain. Then we had our prayer meetings. I asked the people not to pray for anything else but only to confess their sin and pray for rain. During those forty-eight hours three good rains fell, one of them a very heavy one. This was the first rain in thirty-seven days, and as far as I know the people within a few miles of this station were the only ones that got rain. A town three or four miles southwest from here had very little.

"This is the third time we have thus prayed for rain and God has wonderfully answered. One year in the wet season the drought was so great that the grass was almost as dry as in the dry season. We prayed for rain one morning and got it the same night, with the result that the people had a fairly good crop that year. Last October also we prayed for rain after having had very little from August to October, although August and September are usually very wet months. We generally consider the wet season as over before October 20, but in answer to our prayer for rain on that date, although there was no visible indication of rain whatever, God sent one heavy rain after another to the saving of the people's crops."

German Missionaries and German Money

The plight of the large number of faithful German missionaries during the war is well known. In most fields they were interned as prisoners and their work completely suspended. In other fields, while able to continue, they were subjected to no little hardship through their support from home being cut off. The subsequent financial conditions, culminating in the utter collapse of German money values, has imposed a continued and very severe strain upon those German missions which have survived the war.

In China there are several groups of godly German missionaries, perhaps a hundred in all, affiliated with the China Inland Mission that are doing work of the highest kind. These missionaries and their work have suffered keenly for lack of adequate support, and some workers have broken down owing to the financial impossibility of taking furloughs long overdue. Appeals have been published in their behalf by other missionaries, who appreciate their worth and long to see their emergency relieved. Such appeals amply merit the sympathy and response of the Christian people of America. These dear missionary brethren are in no sense responsible for the actions of their country's rulers in the war, and true Christians everywhere should rise above any disposition to discriminate against them merely because of their nationality.

Zionist Activities in Palestine

The Jewish Missionary Magazine, of New York City, gives a most informing synopsis of Mr. Israel Cohen's important pamphlet setting forth the activities of the Zionist organization in Palestine during the four years since its commission arrived there in 1918.

The organization has devoted itself with zeal and energy to the promotion of immigration into the Holy Land. It has assisted the Jewish colonists to settle on farms and begin trade and various kinds of labor. It has played a very important part in the social and economic development of the Jewish community by devoting large sums to the promotion of trade and industry and granting loans to approved bodies and individuals. It is responsible for the supervision of almost the entire Jewish educational system in Palestine, controlling a total of 137 schools, ranging from kindergarten to normal and technical institutions. It has introduced a highly qualified medical service, and has even organized local committees in towns and colonies and created courts of arbitration.

The total expenditure in Palestine of the organization and its affiliated bodies during the four years ending March 31, 1922, was fully £2,000,000. The number of immigrants registered at the Zionist offices for the three years ending December 31, 1921, was 21,000. The lifting of the present strict limitations upon Jewish immigration appears assured as a result of negotiations with the High Commissioner.

A Boon to India Missionaries

One of the most serious problems which missionaries in all lands have to face is the education of their children. To send them home involves no little extra expense and years of trying separation. More than this, it is attended today with grave spiritual risks because of the prevalence of evolutionary and rationalistic teaching in the high schools. Where climatic conditions permit, it is a great comfort to missionaries to be able to keep their children with them on the field through their formative early 'teen age. In some of the larger fields, notably India and China, this is happily made possible by the existence of good schools providing standard education up to college matriculation. One of these which has recently been called to our attention is Hebron School, healthfully situated in the hills at Coonoor, South India. This school, in addition to maintaining high scholarship, is free from all the pernicious errors of modernist theology, and provides the children of missionaries in India with a satisfactory education under the best of moral and spiritual conditions. Miss Chaplin is the principal and Rev. Harvey Farmer honorable secretary of the school.

A SEVEN-FOLD ATTITUDE TOWARD THE COMING OF THE SAVIOUR

A Christmas Sermon

Text: Luke 2:1-38.

I. Attitude of the World (v. 7).
   "No room in the inn"—rejection from the beginning.
   Ignorance and unbelief as to His coming.
   This showed also the true condition of their hearts toward Him.

II. Attitude of Joseph and Mary (vv. 6, 7, 33).
   Trust in the providence of God to provide for them.
   Submission to the divine will of God.
   Patient in rejection and under the circumstances.
   Marveling at what was said about Him (v. 33).
   Meditation as to what this all could mean (v. 19).

III. Attitude of Angels in Their Announcement of His Birth (vv. 8-14).
   Power and glory of God with them (v. 9).
   Proclamation of the angels (vv. 10, 11). "Fear not,* * * for unto you is born this day * * * a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."
   Promise "to all people good tidings of great joy."
   Purpose of His coming—"A saviour unto all people"—Messiah, the Christ.
   Place of His birth—"lying in a manger" in Bethlehem (vv. 4, 12).
   Praise and glory offered to God by the heavenly host—"Saying" (vv. 13, 14), not singing, as commonly taught.

IV. Attitude of Shepherds (vv. 15-20).
   Fearful and afraid of the divine visitors and their strange announcement (vv. 9, 10). Believing and proclaiming (v. 15).
   Seeing the Saviour (v. 16).
   Testifying to others at once (v. 17).
   Glorifying and praising God (v. 20).

V. Simeon's Attitude (vv. 25-35).
   Waiting for Him to come (v. 25).
   Expecting Him that time, by the Spirit's revelation (v. 26).
   Blessing God and Mary the mother of Jesus (vv. 28, 34).
   Simeon saw his salvation through Christ the Saviour—received Him (vv. 29-31).
   Prophesying of Christ that He should be for the "rise and fall" of many.

VI. Attitude of Anna, the Prophetess (vv. 36-38).
   Believed He was the Christ. She was a praying saint and servant of God.
   Gave thanks to God and testified of Him to Israel (vv. 36-38).

VII. Attitude of the Wise Men (Matt. 2:1, 7-12).
   Searched for Him. "Rejoiced with exceeding great joy" (vv. 8-10).
   Worshiped Him and brought gifts to show their appreciation (v. 11).
   Warned of God, they refused to betray their Lord, returning another way (v. 12).

Plan to Attend Founder's Week Conference in February.

THE BIBLE

Some writer gives the following analysis of the "Book of books," the Bible:

It is a Book of Laws, to show the right and wrong.

It is a Book of Wisdom that makes the foolish wise.

It is a Book of Truth, which detects all human errors.

It is a Book of Life, that shows how to avoid everlasting death.

It is the most authentic and entertaining history ever published.

It contains the most remote antiquities, the most remarkable events and wonderful occurrences.

It is a complete code of laws.

It is a perfect body of divinity.

It is an unequaled narrative.

It is a book of biography.

It is a book of travels.

It is a book of voyages.

It is the best covenant ever made; the best deed ever written.

It is the best will ever executed; the best testament ever signed.

It is a learned man's masterpiece.

It is the young man's best companion.

It is the schoolboy's best instructor.

It is the ignorant man's dictionary, and every man's directory.

It promises an eternal reward to the faithful and believing.

But that which crowns all the Author.

He is without partiality, and without hypocrisy; "With whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." —Selected.

HOW GOD BLESSED COLGATE

When William Colgate was a lad of sixteen, he left home to seek his fortune, carrying all his worldly possessions in his hand. His father was too poor to keep him at home. He met an old neighbor, captain of a canal-boat, who encouraged him to start right. William told his friend that the only trade he knew anything about was soap-making and candle-making, in which he had helped at home.

"Well," said the old man, "let me pray with you once more and give you a little advice."

So they kneeled on the tow-path, and then the old man said: "Some one will soon be the leading soap-maker of New York. It can be you as well as any one. Be a good man; give your heart to Christ; give the Lord all that belongs to Him of every dollar you make; make an honest soap; give a full pound; and I am certain that you will yet be a prosperous man."

The boy remembered the promise he made to that old captain, and the first dollar he earned he tithed to the Lord. He followed all the good advice; his business grew; riches came faster than he had ever hoped. He increased the Lord's one-tenth to four-tenths, and then five-tenths. After he had educated his family he gave all his income to the Lord, amounting to millions of dollars, and left a name for square dealing and honest goods that will never die.—Selected.

Separation never comes from His side. —J. Hudson Taylor.

STOP CRITICISING, AND PULL!

It isn't the preacher's flowery prayer
  Or the way the choir sings;
Or the size of the coin your neighbor gives,
  Or the help your brother brings.
It isn't the size of your favorite church,
  Or the cost of your favorite pew;
Or the style of the clothes the members wear;

  For it isn't the church, it's you!

It isn't the way the work is done,
  Or the way the money's spent;
Or whether the gospel's all brought in,
  Or whether there's some that's sent.
It isn't the kind of creed they love,
  Or peculiar things they do;
Or whether the doctrine suits your taste;
  For it isn't the church, it's you!

For a chain's as strong as the weakest link,
  And it breaks with a heavy load,
But a church that's full of the links that pull
  Can level the roughest road.
If you get in tune with the Master's will,
  With your heart and your labors, too,
You will love your church, though it has its faults,
  For it isn't the church, it's you!

—R. R. Newberry, in Christian Herald.

THE CHRISTIAN'S BELIEF

We believe that "all things work together for good to them that love God." We believe that the soul is of greater value than the body—that spiritual as well as bodily food is needed and that as our bodily food must be pure and wholesome;—so our spiritual food must be the pure and unadulterated word of God, the substance of which is:

That Jesus Christ, the Son of God (Matt. 3:16, 17; John 4:25, 26; Col. 2:9; Mark 3:11) who was without sin (2 Cor. 5:21), died on the cross as our substitute (1 Cor. 15:3; Rom. 5:6-8; 1 Pet. 2:24; 3:18); that by acknowledging (Ps. 51:5; Eccl. 7:20; Prov. 20: 9; Rom. 3:23; 1 John 1:8-10), and repenting (Mark 1:15; Luke 13:3; Acts 3:19; 2 Cor. 7:10) of our sins and believing on Him (John 5:24; 6:27; Acts 16:31; 13:38, 39) we may escape the just punishment for our sins (Matt. 25:46; John 3:18; 3:36; 5:24; 8:24; Heb. 2:3) and inherit eternal life (John 3:16; 5:24; 6:47); and that there is no other method by which we may enter heaven but by accepting Jesus Christ (John 14:6; Acts 4:12) as the Saviour who has paid the penalty for our sins.

We believe in a risen, living Saviour (Acts 2:32; Rom. 8:34; Heb. 4:14; 7:25; 2 Tim. 2:8; 1 Cor. 15:17) who will guide us in all things, if we abide in Him (John 15:7; 1 John 5:14, 15) and commune with Him and the Father daily in prayer (Matt. 26:41; Heb. 4:16; 1 John 3:22). We believe that without Him we can do nothing (John 15:5), but that with Him all things are possible (Mark 9:23).

—Herman Bernhart.

There is a path in which every child of God is to walk, and in which alone God can accompany him.—Denham Smith.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

THE PATH OF DUTY

The 19th of May, 1780, was remarkably dark in Connecticut. Candles were lighted in many houses; the birds were silent, and disappeared; and domestic fowls retired to roost. The people were impressed by the idea that the day of judgment was at hand. This opinion was entertained by the legislature, at that time sitting at Hartford.

The House of Representatives adjourned; the Council proposed to follow their example. Col. Davenport objected. "The day of judgment," he said, "is either approaching or it is not. If it is not, there is no cause for an adjournment; if it is, I choose to be found doing my duty. I wish, therefore, that candles may be brought."

CULTIVATE A CHARITABLE SPIRIT

A painter was once engaged upon a likeness of Alexander the Great. In the course of his battles Alexander had received a scar upon his face. The artist was desirous of giving a correct likeness of the monarch, and at the same time cover up the scar. It was a difficult task to accomplish. At length he hit upon a happy expedient. He painted him in a reflective attitude, his hand placed against his head with one finger covering the scar. Christians are not without their failings, their scars, but do not dwell upon these. Adopt the painter's expedient and let the finger of love be placed on the scar.

BURDEN BEARING

A little girl saw a picture of the fabled Atlas bearing the world on his shoulders. She noted the strong man struggling under his heavy burden, his head bowed forward, his shoulders strained, his every muscle tense, his face and form showing signs of painful effort and endurance, and her tender heart went out towards him in pity. "Papa," she asked in anxious earnest, "why doesn't that man lay that thing down?" And her father's answer was, "Because he supposes that he ought to carry the world on his shoulders." And his is a mistake that a great many of us are making. How many of the burdens that oppress us are burdens that we have no call to carry! We worry over matters that are outside of our sphere; and we are ready to sink beneath the weight of cares and anxieties that would better be left to Him who alone can carry them. Whatever we have to carry, the Lord will give us strength to upbear; but there is many a burden which we would do better to cast upon the Lord, because it is His burden for us, and not ours for Him.

If our circumstances find us in God, we shall find God in all our circumstances. —Selected.

William S. Dixon reports assisting in a campaign in Keokuk, Iowa, where they closed Oct. 29. His next engagement was at Oakland City, Ind.

Floyd John Evans and party report having closed their second evangelistic meeting at White Cloud, Kan., with a total of 390 converts.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Stumpf held meetings during October at the Presbyterian church, Greenville, Ill. Mr. Stumpf is pastor of the Presbyterian church at Madison, Ill.

Roy Frook and sister, Miss Ida Frook, report having closed a union tent meeting at Sherman, Mich. They had a tent with a seating capacity of about six hundred.

Norman R. Curtis writes under date of Oct. 24: "Just opened in Phoenix, Ariz.,—tent work. Held two weeks in state prison at Florence, beginning Sept. 24. This was first evangelistic campaign ever held there."

Harry Dixon Loes and Miss Birdie C. Loes report having started a four weeks revival with the pastor of the M. E. church at Lapel, Ind. They say it is one of the best church plants in the state and they were expecting a fruitful time.

B. B. Crimm conducted tent meetings at San Marcos, Tex., during October. There was a good attendance from the surrounding country and on Oct. 20 two hundred had responded to the evangelist's invitations.

S. E. Lewis assisted by Amos Phipps, singer, reported having closed a month of successful work at Stratford and Salisbury, N. Y., with Rev. William Breckenridge. Many souls were saved and united with the churches before the campaign closed.

T. Le Roy Muir writes: "I just closed meeting at Saugerties, N. Y., which was in the nature of an evangelistic rally and Bible conference. Souls were saved, backsliders reclaimed and the church strengthened. Ralph W. Carr of Binghamton assisted me as musical director. I shall spend the winter, the Lord willing, in Phoenix, Ariz., as headquarters. Pray that a great revival may spread throughout this state."

Robert L. Selle reports that after a campaign of evangelistic meetings in Kansas and Oklahoma, he opened a fall and winter campaign in Harry Street Methodist Church, Wichita, Kan., on Nov. 5. Mrs. Selle accompanies him and has charge of the children's work.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Vinaroff closed their summer's work in New York City, and then joined Evangelist W. D. Hamilton at St. Francis, Kan., for the first meeting in the fall. They report very encouraging meetings at Humboldt, Iowa, and say, "The Lord is giving us souls by the scores each evening."

H. T. Crossley and J. H. Leonard write: "We have just begun a campaign in the city of Edmonton, Alta., covering a period of twelve weeks in six different churches or districts. We closed at one point on Sunday with over one hundred professing conversion. Last season was perhaps our best in many respects."

The Mid-Pacific Bible Conference Association will conduct a Bible Conference at Honolulu and Hilo in the Hawaiian Islands during January and February. 1923. Dr. William P. White, assisted by W. E. Pietsch, will have charge of the conference and special prayers are requested for these meetings

The Vom Bruch Evangelistic Party reported Oct. 27 being in the midst of a great meeting at the Park Street Evangelical Church at Harrisburg, Pa. A count was taken on one night and it was found that there were nine denominations and forty-three different churches represented in the audience. This party goes next to the First United Brethren Church, Canton, O.

L. R. MontGomerie, field secretary of the Shantymen's Christian Association, reports having returned from lumber camps in Michigan, from where he was en route to Ashland, Wis., to visit the camps in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Northern Michigan for the purpose of exploring new territory with a view to putting missionaries in the field. Mr. MontGomerie in connection with his field work conducts evangelistic services.

George R. Gillespie sends us the following report: "A. A. Haggard conducted tent meetings at Gastonia, N. C., closing during October after thirteen weeks of gospel campaign during which time 2,600 people went forward. Large numbers of the converts united with the Gastonia churches. The campaign in East Gastonia also was attended with marked success with almost 800 conversions. Mr. Haggard was assisted by Prof. Sumner, Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Barnes and Mr. Claud Camp.

John A. Smith Evangelistic Party report a four weeks union tabernacle meeting at Yawkey, W. Va., which closed Oct. 15. The Lord greatly blessed the meetings, the result being over three hundred persons who went forward. The superintendent of the oil company and thirty-six of his employees were converted one night. This was considered the turning point in the meeting. The party next went to Hamlin, W. Va.

One of our subscribers has kindly sent us a very interesting report of evangelistic meetings held at Wiscasset, Me., during the past summer in the tabernacle, under the leadership of L. B. Greenwood, who was assisted by a number of workers. About one year ago Mr. Greenwood went to Wiscasset to hold meetings in the open air. The interest was so great and so many conversions took place that it was necessary to hire a hall, and it resulted in the opening of the Mission of Open Door. During the year 69 persons were baptized. A special feature of the work was the children's knowledge of Scriptures. They had memorized hundreds of passages. The work is still going on with baptisms almost every Sunday.

Chester Birch, who was recently conducting evangelistic meetings at Olney took occasion to write a letter to the Kansas, Ill., Journal calling attention to the fact that from Mr. Birch's old home town (Kansas) an unusually large number of boys had gone into the ministry. Mr. Birch is suggesting a week's gathering next summer for what he calls the Kansas Boys' Ministerial Association. The local editor made an investigation and found that from Mr. Birch's home town forty-two of the boys had gone into the ministry, and two girls to Africa as missionaries. The Journal believes Kansas and community has a record as the birthplace of preachers that cannot be duplicated by any other community in the state, population considered.

Dr. W. Leon Tucker held a Bible teaching campaign in Great Britain. He began at Bangor, County Down, Ireland, where a great blessing accompanied his messages to crowds which taxed the capacity of he church. Following this he visited Newtownards, where he conducted a conference in the First Presbyterian Church of which Rev. Archibald R. Wright is pastor. During that conference a missionary appeal was made by Dr. Tucker and twenty-six young people dedicated themselves for missionary work, and it is expected that some of these will make application for entrance to the Moody Bible Institute at an early date. Dr. Tucker next went to Belfast for a campaign under the auspices of the Belfast Baptist Council, and great audiences filled the Grove Baptist Church each night. Dr. Tucker will fill engagements in Scotland before returning to America.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray G. Swartzbaugh closed a very successful campaign at the First Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, Mo., assisting Dr. R. A. Torrey, Dean of the Bible Institute of Los Peloubet's Select Notes on the International Sunday-School Lessons for 1923, by Amos R. Wells, Litt.D. LL.D.

This is the forty-ninth annual volume of this widely known commentary on the Sunday-school lessons. The high standard of the former volumes is maintained, and in some respects advanced. This is easily the best work of its kind published.

The Primacy of the Missionary, and Other Addresses, by Archibald McLean.

It is a cause for gratitude that Dr. McLean was spared to add one more book to his many others in the cause of missions. Few men have been so grasped by missionary conviction as he. Still fewer men have been able to state that conviction and to set forth the true character and place of missions in such masterly and convincing fashion. Would that a host of ministers and other Christian leaders would read this book and come to share the missionary conviction and advocacy of its author.

Holy Ground, by Rev. T. H. Darlow, M. A.

This is a series of sermons on points of Christian experience which tend to recall sacred places of the Holy Land. It contains twenty-nine sermons, some of which are as follows: The Well of Bethlehem, The Cottage at Nazareth, Through Samaria, On the Road to Jericho, Bethel Re-visited, Song in the Upper Room, The Garden of the Crucifixion, The Wrath of the Lamb, Thy Will be Done.

Stories from Foreign Lands, by Cora Banks Pierce and Hazel Northrop.

This is a new collection of fictitious missionary tales for children, with their setting in China, Japan, Egypt, Persia, Africa and other lands. While the motive and effort are praiseworthy, the stories, at least a good portion of them, are far-fetched, and the characters too highly colored to be considered a true portrayal of life and conditions in the countries dealt with.

Education for Successful Living, by James E. Clarke.

Successful living implies the shaping and functioning of life, according to the purpose of God, the Author of life. The spiritual is the highest part of man's nature, so the training of that part is most important. This is most sadly neglected in modern education. This must be supplied if those educated are going to meet the requirement of glorifying God. The introduction is furnished by President Thompson of Ohio State University.

The Churches of the New Testament, by Rev. George W. McDaniel, D. D., LL. D.

This is an unique book containing a wealth of information, illustration and incentive. The author's aim is "to show the origin, character, principles, and practices of the New Testament churches; to show the unity which existed in essentials amidst the variety of material and diversity of environment; to point morals and deduce lessons for twentieth century pastors, laymen, and churches." While we cannot always agree with the author, we are forced to respect him. The book will especially appeal to Baptists.

Snowden's Sunday-school Lessons for 1923, by Rev. James H. Snowden. D. D.

Here is something different in the line of Sunday-school lesson helps. The author does not attempt to give an exegesis of the text, but a spiritual and practical exposition; he causes the great spiritual truths of the lesson to emerge in such a way that it is easy for the teacher to quickly get hold of the vital points to present to the class. An interesting feature is the prominence given to the outstanding characters of the lesson, giving them the distinctively human touch and making the personal application. 390 pages. 7x5 inches. An Introduction to the Study of the Mind, by Walter Scott Athearn.

This book is the third section of Teaching the Teacher. The following chapter headings indicate its content: What is the Mind? The Machine and the Machinist, The Triune Man, The Intellect, The Emotions, The Will, Habit Formation, How to Study, The Growing Mind, Workers with Immortal Souls. The work has been well done. The interest of the reader is gained in the first chapter and sustained to the very last. It is a pleasure to recommend the book to the attention of all Sunday-school teachers, and especially to the teachers of children.

Is the Higher Criticism Scholarly? by Robert Dick Wilson, Ph. D., D. D.

We wonder whether the destructive critics of the Bible can find a man in their midst who has mastered forty-five languages and dialects? It is a distinct pleasure for the orthodox school to claim the leadership of a man of such scholarly attainments as Dr. Wilson of Princeton Theological Seminary, and this little book will be especially helpful for those who desire to have their faith rest upon facts. Dr. Wilson does not pronounce an ipse dixit upon his statements but speaks from a vast fund of knowledge acquired by years of laborious research in dialects which are accessible to comparatively few scholars.

Father and Son, by Philip E. Howard.

Mr. L. N. Wells has said: "The problem of our day is the boy problem and where this is solved the labor, liquor and race problems will follow. And the one problem behind that of the boy is the interest of the father in the boy."

If this statement is true then church and society are deeply indebted to Philip E. Howard for his very timely book. Mr. Howard writes as one who possesses a keen appreciation of the responsibilities of fatherhood and speaks from the pages of his own experience. The chapter entitled, "Taking Him into Your Confidence," answers the question as to what the boy should know about himself without thrusting into his hands a book upon sexual hygiene. The chapters upon "The Boy's Bookshelf" and "The Boy's Religion" are also most opportune. No father can read this book without being impressed with the large conception of his place in the lives of his boys.

The Religion of Religious Psychology, by Charles Calvert Ellis, Ph.D.

Dr. Ellis has rendered the church a valuable service in canvassing the field of religious psychology and bringing together a digest of the various books which have been written by the leaders in this modern movement. Not many have access to these sources, nor have the time to digest them. This pamphlet makes accessible the heart of the whole problem. Acquaintance with the whole problem in the light of the philosophical and theological viewpoints of the authors will enable the busy pastor and Christian teacher to evaluate the psychology of modern religious education. This ought to be placed in the hands of the Christian leaders of today, especially those of the evangelical churches.

Evangelistic Talks, by Gipsy Smith.

Gipsy Smith had the poet's imagination and the evangelist's passion. While we muse upon his words, the fire burns in our hearts. His Evangelistic Talks consists of stenographic reports of addresses given without special preparation, for he took up the themes of different speakers who immediately preceded him from day to day in meetings at Nashville, Tenn. Those who have been present on such occasions have marveled at his ability to "think on his feet" and have felt that, no matter how able the other speakers, the Gipsy was superior to them all, because of his simplicity, his directness and the sacred unction upon him. But the disposition to compare him with others soon passes, for his hearers have trouble with their eyes, and the voice of God seems to be saying to them individually, "Thou art the man." We doubt not the book under review will be used of the Lord to kindle revival fires in many hearts.

The Master Key, by Frederick C. Spurr.

This is an attempt to restate the gospel as it relates to the travail and unrest through which the world is passing. The author calls attention to the fact that the only solution for the world's problems is a return to the gospel as Christ preached it. The style is forceful and clear. The author does not disregard social service but insists that the dynamic for real social service is the gospel of Jesus Christ, centering in the Cross. There are a few thoughts which might be questioned, examples of which may be found: the first on page 28, regarding the light which was given to Paul. We might question as to whether the light which God gave to Paul was the light which was common to all disciples. The second, page 44, regarding the concept which was in Paul's mind regarding creation. How does the author know that there was not in his mind the fullest conception of the universe?

God or Gorilla, by Alfred W. McCann, LL. D.

Here is a book for the hour. Many people because of their absolute faith in the Scriptures as God's revelation have rejected the theory of evolution, but have been unable to meet it on its own grounds. Now comes Dr. McCann and meets the pseudo-scientists on their own grounds, proves the falsity of their claims out of the mouths of the very professors and the educators who have foisted this hoax upon the world. In order to know the validity of the claims of evolutionists one does not need to be a scientist; all he needs is a sound mind, able to form a correct judgment on the basis of facts. The author has not only turned the testimony of the friends of evolution against themselves by quoting them, but has presented photographs of the fabricated fossil men, showing how they have constructed the specimens to suit their theory. These photographs constitute one of the mightiest refutations of their false philosophy that has yet appeared. This book ought to be in the hands of young men and women in high schools and colleges to offset the atheistic and materialistic influence brought to bear upon them by their teachers. The tragedy of the modern educational system is that children who have been brought up in Christian homes to believe the Bible as God's very Word are robbed of their faith and cast adrift upon the sea of atheistic speculation. Many colleges built up and sustained by Bible-loving Christians are honey-combed with this paganism.

Is the Bible the Word of God? by Rev. W. Graham Scroggie, D.D.

This small volume is written in defense of the faith once for all delivered to the saints, and is in a sense a polemic, yet the spirit manifested is far from polemic. It is not intended for scholars as such, although any one familiar even in a measure with the defense of the Bible from the attack of skeptical scholars recognizes that it was written by a scholar who would have been able to write a book for scholars.

The book is for the mass of intelligent people who ask for the validity of the Old and New Testaments. The argument is progressive. The author first maintains that the Bible seems to be the Word of God, evidenced by its history and contents; then, it claims to be the Word of God, and witness of the Old and New Testaments is here very full. Probably the most difficult point in any apologetic for the New Testament is the proof from the New Testament for its own divine origin, but the author here clearly and sufficiently meets the inquirers' troubles. He then shows that the Bible proves to be the Word of God because of the witness of the individual and of Christianity as a whole.

The style of the book is analytical, and it could very readily be used by a company of intelligent persons as a text-book with great profit. Such books should find a place in the library of every Christian family.

The Black Man's Burden, by E. D. Morel.

Among the several books we have seen which deal with the record of "civilization" in the Dark Continent this is much the strongest one. The author, from a wealth of intimate knowledge concerning African affairs, brings a terrific indictment against European nations for their unrighteous exploitation of the black man. After reviewing the horrors of the brutal slave trade of past generations, he proceeds to lay bare the iniquitous record of later European doings in Africa, styling them "the trinity of imperialism, capitalistic-exploitation and militarism.' He treats the subject not in the abstract but in the concrete, describing in vivid detail the notorious Congo rubber atrocities and certain less known but hardly less disgraceful episodes in connection with British control in Rhodesia, German in southwest Africa, Portuguese in Angola, French in Morocco, and Italian in Tripoli. Mr. Morel is not reckless but discriminating in his statements, and gives credit wherever it is due. But he exposes a mass of revolting crime in some instances deliberately perpetrated, in others shamefully tolerated, by European governments pursuing their ambitious schemes of occupation in Africa.

The author points out not only the moral iniquity of all this but as well its stupendous folly, since, even aside from the question of moral retribution, such a policy if continued cannot fail to react against Europe's best material interests. Finally the hope is eloquently expressed that an international conscience with regard to Africa will be created, which will help to bring about some worthier policy of European dealings with the peoples of that continent, issuing in happy mutual relations and substantial benefits to both black and white races.

The Things That Are Caesar's, A Defense of Wealth, by Guy Morrison Walker, with an introduction by Clarence W. Barron.

This brochure of 80 pages was written, we are told, not for profit, but solely in the public service and in the interest of sound economic thought for the protection of the future of both labor and capital in the United States.

We do not know Mr. Walker, and are not sufficiently versed in the important science of economics to follow him in all his conclusions, but what he says sounds very much like that which we were accustomed to hear in our youth before this country was flooded with a foreign-born population imbued with the socialism of Karl Marx.

Starting from the principle that the source of all wealth is the soil of the earth, he refutes the theory that we are indebted to labor chiefly for what it produces, or even to labor and capital combined, but gives brains the pre-eminence.

With all the vast supply of human labor working constantly from the beginning of time down to the year 1780, it had been able to accumulate only a surplus production over consumption that made the total wealth of the world at that time approximately one hundred billion dollars. But at that time the race began for the first time to recognize property rights of individuals in their ideas and devices, with the result that in the past one hundred and forty years human brains have so devised new things, new machinery, new methods, new uses, and have so come to discover new forces that the wealth of the world now is approximately one thousand billions.

"Today," says Mr. Walker, "we have the astonishing spectacle of capital which knows it has no brains, and labor which realizes its inability to direct itself, eagerly competing for the use of brains, and offering the possessors of this scarce article almost anything they demand to accept the management of capital or the direction of labor. The attack, therefore, upon the creation of wealth is primarily an attack upon brains, and it is just as well that we should recognize frankly the fact that the great mass of mediocrity is attempting to make it a crime for a man to have any sense."

What is needed, in the author's judgment, is a repeal of unjust and uneconomical laws that are preventing the able and efficient from giving the masses of the people the benefit of economic production and cheap distribution. He declaims against the middlemen, and as to the program of the so-called labor leaders, he believes that it purposes nothing less than a reversion to savagery.

PROF. ARTHUR EDWARD PHILLIPS

Professor Arthur E. Phillips, who for many years has been the teacher of public speaking in the Institute, has felt obliged to relinquish his work because of the condition of his health. In a letter to him the Dean said: "Your name will live long in the memory of the Institute and your contribution to the effectiveness of our output of preachers has been invaluable. The great Head of the church bestowed on you a great gift, and you have used it faithfully for Him."

MRS. MARGARET T. RUSSELL (MRS. E. L.)

After six and one-half years of very happy relationship with the Extension Department of the Institute, Mrs. Russell has resigned as a worker in the field, as her own denomination, the Presbyterian Church (South), has been gradually claiming more and more of her time.

Mrs. Russell is a graduate of the Institute who always reflected honor on her alma mater in whatever capacity she was called to serve it, and her name belongs in the honored list of women mentioned in the New Testament as fellow-workers in Christ Jesus. Our prayers go with her wherever she goes.

REV. O. R. PALMER'S VISIT TO RUSSIA

Rev. O. R. Palmer, home director of the Africa Inland Mission, and now director also of the American Christian Relief Mission, gave an address in the Institute, October 26, on his visit of investigation in famine-stricken Russia, especially Ukrainia, where about 5,000,000 people are starving. There are now 5,000 evangelical Christian congregations in Ukrainia, he said, who are crying to God for help from the Christians of America. Moses Gitlin, '20, who had been waiting for months to be allowed to pass the frontier into Russia, was allowed to enter with Mr. Palmer, and Rev. H. L. Hellyer, associate director of the Christian Relief Mission. The Soviet officials gave all needed co-operation, and even shipped in their large consignment of Bibles, and placed no obstacles in the way of their distribution.

ADDRESSES BY EVANGELIST GEORGE T. STEPHENS

Mr. Stephens delivered two most helpful addresses to the student body Oct. 19 and 20 on evangelism. Fresh from the field, the quickening power of a Spirit-given hunger for God and for souls was felt in his messages, and deeply stirred the hearers. Full consecration of those planning to enter evangelistic work was strongly emphasized. Summarized in a sentence, the closing message was: "I charge thee that we be clean men and women; that we be surrendered men and women; that we be laborers; that we be thoroughly warmhearted; that we live on our knees in prevailing intercessory prayer. If we go out with these qualifications God will use us, and somehow will flow out through our lives in blessing to others."

MR. SCHULER'S BOOKS COMMENDED

"Very brief, but practical and to the point, is this unique volume," says the Sunday School Times of Evangelistic Piano Playing by George S. Schuler of the Institute's Music Faculty. "In these days when the piano is becoming more and more extensively used in evangelistic work, there is need for a manual of simple directions to help the average pianist make his playing more effective. Most of the tunes found in the hymn books have been written to be sung, and a piano accompaniment that is to count needs a little more elaborate treatment. It is in suggestions for the individual development of this treatment, that this little volume is most helpful."

Favorable mention is made also of the booklet, Choral Directing, by Mr. Schuler, which deals mainly with the correct use of the baton.

A BIBLE CONFERENCE IN MUSKOGEE

The Third Annual Bible Conference in Muskogee, Okla., will be held in the First Presbyterian Church Broadway and Fifth Streets, December 10-15.

The speakers will be Dr. James M. Gray, Dr. P. B. Fitzwater, of the Institute Faculty, and Rev. George E. Guille of the Extension Department.

Mrs. O. T. Graham, well known in connection with what is probably the largest Scofield correspondence class in the country, is chairman of the local committee, and Mr. Paul Philpin is secretary and head of the publicity committee.

This conference commonly makes an appeal to Bible students in Arkansas, Texas and Kansas, as well as to those resident in Oklahoma, and it is expected that many will attend from these states.

Further information is available upon application to the secretary of the Extension Department or Mr. Paul Philpin, 510 Jefferson St., Muskogee, Okla., secretary of the local committee.

LECTURES BY MR. SIDNEY T. SMITH

Mr. Sidney T. Smith of Winnipeg, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Institute, began on October 12 the delivery of a series of ten weekly lectures in Winnipeg, on the general theme, "Present Day Events in the Light of the Bible."

The series includes such subjects as "The World's Approaching Crisis," "The Sure Word of Prophecy," "Things Which Must Shortly Come to Pass," "The Times of the Gentiles," "The Great Tribulation," "The Second Coming of Christ," "The Millennium," and "The Four Great Judgments."

A summary of the second lecture, given in the Winnipeg Evening Tribune, October 21, was prefaced by the following statement:

"The series of lectures by Sidney Smith, prominent grain man, in Holy Trinity Church, on 'Present Day Events in the Light of Bible Truth,' are proving an immensely popular Thursday evening feature, large numbers of interested auditors being present to hear them."

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

Dr. J. E. Conant conducted evangelistic meetings in Calvary Moravian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., during November, also in the First Presbyterian Church, Albion, Mich., closing December 8.

Dr. Henry Ostrom conducted evangelistic meetings at the Second Presbyterian Church, Petersburg, Va., in November.

Interest in the Rev. Gordon Watt's availability for service during his short ministry in America next summer is increasing, and his time is already booked for the early part of his stay. He returns to England, Sept. 1.

Miss Virginia C. Williams, whose record as a Christian worker and Bible teacher qualifies her for great usefulness as an instructor of the Bible for Presbyterials, Y. W. C. A.'s and churches, is available for engagements.

BIBLE CONFERENCE AT THE BUFFALO HEBREW MISSION

The people of Buffalo were greatly blessed through the conference conducted under the auspices of the Buffalo Hebrew Mission when Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., and Rev. Joseph S. Flacks brought timely messages.

Dr. Gray's love for Israel is not a mere passing interest in the Jews, but is rooted in the God of Israel who alone knows the "relation the Jew holds to Christianity" and "their future importance in human history." It was through the scriptural handling of these subjects that many were awakened to their duty, yea, privilege in evangelizing the Jews, and many left the conference praising God for the blessings received through these two prophets of God. Many were quickened by the Holy Spirit to contend more boldly for "the faith once and for all delivered to the saints."

Mr. Flacks' first-hand knowledge of world conditions viewed from the prophetic standpoint stirred his hearers to intercession for the world at large and for Israel in particular.

Dr. Gray brought new life and vigor to many ministers of the city through the message before the ministerial meeting on Monday morning, September 25. Many ministers spoke their appreciation not alone of what was said, though some confessed he touched on points not before known to them, but of his life "hid with Christ in God."

The Chronology of the Bible

By PHILIP MAURO

A Great Subject made simple, instructive and absorbingly interesting to all classes of readers.

The Sunday School Times says:

"Mr. Mauro claims to base his chronology on the Bible only, and to be independent of all outside authorities. With great force he calls attention to the fact that there is only one line of chronology, that which leads in a line from Adam to the Messiah. This gives a complete chronological scheme. Some of the chapters deal with Biblical and spiritual teaching which will be decidedly helpful to students."

The Record of Christian Work says:

"No honest Bible student can afford to ignore the challenge of this book."

PASTORS CONDEMN EVOLUTION THEORY IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

At a conference held in the First Baptist Church of Minneapolis, Minn., recently, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

"PREAMBLE—As American citizens we believe in the complete separation of church and state, and are opposed to religious teaching in public schools—higher or lower.

"As those who wish to teach Christianity must support their private schools, we believe it but just that those who wish to teach anti-Christian theories should be forbidden the use of tax supported schools for propagating their opinions.

"WHEREAS, The evolutionary hypothesis has come to be accepted by many American teachers, and is increasingly taught in the public schools of Minnesota, including high schools, our state normals and state university, and

"WHEREAS, This hypothesis, after sixty-three years of study, remains wholly unproven, and has increasingly shown itself to be a foe to the Christian faith, denying as it does the veracity of the Scriptures.

"Therefore, be it resolved, That we, citizens of Minnesota, representing thousands of our fellow citizens, hereby utter our protest against this propaganda of infidelity, palmed off in the name of science, and we call upon the trustees of state institutions to demand of teachers a cessation of such teaching and the removal from our schools of such textbooks as favorably present the same.

"We do this in the interest of true science vs. science falsely socalled; and in the interest of fair dealing, if to Christian citizens, it shall not be made a subject of scoffing on the part of tax paid teachers.

"We hold that the first amendment to the constitution of the United States, 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion,' was never intended to be interpreted that the state should become sponsor for irreligion; and that it is manifestly unfair to impose taxes upon Christian taxpayers to inculcate teaching inimical to the Bible and destructive of civilization itself.

"We have waited patiently for this hypothesis to either prove a truth or to pass from public instruction. Having now no prospect of either, we demand that the state shall prove its impartiality toward its citizens by dispensing with a subject that is utterly divisive; and is, in the judgment of thousands of its taxpayers, utterly false.

"And we declare that if the school authorities prove derelict in the enforcement of the law relating to the teaching of religion or of theories subversive of the Christian faith, we will appeal to the legislature for the enactment of such laws as shall eliminate from our tax supported school system this anti-scientific and anti-scriptural theory of the origin of man and the universe."

The resolutions were signed by Rev. W. B. Riley, Baptist; Rev. D. Edward Evans, Presbyterian; Rev. O. H. Sletten, Lutheran; Rev. S. B. Roberts, Congregational; Rev. B. E. Bergesen, Norwegian Lutheran; Rev. R. H. Muelner, Evangelical, and Rev. E. E. Wordsworth, Nazarene.

The Rev. Mr. ————————, Texas, came in and paid for a year's subscription to the MOODY MONTHLY for a friend. He said he was already a long time subscriber to the monthly, and would rather go without sugar in his coffee than be without the MOODY MONTHLY.

SIN IRRATIONAL

Sin is irrational. No man can give a reason for committing it. Sin is not only moral obliquity, it is mental aberration. The sinner is not only a criminal, he is a lunatic. When the prodigal came to himself, he came to his father. He had been beside himself. Hell has been called a penitentiary. May it not also be a lunatic asylum? It is hard to say which term is the more suggestive. Either is bad enough and sad enough.

Frederic W. Farr.

DARWIN'S CONFESSION

Mr. W. J. Bryan makes the following statement: "Darwin was regarded as 'orthodox' when young; he was even laughed at for quoting the Bible 'as an unanswerable authority on some point of morality.' In the beginning he regarded himself as a theist and felt compelled 'to look to a first cause, having an intelligent mind in some degree analogous to that of man.' This conclusion he says was strong in his mind when he wrote The Origin of Species, but he observes that since that time this conclusion has very gradually become weaker, and then he unconsciously brings a telling indictment against his own hypothesis. He says, 'can the mind of man' which according to his belief has been developed from a mind as low as that possessed by the lowest animals 'be trusted' to deal with such mysteries? He first links man with the animals, and then, because of this supposed connection, estimates man's mind by brute standards. Who will say after reading these words, that it is immaterial what a man thinks about his origin?"

NEW YORK A FOREIGN CITY

New York largely is a city of foreigners. This is strikingly shown in a recent report of the United States Department of Commerce. Foreign-born whites, by which is meant those born abroad, or one or both of whose parents were, numbered 4,294,629 in 1920, an increase of 546,758 in ten years. Native whites totaled 1,164,834 in 1920, an increase of only 243,516 since 1910.

The changing tide of immigration in recent years is mirrored in the shifting proportions in the metropolis. The Italians showed greatest increase since 1910, advancing from 546,000 to 803,000. The Russians there now number 221,000, as compared with 27,000 in 1910. The English-speaking residents included in the classification of foreign-born—representing English, Irish, Scotch and Welsh—decreased from 965,000 in 1910 to 897,000 in 1920, and the Germans from 820,000 to 690,000.

New York's present population shows a truly cosmopolitan complexion. Hebrews and Yiddish to the number of 946,000 lead the list, followed by the English and Celtic (Irish predominating), Italians, Germans, Russians and Poles in the order named. Among the smaller groups are 76,000 Magyars, 60,000 Swedes, 40,000 Norwegians, 32,000 Spaniards, 26,000 Rumanians and 25,000 Greeks.

CHURCH STATISTICS

According to statistics gathered by the Federal Council of Churches, and printed in the Year Book of the Churches which has recently been issued, of every 106 persons in the United States, 10 have no religious affiliation and 96 are affiliated through membership, financial support, attendance or other ties with various religious bodies, as follows: Protestant 75, Roman Catholic 18, other faiths 3, no religious affiliation 10; total, 106.

The Year Book of the Churches gives the total church population of the country as follows: Roman Catholic 17,885,646, Eastern Orthodox 411,054, Latter Day Saints 587,918, Jewish 1,600,000, Protestant 75,099,489; total, 95,584,107.

The Churches of America raised during their last respective fiscal years at least a half billion dollars.

The standing of the leading denominations according to the official figures of each is: Methodist Episcopal (North) $85,934,000, Roman Catholic $75,368,294, Presbyterian (North) $47,036,442, Southern Baptist Convention $34,881,032, Protestant Episcopal $34,873,221, Methodist Episcopal (South) $33,859,832, Northern Baptist Convention $21,926,143, Congregationalists $21,233,412.

These figures show that each of the 46,242,130 church members of the country gives at least $10 per year to the support of his church and its work.

DR. FARR'S OPINION

The Pilot, of Logan, W. Va., says that Dr. F. W. Farr, well known as a Bible expositor of rare gifts, and now teacher in the Los Angeles Bible Institute, expresses his opinion of the action of the Northern Baptist Convention last summer in Indianapolis, in this way:

"The recent session of the Northern Baptist Convention at Indianapolis wrought no material change in the denominational situation. The issues are unchanged, the problems are unsolved and the alignment is the same as before. It is true that among the registered delegates, the liberals out-numbered the conservatives. The relative proportion, however, among the constituency must remain a matter of conjecture. There is every reason to believe that Liberalism will increase and pervade the entire denomination, as, under a standardized ministry, the schools will supply the ministers for the churches. Moreover, Scripture gives no hint that the tide of apostasy will turn before the end of the age."

GEORGE WHITEFIELD AND JOHN WESLEY PUTS US IN AMERICA IN DEEP DEBT TO ENGLAND

In a speech at the anniversary of the Whitefield Tabernacle in London on the evening of October 26, Mr. Lloyd George is reported by cable as making the following remarks:

"America responds to practically the same ideals as England, as is shown by the attitude which America adopted recently toward the Near Eastern question.

"America was the only country in complete sympathy with the attitude of England and the sympathy was overwhelming and real. I think that this is attributable entirely to the fact that moral training in America is identical with ours.

"The ideals of the Puritan Fathers are reinforced by the great ideals of Whitefield and Wesley.

Makes United States Debtor

"I do not know the exact figures of our debt to America, but I am told that it is a thousand million odd at the present moment. It is nothing to the debt that America owes us. Write on the balance sheet: Debtor, a thousand and ninety millions; creditor, John Wesley and George Whitefield.

"I am not talking about Shakespeare, Burns and Milton, who are also in the account; also Roger Williams and the Pilgrim Fathers. I could run up a bill against America which would bankrupt even that rich country.

"They do not keep this sort of accounts in their exchequer, but they are the real amounts—the things that matter.

"Whitefield and Wesley brought America into the war. The result of their teaching and preaching moved America to come to our aid. And I will tell you one thing more they are going to do before they are done. Whitefield and Wesley are going to take America by the hand and lead her through the golden portals of the league of nations."

WHAT OTHERS SAY ABOUT THE MOODY MONTHLY

"I want to say how much I appreciate the Moody Monthly. I have the November issue. The article on The Deadline of Doctrine Around the Church, by Dr. Gray, is the most forceful I have ever read in refutation of the views of the liberals in theology. I do not feel that I can afford to dispense with the Moody Monthly.

"Rev. C. G. B."

"The house fly is a most persistent creature but I don't believe it has anything on you, as I have not had the Moody Bible Institute Monthly in my home for years, yet you continue to send me a letter once or twice a year telling me of the good things you have in your paper. Now, sir, if I remember rightly I got angry at some one of you and stopped the paper, but at this time I am very pleased to inclose two dollars for the year 1923, also wishing you God's richest blessing, I am, dear sir,

"Mr. F. C."

"Just a line to let you know how the Moody Monthly has triumphed here at ——— College. I just could not get the faculty interested in it, hard as I tried, until the November issue came. One of the teachers ran across Dr. Gray's article answering Fosdick's sermon, 'Shall the Fundamentalists Win?' Since then it has made the rounds of the faculty and they are all talking about his article. Needless to say, Dr. Gray expresses our faculty's sentiments from the President down. "Mrs. H. P. W."

"Before sending out the clear reply to Dr. Fosdick's sermon to some of my dear friends in China, who are filling up on his books and inclined to believe his conclusions, I want to thank you personally for this helpful article. We have to know what we believe in these days and such a reply to the modern teachings as you have given makes one feel strong in the faith. We appreciate the straight and plain teaching that you give in the Monthly from time to time.

"M. R."

"Dr. J. C. L. who has recently become our pastor, coming to us from the First Church, assures us that your magazine is the best publication for the price that can be secured and insists that we put t in our library, so begin subscription at once. Mr. A. B. E."

WHAT SHALL IT BE?

For Time Only, or For Eternity?

Out of the great stream of newspapers, magazines, and books flowing from the presses of the many printing and publishing houses throughout the country, we are daily called upon to make a personal selection. Often we must do so for others as well, and our present question is before us, although we may be quite unaware of it: Will its influence be for time only or for eternity?

Shall the reading time that we may have at our disposal be given so unreservedly to that which deals with matters of time and sense? What, then, of that which concerns eternal issues? Without doubt a responsibility we cannot shake off rests upon us. Do we feed sumptuously mind and body and then starve the soul?

Do we have the choosing of any reading for young folks and children? Is the material set before them or which they are permitted to read going to mould the thought life in later years as we would like to have it?

What Shall It Be?

Not, surely, literature that is shallow, or worse, that which subtly undermines or openly ridicules faith in God. It seems reasonable to believe that in large measure the present world-condition of unrest, lawlessness, and the casting off of restraint can be attributed to the "frothy" reading absorbed by the people in such overwhelming doses.

A young person guided into thoughtful and well-balanced reading habits will retain such in after years, and the inspiration gained and preferences made in that formative period will largely control in later life. There is very grave danger ahead for people who leave God out of thought and reading

Each one naming Christ as Saviour and Lord has certain responsibility resting upon him, and must individually decide what share he will have in the wider circulation of truly evangelical literature. Are you willing and ready?—E. A. T.

A WORK FOR ALL

Probably every one of us has, at some time or other, thrown a small stone or pebble into a pool of water and watched the eddies in their ever widening circle until they reach the shore.

We doubt if a better illustration of the power and influence of the printed page could be found. Silently but certainly the tract, book, or booklet goes on its way; its path of blessing widening as it goes; its influence for good increasing continually.

Think of books like Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress and The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life. Is any one able to tell what blessing, inspiration, and help these two volumes have brought to the world?

God has probably ordained that the spoken word through the lips of a sanctified ministry should be most important in the plan of world redemption, but surely He has inspired the writing of inspired messages from the time the first message in Holy Writ was given down to the present age.

One feature of the ministry of the printed page that should appeal to all is that we all can have a part in it. Through the giving and lending of books; by getting genuinely evangelical papers into the hands of others; through the distribution of tracts, we can be continually preaching the gospel and pointing men and women to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world.—Herald of Holiness.

"Two Hundred Million Dollars worth of Liberty Bonds were taken over in worthless stock promotions within twelve months, in one state of the Union alone," say press dispatches from Washington.

If this startling report is true, and bankers whom we have consulted agree that it undoubtedly is, then it behooves the Christians, as God's stewards, to start the New Year right by making better investments.

Countless numbers of securities are being offered the public today—many of which are gilt edge, and many of which are promotions pure and simple. The Institute feels, therefore, that it should warn its friends to remember the old proverb, "Look before you leap."

If you would consider reinvesting your funds or any portion of them in Christian work, we would draw your attention to the fact that the Institute accepts government bonds at market value in exchange for its Life Annuity Contracts which pay from 4 to 11 per cent. Other securities or real estate will be considered.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"And God granted him that which he requested."—1 Chronicle 4:10.

Reading the whole verse we see that Jabez requested three things—prosperity, power and protection. "That thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast;" "that thine hand might be with me;" "that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me."

Cut from the Loaf.

We can readily transpose these material desires into corresponding ones of the spiritual realm—salvation, sanctification and security. And if God granted Jabez that which he requested will He deny us the same?

Let us think of this as we enter upon the New Year, for if God will grant that which we request, we have the history of 1923 largely in our own hands.

Some time since a reader asked us to add a department of illustrations of gospel-truth stories or incidents throwing light on how to accept Christ as a Saviour and how to rest in our faith in Him. We are pleased to comply with the request, and have added a column for that purpose to our Department of Sermon and Scrap Book. Meanwhile that reader and others may be interested in a story on another page entitled, "How I Free, Den?" taken from the biography of Amelia Barr. We consider it so apt and so valuable in leading a soul to Christ, that we are asking our publishing agent to reprint it in leaflet form for an insert in letters if any of our friends desire it.

Our New Year Issue

We place side by side in importance with that story an extract from a sermon of the late Bishop Moule, of Durham, England, to which we have given the title, "A Man Who Lasted." Its application is more to the saved than the seeking soul, but it is equally appropriate to the beginning of a New Year, when more than usual are men and women seriously thinking of their relationship to God and the day when they must give account of themselves to Him. May both articles be greatly blessed to all our readers, to whom, in the fellowship of truth they exemplify, we wish a "Happy New Year."

Some may think we are giving too much attention to Satan in this issue. There are two articles in which he figures, but we have a third that we refrained from publishing because it is too harrowing. It is a private letter from a college girl to an older friend which we were given liberty to use without divulging names, in which the writer pours out her heart almost in a frenzy of despair. She has lost all her faith in God. It was a professor in her "Prep" school who first threw her off the track with "that dreadful Darwin business," as she calls it, and now she cannot get back on the track again. She is a minister's daughter too, but she sees her father rarely, and she dare not talk to her mother, "it would hurt her so."

Our Children's Peril

This young girl used to believe the Bible was inspired, but the professor said, "not entirely." And if not entirely, then not at all, she thinks, and we agree with her. Christianity is merely setting up an ideal, she was told, but if that be all, then a better ideal may come along by and by, and what shall she do then?

She cannot pray, she cannot read the Bible. "Can a person go on living without any God?" is her cry. "I'm so miserable. I'm so unhappy inside. My brain is just like a mill-wheel—it never stops and never gets anywhere, just round and round."

Who will pray for this dear girl? And what shall we say about that professor? And he was only one of a number of whom she speaks. What name does he deserve? Shall we pray for him also, and others like him, that fear may seize upon them and that they may repent and cry out for mercy before it is too late?

Surely Dr. Hazard is not wrong in calling the Shorter Bible "Satan's latest dodge," and surely we are not wrong in capping the communication of a college junior on another page "Satan in the Professor's Chair."

During the first ten days of July, 1914, Mr. S. S. McClure accompanied Lord Northcliffe on a tour, when every possible subject of national and world importance was discussed. "He had sources of intelligence from all over the world and was one of the best informed men of his time," says Mr. McClure, "yet, never was there a hint of the impending world war. When I left him, July 11, 1914, he had not the slightest expectation that the great war was impending." Our readers recall that the war broke out before a month had elapsed.

Human Limitations

Surely man has his limitations, and they are great limitations according to this witness. But what a contrast is presented with the Son of man, Jesus Christ, who, as He sat upon the Mt. of Olives with His disciples, spread out before them and us the whole world panorama from the time of His departure from them until that of His coming again!

In the light of this remark about Lord Northcliffe, let us again read Matthew 24:3-14, and observe how accurately the Lord of lords described that which has been happening for 1900 years and which is to culminate in intensity at the end of the age. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant" (Ps. 25:14).

Our attention has just been called to an editorial in the California Christian Advocate of October 26 entitled, "Women and the Fundamentalists," in which it is evidently thought that a strong point has been made against Christian believers who "take the Bible literally."

Taking The Bible "Literally"

"Have they ever read what Paul said about women?" the editor exclaims, and then quotes 1 Corinthians 14:34, and 1 Timothy 2:11, 12, where the Apostle says, "Let your women keep silence in the churches," "I suffer not a woman to teach nor to usurp authority over the man."

"Do the Fundamentalists interpret these passages of Paul literally, or do they explain them away?" the editor next inquires. "Do they even do it in the Bible Institutes where they are training large numbers of women to teach contrary to the literal prohibition of Paul?"

We reply that our contemporary is confused as to what is meant by taking the Bible "literally." The expression is commonly employed in connection with Bible prophecy. We take the prophecies literally, in the sense that we assume the literality, i. e., the historical reality of the events predicted, but then of course we resort to a grammatical interpretation of the language of prophecy to determine its meaning. Prophecy has its own language whose principles must be employed in such a case.

Applying the rule to these utterances of Paul, we take them literally of course. Paul commands women to keep silence, and he does not suffer them to teach. There is nothing figurative in that. But just what does Paul mean when he says that? The editor of the California Christian Advocate thinks he has no reference to women in general, but only to special conditions then existing in the Corinthian church. Why does the editor think so? Not because he does not take Paul's words literally, for they can be taken in no other way, but because Paul has uttered words in other places which seem to qualify them, and because of other arguments doubtless which commend themselves to the editor's mind.

We cannot speak for Fundamentalists, nor even for Bible Institutes as such; but for ourselves, we repeat that we take Paul's words literally, but we are not clear as to the application of them under all conditions and in every case.

The Revolt Against Denominationalism

We were recently perusing the bulletin of a theological seminary when our attention was arrested by the following:

> "Let our young men and women cease-lessly hear a message that ignores denominations, challenges to Christian service, and exalts Christ for society and industry and the world, and the problem of ministerial supply and seminary support will speedily fade away."

It came before us at the same time as a newspaper report of an oracularism from Mr. Fred B. Smith, formerly the Y. M. C. A. leader and now a world traveler, who was addressing the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and who was quoted as saying:

> "Any one who will now plant a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, or Congregational church in China, Japan, or India ought to be choked at the dock before landing."

We wonder if those utterances really represent the sober thought of church leaders today? We wonder if they indicate a serious revolt against denominationalism? We do not mean sectarianism, of course, which is denominationalism gone mad, but wholesome Christianity as represented by different forms of worship and church government, and different interpretations of specific articles of the faith.

Certainly if it is desired to have the problem of our ministerial supply and seminary support "fade away," this is the way to bring it about. There will be no problem when no supply, and hence no support, will be needed, and what supply will be needed when denominationalism goes by the board? Drop that earnest, intelligent, virile discussion of Christianity which denominationalism supplies or ought to supply, and the succeeding generation will not know what Christianity is.

Who believes that if the benevolent garroter begins his work on the new missionaries before they land, he will pause there? Intoxicated with success, will he not pursue his work inland, and gripping the throats of the older missionaries of the Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Congregational Boards, strangle them also?

What will be the reaction in such a case? Only Unitarianism, of course. Is this the desire of these zealous non-denominationalists? To be sure there are independent missionary agencies doing a great and a good work, like the China Inland and the Africa Inland, the Christian Alliance, and others, but these are so evangelical that the choker would not wish to benefit them.

On the whole, may it not be better for the present not to destroy denominationalism, but only insist on its leaders in mission lands as at home remembering the exhortation which reads: "With all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love, endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4:2, 3)?

Sex Instruction in Schools

On another page under the head of "What Other Editors Are Saying," is found an editorial from the Chicago Tribune to which we solicit the attention of parents, public school teachers, members of boards of education and thoughtful citizens in general. We regard it as a word spoken in season and which needs to be carefully weighed by all who have the responsibility of children during adolescence. We would not presume to say that more harm than good comes from public school instruction in sex hygiene, but we have our opinion about it, and earnestly press the reminder of the editorial that moral action is conditioned by the will. Such instruction in public schools lacks much of its force through its separation from religion, as the editor says, and hence "we must continue to rely upon the church and the home to carry the chief responsibility for character building."

Character building! Where and how does it begin? Here alas, even many of our churches and Sunday-schools are gone astray! The religious psychology and pedagogy of the day is largely on a natural basis. It is assumed that our children are born in a right relationship to God and that only education is required to cause them to grow up into Him in all things. But if we know the Bible, and if we know human nature including our own hearts, that is fundamentally wrong. The starting point of Christian character is the new birth. We take our stand with Jesus Christ on that, and we appeal to parents, to pastors, and to Sunday-school teachers everywhere, not to let down the bars as to the necessity for the conversion of the children committed to their care. When this great change has taken place in their hearts they are prepared for the physiological change in their bodies as otherwise they can never be. This, of course, is not a question merely of their uniting with the church as children, but of their knowing God in Christ in whom is redemption, even the forgiveness of sins.

The New Spirituality

A correspondent in an Illinois town writes that one of its churches has been sold for a Knights of Columbus hall, that three more are on their last legs, that the Volstead law and about every other law is being ignored, that two large theaters are now open on Sunday, and that the pastor of the most thriving church goes out with his young people to play ball on Sunday afternoon.

That pastor is a good example of the social uplift and the new spirituality of the times, and reminds us of the tipsy Duke of Norfolk, who, seeing a drunken friend in the gutter, hiccoughed: "My dear fellow, I can't help you out, but I'll do better, I'll lie down by your side."

Misrepresentation in Argument

A member of the faculty of the Moody Bible Institute has shown us a letter from a professor in one of our theological seminaries in which the following paragraph occurs:

> "I am especially glad to get your word on premillennialism. It has been represented to me that your Institute makes that doctrine a part of the essence of Christianity, so as not to receive as 'orthodox' any who hold otherwise. I have said that I believed this misrepresented your position, and I am very glad to have your confirmation."

Misrepresentation is a form of falsehood sadly prevalent in Christian (?) polemics, and from which all of us suffer from time to time. Is it not strange therefore that a fellow-feeling does not more often restrain us from working that injury? The MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY will always listen to merited rebuke on that score, and endeavor to right any wrong it may have inflicted on its opponents, of whom it has a few.

Harry Moorehouse

We have readers who still remember this devoted servant of God personally or have been blessed by reading that which came from his pen. He was a dear friend of D. L. Moody, and the latter owed him much. A writer in The Christian (London) speaks of his daughter, Minnie Moorehouse, as being "poor, lonely, and crippled." When he recently saw her in Manchester, England, she was seeking to earn a meager livelihood by needlework, which she found anything but remunerative in these trying times. Therefore it is laid upon his heart to make an appeal to the Lord's people to help her.

Contributions may be sent to Mr. McGuffie, 67 Rylance Street, Manchester, England, or to the publisher of THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY, who will be pleased to forward them.

A Correction

We regret that in one part of the article "Age of the Bible Told by the Foreign Words It Contains," by Prof. Robert Dick Wilson, there was an error. In the paragraph under the subhead "Discovery of the Hittite Tongue," the word "Aramaean" appears instead of the word "Armenian." Prof. Wilson writes: "It was the Armenians who were related to the Hittites, not the Aramaeans. The latter were Semites and related to the Babylonians, the Arabs and the Hebrews."

How Rationalism in the Pulpit Makes Worldliness in the Pew

By Rev. John Roach Straton, D. D., Pastor, Calvary Baptist Church, New York City

An Address at the Graduating Exercises of the Moody Bible Institute

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."—(1 John 2:15-17).

"LOVE not the world!" What world? Surely not the beautiful world of nature around us! Christ was the creator of this world and the Lord of nature was also a lover of nature as His sermon illustrations and his methods of life amply prove. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork," and we ought to love the wonderful world that the good God has given us for our home.

But there is another "world" against which the Word of God warns us in the most emphatic terms. It is the present corrupt world order, "lying in the evil one," as the Bible says, dominated by Satan. Its conditions and forces are hostile to the highest interests of the soul and destructive of man's moral and religious life. The world thus understood is the sum total of those forces which set the carnal over against the spiritual, which glorify the temporal at the expense of the eternal, and which exalt the earthly above the heavenly.

So John follows the example of Jesus in warning us strongly against this evil world. He tells us that worldliness has a three-fold manifestation, "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the vainglory of life."

This, my friends, is a marvelously comprehensive summary, an illustration of how accurate and exhaustive the Word of God is. All of the forces of worldliness that war against the soul are comprehended under these three classifications. It is very interesting to observe that these three things were present in the great historic temptations—the temptation of our first parents in the garden of Eden, and the temptation of the "Second Adam" upon the heights.

I

THE LUST OF THE FLESH

I ask you to think, first of all, of what John calls "the lust of the flesh." This includes all the corrupt bodily desires and fleshly appetites. There are legitimate bodily desires and appetites that are wholesome and true, but these natural forces are often perverted into that which is sensuous and devilish.

When the Devil tempted Eve it is said that, "The woman saw that the tree was good for food" (Gen. 3:6). The tempter took a normal bodily desire, but touched it with his diabolical power and turned it, for her, into an unholy desire, because it meant disobedience to God for her to indulge it. The same tempter came to Jesus after His long fast, and said to Him, "Command that these stones become bread" (Matt. 4:3). As with Eve, he appealed to the normal and the legitimate, but in such a way that it was evil. He tried to persuade Christ to use His divine powers for selfish ends.

So today the lust of the flesh through the activities of the Devil seeks to overmaster the soul. The Bible says that "the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh," and one or the other must come into final mastery and dominate the life. In other words, the individual will become either a worldlian, seeking gratification in the things of this world and serving the kingdom of Satan, or he will become a child of God and seek his satisfactions in the higher realm of spiritual things—a true subject of the kingdom of heaven.

Ah, how these lusts of the flesh, through the wiles of the Devil, are today seeking to tear down and destroy the souls of men! There has never been a day, my friends, in our modern age when the impulses of animalism have so swept the world as they are doing at the present time. The wave of immorality which is menacing the integrity, even of our boys and girls in their tender years, has had an origin that is easily traced. It dates from that time when the dark and sinister shadow of Darwinism first fell across the fair fields of human life. If man is a descendant of the beast instead of a child of God, then we need not be surprised if we find him inclined to live like a beast. Monkey men make monkey morals, and a false and godless materialistic philosophy that glorifies the flesh at the expense of the spirit is the one colossal menace of today.

The Yellow Press and the Dance

Take, for example, the field of literature. The moral sewage of the world, through the columns of the yellow press is being sent into millions of American homes every twenty-four hours, and magazines that even ten years ago were wholesome and maintained a high standard of literary excellence, are now so loathesome and so saturated with sensualism, both in their pictures and their reading matter, that they ought not to be allowed in any decent home, particularly where boys and girls are growing up.

Take, again, the modern dances. They have come, not from above, but from below. They have come up from the underworld, and say what we will about them, and desire, as we may, to be charitable and fair, nevertheless, it is manifestly true that their seductive fascinations center around the lust of the flesh.

Take, again, the question of women's dress. I do not have the time to discuss it in detail, I only say, in passing, that the true purpose of dress is utility and beauty, and not sex appeal. It would be just as logical and legitimate for men to dress with a view to sex appeal as for women so to do. God's word has given us the true standard in this matter, as in all other matters, and Christian women today have a supreme call to make determined warfare upon this unholy manifestation of the lust of the flesh.

For myself, I delight in the conviction that American women are prevailingly sound at heart, and I look forward to that hour when our women will draw up a new declaration of independence and refuse to be dominated longer by foreign fashion masters, or to wear the dresses that are sent over from the demimondes of degenerate Paris.

The Lust of the Eyes

The second form of worldliness is "the lust of the eyes." This is concerned with what we call taste as distinguished from appetite. The things that we see with the eyes, that we are led by the Devil to admire and long for, become destructive forms of wordliness. It is written in Genesis: "The woman saw that the tree was a delight to the eyes." The Devil appealed to Eve's esthetic sensibilities as well as to her appetite for food. And again, when Jesus was tempted, it is said: "The devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain and showed him all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them." In both of these temptations the appeal was to the sense of beauty and splendor and glory—a sense which in its God-directed state is normal and harmless, but which perverted by the Devil is ruinous to the soul.

I pass by any consideration of the great sin of covetousness which falls naturally under the lust of the eye, the greed for gold, and the desire for jewels, and other treasures upon which the eye so fondly lingers.

I wish, rather, at this point, to sound a note of warning in regard to the art of today. True art has a legitimate place in the scheme of human life, but it is possible for art to be debased, and when it is controlled by the Devil, it may completely blind itself to the beauty of holiness which is the greatest beauty of all. The art of today seems, more and more, to be forgetting its spiritual ideals, and giving rein to license so that its loveliness allies itself to foulness. When art repudiates ethical motives and erects the standard of "art for art's sake," without any responsibility to God, it becomes a nightmare that debases the soul and debauches the race. Much of that which parades itself today in painting and, particularly, upon the stage, as "art," is abomination, and should be banished from the walks of decent society.

There is something far more valuable than "art," and that is female chastity and masculine honor, for these things are the foundations of marriage, home life, the proper rearing of a new generation, and everything else that makes society safe and sweet. The sensuous appeal to the lust of the eyes made today on stage and screen is undermining right ideals from one end of this continent to the other.

The Vainglory of Life

The third form of worldliness against which the Word of God specifically warns us, is false pride or the "vainglory of life." We find this also in the great historic temptations. The Devil said to Eve in the garden; "Ye shall be as gods." He appealed to her pride and created in her a false ambition, and this thirst for vainglory was one of the things that led to her fall. So, also, with the Master in His temptation, the Devil said; "Cast thyself down from hence, for it is written; He shall give his angels charge concerning thee." The Devil thus sought to have Christ make a vain display of His powers. He tried to induce Him to win the applause of the multitude and to gain a ready credence on their part to His Messiahship by a vain and startling dramatic display.

And the Devil still comes with his subtle seductions to create a wrong attitude towards life and our fellowmen, and thus to harm the soul and lead us away from that modesty and humility of spirit which are the truest marks of real greatness and which bring us into fellowship with God.

All egotism, all false pride, whether of family, or clan, or country, everything that leads to ostentation, and, as we express it in the language of the street, makes one "show off"—all that leads to boasting about our possessions or our achievements, or our social connections, all of the things that make us swagger, or that puff us up, and give us the spirit of braggadocio and boasting — these belong to the vainglory of life, and they are not of the Father but are of the world.

And above all, conceit over learning, the arrogance of knowledge, which we often see paraded today, belongs to this sin. When the Devil tempted our first parents he claimed to see behind the divine law. God had said; "Thou shalt not eat of the tree that is in the midst of the garden," and He warned that if they did eat they would die. The Devil lied to Eve and told her that he knew better than God—that they would not surely die. He claimed a superior knowledge and deeper understanding of truth. He contradicted God's Word and appealed to the vanity of Eve by promising if she would disobey God and eat of the forbidden fruit, she should have also a higher knowledge. He promised our first parents that through rejection of God's Word, they would "be as gods knowing good and evil."

And this, my friends, is what the Devil is still striving to do—to deny and overthrow God's Word. The supreme religious issue of this age of theological turmoil is, Do We believe God? Not, note you, do we believe about God? All men, who are rationally balanced and have any capacity for thought, believe something about some sort of god. The great question is, Do we believe God? God claims to have spoken through His revelation, and I say that the one overshadowing religious issue of today is this: Do we believe God, or will we believe the Devil's lie once more and repudiate the Word of God, and fall into the Devil's trap through intellectual pride and vainglory?

True Scholarship and False

We have no quarrel with true and devout scholarship. We are indebted forever to those godly men who have devoted their lives to exploring and expounding for us the rich treasures of God's truth, and in whatever age or country we find such men, we see that spiritual modesty has always accompanied the highest intellectual and scholarly achievements. Newton, after his epoch-making discovery of the attraction of gravitation, when praised for his scientific achievements, said modestly, "I feel like a little child who has only picked up a few pebbles beside the vast ocean of truth." Kepler, following his monumental discoveries in the field of astronomy, exclaimed, with the true impulses of worship, "I have been thinking God's thoughts after Him."

Contrast this spirit with the vanity and the self-assertiveness of some of the half-baked professors of today. Thank God, the true culture is not in any sense antagonistic to true biblical Christianity, nor is true Christianity antagonistic in any sense to true culture. Indeed, such Christianity is the mother of the world's best culture. Old-time Christian truth has been through the ages the fountain-head of art, music and literature. From biblical Christianity painters have gotten their greatest subjects and bards their highest themes. Dante's majestic genius was nurtured by her, Milton's muse was the child of her generous breast, and the most glowing pages which Shakespeare's genuis produced are brightened by the principles for which she stands. In the spirit of such Christianity law has been rounded out to its highest perfection, government is being made free, and philosophy has drawn her best stores of truth.

But there is a shallow scholarship, a bastard "learning," and a "science falsely so called," which are foes to Christianity. These were well illustrated by the philosophers of Athens, who, imagining in their pride of intellect that they had all the truth of the universe, said of the Apostle Paul: "Let us turn aside now and see what this babbler will say." Those foolish rationalists have perished forever, but that "babbler" has overturned the world by the teaching of the practical truth and the simple faith he held.

So to the destructive critic and their rationalist of today any one who refuses to swallow their speculations is a "babbler." He is not a "modern man." If he dares to think of a supernatural world and a transcendent, miracle-working God, and if he accepts the Bible at its face value as a revelation from such a God, it is insinuated that he is either "unintelligent" or "intellectually dishonest," and that he cannot understand "modern philosophy."

For these "modern men," who are forever labeling themselves "scholars," who are "ever learning, but never come to the knowledge of the truth," who are not themselves creators of thought, but who merely rehash, analyze and say "me, too," to what others have written, I confess that I have scant regard.

Some of these men are so vain that they arrogate to themselves greater knowledge than was possessed by Jesus Christ. They speak condescendingly of Jesus' lack of scientific knowledge, and they set their opinions on authorship, predictive prophecy and all such questions in opposition to the judgments of the Son of God.

II

RATIONALISM AND WORLDLINESS

This pride of intellect, this form of the vainglory of life, is one of the curses of our age, and I wish now to point out the significant fact that the fountain-head from which the destructive forces of worldliness today are coming, is precisely this false knowledge and the pride of intellect that goes with it.

Let me make this matter concrete by an illustration. A little while ago in New York, I preached a sermon in which I warned Christians against the seductions of worldliness, the destructive influence upon the spiritual life, of dancing, attendance upon the corrupt modern theater, etc. The papers reported this sermon and then an enterprising newspaper man decided that he would get still another "story" upon the situation. He went to leading preachers and asked them if they agreed with the views I had expressed. Several pastors of influential churches gave interviews in which they took issue with me and defended the dance and the theater.

But the reporter did not stop by asking them their attitude toward worldly amusements, but evidently alive to the situation in the religious world, he asked as to their attitude upon the inspiration of the Bible, Darwinism, etc.

To me, it was highly significant that these men, in replying to these questions, gave away the fact that they had really lost faith in the Bible as the Word of God and, therefore, as an authority on human life and conduct.

One said; "The purpose of religion is not to save a soul from hell but to redeem a world and make it beautiful and wholesome in every aspect of its life." But Jesus said: "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost," and He said that in connection with the redemption of an individual—Zacchaeus, the publican. Jesus not only declared His mission to be the saving of lost souls, but He also said to His followers: "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

Another admitted that he had only what he called a "technical" belief in the inspiration of the Bible, and went on to express his doubts about the biblical account of the creation, and admitted his acceptance of Darwinism.

Here, then, we have it out in the full light of day—worldliness and selfish social indulgences justified and excused by preachers who no longer believe the Bible, and who reject its authority!

The hearts of devout believers from one end of this continent to the other have been deeply grieved in recent years by the insidious growth of worldliness in the churches and the paralyzing of the spiritual life of many church members—particularly the rising generation—by these things. I make bold to assert that the fountain-head of this ruinous worldliness is rationalism and unbelief concerning the Word of God and the great truths of religion.

I charge it upon these brethren that they and their false teaching are causing the spiritual wreck and ruin today. They are not only drugging the minds of their hearers with unbelief, but wrecking their spiritual lives. I do not know a single church where dancing and other worldly things are indulged in that is not presided over by a radical preacher.

Dancing in the Old First Church

For example, Dr. Fosdick, a Baptist minister, who preaches regularly at a Presbyterian church in New York, preached, a short time ago, against the Fundamentalists. In this sermon he rejected the virgin birth, the true inspiration of the Scriptures, the vicarious atonement and the second coming of our Lord. The sermon was then printed in pamphlet form and sent all over the country. I happened to get hold of the church calendar for the Sunday in which distribution of that printed sermon was announced, and it contained two notices that were significant. One announced that any who desired a copy of the sermon could get it in the vestibule of the church, and the other announced a dance in the church Friday night of that week. Thus skepticism in the pulpit and worldliness in the pew stood linked arm in arm.

A Philadelphia pastor took me to task because I had dared to rebuke some of these wordly indulgences from my own pulpit in New York, and called me "a sensational pulpiteer." I was not surprised at his attitude because I had learned that he was having dances for his young people in his church, and that he was also antagonistic to the Lord's Day Alliance of his city.

Religion at the "Bal Bleu"

Beyond any question, my friends, there has been a tragic decline in spirituality among American church members, which has been contemporaneous with the growth of rationalism within the ranks of religious leaders.

Bear with me while I give you some concrete illustrations showing just how far many churches and church people have gone on this downward road.

Take, for example, the case of the "Bal Bleu" ball against which I protested when held in the Ritz Carlton Hotel in New York. That ball was announced through full page display advertisements in the New York papers. Sometime I may start a museum for religious freaks and monstrosities, and I will certainly have a copy of that advertisement as one of the exhibits. The second line of it was particularly remarkable, which read as follows:

"For the Protestants, Mrs.————, Chairman," giving the name of one of the richest and most famous church women. "For the Catholics, Mrs.————," giving the name of another famous church and society belle. "For the Jewish, Mrs. ————," giving the name of a well known Jewish leader.

Here, then, were representatives of the entire religious community in New York advertising a ball, a charity ball, seats at the tables being $50 each.

Then came a picture of a Greek ballet, and below that picture an announcement that the entertainment would "include the initial appearance of English and French stage beauties, * * * recently selected abroad."

Think of what an appalling failure of Christian testimony such an event as that is, and think of the further fact that many church people thought I was "extreme" because I dared to denounce such shameful treason to our Lord and His standard of holiness! There are Baptist and Methodist and Presbyterian churches in our city which, in a former day, were famous for their spirituality and their power as soul-saving centers, that are now conducting dances in the houses of God every week in the year.

Some preachers seek to excuse themselves for conducting such dances in their churches on the ground that it is necessary "to win and hold the young people." This is an illustration, first of the short-sighted folly of these worldly-minded preachers, and it constitutes also a slander upon our youth. As the father of five and a friend of youth, I resent the implication that our boys and girls can be won and held only by appealing to their selfishness. It is false and it is more foolish than false. Self-sacrifice has in it far more power than self-indulgence. The path of holiness is the path of happiness, and it is a shameful fact that some of the preachers of today seem to have forgotten that the cross and not the timbrel is the symbol of our holy faith.

Shuttlecocking Divine Services

Take another illustration of the downward trend in our city because of rationalism and worldliness.

A little while after the "Bal Bleu" ball, the rector of one of our historic churches announced that they had changed their hour of morning worship from eleven to 10:30 o'clock, and gave as the reason, that those who desired to automobile and play golf, or otherwise indulge themselves on Sunday afternoon, would have more time.

Here was a shuttlecocking of the services of the sanctuary to make it more convenient for people to desecrate God's holy day, and to turn it into a holiday for self-indulgent pleasure, after a perfunctory observance of religious ceremonies for an hour during the forenoon!

This Sabbath desecration by church people is proving ruinous through its example. We had in New York last year an anti-Sabbath street parade, by The International Sporting Club (a prize fighting organization) but we understood that the moving picture interests, the liquor forces, and other enemies of righteousness, were backing it heavily from the financial standpoint. In this parade there were floats caricaturing the Christian Sabbath. They had a man dressed up in Puritan costume with his head and his hands in the stocks, and the sign read, "For kissing his wife on Sunday!"

A little while after this parade, which was repeated in Philadelphia and other American cities, a banquet was given by the same organization in honor of the author of that law which had brought back bloody prize-fighting under the subterfuge of "boxing matches" to New York. In the advertisement a list of the names of prominent citizens was given as "patrons," and a heavy proportion of the men there named were members of the churches!

Missionaries at the Theater

Let me give you another illustration: I was handed a copy of a letter sent out by the ladies of the missionary society of a great Fifth Avenue church. It set forth the fact that about forty foreign missionaries were home on furlough, and the society was planning to entertain them. This letter asked the members to indicate how many theater tickets each would be willing to furnish that these missionaries might be taken to the shows!

I wish to cry out against any countenancing or encouragement to the modern theater and moving picture interests by preachers and church people. The same men who promoted and produced the disgustingly sensuous performance "Aphrodite" in New York, ran, at the same time, in one of their other playhouses, a so-called moral and religious drama which gave a representation of a sort of passion play, including the portrayal of the character of Jesus.

Think of it! Aphrodite at one end of the city, and Jesus Christ at the other! And these suave and oily showmen conducting both performances at the same time, standing diplomatically between the two and blandly pointing the people in both directions at once!

Now the sad part about it is that the opening night of the religious play they had especially invited the preachers. The next day the papers announced that the theater was filled with preachers and their families. Some of these theatrical people that were with the Aphrodite show, were also used by the church people in the abortive "Wayfarer Pageant" in Madison Square Garden given by the religious forces during the drive of the Interchurch World Movement.

Women at Prize Fights

I have not yet told you the worst about the decline of spirituality and vision within the modern churches. I saw an admission a little while ago from a Bishop who was arguing against the prohibition laws, and who took occasion to announce that he had been recently at a half dozen dinner parties where, as he put it, "red liquor flowed freely." Evidently, they were church people who were thus entertaining their Bishop, and there is no record of any rebuke from the Bishop either for their drinking or for this violation of law. All that he did was to use his attendance upon such occasions to bring public discredit upon righteous law!

Blasé New York experienced a mild shock some months ago when one of our social leaders, assisted by a group of society belles, worked up a charity prize fight in Madison Square Garden. The young woman who promoted this affair is the daughter of a man who, at the time of his death, was perhaps the leading financial figure in America. He was a noted churchman and she also is active in the church. I do not mean to cast any reflection upon her moral character. She is a philanthropic woman, good at heart, but a striking example of the level to which modern church members have fallen in their lack of grace and true spirituality. I have a picture of this young woman clipped from one of the papers. She is standing on a truck with her society girls around her, when they were down on Wall Street selling tickets to the prize-fight during the lunch hour. A crowd of men and boys are packed around the truck and the girls are handing them the tickets and taking the money. These young church women not only promoted that prize fight but they themselves attended it, and the young woman who led in it occupied a ring side seat, and came out in the papers the next day and endorsed it. It was the most magnificent spectacle she had ever witnessed!

And once more, recently, in Madison Square Garden we had a bloody prize fight, which was gotten up for "charity," which gave to our "high society" a good excuse for attending. And they did attend. We had vivid descriptions of how they were dressed, and how they held their lorgnettes in watching the fight.

The early Christians were often in the arenas of paganism and heathenism, but always as victims, and never as witnesses of the brutality and butchery that made such a popular holiday. Because the Christian world today is one, and because these things harm the entire cause and bring reproach upon us all, I have the right to cry out against them, and to utter my protest, humbly but earnestly.

The Church a Holy Brotherhood

I will not prolong further these illustrations of the sad apostasy into which the modern churches have fallen. I repeat, once more, that this appalling worldliness is the direct outgrowth of the loss of a vital faith. If men and women had not lost their faith in the Word of God through the shallow preaching of today, they would not violate its precepts by indulging in such folly. The Bible says, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." It says again that we are to come out and be separate from these things. It says, again, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them; for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."

The supreme need of the church today is precisely at this point. The Christian church started as a holy brotherhood. The members of the apostolic church found their supreme satisfaction in serving Christ and not in seeking self-indulgent pleasures. They were men and women who walked the heights of true altruism. They literally gave themselves as well as their money.

No wonder that such a church "had favor with all of the people," as the Bible puts it. Cyprian, Bishop at Carthage, in the third century A. D., gives us a glimpse into the holiness and beauty of the church in his age, when he says, in writing to his friend Donatus:

"This is a cheerful world as I see it from my garden, under the shadow of my vines. But if I could ascend some high mountain, and look out over the wide lands, you know very well what I should see; brigands on the highways, pirates on the seas, armies fighting, cities burning; in the amphitheaters, men murdered to please applauding crowds, selfishness and cruelty and misery and despair under all roofs. It is a bad world, Donatus, an incredibly bad world. But I have discovered in the midst of it a quiet and holy people who have learned a great secret. They have found a joy which is a thousand times better than any of the pleasures of our sinful life. They are despised and persecuted, but they care not. They are masters of their souls. They have overcome the world. These people, Donatus, are the Christians—and I am one of them."

Constantine the Politician

But the forces of worldliness, through the wiles of the Devil early assailed the church. These forces finally culminated in the reign of Constantine. With the intuition of an astute politician, he saw that the Christians had become so influential that it was better policy to befriend than to persecute them, as Nero, Diocletian, and other emperors had done, and so he joined forces with the Christians and brought the court of Rome into the church of Jesus. This act marks sharply the turning in the history of the church. Through the coming of the state party within their ranks, pagan ceremonies and sensuous indulgences and worldly methods were grafted on to the simple Christian stem. From being the "Bride of Christ" the church became merely the concubine of Caesar! And the real tragedy is that many preachers and theological professors today do not seem even to know what a true church is. Some of them complain of the setting up of "rules," but, it is not a question of rules, it is a question of faith and of life.

A true church is an organism and not an organization. It is a growth and not a manufacture. An organization is mechanical; an organism is vital. The church is the spiritual body of Christ, of which He is the Head and each member is a spiritual life cell, created and united to the head by the power of regeneration.

When the church ceases to be an organism and becomes a mere organization dead ecclesiasticism takes the place of live evangelism; "reform" replaces regeneration; "social service" is substituted for salvation; humanitarianism supplants the worship of God; a priest takes the place of the prophet, and the occupants of the pews are changed from realists and possessors to mere formalists and professors.

The true Christian does not need or want the things of the world. He finds his supreme satisfaction in serving Christ and in winning souls to God. No joy that this world can offer and no pleasure that sense can give is comparable to the joy that the soul-winner and the consecrated worker for Jesus knows.

The Victory of Righteousness

This marvelous passage from John gives us the full truth concerning it all. After warning us to "love not the world, neither the things that are in the world," it tells us: "If any one love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." We cannot have two loves. Our allegiance must be given whole-heartedly and unreservedly to the Father, or else we will drift inevitably towards surrender to the world.

And the text encourages us by the knowledge that worldliness is at last not natural and necessary to us, but that it is a thing alien to the wise and righteous life. "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world."

These things, then, were not created by God. They do not, therefore, belong originally and essentially to humanity. God created the world good, and made man good, and that is His plan. The Devil entered and led man into sin.

Sin, therefore, is a dark blot in the history of the moral universe. It was not in the beginning; it does not belong in God's order for the world, and therefore, it must and will be finally destroyed. Sin and worldliness are not native to man in his God ordained and God created state. The Bible makes clear the fact, therefore, that the Devil is finally to be defeated, cast out and destroyed.

And this fact brings us to the other great inspiring truth of this Scripture, namely, that while the present world order, which is under the domination of the Devil, is passing away, and the lust thereof, nevertheless, "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever"; "Godliness hath promise of the life which now is and that which is to come." The child of God, therefore, is not distressed that he does not have the things of this world. We do not need Jesus and the world; Jesus, thank God, is enough. The blessings of His presence, the inspirations of His fellowship, the joy of His service—these things are satisfying and sufficient unto the soul.

This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Yes, because we believe God and accept the teaching of His Word, we are contented to walk as pilgrims through this world knowing that we shall inherit an everlasting kingdom. Listen: "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever." We need to feast our minds and hearts once more in this materialistic age upon the glorious truth of heaven.

The world is passing away and the lust thereof, but—"He that doeth the will of God abideth forever." We do not envy the tawdry trappings and the idle pleasures of this poor passing world. We look with pity upon the worldlian who is poor even though he may possess unbounded material wealth. With great serenity of soul, we pass by the things that he clamors for, and in which he finds his satisfaction and we say to him that we have "those riches of the spirit," that "treasure in heaven" that abideth forever, "where neither moth nor rust corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal." When all of this pageantry and pomp, this vain display of wealth and power, when all this gilt and glitter have fallen into dust forever, the child of God will just be beginning the enjoyment of those heavenly beauties and those transcendent delights which shall be his while the years of eternity roll!

"How I Free, Den?"

By Rev. James M. Gray, D. D.

BEFORE the Civil War, Amelia Barr, the novelist, lived in Texas. In her autobiography, All the Days of My Life, she tells the story of President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation as it was heralded in her quiet town.

The sheriff stood on the Court House steps, and read it with no more ceremony than if he was giving notice of a forced sale of land, or a new city ordinance about negro passes, or any other every day occurrence. He was surrounded by white men, who listened without interest or remark, and the negroes were shocked and dismayed. They had been sure that the news of their freedom would come with the calling of trumpets, the firing of cannon and the triumphant entry of a victorious army. They were sick and silent with disappointment, and vanished from the streets.

"I went into the kitchen to tell Harriet, my housemaid," says Mrs. Barr. "She was leaning against the open door, looking intently eastward. Freedom was to come from the east, and she was always listening and watching for its approach. Her child, a girl about a year old, was sitting on the floor playing with some empty spools.

" 'Harriet,' I said, and she turned her eyes upon me but did not speak, 'you are free, Harriet! From this hour as free as I am. You can stay here, or go; you can work or sleep; you are your own mistress now, and forever.'

"She stepped forward as I spoke, and was looking at me intently.

" 'Say dem words again, Miss Milly,' she cried, 'say dem again.'

"I repeated what I had told her, making the fact still more emphatic; and as I did so, her sullen black face brightened, she darted to her child, and throwing it shoulder high, shrieked hysterically,

" 'Tamar, you'se free! You'se free, Tamar!'

"She did not at that supreme moment think of herself. Freedom was for her child; she looked in its face, at its hands, at its feet. It was a new baby to her—a free baby. Actually the mother love in her face had humanized its dull, brutish expression.

"I said again, 'You are also free, Harriet. You are your own mistress now. Will you hire yourself to me?'

" 'When dem Yankees coming, Miss Milly?'

" 'Nobody knows.'

" 'How I free, den?'

" 'They sent word.'

" 'Mighty poor way to set folks free.'

" 'Will you hire yourself to me, Harriet? I will give you six dollars a month.'

" 'Six dollars too little, Miss Milly.'

" 'It is what I paid your master.'

" 'Thank de Lord, I'se got no master now. I 'long to myself now. I want eight dollars now. When a nigger free, they wuth more.'

"So I agreed with the freed negro for eight dollars, but I noticed three days later, I had a fresh free negro at one dollar fifty cents a day. Harriet had gone forever."

"How I free den?" How was the poor slave to know she was free without a demonstration of some kind? No trumpets, no cannon, no victorious Yankee army? On what could her freedom rest, how might she feel assured of it?

"They sent word," that was all. The authority was in the word. She could forego the trumpets, the cannon and the army. Nay, all these might have come and brought no lasting freedom with them, but the word was quite enough. What power there must have been behind that quiet word, when in a moment it settled the question of ownership and slavery forever in that Texan town?

"He sent his word and healed them," is the testimony of the Bible to saving grace. "The Jews require a sign and the Greeks seek after wisdom; but we preach Christ crucified" (I Cor. 1:22, 23). Men are so apt to think with Naaman, that they must be bidden to do some great thing in order to be saved. They want feeling for their faith to rest upon, but God says, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead (Luke 16:31).

"How do you know you are saved?" asked a pastor of a child who had presented himself for admission to the church. And he replied, "Because God's word says, 'He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life' (John 3:36), and I have believed and have life." This must illustrate what Christ meant when He said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18:3).

But while faith does not wait for feeling, yet feeling usually follows faith. Harriet forgets her disappointment about the trumpets and the cannon as she throws her baby up into the air. That is feeling enough. And it is not all effervescence either. A free "nigger" is worth more than a slave, and she gets it. There is a change of environment, too. Harriet soon goes to another place.

All this is a kind of parable. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life," but the fruit of the Spirit is soon seen in that life—"love, joy, peace." "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour" (Luke 1:46, 47).

Nor is this joy separate from a very practical experience, for the saved man comes to realize that "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come" (I Tim. 4:8). "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature (there is a new creation, R. V.); old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new" (2 Cor. 5:17).

O reader, will you not trust God today? He has sent His Word, believe it. He hath laid your iniquity on His own Son (Isa. 53:6), therefore glorify Him by the rest of faith and the joy of liberty. "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:36).

A Man Who Lasted

By the Late Rev. Handley C. G. Moule, D. D., Bishop of Durham, England

Reprinted from The Sacred Seasons

THE last verse of the first chapter of Daniel reads as if merely a chronological note; "So this Daniel continued unto the first year of King Cyrus." But it is a pregnant statement; it indicates a very long persistency of character.

I ask to talk a little with my reader about that grand thing, spiritual continuance.

How shall I last? How shall my blessings last? The question is immensely important; for, oh! how little profit for God there is in merely occasional and transient lifts and ecstacies of the soul, as compared with the steady shining, the all-the-year-long fruit-bearing, of the Christian life which lasts!

Let us look at this brief biography of Daniel. It tells me that he continued, that he held on, after a bright beginning. And it tells me that he did so for a very long time; for between the date of the events recorded in the first chapter and the accession of King Cyrus lies a period of seventy years at least. It took Daniel from early youth to hoary and venerable age.

Unpropitious Circumstances

He was, then, beyond mistake, a man who lasted. And remember, what the circumstances were under which he did so. Here was an exile, a captive, a slave, in the absolute grasp of the most despotic of all possible eastern kings. The ruler under whom he began to "continue," as we all know, thought nothing of casting living men into a furnace when they declined to worship him, and was once on the point of destroying all the sages of his capital when they could not explain a dream which he had himself forgotten.

And the circumstances at the end of Daniel's journey were not much more favorable. At that time the monarch indeed was more reasonable, but "the law of the Medes and Persians" was terribly tyrannic. To refuse to treat as God a not very strong man cost Daniel an awful visit to the lions' den.

And even when we put these special difficulties aside, how immense were his more ordinary temptations not to last! Daniel was a youthful Jew, transferred for life to the alien and poisonous atmosphere of heathen Babylon. In that huge city he saw the apparently quite triumphant metropolis of heathen life and power. To every eye but that of faith the King of Babylon was the conqueror not only of Daniel's country, but of Daniel's God. And meantime, as to occupation in Babylon, his special call was not to be the spiritual pastor of his fellow-captives, but from first to last the civil servant of one pagan emperor after another.

This was no easy life in which "to walk and to please God, and to abound more and more." Yet Daniel, in that life, continued.

Conquering Holiness

And his life was far more than a mere maintenance of spiritual existence. It was a noble, a glorious course of conquering holiness. He accepted his life of profound trial with a profound and continuous "Amen" to the will of God, an "Amen" which lay deep among his secrets of continuance. And with the "Amen" of submission he joined a grand "Amen" of action. He did the king's business as surely no Babylonian king ever had it done before. Far on in his course, a very old man, after two generations of oriental palace-life, how did he stand as to duty done? The bitterest critics who ever examined a man's life and books could find no fault in him except in "the law of his God."

Durham Cathedral

consistency appears in Daniel's long continuance, a consistency in tone and temper as he trod the path of duty. One idolatrous king after another he serves with a loyalty faithful, reverent, I might almost say affectionate, till we come to that wonderful climax of it all, the salutation, "O King, live for ever," spoken from the depths of the lions' den!

A glorious sunset closed that long day. The ship sailed after its long, straight voyage, into a fair haven of rest and glory. It is toward the end of the book that the old pilgrim hears a messenger from heaven address him thus, "O man greatly beloved." Yes, he was dear in heaven; and heaven was around him upon earth. It was in the power of the Heavenly One that he lasted, that power which is the same for us today.

How Was It Done?

If Daniel lasted in Babylon, you and I can last in London, in Cambridge, or wherever Daniel's God has set us down. And so we come to ask next, what was Daniel's secret of continuance?

The answer, as I see it, is very simple, and shines out luminous from the open surface of his book. I sum it up in this: Daniel took pains to keep up intercourse with God. I do not think we can get much further than that in our analysis of the secret. Daniel took pains; he used means. He used prayer. He used the reading of the written Word. He used, as long as he had it, holy fellowship and friendship, particularly in the way of united prayer. I repeat it; he took pains, he used means. And here is a message for us, a message echoed, you remember, in the epistle to the Hebrews (4:11); "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest."

Satan's Latest Dodge—The Shorter Bible

By Rev. Christopher G. Hazard, D. D., Catskill, N. Y.

HITHERTO the lower, or textual, criticism of the Bible has been confined to the securing and translation of the best possible duplication of the original manuscripts. It has presented to us the results of the best scholarship in the form of the whole Bible, leaving to discussion and interpretation, the full contents of the book.

Of late, however, there has appeared, under the name of a shorter Bible, an edition that presents the Bible in part, that gives such portions of the Bible as, in the judgment of its editors, constitute the essential value of it.

Reviews of this book indicate that the portions of the Bible that are left out are essential to Christian doctrine as it has been and is still understood, and that the portions that are left in represent such a scheme of thought as would serve the rationalistic and unbelieving hypotheses and visions of an apostate church and an unbelieving world. It appears to be an attempt in line with the idea of Mr. H. G. Wells, that a new age needs a new Bible, since it will not accept the old one.

This new Bible, however, illustrates the truth of the whole of the old one as it attempts to substitute a part of the word of God for the whole of it. It also breathes the spirit and serves the purpose of Satan in so doing, for, in the discussion about the word of God with our first mother, the subtle serpent first introduces doubt and then denial, while, in his attempt to deceive the Saviour, Satan, casting doubt upon the sonship of the Word, asks Christ to cast Himself down from the pinnacle of the temple and quotes Scripture to induce Him to do so. He said: "It is written, he shall give his angels charge concerning thee, etc.," but he was repelled by our Lord's quotation of another Scripture, "Again it is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

How Error Flourishes

"It is written" constitutes the shorter Bible; "Again it is written" constitutes the whole Bible. How gladly and ably the enemies of Christianity quote such portions of the Bible as they would make o serve their purposes! How deception and error flourish by the use of a part of the truth! Without the cunning admixture of truths the false cults of our day would perish in a night. If Satan would lay aside his garment of light and appear in all the hideousness of his lying and cruel malignity his followers would desert him in affright. It is his "It is written," with his suppression of the rest of what is written, that enables him to cast down those who can be deceived into taking a part of the truth for the whole. The shorter Bible is a new aspect of an old dodge, but it will not mislead any who are taught of the Spirit of truth; it would deceive, if it were possible, even the elect, but, thank God, that is not possible.

The parts of the Bible, scattered about along the path of history and on the field of literature like the dry bones of Ezekiel's vision, have come together, as those bones did, under the spell of the Spirit of prophecy; they have formed a coherent, harmonious body of truth, inhabited by the Spirit that created them and that interprets them and uses them. No member is lacking, none can be added, the perfect testimony of Jesus is given by the whole Bible, the production, preservation, constitution and life of the Bible are as miraculous as Himself.

It must be a dreadful future that awaits those who adopt the livery of heaven to serve the Devil in, who dismember and distort that body of truth that God has so marvelously given as a habitation of His Spirit and light of men! They will deceive and destroy many, nevertheless, "the foundation of God standeth sure."

GIVING BREATH TO THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST

(Speaking of the "beast" that had "two horns like a lamb's and he spake as a dragon," the book of Revelation says:

"And it was given unto him to give breath to it, even to the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak and cause that as many as should not worship the image of the beast should be killed," (13:16, R. V.).

We do not say that the accompanying picture explains how the second beast will be able to "deceive them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he has power to do in the sight of the first beast," but we do say that the picture is a very suggestive one.—Editors)

The "Talking Image."

The voice of the medium is transmitted to the confederate in another room by the ordinary microphone. The confederate's reply is transmitted into another microphone that is connected with a transmitting coil concealed in a rug (or other object). This energy is collected by the receiving coil in the statue and is converted into sound waves by the telephone receiver concealed in the image's head.

Satan in the Professor's Chair

By a Junior at College

THERE are laymen of orthodox views who still regard the college class-room as a place where the Christian faith passes freely from professor to pupil. That it has been considerably diluted with unbelief they may have heard, but the seriousness and implications of the situation have never dawned upon them.

Reason for this is not far to find; either they have never had occasion to visit a class, or if they have, their stay has been too brief to enable them to judge fairly of the spiritual out-put. As a result, their knowledge of the treatment accorded the Bible has come to them through the witness of others.

Although many have issued warnings concerning the growth of the apostasy in the collegiate world, yet a personal testimony may help one to appreciate the actual conditions in our universities.

The writer is a Junior in one of the universities in the eastern states, and during the spring of 1922 he was a member of the class in logic.

The text-book was written by the philosophy department and distributed in mimeographed form at the approximate rate of a chapter a week. Each chapter furnished subject-matter from a different branch of learning in order that the students might have proper material from which to derive argumentative skill.

During the discussion of chapter eight, entitled, "How Reflective Thought Deals with the Past, as Illustrated by the Criticism of the Pentateuch," an instructor with a B. D. degree was substituted for the regular instructor. Since the class discussions of this week were particularly interesting from the biblical standpoint, a brief resumé of them will serve the purpose of this article.

Childish Arguments

Not far from the beginning of chapter eight was this statement: "The first nine chapters, attributed by the text to Solomon (in the book of Proverbs) and headed repeatedly with the words, 'My son,' are plainly different in style from, etc."

When one recalls that it is the first seven chapters that begin in this fashion, the initial impression of accuracy is none too favorable.

The paragraph following this was concerned with showing that Moses could not have written the Pentateuch because of the last few verses which deal with his death and burial. It would seem that the puerility of this argument would have been so long ago recognized and admitted that it would never have dared to raise its head again in print.

Next came a long paragraph embodying Old Testament variant accounts of the same events. While studying the text one evening, I became curious to know whether these had any real foundation in fact, or whether they were mere surface discrepancies and hence not contradictory at all, but only apparently so after superficial examination.

Where Aaron Was Buried

Choosing one at random, I looked up the references, and consulted as many books as were within reach which might throw light on these particular discrepant verses. The next day, I informed the instructor that my curiosity had led me to investigate the validity of one of the so-called discrepancies, and asked permission to read the results of my findings which I had condensed into four brief statements. Following are the verses cited:

Numbers 33:38—"And Aaron the priest went up into Mt. Hor at the commandment of the Lord and died there."

Deuteronomy 10:6—"And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth of the children of Jaakan to Mosera; there Aaron died and there he was buried."

One would gather from these two verses that they contain a discrepancy, since Aaron could not have died in both places. The following are the points I made:

1. Mosera—its exact significance is not known. Therefore no one can assert a contradiction to exist between two words, the exact meaning of both of which is not known.

2. If Mosera signifies a district in which Mt. Hor is situated, as Prof. J. L. Porter believed, obviously there is no contradiction.

3. If Mosera signifies a stopping-place at the foot of Mt. Hor, as Haley believed, and if the particular spot on top of Mt. Hor at that time had no place-name, as is reasonable to suppose, is it not inevitable that in the record the nearest place that had a name would be mentioned as the place where Aaron died?

4. There is a third reference to this event in the book of Numbers in which Mosera is not mentioned but rather Mt. Hor. It is Numbers 20:23-29.

Mosera in the Hebrew means "chastisement." So it is possible that the place where Aaron had to meet death was memorialized by naming it appropriately just as other places in the Wilderness had been named where events of importance had taken place.

Then I added: "Therefore we come to the conclusion that the higher critic is either ignorant of the facts of the case or dishonest."

This statement was followed by a stamping of feet which is the University student's way of giving vent to emotion.

The Professor's Surprise

Dr. B— quickly recovered from surprise and replied that I was right, that the significance of Mosera is as yet unknown (although I suspect it was just a safe assumption to cover his ignorance of the matter). "And yet, that is a very unimportant point," he continued, "and I'm sure that no higher critic would rest his case on so small an item." (Those were approximately his words.)

I risked the rejoinder that I considered this case of the greatest importance, not in the detail of the case but in the implications involved regarding the use of the Bible which go to prove that if a man is dishonest (in the sense that he states a contradiction to exist when he knows from his own investigation that he has no valid reason for the assertion) in one point, he is apt to be consistently dishonest in other and weightier points.

An attempted defense not only of the inerrancy of the Bible but also of justice in handling it, had evidently stirred his indignation, and he continued pointing out more discrepancies by reading supposedly variant accounts from his Bible. First he tried to show the contradiction between two Flood accounts, but it was so obvious that there was no reasonable basis for asserting one to exist that his conclusion was greeted with "No! No!" from all sides from students who had, if not a knowledge of the Bible, at least a fair measure of common sense and justice. Dr. B.'s embarrassment was appreciably growing.

After he had produced another example of contradiction, one of the students naively asked him if he had ever looked up those verses in the Hebrew in order to see if the discrepancy possessed a real foundation in fact? The reply was in the negative, which naturally vitiated his statements and stultified himself. The appropriateness of all these "cases" against the fundamental truth of Scripture in a class in logic was, and still is, difficult for me to imagine.

A Jew Who Knew the Old Testament

Later in this same period, we were discussing the higher critical theory of the multiple authorship of the Pentateuch. Dr. B— tried to show that the different names used for God (such as Jehovah, Adonai, etc.) must suggest that different men wrote the Pentateuch. A Jew seated beside me whispered that he had a Hebrew Old Testament at home and he had noticed that sometimes different names for God appear in the same sentence, and it did not seem reasonable to suppose that one author had started the sentence and another completed it!

I mentioned this to the instructor, and his reply was some sort of evasion which I do not recall.

Toward the end of the class period I suggested to Dr. B— that I believed the ultimate test of the truth of the higher critical position and of the orthodox position rested in the way each of them affected life. Before I had a chance to intimate how the orthodox view best meets the test, he replied: "In many cases a new belief in the higher critical view does involve a moral upset and this, of course, is unfortunate!"

Not Bothered About God

A remark of Dr. B— at a later session reveals the cause not only of his antagonism to revealed truth and of his unfair methods of attacking its trustworthiness, but explains also a young man's remark to me after class to the effect that "Everybody knows that ——— University is an atheist hot-bed." His remark was:

"It wouldn't bother me very much if it should be found that God is a body of psychological facts or instincts." I wish I had retorted that if the orthodox bibical view of God should be found to be true, the discovery would probably bother him considerably.

His view of the Bible, then, is that it is not a self-revelation of a personal God in finite terms, but merely a record of man's ideas of what he believes God ought to be like—a sort of body of hallowed, human imagination. We are reminded of Paul's description of those who "became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools . . . Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator . . . they did not like to retain God in their knowledge."

After the dismissal of the class, one of the older young men (about 28) told me that at one time he had had a religious experience, but that at present he has none and is not nearly as happy. It was the most pathetic testimony I ever heard. Is the reason far to find?

The unscientific and unfair methods of treating Scripture are well illustrated by the questions submitted to the class on chapter five which embodied a discussion of evolution. (It was the custom to give to the class several questions on each chapter, in order to direct the student's thought in definite channels).

Two of the questions were: (1) What are the logical drawbacks of the special creation theory? (2) Using the marks of a good hypothesis already established, why is the evolutionary theory superior to special creation?

Atheistic Propaganda

The reader has had no difficulty in discovering the biased character of the teaching of Dr. B— and of the philosophy department, which led Dr. B— to resort to the most ridiculous and unscientific methods of supporting his half-suppressed atheism.

At the opening of the last session during which we discussed this chapter Dr. B— said,

"I hope you will seriously consider this positivistic conception, etc."

In other words, instead of maintaining an equilibrium of emphasis, and refraining from saying more than was necessary to give us a clear picture of the stand taken by each side to the controversy, he decided to carry on a little atheistic missionary propaganda, making a plea that we would attempt to see for ourselves by further study how beautifully rational is the higher critical position. Paul warned against such deceitful attractiveness when he spoke of such as "false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light."

Now I know what William Jennings Bryan means when he says that if religion is not permitted to be taught in secular schools then certainly irreligion ought not to be taught.

Expurgation by Interpretation

I do not object to the conclusions of our atheistic teachers (although they are discouraging enough) so much as to the unscientific and unfair methods which consistently bring them to these conclusions.

I cannot escape the belief that the process of the destructive higher criticism is one of expurgation by interpretation. And the "why" of the process is found in the truest statement our instructor ever made before our logic class when he said that "After all, if a man doesn't want to believe in a God, you can't possibly prove to him that there is one!"

The children of men have always been at enmity with God—as Paul says: "The carnal mind is enmity against God"—and nothing but a tremendous judgment is going to puncture their inveterate pride and undeify them.

As for the Christian college student, I would say that the best insulation against the subtle, sophistical arguments of the ubiquitous Modernist professors is a thorough heart and head knowledge of God's revealed Word. There lies the responsibility of the parent and the minister.

Does Christian Faith Depend on Education?

A Friendly Letter to a Young Pastor

"MY Dear Brother:

"You kindly wrote me in October in reply to some inquiries about ——— University and its relation to the Christian faith of its students. Your letter was useful, but passed out from under my eye for some time. However, I feel moved to write you even at this late date regarding a statement or two in your communication.

"I need not tell you that I rejoice that you have never lost your faith in God and Jesus Christ, nor your passion for winning men. Not all of those who have become well acquainted with modern thought are able to witness such a good confession.

"There is one point, however, in which I cannot quite follow your reasoning. You say, 'If the young woman in question is going to college with the idea that her present beliefs in religious matters are correct, and is determined to accept as true only that which does not interfere with her present creed, she might just as well not go, for she is not seeking a real education.'

"Would this not altogether depend upon what her present beliefs in religious matters are? I am sure you will forgive me if I say frankly that your letter makes me feel that you assume that if this young woman's views are conservative, they must be changed with the increasing knowledge received at a university. If I am right in my feeling, then I must certainly disagree with you, for such conservative views as this young woman holds are held by many who have had all the advantages of university and seminary training. Indeed, men who have attained eminence as scholars and have become expert, not only in philosophy and theology, but in science as well, still maintain views regarded as conservative. We all know that we are affected by increasing knowledge, but certainly we may start out on foundations, in which case our increasing knowledge will only give further illumination within the area of the truth.

"I do not know what are the 'many things' which you formerly held as essential objects of faith but which you can no longer hold and be honest with yourself. Of course, if you were mistaken as to their being essential objects of faith, it is well that you have come to see that you were mistaken at this point. I am sincerely hopeful that you have not made a mistake the other way around and have given up anything which is really essential.

"I am sure you will not think I am contentious when I go on to say that I am not quite clear as to why you would not be in the ministry today had you not gone on with your education. This seems to suggest that confidence as to the foundations of our faith stands or falls with advanced education. As a matter of fact, however, many men who have not had advantages in school have a confidence as clear as the noon-day sun as to the essentials of our holy faith. Not only in intellect, but in their whole being have they been satisfied as to the reality of the things they preach. You will not understand me to be making any plea for ignorance, but only to be pleading that conviction rests on deeper bases than the instruction found in any class rooms. The history of Methodism is proof enough on this point.

"I heartily agree with you that no fact of modern knowledge will be found contrary to any fact of God's revelation through His Holy Word. There is a fine point here, however, which should not be over-looked, namely, that things are sometimes assumed to be facts in modern knowledge which are not facts at all, and these are placed against the verities of God's Holy Word. I need not tell you, either, that it is one thing to get a fact and another to get the proper interpretation of it.

"Now that I have 'delivered my soul,' I am afraid you will think that I am impervious to all new light. I humbly beg leave, however, to believe that this is not the case. Moreover, I am sure you will feel that what I have written has been indited by a genuine interest in you and your real success in the work of God.

"Praying the continued blessing of the Lord upon you, I am

"Cordially yours,

Bible Revivals in Australia

Thousands of Boys and Girls Confess Christ—A Remarkable Distribution of God'sWord—The Coming Revival

By George T. B. Davis

DURING the past year remarkable Bible revival campaigns have been held in Melbourne, Sydney, and other cities in Australia. Tens of thousands of copies of God's Word have been distributed, and thousands of boys and girls and young people professed faith in Christ.

The longest of the campaigns thus far was in Melbourne. The movement extended over twelve weeks, during which 32,000 Testaments were given away to those who enlisted in the Pocket Testament League, while over 12,000 enrolled under the banner of Christ.

Prayer was the secret of the success of the work. The Archbishop of Melbourne, Dr. Harrington Lees, and the heads of the other churches, signed a Call to Prayer for the campaign, which was sent throughout the State.

The chief fields of operation were the schools of Melbourne; the State schools, high schools, and colleges. With the cooperation of the ministers the schools were entered, sometimes several in the course of one day, and the Spirit of God swept over the hearts of the boys and girls like a breeze from heaven.

Melbourne, Australia—Magnificent public library in foreground, also houses the national art gallery, and the technological museum. Melbourne is one of the world's most modern cities. It has a population of approximately seven hundred thousand, and is the metropolis of the Australian Commonwealth, which is almost as large in area as the United States.

The Visit to Scotch College

One of the most far-reaching events was the visit to Scotch College. This is the largest school of the kind in the British Empire, having an enrolment of over 1,300 lads and young men. In the two visits to the two sections of the college 934 were enlisted in the League and almost 500 recorded their acceptance of Christ as their Saviour. The chaplain, Rev. F. Chisholm, declared "scenes were enacted which probably are unparalleled in the long record of its seventy-five years."

The head master of a State school in Melbourne told a friend that a week or so after the books had been distributed the comic papers had disappeared, and the boys and girls were reading their Testaments instead.

One day Mr. W. F. Woodcraft, of the Y. M. C. A. and Evangelization Society of Australasia, accompanied the writer to five schools, one of them being Scotch College. After seeing the way in which the students enlisted in the League and openly confessed Christ, and feeling the spiritual atmosphere of the meetings, he said: "For twenty-five years I have been engaged in arranging missions of all sorts in Australia, but I consider that day's experience in the schools as the greatest single day of evangelism I have ever witnessed." Let me add that Mr. Woodcraft worked indefatigably for the success of the movement from the beginning to the end of the effort.

One of the business men in Australia gave over a thousand pounds for the campaign, and declared that he had never made a better investment. Another business man, past middle age, who has been in the Sunday-school and Sunday-school work all his life, said: "I have never before seen such a wonderful influence pervade the young people."

Hon. W. H. Edgar, M. L. C., who was chairman of the committee that financed the distribution of the Testaments, said to a friend at the conclusion of the movement: "I feel the revival for which we have been praying has come, but in a different way than we had expected. It will mean a new era in church life, and a new spiritual uplift for the community." Mr. Edgar now has a vision of giving every Protestant child in Victoria an opportunity to receive a Testament and enlist in the League.

Simultaneously Mr. William Winn, of Sydney, who invited me to Australia, and his brother, Mr. Isaac Winn, are energetically continuing the work of spreading the Word in New South Wales. Mr. William Winn writes: "So far I have either given away, have in stock, or on the way from London, over 100,000, and expect to need many more thousands."

Broken Hill a Hot Bed of Socialism

The final campaign of the past year was held in Broken Hill. It is the hotbed of Socialism in Australia. That and gambling are the two passions of the big mining center in the desert. But nothing is too hard for the Lord, and here, too, prevailing prayer opened the windows of heaven.

It was an astonishment to find the children of socialists enrolling in the League and professing faith in Christ with the same readiness as the youth of other cities. And, praise God, the children of Broken Hill became missionaries in their own homes. I only heard of one Testament being torn up by an angry father. A letter just received tells of a children's prayer meeting started at the close of the mission through the pleading of a little girl. The first night nineteen were present. A month later the attendance had increased to seventy-six.

Beautiful stories were told of the devotion and enthusiasm of the children of Broken Hill. Some boys built a booth in their back yard. That evening the mother and father peeped in and saw eight boys sitting round in a circle. They read a chapter, verse about, sang the mission choruses, three of them led in prayer, and they closed with the Lord's Prayer. Five little girls met at one of their homes and held a prayer meeting, while their mothers were at the races.

The Melbourne Council have now arranged a three months Bible revival campaign to cover the State of Victoria. Plans are being made for me to make a rapid tour of fifteen to twenty of the largest cities and towns in the State, visiting the schools, distributing Testaments, and preaching Christ. Please pray for this unique campaign, and that we may also be led to just the right places for campaigns in 1923.

Mrs. Davis' Health

The victories of the past twelve months have been all the Lord's doing in answer to believing prayer, and to Him we give all the praise. Just after we reached Sydney a year ago, my mother was taken seriously ill. But in answer to prayer the Lord raised her up to fairly good health. But nothing is too hard for the Lord, and He can give her abundant health and strength. Her companion, Miss Beebe, has been kept in splendid health and strength, and has labored fervently in prayer for the work. Will not those who read these lines pray earnestly that we may all be kept in health and strength, and filled with the Holy Spirit, and that sufficient funds may be supplied for the carrying forward of the work in Australia, and wherever the Lord may lead us?

One who is co-operating in the work through prayer writes: "My heart is overflowing with gratefulness at the success of the work. I feel I must write and say that for years I have prayed that God would preserve your dear mother and spare her to the glorious work. I have hungered for a revival of prayer and the living Word. Praise God indeed for the news of the many children deciding. This is better a hundred times than grown people's conversions; the children saved from going into sin."

I am convinced we are on the eve of a great world-wide revival. We were all disappointed that the revival did not immediately follow the world-war. Year after year has passed and the long-for world awakening has tarried. But, praise God, it is coming!

One of the most significant signs of the times is the springing up of little prayer-groups in homes and churches to pray down the fire from heaven. It was the formation of these prayer associations, or praying bands, that helped to promote and spread the great revival in Scotland two hundred years ago.

D. L. Moody's Advice

D. L. Moody strongly advocated the formation of these praying bands. He once said: "The best way is for the pastor (or some member) to say he wants to see all who desire a revival. Don't let anyone else come. Then get down on your knees and pour out your hearts, asking God to revive yourselves. Don't be in a hurry to pray for your friends. Hold the people to themselves! You never see an anxious church without souls being saved. Don't wait for the whole church to move. Get two or three, and soon there will be six or seven. Form a praying band. Pray for the work, and the blessing will come. That plan never failed."

The revival is coming, and I feel sure its manifestations will be most marked and significant where there are the largest number of the prayer circles. Will not hundreds of those who read these lines assist in forming such prayer circles to pray through for a revival in your own hearts and homes and churches, and in your community, and throughout the world; and will you not also pray for us and our work? I will be glad to receive the names of those who will form such a revival prayer circle, or who are already in one, and will hope to send them occasional reports of our work. Please address me at 376 Swanston Street, Melbourne, Australia. May God hasten the formation of thousands of these revival prayer circles, and may we soon see one nation after another in the grip of great revivals, that shall lead multitudes into the kingdom.

The John the Baptist of Revival Campaigns

By Singing Evangelist William S. Dixon, Wheaton, Ill.

SOME time ago I was asked to write regarding the work of the singing evangelist.

Having fought the call into this work for ten years, I felt constrained to respond to the request, with the hope and prayer that what I had to say might be helpful to other young people going through the same experience, wondering what their life work is to be, and where the Lord would have them invest their lives for His glory.

Going about the field in evangelism for the past nine years has shown me that many young people are having the same experience I had before entering definite Christian service as a life work. They are casting about for the place where they can use their talents, and if this life of service were brought before them, from one who has been through years of it, they might be led of the Spirit of God to offer their lives as an investment for Him in carrying the gospel in song to needy hearts and lost souls.

Preparing the People's Hearts

I look upon this work as having the same relation to the preached Word that John the Baptist had to Christ. Christ was the "spoken Word" from the Father, manifested in the flesh, and John the Baptist prepared the hearts of the people to be ready for the message which He brought from God. If the singing evangelist will look upon his work in relation to that of the preacher, he will be prayerful about it, and feel the responsibility to make good, and prepare the hearts of his hearers for the message from God to be given immediately following, by the preacher.

Various Departments of Work

The work in detail consists of leading the congregation in the song service, directing the chorus in special numbers, solo work, etc. But the man who is attending to the music only is missing a great opportunity, for there are important parts of the work which the singing evangelist can do in addition to that of the music. Other parts of his work are among the boys and girls and the young people.

Personally, I speak each Sunday evening at the young peoples' meetings, endeavoring to give them a vision of a surrendered life, and urging them to get into the place of God's will for them.

The booster chorus of the boys and girls each week is a drawing card of the campaigns, and acts as a means of attracting their parents into the services.

Then one can organize and lead the morning cottage prayer meetings.

I find speaking at shop meetings during the noon hours also very profitable.

Joys and Difficulties

The joys and satisfactions of the work are many. In the first place a man is not selling his life for dollars and cents but is investing it in the lives of others for eternity. The singing evangelist has a great opportunity in witnessing both by his life and by his lips for Christ. Many souls are touched by the gospel in song that are not moved by the sermon.

Problems and difficulties enter this work as well as other lines, whether they be religious or secular, but the worker must remember that God is more than equal for all of them. One is that of getting the members of the chorus to consecrate themselves to the work faithfully, during the whole of the campaign, and another is to get the audience to sing heartily.

The Preparation Required

Preparation should be carefully done, for there are many in this field of work who are not properly trained, and are therefore not doing the best that they are capable of doing or that the work requires. There are some who think that because they have a good singing voice they can jump into the field and become a singing evangelist. But the man who will make good should have more than that. He should be a trained worker along gospel lines and be able to emphasize the gospel in his work and message.

I would say that the essential training for this work can be best secured at Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, for they have such a course which gives specialized training to the singing evangelist, giving him well-rounded equipment for his work. Being a graduate of this school which has been so richly used of God I know whereof I speak. I have found many ways in which my Moody Bible Institute training has enabled me to make good in the field for the past nine years.

Personal Qualifications

Qualities of personality are many. First, I should emphasize consecration to God, and then to His work. The world hates a counterfeit, and will not be long in detecting it in the singing evangelist. Many men have put to shame their calling by compromising actions in the field such as were not becoming in a gentleman, much less in a worker for God and His kingdom.

The singing evangelist should be spiritual in every part of his work. He should have his work on his heart. He should be kind, tactful, courteous, a man who makes friends and who is ready to adjust himself to every kind of condition and circumstance.

And last, but not least, he should be a man of prayer about his work—his solos, the selection of his songs, and in fact everything else that he does.

The Pulpit and the Press

By J. Richard Olson, Editor, Minneapolis Journal

An address at the Moody Bible Institute, stenographically reported

A DISTINCT honor has come to me in being invited to stand in this historic place where the sainted Moody stood as a prophet of God, and directed the path of many a soul to Him who is the Way, the Truth and the Life.

It has been my privilege to write some things about this Institute, and I wish to say in passing, that you have given me fine co-operation in the matter of publicity, more so, I should say that any institution I can think of now. I have received brief but pointed manuscripts from this Institute and they have gone into the Journal which in turn, has carried the message on to other dailies and weeklies throughout the Northwest, and your work has thus been lifted up and information as to your activities has reached thousands more than if it had never gone out.

If I were to choose a text for this talk on the pulpit and the press I should take that in 1 Samuel, 18:7; "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." If you will pardon the application with a change of words, we might say, "If the pulpit has slain thousands, the press has slain tens of thousands. If the pulpit has blessed thousands, the press has blessed tens of thousands."

When the Master said, "Go ye out into the highways and hedges." He issued a proclamation for you and me not to be satisfied by staying within a limited circle in some particular place, but to go out into the darkness of this world and remind men of Him and His Kingdom.

My friends, I do not know of any one thing in which the church through all its institutions for preparing young men and women for missionary work and for the ministry in this and other lands, has fallen down quite so much as on this one point. To my knowledge there is no denominational institution where there is offered even the most elementary course in publicity to teach those who go out as leaders how to capitalize the opportunities given them through the press.

The way many ministers make an effort of their own is pathetic. I have some manuscripts so rich in—well I might say humor, because of the lack of training in the art, that I have kept them as souvenirs, that when I feel a little dull, I can hunt out one of them and read it. They beat Mark Twain all to pieces.

How Business Values Advertising

Let me direct your attention to the value that commercial institutions place upon publicity. John Wanamaker; the Chandler Automobile Company; the National Biscuit Company; Hart, Schaffner and Marx and similar organizations spend as a minimum a million dollars a year; the Nuxated Iron Company, a million and a quarter; the Goodrich Tire Company, a million and a half; Swift and Company, one million seven hundred thousand; a certain chewing gum concern, one million eight hundred thousand, to sell a nickel package of gum! Mr. Wrigley ought to give me a package of gum for telling you that. To sell one package of gum it pays them to pay more than two millions in advertising, and this is but a broad rate.

But if for the sake of mere publicity it pays commercial institutions to run paid advertisements in the papers daily, and if it pays the institutions of the church, our colleges and seminaries and boys' and girls' schools to have running display advertisements in both the denominational and secular papers, why should not the church carry at least a weekly advertisement fitly framed to set forth its work?

In speaking of publicity I want to tell you a story which sums it up in a nutshell. A Bishop from Norway visited this country some years ago. He was a man of keen observation, and when he was about to leave New York for the old shores, he was interviewed by a newspaper correspondent, who asked him this question:

"Bishop what has impressed you most in America?"

Of course he was prepared to write something about the vast plains and unlimited resources of America, or some other old stand-by phrase, but the Bishop did not say anything about those.

"What impressed me most in America? Let me see. I think it was that what you call Bull Durham."

The Bishop went home with tobacco on his brain. Wherever he looked he saw those signs.

The church might find through the proper use of sign boards the publicity it needs. Through the use of such boards a man could never go to work or come home again but would be compelled to give at least one thought to the church, and it would without doubt have the same effect upon him as is desired by those who advertise breakfast food or something else that is before his eyes every day.

Why the Church Should Advertise

Now why should the church make any effort. For its own sake, its own work and for the sake of the press if you please, and the world at large. Remember that the church brings to the world the one thing that can make it safe; to the nation the one power of righteousness; to the individual the one power that can redeem and save him.

The church is the one institution that has been given that divine and high privilege of proclaiming peace and good will to men. Only as we reach out to the multitudes everywhere with the aim and purpose of the church of Jesus Christ can we hope to so influence men that there will be any hope of preventing the terrible catastrophe of war.

The church should advertise to show its faith in itself and in its Founder and Head, the Lord Jesus Christ. No man can be converted to another cause without being impressed with somebody's faith in that cause. Only so far as you show your faith in any cause will some one else begin to think there is something in the cause that is worth while.

Here's another circumstance in the church itself that needs publicity. According to the latest available statistics there are Protestant churches in the United States today with a seating capacity for 53,500,000 persons. The Protestant church membership is something like 25,000,000 in round numbers. Not more than sixty per cent, or 15,000,000 of these attend church with any degree of regularity. The church therefore has an additional object for this publicity that it might stir up the other ten millions, or the other forty per cent, to greater activity and zeal in the Master's work and in the kingdom.

The newspaper is the most insistent feature in our public life. It is with us at morning, noon and night, at our meals, in our street cars. How this thing follows us! The American people are largely becoming a newspaper educated people, this medium provides a channel of communication and publicity for the church.

But this publicity should be done with dignity and decorum.

Cheap Publicity Cheapens the Church

I don't care whether it is simply a sermon theme, or a sensational story of some kind.

Let me quote what Dr. Burton of the University of Minnesota said one day in class, when speaking on "The Bible as Literature":

"I have studied all literature, the best written in any age by any people in either the original or the translation, and have yet to find any that can compare with the literature of the Bible; and I thank God," he added, "the literary value is not the highest, but the spiritual value."

He then went on to say: "I never prayed until I was forty-three years old, but by studying the Bible simply from a literary view point, something got from that book into my life that made me a praying man and I want to say that I never let a day come and go but what I feel the need of prayer, and do pray. You can call it anything you want, but it has in it a quality, a peculiar power that none other has, and yet," he said, "how many times we find ministers announcing themes of a trashy nature, supposedly based on some text in the Bible, that have degraded the very message they intended to bring! Not long ago I read this theme on the sign board of one of the local churches, 'Next Sunday morning, Dr. So-and-so will preach a sermon on "Elijah's High Spots." ' If I wanted to go to church as badly as I want to see my dear mother, I never would go near a place that used the name of Elijah in any such way."

That comes from a man who is not a church member, but who has a just regard for the great things in life.

Not long ago a man came into the office and gave me an announcement about next Sunday morning's theme—"That Book Called 'Main Street.' " I thought to myself, the poor man must have a very dim vision of what his privilege is in the pulpit on Sunday morning.

About two weeks later I met one of his members and asked him what kind of a sermon he had preached. He blushed a little and said, "You see he hadn't read the book. He had heard a lot about it and so he read up a little and then talked about it."

Think of it! I know a church in one of our Northwestern cities whose pastor in order to gain a little publicity for himself used tactics like this: "Next Sunday evening a loaf of bread will be given away to any one who comes to my church." Here's how he went about it. He had gone into cahoots with a baker who agreed to supply miniature loaves of bread to be handed out to the congregation, the baker being allowed to put his name, label, and place of business on the wrappers so that he got publicity for his bakery shop. The minister preached on the "Bread of Life."

The next Sunday evening the same man announced that an orange would be given away to everybody that attended the church. A Greek fruit vender agreed to supply the fruit, and in his advertisement the preacher said that the oranges were shipped directly from Florida for the purpose. It was not true of course.

That was one of the younger men, but not long ago an older man came up from Rochester to the same city in the Northwest and announced that a bar of soap would be given away to everybody that came to his church Sunday night. There were seven hundred bars of soap in that church that night, and only thirty-nine persons came. That's too much soap for thirty nine persons.

How to Write for the Press

When you write anything for publication it will never break into print unless you bear in mind three things, three W's. The first is "What?" What is it that you are about to tell, the point of the story, the fact you want to bring out? And then "When?" When did this take place? or, when is it to take place? in the future, the present or the past? The third is "Where?" Where did or where will it take place?

You would be surprised how many manuscripts come into the newspaper office with one of the W's left out, and when one is left out the other two fall out automatically.

I have before me a publication of one of the large churches in Minneapolis—a church bulletin, and there is nothing in it to state what church it is, or where it is located. If I gave you this bulletin you would have no idea what it is, and yet it is edited by the pastor of the church. That happens continually.

Another thing that we must bear in mind is, "Be brief." Distinguish between news and comment on news. There is an editorial page on nearly every paper for comments on news, but the news pages are left for news. If you send in a news item and then give your personal comment the thing becomes so mutilated that the average editor does not have time to straighten it out.

I have here an example where a member of a church wishes to have it known that their rector has resigned, but in place of simply saying that, most of it is her personal comment on the man and his abilities, and what he is going to do, etc. I want to read you a sentence or two to give you the idea.

"The Rev. J. W. B. has resigned his rectorship of So-and-so Church and has accepted the post of general missionary of the diocese at the request of the bishop of the diocese (the last clause of course is not necessary, and that he has accepted is evident), who judges as to the organizing and business ability" of his clergymen (here comes her wonderful opinion of him). It's fine to have your members have a wonderful opinion of you, but it is hardly the place to have it brought out in the columns of the daily newspaper. The item proceeds: "Rev. So-and-so can be reached at such a place, where he will be at home to his numerous friends (how does she know he has numerous friends?). In losing So-and-so the local church will find great difficulty in replacing him with a successor who possesses anything like the progressive spirit he has shown, and will experience a severe handicap, and it is to his credit that he leaves with the full confidence and respect of the entire church" (how do we know he has the entire respect of the entire church?).

In speaking of being brief, please do not be too brief, for there is danger there. For instance, in the twin cities in many churches there is the problem of bilingual services. Some of them use German, Norwegian, Swedish, and other languages, and yet the English language must be used, and so they conduct the morning service in one and the evening service in the other and vice versa. About the only way to keep them straight in the mind of the public is to have some advertisement about it, and so one man meant to say there would be a Norwegian service at 10:30 a. m., and then state the theme, but wishing to be brief, he said, "10:30 A. M., 'Lord Have Mercy Upon Me,' Norwegian." In the same issue another pastor meant to suggest some special music for Sunday evening service, but he said, "At 7:45 P. M.—'Things that Drive Men from God.' Quartette."

Misunderstandings may arise. For those who are especially interested in music may I tell another one? A pastor had been in a certain church two years. He was a nice, congenial fellow, but somehow or other he did not seem to have the necessary qualifications, and so at the end of two years he was transferred to Milwaukee. On a certain Sunday night he gave his final message. His first name was Elijah, and after he had finished his sermon, the special musical number was " 'It Is Enough,' from Elijah."

At all times say the things that are true, and do not color your news in such a way as to be misleading. That is a dangerous thing, and more, it is wrong, it is sin. Once people begin to feel that they cannot always rely upon what a man may say, that man begins to lose power and influence.

My friends, the scope of the pulpit and the press is so large that we can hardly deal with it in a few minutes, but I recommend that you be given a course of say six or eight lectures to cover it.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICES IN CHICAGO

Rev. Charles K. Carpenter, D. D., chairman of the Commission on Evangelism of the Chicago Church Federation, says in a recent bulletin:

"The pastors are reminded that the closing day of the year, December 31, falls on Sunday. While the orgies that have been committed as a way of celebrating the coming of the new year are always obnoxious, they will be even more so this year on Sunday. The fact that the closing day is Sunday gives an unusual opportunity for the holding of Watch Night services in the churches, where the Old Year may be watched out under the decent auspices, and where young people may spend the evening without the demoralizing influence of the cabaret, dance hall, and other agencies."

JEWISH POPULATION OF PALESTINE

According to a recent census it is shown that there are now in Palestine 120,000 Jews. This census greatly disappointed the Arabs, who thought they out numbered the Jews five to one. The Arab population was found to be about 400,000.

JEWS FLEE TO ARMENIA

A cablegram received by the local branch of the Near East Relief says that thirteen families, believed to be the remnant of the lost ten tribes carried into captivity by the Assyrians twenty-six centuries ago, have reached Erivan, Armenia. They fled from Urumiah, Azerbaijan, going over the mountains with ox teams and on foot.

A rabbi, Hanock Siminiv, carried with him records that seem to connect the Israelite colony at Urumiah with the lost tribes. Only forty-seven adults and thirty-three children out of the large number that started made the journey safely.

A National Conference on Church Publicity

By Joseph B. Bowles

AN all day and evening Conference on Church Publicity was held under the auspices of the Chicago Church Federation, October 31, in the Cameo Room of the Morrison Hotel, Chicago.

"Advance in Church Publicity During the Past Decade," "Selling the Church to the Community," and "The Next Step in Church Advertising," were the themes of the morning, afternoon and evening sessions, respectively.

Following an introductory paper by the presiding officer for the morning, Rev. J. T. Brabner Smith, chairman, Commission on Publicity, Chicago Church Federation, the first theme was elaborated in addresses on "Church Advertising Which Has Actually Produced Big Results," by Rev. Elwood A. Rowsey, Westminster Presbyterian Church, Toledo, O.; "Making the Church Bulletin Talk," by Rev. Claude R. Shaver, First Presbyterian Church, La-Crosse, Wis.; "Effective Church Publicity for the Smaller Trade Center," by Rev. Oliver Keve, First Methodist Episcopal Church, Kearney, Neb.; "Making Advertising Pay," by Mr. Herman A. Groth, Wm. Rankin Advertising Agency, Chicago; and "Reaching the Masses in a Great City Through a Modern Church Advertising Program," by Rev. Wm. L. Stidger, St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, Detroit, Mich.

Mr. W. Frank McClure, chairman, Advertising Council, Chicago Association of Commerce, presided at the afternoon session, which included addresses on "Selling the Church to the Community," by Rev. Christian F. Reisner, D. D., New York City, chairman, Church Advertising Department of the Associated Clubs of the World; "What Shall We Say in the Advertisement," by Mr. Herbert H. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., Assistant Manager, Presbyterian Publicity Department; "The Kind of Church Advertising that Pays in a Town of 25,000 People," by Rev. Peter Jacobs, Dexter, Ia., secretary, Iowa State Sunday School Association; and "The Psychology of the Sunday Evening Crowd," by Rev. Wm. L. Stidger.

Remarks on "The Church and the Newspaper" followed by Rev. W. B. Norton, Chicago Tribune; Mr. John C. Shaffer, Chicago Evening Post; Mr. Henry J. Smith, Chicago Daily News; and Mr. L. E. Brooks, Chicago American.

Dr. Reisner gave the keynote message at the evening session, which was held at the City Club, Rev. Brabner Smith presiding; and a dozen five-minute talks by representatives of the Chicago religious press and others completed the program.

It is not attempted in this article to adequately cover the many instructive addresses given. This could be done only by complete stenographic reports. But even brief notes on some of the important features and suggestions presented, may be found useful.

Gains From a Community Survey

The value of a community survey was emphasized by Rev. Elwood A. Rowsey. It gave the first real impetus his church received after he became pastor, he said. The adjacent territory was carefully canvassed and the facts secured which were essential to definite knowledge of the actual condition and needs of the parish. The names of all Jews, Catholics and members of other churches were eliminated, leaving 2,000 names of persons not affiliated with any church. To these a series of carefully prepared letters were addressed and the result within a short time was the addition of 100 new members who had not been attending any church. Offerings increased largely, much more than paying for the expense involved.

Mr. Rowsey advised that when planning important changes in church or Sunday-school work, the pastor should talk them up to his people, stressing the advantages to be gained well in advance of putting the changes in effect. He related that when he took hold of his church he found the Sunday-school in a very unsatisfactory condition, from the standpoint of its efficiency as a religious educational agency, and decided to departmentalize the entire school. Grading the pupils involved changes in some of the classes. If full publicity had not been given to the new plan and its value for some time in advance, there would have been serious trouble, but when the changes were made everybody understood them thoroughly and no one complained.

Thorough preparation, he further advised, should be made for any service or feature before advertising it; otherwise those who come are likely to be disappointed, thus nullifying largely the effect of all the church's advertising.

Rev. Claude R. Shaver stated that the contents of an effective church bulletin might be classified under the headings, "Information," "Inspiration," "Conversation."

Church Bulletin Suggestions

Apart from the schedule of regular services, fresh and important church news, he said, should be found in the bulletin, prepared with an individual touch that adds interest. Not only the forward but a backward look should be given on the work, echoes from previous services and special occasions and glimpses of various phases of the church's life. He pointed out that statements can be made in the bulletin without giving offense, which it would be unwise to mention from the pulpit. In his church the Sunday-school meets before the Sunday morning service. One of the teachers who was faithful in the Sunday-school frequently neglected to attend the church service. To have referred to this from the pulpit would have done harm, but a paragraph in one issue of the bulletin, calling attention to the fact that a primary purpose of the work of the Sunday-school is to bring the children into regular attendance and membership in the church, and that the example of regular attendance of the teachers in the church services is one of the most helpful influences in this direction, resulted in the teacher's regular church attendance thereafter.

Striking facts about the progress of missionary and other important Christian activities throughout the world add interest to the bulletin. The advertising slogan, "The more you tell, the quicker you sell," has its bearing, said Mr. Shaver, on the contents of a good church bulletin,—one which takes hold of the interest of the reader and has a stimulating effect upon the work of the church. A well prepared bulletin may with advantage be circulated not only among the members of the church, but also to others in the community regarded as prospects for church attendance. But if this is to be done preparation should be made accordingly.

Mr. Herman A. Groth said that to make advertising pay there should be painstaking research work in advance of preparation of the advertising plan. Intensive effort must be applied to securing all the facts available that have a bearing on the various phases of the selling problem.

Illustrating this, he displayed a chart showing a plan laid out by the Wm. Rankin Company for an important national advertising campaign, and stated that an entire year was devoted to assembling and analyzing the required information before publication of the advertising was actually begun.

United Appeal to Family Interest

He declared it would be a good thing for all the churches of a community to unite in a series of advertisements designed to bring non-church-going people into their services. Such a series, he said, should appeal to the family life, beginning for example, with "Your Boy and Girl in Kindergarten," bringing out what the Sunday-school and church have for little tots. Then follow with "Your Boy and Girl in the Grammar School," "Your Boy and Girl in High School," "Your Boy and Girl in College," "Your Boy and Girl in Business," "Your Boy and Girl in Their Married Life," "Your Boy and Girl as Leaders in the Community," etc. What the church can do for them in the varied departments of life, could be presented in a way to appeal strongly to the best instincts and desires of parents.

Mr. Groth believes there is nothing about the slogan, "Go to Church Sunday," over an announcement of church services, that has any real appeal to the non-church-goer. It is to be expected that the members of a church will attend the services of their own church. The purpose of advertising the services in the newspapers is more especially to attract those who do not regularly attend, hence the advertisements should feature something calculated to lay hold upon the outsider's interest and inspire a desire to attend.

Rev. Wm. L. Stidger stressed the importance of publicity received in the news columns of the city papers, supplementing paid announcements, and said he had found that whenever his church rendered a real service to the community the newspapers were glad to have the facts about it and publish them.

Citing Henry Ford as the best advertised man in America, he asserted that in nearly every instance Ford's publicity has been due to something that he was doing or undertaking to do that would help others in some way. For example, his Muscle Shoals project would provide cheaper nitrate fertilizer for farmers. His protest against high prices for coal succeeded not only in securing cheaper coal for his company and thus helping to furnish automobiles at low prices, but put a check on coal gouging in other directions. His policies and methods that have made possible the production of a serviceable automobile at a low price, have been a boon to millions of people.

Publicity Through Community Service

As an illustration from his own experience, he told of his arrival in Detroit one rainy Saturday evening to assume the pastorate of St. Mark's Church and preach his first sermon the next morning. From what he knew of the condition of the church, he felt he had a hard task ahead, and as he sat in the hotel he said a feeling of depression came over him. He hardly knew what to do with himself, whether to go to a movie theater, settle down to a book, or what not. Picking up an evening paper he noticed an item about a little girl who had been run over by a truck and had both legs amputated. It occurred to him that perhaps he might be of some service if he made a call at the home. He looked up the address, and found it was only four blocks from the hotel. Knocking at the door, he explained who he was and said if he could help in any way he would be glad to do so. He was invited in, found that the parents did not belong to any church, and that their chief anxiety was as to how it would ever be possible for the little girl to get an education. He suggested that something might be done by the congregation of St. Mark's, and that he would see about it the following morning.

At the close of the morning service he told the story of his visit and announced that any who would like to contribute toward the education of the little girl would have the opportunity as they passed out; that he would stand at the door to shake hands with all present, and that gifts could be deposited on the table by the door. The amount placed on the table totaled $300.

After dinner at the hotel he lay down, went to sleep, and was awakened to be informed that a newspaper reporter wanted to see him. The rest of the afternoon was mostly taken up meeting reporters. The next morning all the Detroit papers had a front page story on the taking of the offering in St. Mark's Church for the victim of the accident. All announced that they would receive gifts to add to the fund, and for two weeks every day there was about a column in each paper telling of the progress of the fund, and in the end $10,000 was provided for the girl's education.

Mr. Stidger thinks that perhaps an even better medium of publicity than the newspapers is the radio. The first sermon he had broadcasted brought him 500 letters from all directions, most of them written by people who never had been in his church.

He believes in taking advantage when possible of the public interest aroused by commercial advertising, for example, by book publishers. When a new book has been widely advertised he announces it as the subject of a Sunday evening sermon, thus attracting readers of the book. His rule, he said, is to make use of any subject which he might turn into proclamation of the gospel.

Put Church to the Front

Dr. Christian F. Reisner advocated the most conspicuous location obtainable for the church building, and distinctive church architecture. Get on to the main street, he said. Put a steeple on. Have bells. The modern plan of a business structure for a church is undesirable. The church should be distinctive in its appearance and look like a church rather than an office building.

Put out an electric sign. Have a grass plot. Make the surroundings attractive. When the Lord gave his instructions for the building of the Temple there was no hint that it would be a waste of money to make the structure of the impressiveness and beauty the plans called for.

Dr. Reisner started out some years ago in New York with a determination to put his church in a prominent location on Broadway, instead of the back street, out-of-the-way location it has had. Now they have a million dollar lot on Broadway, on which a great church is to be erected.

A Warning Word

The preacher, he said, should keep himself absolutely free from anything questionable, ordering his life so that if the full glare of publicity were put upon it there would be nothing to be ashamed of. For instance, he doesn't smoke, for the reason that to do so would lessen his influence with a certain portion of the community.

To seek personal publicity he regards as commendable, if done only as a means of promoting the work of the Lord. The preacher is a public man and when he does things of public interest, should not hesitate to let the newspapers know about it. At the same time he should bear in mind that publicity has a tendency to exaggerate the ego and that there is need to be careful lest he be snared by a desire for personal advertising.

He expressed himself as sick of what is called religious education, which is lacking in the power of the Holy Spirit, and urged putting God first in all the work, and that it be surcharged with a genuine evangelistic spirit.

The Y. M. C. A. and the Salvation Army, in his opinion, have made a mistake in allowing their energies to be taken up so largely with material service, and have lost their evangelistic fervor.

Special Features

In regard to special church features, he thinks there is no virtue in the announcement, "Seats Free." People expect and are willing to pay something for what is worth while.

He has motion pictures for the little folks on Saturday afternoons. His Sunday night theater meetings are addressed as often as possible by speakers of national and international reputation. These meetings are advertised strongly, not only under "Church Services" but also in the amusement columns. The great men who accept invitations to give theater addresses are not paid, not even their expenses as a rule. They appreciate the opportunity for service presented.

Dr. Reisner does not believe in Sunday night musicales which leave out the gospel message and appeal. But he favors doing unusual things to attract attention. One of his members, a godly young man, and an officer in the aerial service during the war, enlisted the cooperation of a number of airmen. Circling over the district in which the church is located, they dropped thousands of handbills advertising the services.

It is a good thing also, he said, to have an efficient band and get out with it occasionally and awaken the community.

GOOD FOR EVIL

By Associated Press dispatches we learn that the American doughboys in the Rhineland are making up a purse of many millions of marks with which to give to German youngsters a real Christmas.

The Rhineland post of Veterans of Foreign Wars started the purse with 300,000 marks and every soldier in the American forces is giving at least the equivalent of $1 which is more than 8,000 marks.

Relief work already has begun among the German poor. A number of soup kitchens are operating, supported largely by officers and the veterans' committee is collecting clothing and toys, which are to be distributed to the German children at the customary Christmas tree of the American forces in Germany.

Songs and Sonnets for the New Year

SAIL ON!

By Bertha Wulf, Chicago, Ill.

Sail on! sail on!
Sail on, whate'er betide!
Through sun and tempest, tear and smile,
Still guide your vessel, homeward-bound,
'Tis just a very little while
Until you reach the peaceful sound,
So guide your vessel, mile on mile.

Sail on! sail on!
Sail on, and still sail on!
The destined night is coming fast,
You cannot stop away from shore,
But when your changing day is past,
And land is reached, then sail no more,
Safe in the harbor, home at last.

MUCH MORE

"How much more shall your heavenly Father give?" (Luke 11:13).

By William Olney, London, England

Look back, O Memory, across the years,
And treasure up the thoughts of father-love;
The hand that wiped the childish tears,
Tenderness shown when it must e'en reprove;
Kindness that ever kept new gifts in store,
Then learn,—the Heavenly Father loves "much more."

Recall the love that watched o'er youthful days;
That never gave a stone instead of bread;
That patiently put up with selfish ways,
Nor for a fish gave scorpions instead;
That with demerit and ill manners bore,
Then learn,—the Heavenly Father loves "much more."

Did ever father-love forsake the child?
Or e'er grow weary of the off-spring's need?
Call back the happy hours when father smiled,
And gave heed when the youthful voice would plead;
Rehearse all that your father was of yore,
Then learn,—the Heavenly Father loves "much more."

IF

(With apologies to Kipling and others.)

By Mrs. A. R. Perham,* Wilton, N. H.

If you can trust in God in joy or sorrow,
And on His promises securely rest;
If you can live and never trouble borrow,
Believing that your Father knoweth best;
If you can onward go and never stumble,
Although the way be thorny to your feet,
If when you're praised you always can keep humble,
And when opposed you always can be sweet;—

If you believe the Lord is ever near you,
And you delight to keep His holy day;
If you have faith and know that He will hear you,
And give all needed blessings when you pray;
If you're a shut-in, and the days are dreary,
And the nights long with suffering and pain;
If you can smile on others and be cheery,
And patient be, nor murmur or complain;—

If from the friends you love you have been parted,
And they have left you sorrowing, one by one;
If you can live in hope though lonely hearted,
And looking upward say, "Thy will be done";
If you can daily live and keep from sinning,
And walk with Jesus and His will obey;—
Then you'll be perfect, and a crown you're winning,
And you shall see His face in heaven some day.

MY HAND IN THINE

By J. Paul Bennett, Chicago, Ill.

When Satan comes with all his wiles
And seeks to lure,
I do not tremble at his power
But feel secure;
For though his power and might are great,
Thou, Lord, who art supreme divine,
Wilt help me stand, if I but have
My hand in Thine, my hand in Thine.

When darkness up before me looms,
And hides the way;
When threat'ning clouds of inky black
Obscure the day;
And what's ahead I cannot see
Since every light has ceased to shine,
What peace it gives to know, dear Lord,
My hand's in Thine, my hand's in Thine.

And, if perplexed, I do not know
What step to take;
My will and Thine do not agree
What choice to make;
I, knowing Thou all wisdom hast,
Will then to Thee my will resign,
For then whate'er may come I know,
My hand's in Thine, my hand's in Thine.

When cares and trials come, and all
May seem so wrong;
And where I look the way may seem
So drear and long;
I need but then to hear Thy words,
Who did to me this way assign,
That all things work for good, because
My hand's in Thine, my hand's in Thine.

Whate'er may come of grief or joy
Along life's way,
I know it all is in Thy plan,—
Both night and day;
With all Thy boundless love and power,
Thou art, dear Lord, a Friend of mine,
And I may walk secure to know
My hand's in Thine, my hand's in Thine.

And may I ne'er my steps then turn
Away from Thee;
But if the road be rough and hard
Hold on to me;
And may Thy hand once pierced for me,
Me ever of Thy love remind,
And keep until life's way will end,
My hand in Thine, my hand in Thine.

Building Better Boys at Camp Roosevelt

By Miss Lillian Ewertsen

YOU remember that the kick of one cow started the great Chicago fire. One pistol shot at Serajevo started the world aflame with war. It is the little things that the world has to watch. It is the little idle moments with wrong companionship that may wreck our voyage of life; change our destiny. "Little things" are the things that count.

Into the fathers' and mothers' care today will be intrusted the nation's future; those who are soon to be clothed with authority and make laws for the government. Hence the education instilled in children becomes a civil and political problem. Not only are these parents intrusted with the guardianship of intellect and character, but their gentle presence, with its silent influence on future life, is shaping the entire moral character of the coming generation of the world. Thus it is fitting that they see and maintain that children are educated in their aptitudes, and not forgetting the spiritual and moral teachings.

In days gone by, these teachings occupied a part of each day, and children grew up with a firmly established idea of right and wrong. Unfortunately, the hurry and toil and confusion of the present day preclude the opportunity for concentrated training along these lines. Many parents must work, in order that their children may be properly educated, and during the day time, both father and mother toil at their tasks. Night finds them busy with other things, or too tired to occupy with training their children, leaving this part to chance or the teachings in the classroom. On the other hand, after school hours the children must find some relaxation, and run outdoors for play. In the crowded cities, the only place to play is on the street, and when twenty or thirty children, as is often the case, congregate out on the street to play after school-hours, who can judge as to the desirability of these boys and girls? Who knows what their moral training has been? So boys and girls are left to grow up more or less by chance, with the hope that they will imbue as they grow enough moral strength to keep them upright through life.

The solution of so grave a problem lies in the hands of our educators. The Chicago public school system has made the first move in this right direction, by establishing a great summer, training-educational camp for boys, where during the summer vacation months boys may spend a happy, profitable period of work and play, combined with a thorough training in good citizenship, which includes, of course, moral and spiritual elevation. It is felt that the time here spent not only keeps the boys off the streets during the idle summer months (which are the most difficult of control for parents), but that this higher citizenship training leaves so great an impression on the mind of the young boy and its effects will remain with him during the winter school months, and unconsciously be a silent monitor for right acting.

View of Camp Roosevelt from Silver Lake

Major Beals Founded Camp Roosevelt

This unique camp, known throughout the country as the boy-builder, is called Camp Roosevelt, and is located on Silver Lake, near Laporte, Ind. The camp was founded in 1919 by Major F. L. Beals, U. S. A., an educator who has made boys his life study. A great Olympian playground, where boys from all parts of the country could commingle, and where they could receive thorough, better citizenship training through a well-defined course, has been Major Beals' ideal for many years, and in the establishment of Camp Roosevelt he has included all of his splendid ideas for making better future American citizens. Because of this tendency for effecting better manhood, the War Department of the U. S. Government gave to Major Beals splendid support in the loan of all necessary camping equipment, and the assignment of regular army officers and non-commissioned officers for the instruction. The American Red Cross also assigned a staff of doctors and nurses to look after the health and sanitation of the camp, and to give instruction in first aid and Red Cross. The Y. M. C. A. maintains a hut, and ten secretaries are on duty during the entire summer to supervise the welfare and comfort of the boys, and to assist in the athletic program.

Where from seven hundred to a thousand boys congregate from fifteen or twenty states, and where they range in ages from ten to twenty, it will readily be seen that a program to cover so wide a range must necessarily be well regulated and diverse. Major Beals has divided the camp into three sections: The summer schools, which include seventh and eighth grade subjects and which are operated on the same plan as are other Chicago public summer schools. The camp school is operated on so splendid a basis that it is considered an auxiliary of the Chicago summer school system, and credits earned at camp are honored on the same basis as are other summer school credits in Chicago. Recently, the Indiana State Board of Public Instruction added the camp schools to its list of accredited schools. The instructors are selected in the main from Chicago public schools. Classroom and shop facilities are of the best.

For the larger boy, from fourteen years and over, the R. O. T. C. division offers splendid opportunity for health-building and outdoor life, should this be preferable to the schoolroom, while the younger lad finds a life of romance and healthy activity in the Junior Camp.

Because of the willing assistance of the national organizations who combine to make Camp Roosevelt so large and splendid an undertaking, it has been possible to make the fee sufficiently low to attract as many boys as care to attend. All other necessary financial aid is secured by contribution from public-spirited Chicago business men.

The better citizenship training enters into every phase of camp activity, and is an undercurrent which is felt more than seen. All of the one hundred and more officers, instructors, etc., who compose the staff of the Camp Roosevelt organization start their instruction with the idea of building better boys. Throughout their program they intersperse the training with better citizenship training, and the end of the season finds close to a thousand boys ready to start back home with a well defined knowledge of law and order, of respect for law and constituted authority, with respect for the rights of others, and respect of self.

Parents who have growing boys are asked to investigate the Camp Roosevelt plan. It is a step towards remedying many of our civic and political ills, and for a better future America.

Wanted—Dutchwomen!

By Elsie M. Hopkins of the Belgian Gospel Mission

I AM GLAD that these lines were not written last Saturday as intended. Last week I would have written it, "Wanted, a Dutchwoman,"—now it writes itself, "Wanted, Dutchwomen"; because since last Saturday we have been up through the Flemish villages again.

There was a cold wind, such a wind as sweeps unbroken inland for miles, over the sandy flatlands which make up "the Flanders." We turned up our coat collars as we stood in the window of the train compartment, a train which was bucketing along toward where a few years ago only military wagons and long lines of fighting men wended their way, and whence only a very few ever came back. We were four, and looking for a certain locality which the train would pass. There were Mademoiselle D'Amour, one of the French Bible School students from Brussels, her little cousin, a Chicago Tribune woman reporter and I.

A Field of Death

What we were searching to see finally shone through the darkness, and seemed at first to be a field of unreaped wheat. But it was not. It was a field in which 25,000 English soldiers, many Belgians, and scattered groups of other nationalities, lie buried. And it was the little white stones set up by the British Government, which, row upon row, gleamed thus.

This was the lady reporter's first visit and the scores of dug-outs, some empty and others inhabited and surrounded with little flower and truck gardens; the trenches often filled half-way up with water; the remains of tanks in their war-paint of camouflage; the charred remains of high trees; the desolation and silence of the country,—all made the impression upon her that they invariably make when one goes up for the first time. For however much one may have known about the war he cannot escape an indefinable atmosphere which rises up and weighs upon the spirit as he enters these regions.

To one whom the Spirit of God has made sensitive, there is something more than the remembrance of the horrors this land has seen, there is a very definite sensation of being on hostile ground. The Evil One seems to mock as he reminds that death was and is victor here. Sin and pain and death, have conquered thousands of souls in this corner of the earth, not only in war but in peace. And not only physically but spiritually has death conquered and reigned here. It is from these villages along the route that in the sixteenth century hundreds of men and women died for the faith of the Son of God. If it is from bloodshed there that the poppies spring up and clothe the ground in scarlet all summer, as some think, then this would be far more from Belgian martyr blood than from the soldiers of all nationalities who gave their blood here during the days of the latest disaster!

Alight With the Word of God

For all this country was once alight with the Word of God and men and women openly read it. And when the Word was forbidden there was more than one gathering of saints who read it by the light from the fires of their brethren, burning at the stake. In these fields men and women sang Marot's hymns when "heretique" meetings were forbidden inside the town gates. The Evil One has triumphed here until now. There are no more such meetings, except,—but I will tell you about the except later. There are villages upon villages where there are no Bibles, no gospel, in spite of big churches with glorious chimes and masterpieces on canvas.

It is for these villages that Dutch or Flemish speaking women are—not needed but necessary—NOW.

A Family Visit

Mademoiselle d'Amour (or, Juffrouw d'Amour as she is in her own country) had asked me to visit her home in Poperinghe, long before, but it had not been possible up to this time. She is the Christian daughter of an unconverted family. Her sister who is in Brussels has been won to Christ, but in Poperinghe not one of her family which is large and distributed in various parts of the village, but believe her a backslider, a turncoat, and their love for her is touched with a bit of fear and a bit of scorn for her. But she prays continually for their salvation and her rare visits home are occasions when she can tell them a little more about her new faith. For me, going as her guest, into a town where if there be any Christians they are in the error of Romanism, it was with the anticipation of opportunities to witness for Him, anticipations wondrously realized.

Sunday morning there being, of course, no service we could attend, we set out to look about the village a bit, and stop at numerous homes of friends and relatives of my hostess. There may be some who read these pages, who know what it means to stand alone for Jesus Christ, in the circles where one was born and brought up, to bear witness for Him, and bear the consequences,—and keep sweet under it.

Most every one spoke, as well as their native tongue (which I do not yet speak), either English or French, and it was a joy to speak for Him wherever possible, with the force which an American guest bears, and which a person of the locality does not have. And most of them received it most respectfully and even joyfully.

By the Kitchen Stove

I wish I could tell you one third of it all,—the hospitality of the simple village people, the coffee which was instantly prepared and poured out in practically every house visited, the tasty dishes prepared, the honor paid.

Just this I can tell you. Sunday evening, we sat in the kitchen by the stove, with uncles, aunts, cousins and relatives, these others having come in the rain to see the guest and talk with her about "your religion" as they called it.

She answered, and explained and recounted, in French, as fast as she could talk for over an hour, and the leader, a grey-haired man, told the others what she said, in Flemish.

He had an only son, too young to understand, who had put down his head on his sister's lap and fallen asleep. When the father, who was deeply interested and I believe, being spoken to of God, said, "Well, you certainly have something we have not. You are so much happier and so much stronger in your faith than we. We believe, but—" the response was put into my mouth, "It is Someone we have, and a faith on Him which is a faith of heart, not of head. Every one believes that there was once a man called Jesus Christ, that he died for the world, at Calvary, on a cross. But there must be a belief of heart, an answering love to the Son of God, a knowledge that it was for me that He died, and then the heart goes out in a love to God which changes all the life. Would you be able to give this son of yours to die cruelly for some friend who needed it and could be saved from death only in that way? (He had turned and saw the sleeping lad). I doubt that you could or would. Would you do it for an enemy? But God loved His Son, just as really His Son as your boy is yours, and God loved Him more than you love your son, yet He gave Him to die for enemies, sinners. We are all sinners, aren't we, we've all done wrong?"

This was admitted, and then, "That sin had to be punished. God punished Christ for it. Will He then punish us too? Would that be justice? If we believe that Christ died for us, in our stead, then we must believe that simply accepting that sacrifice will save us from any condemnation."

Mademoiselle d'Amour had her Bible and quickly turned to the references, reading aloud the verses.

He sat still for a moment, then said, "I never thought of it that way before."

And then the conversation went on, with stories of people who had been saved in Belgium, Flemish people, one a dying man led to Christ by a colporteur.

Three of the cousins had been to Brussels on a visit some six months before. They had learned several hymns and could still sing them, and so we joined and sang them, and then some Flemish ones to which I could only hum a harmony as the words were mostly beyond my pronunciation.

Then this family, who had opposed and very nigh disowned the student when she came into the school, asked if we could not make a place in the offices for the daughter of her uncle, just out of school. Her father explained to me that he wanted his girl where she would learn useful work and be watched and cared for, and kept from the streets. She could be with her cousin and go to the meetings and learn more hymns, etc. God was indeed working; this time they would voluntarily give us the girl that she might be safe!

Hungry Hearts in Belgium

In that town there are hungry hearts. All they have had is the except, I spoke about above,—two hurried visits from the evangelist at Antwerp (three hours journey away, and with all he can manage in his own province), and two or three open-air meetings on the town square, in the summer. My little visit may help; God grant that it will. But for a real ministry there must be some one who talks their own language, who will be there with them, live like them, share their life, visit in their homes. There are amongst the fifty workers of the mission, two missionaries (only one a native) and three part-time women workers who can speak this tongue, and they must also work amongst the French speaking peoples. There are 12,000 people in Poperinghe and it is only one of scores of such towns. Up in West Flanders, Valentine Denecker, graduate of the Bible Institute says, "Send me some one to help. I cannot reach them all and they must be given the gospel."

A Reminiscence of Moody Bible Institute

I can shut my eyes and see a scene which I enjoyed a little over a year, and in the evenings mostly, but one very dear to me,—Moody Bible Institute classes, classes in Keith Hall, Saturday morning prayer hour, evening class supper!

Surely there must be a Dutch or Flemish speaking woman there, or amongst those who will be reached by these pages, to whom God can speak. If she loves Him, if she is strong, and well and willing to use her strength for Him, if she will not mind criticism until she wins love, if she does not fear traveling alone in cold and dirty trains, if she will not mind loneliness, rough food (hungry perhaps at times) knowing Him to be all-sufficient for all these things, there is a wondrous work for her. She cannot imagine its values and joys until she tries it. We will all join in telling her as earnestly as we can, that she will be so, so happy, and God will give her fruitage.

Miss White, Directress of Women's Work, believes God has at least one woman coming to her help. So we hang out our sign into the thoroughfares of Christian work in America,—"Wanted, Dutchwomen."

A SALVATION ARMY MEMORIAL

In the side walk on the south front of Bush Temple, on Chicago Avenue, Chicago, a tablet was placed, November 18, on which are the words, "The Salvation Army began operation in Chicago on this spot, February, 1885." In connection with the placing of the tablet there were some simple exercises conducted by Evangeline Booth, commander of the Army in the United States, and Adjutant Peart, who is in command of one of the great divisions of the Army's work in the United States.

THE WORLD

What is "the world," against which so many and so grave warnings have been uttered?

It is the sum of human activities, with God left out (Creighton).

It is human society as it is organized apart from God (Gore).

It is not man only, nor Satan, nor is it exactly sin. It is an infection, an inspiration, an atmosphere, a life, a fashion, an impersonal but a very recognizable system. None of these names exactly suit it, and yet all of them suit it. It is a hell already upon earth—something which is excommunicated from God's smile. God's mercy does not enter into it; all hope of its reconciliation with Him is eternally precluded. Repentance is incompatible with its existence. The sovereignty of God has laid a ban upon it. It is pre-eminently among the enemies of God. Hence the place which it occupies in Holy Scripture. It is the world which hated Christ (John 7:7), the world which cannot receive His Spirit (14:17), the world that loves its own (15:19), that rejoices because Christ has gone away (16:20), the world which Christ overcame (16:33), for which He would not pray (17:9), the world that by its wisdom knew not God (I Cor. 1:21). Well might St. James come to the conclusion: Whosoever will be a friend of this world is the enemy of God! (Faber).—Exchange.

Call for Founder's Week Conference at The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, February 5-9, 1923

THE birthday of D. L. Moody falls on Monday this year, therefore our conference may be continued through five days and still close on Friday night in time for pastors from a distance to return for their Sunday engagements. This circumstance alone foreshadows even a richer feast than usual "of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined" (Isa. 25:6).

As a rule we schedule no meetings in the Institute on Monday, which has been our rest day from the beginning, but we make an exception on this occasion, and will substitute the following Saturday as our day of rest.

We have a very attractive program for Monday, February five.

In the first place, Dr. R. A. Torrey can be with us on that day, and that day only, and we have asked him to again talk to us on "D. L. Moody As I Knew Him." Who is alive today outside of the immediate family of that great man who can speak of him as can Dr. Torrey? We have never heard him take D. L. Moody for his theme when we have not wished that he might repeat the address again the next day. Dr. Torrey knew D. L. Moody long and intimately as an evangelist, as a Christian educator, as a man of affairs, as a church leader, as a saint of God whose life was fed on prayer, and faith and the living Word, and when he speaks of him his soul is in what he says and the fire of God comes down upon his hearers.

We have invited Mr. C. S. Bishop, the long-honored secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Kansas City, to be with us on that day also. The last evangelistic campaign conducted by D. L. Moody was in Kansas City, and Mr. Bishop was its directing mind. He was with Mr. Moody continually in those critical hours when the latter was stricken with the disease which finally brought his precious life to a close, and made it necessary for him to leave for his loved New England home, where he breathed his last. Mr. Bishop has a story to tell of those hours which no one else knows, and we desire to have him with us if he can come.

Another special feature of that day and the following one, will be the presence of a new voice among us in the person of Dr. J. Gresham Machen, Assistant Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis in Princeton Theological Seminary. ProfessorMachen is one of the younger members of the Princeton faculty who magnificently contributes to its high standard of scholarship with unquestioned loyalty to the orthodox faith. We have been importuned to add him to our program by those who have heard him lecture on other popular occasions, and who have read his sterling book, The Origin of Paul's Religion, being the James Sprunt lectures delivered at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.

Professor Machen's subjects will be:
1. What is Christianity?
2. Is Christianity True?

With the exception of Professor Machen's work on that day, Tuesday, February six, will be given over to the Alumni, a large representation of whom is expected. The business meeting of the Alumni Association will be held on that day, and all the teaching, preaching, solo singing, and song conducting of the program (with the exception above named) will as far as possible be placed in the hands of former students whose names will be announced later.

Always on the evening of Student Day we have great fellowship meetings around the supper tables, and this time we are planning for them to be composed of three groups as follows:

(1) Students who were here between 1886 and 1904; (2) those who were enrolled between 1904 and 1914, and (3) those between 1914 and the present date.

Another new voice in this conference will be that of Rev. Leander S. Keyser, A.M., D.D., Professor of Systematic Theology in Hamma Divinity School (Lutheran) Wittenberg College, Springfield, O. Dr. Keyser is well known by his many books, the latest of which, Contending for the Faith, is a collection of strong essays in constructive criticism and positive apologetics, which has been highly recommended by such Christian leaders as the late Professor George Frederick Wright, Professor Robert Dick Wilson, and Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Dr. Keyser's general theme will be "The Problem of Origins," which will be discussed from the biblical viewpoint with reference to modern science and philosophy.

And still another new voice will be that of Rev. W. S. Gottshall, of Bluffton, O., president of the Home Mission Board of the Mennonite General Conference.

Mr. Gottshall, true to the Word of God, and a forceful speaker, is frequently on the program of Bible conferences in this country and Canada. He has had long experience both in city and country work, but his heart seems to be in the latter, and we are hoping that he may feel led to talk to us on the problems of rural Christianity.

Nothing has yet been said of Rev. Gordon Watt and Mrs. Watt of Glasgow, Scotland. Last year was the occasion of their first visit to this country, but everywhere they went blessing accompanied them; and when we learned of their contemplated return this year, the Institute pre-empted all their time. Their first engagement will be at our Founder's Week Conference, and after that they will be open to other engagements through our Extension Department in different parts of the country. Mr. and Mrs. Watt represent what is known as the Keswick teaching on the deeper spiritual life, sometimes called Victorious Life teaching, and their messages during Founder's Week will be different from that of any others on the program.

Of course as usual, we hope to make Foreign Missionary Day the great day of the feast. Memories of the last conference and especially of that closing consecration hour, still linger. Decisions then made for Christ's service have been bringing forth results ever since, and Dr. Glover, the Director of our Missionary Course, is already at work on the program for 1923. He reports that an unusual number of distinguished missionaries are expected in our country at that time, and some of them from mission lands that are only too infrequently represented in such gatherings at the home base. He is hoping to bring them here for the conference.

But in addition to these, our former student body will be well represented on Missionary Day as is always the case. What a spiritual refreshing came to us last February in that afternoon symposium when so many of them spoke!

One more feature of our program to be mentioned is the expected presence of one or two strong inspirational preachers. At other times we have had such prophets of the Lord with us as Bishops Berry and Wilson of the Methodist church, Drs. Dixon, Hinson, Massee, and Straton representing the Baptists, Dr. Conrad of the Congregationalists, Drs. Stone, Kennedy, and Britan, representing the Presbyterians, and many more. If the Lord blesses us as we expect He will, there will be no disappointment in those who are likely to come this time, and whose names will be announced later.

We need not speak of the music at our conferences. The note of joy rings through all the days. Dr. Curtis Lee Laws, editor of The Watchman-Examiner, who was with us for two or three days last June, was impressed with nothing as he was with the inspirational uplift of our congregational singing. The same was true of Dr. A. Z. Conrad, of Park Street Church, Boston; and, after Dr. John Roach Straton, of New York, gave a graduation address here a few months ago, he went home and preached a sermon to his people dwelling on the same feature.

The cause of all this is God. All our fountains are in Him. We rejoice and are glad because we are redeemed and because

"New every morning is the love
Our awakening and uprising prove."

"Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed" (Rom. 10:11) and we are glad for that. "The coming of the Lord draweth nigh" (James 5:8) and we are glad for that. "We rejoice in tribulations also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience, experience; and experience, hope. And hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us" (Rom. 3:3-5).

"O, magnify the Lord with us, and let us exalt his name together" (Ps. 34:3). Set apart this time, those five days, for the strengthening of faith, for the stimulating of the intellect, for the purifying and comfort of your heart, "that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever, Amen" (1 Pet. 4:11).

We shall look for you. So far as our space will permit, we shall be glad to have you board and room in our buildings. The cost will be two dollars ($2) per day for board and lodging, and when our rooms are all engaged, we will render every possible assistance in obtaining accommodations for guests elsewhere.

Send in your reservation early.

What Other Editors Are Saying

J. H. Ralston

The purpose of this department is to give the views of editors of periodicals, chiefly religious, on matters of interest to our readers. In publishing what they say, we are simply endeavoring to give information with no intention of endorsing or repudiating the views printed, although from time to time, comment may be made upon them in our editorial pages.—Editor.

THE CHURCH AND A HEALING MINISTRY

The Lutheran

If the news from the Portland Convention of the Episcopal church has been correctly reported, that ecclesiastical body has opened the door to a dangerous practice—the practice of the ministry of healing. It has done so in the face of strong warnings in its two leading papers, The Churchman, and The Living Church. Both have looked with pronounced disfavor upon any action of the convention that would sanction such a ministry save under clearly-specified limitations. Both recognize that faith is an important factor in the cure of a certain kind of diseases and physicians and psycho therapists are well aware of that fact. But it is one thing to admit this and quite another thing to establish such a ministry. We know of physicians and pastors who would not dream of professing to cure physical ailments by means of the exercise of faith, who yet do in certain cases of nervous diseases call for that very thing. But they do not advertise it, and they would not dream of deceiving incurable patients with false promises.

For a church to create or endorse such a ministry is a very serious matter, for the very persons who would lay claim to healing power would likely be driven to make exorbitant promises and would least be fitted to practice the art. To heal organic disease requires miraculous power, and they who go about claiming to have that power do more to discredit the art than to commend it. Even so seemingly conservative a healer as Mr. Hickson has made claims that have by no means been validated, and the number of fakes and charlatans has been great. Any church that attempts to prevent defections to Christian Science by reducing Mrs. Eddy's preposterous claims to healing to a somewhat more Christian and common sense level is playing with fire, and is likely to have its fingers badly burned sooner or later.

MORAL INSTRUCTION IN THE SCHOOLS

The Chicago Tribune

We are glad that Superintendent Mortenson proposes to give long consideration to the problem of sex instruction in the public schools. We do not say that it is impossible to give proper instruction in the biological facts of reproduction and even some advisable information and warnings euphemistically described as sex hygiene. But any knowledge of adolescence and any consideration of the likelihood that in many cases school instruction, however well intended, may be perverted to a morbid emphasis, will remind us that the problem is delicate and difficult. Mishandling, in fact anything short of the wisest and most tactful handling, will most certainly do more harm than good, and, we think, very serious harm.

The home and not the school is the proper place for such instruction, and while many parents may be unprepared to give it and others indifferent or unwilling, that would not justify its adoption in the school curriculum unless it can be given with every safeguard.

Reformers frequently overlook the fact that moral action is conditioned by the will. Imparting information does not insure right conduct, but, on the contrary, may incite to immorality. To give information of the facts of sex is inevitably to arouse curiosity and may awaken instinct. It is true that such information is now often gained in demoralizing forms or circumstances, but even that does not justify the emphasis of formal instruction unless there can be an effective awakening of moral ideals.

This, doubtless, is what the board of education had in mind when it passed its resolution suggesting that a longer period be devoted to instruction in civics and morals. We heartily agree as to civics, which in our opinion has not been efficiently taught. That is a very important duty of the public school, and its neglect, we believe, has had most unfortunate consequences upon citizenship.

As to morals, instruction in public schools must lack much of its force through its separation from religion, and we must continue to rely upon the church and the home to carry the chief responsibility for character building. The decline of religious and parental authority has certainly shown unfortunate effects, and any influence the common schools can apply to offset this loss must be welcomed, but it must be applied with the greatest discretion.

SIGNIFICANT Y. M. C. A. ACTION

The Presbyterian Banner

The Young Men's Christian Associations of the United States and Canada, in connection with their Forty-first International Convention, held recently at Atlantic City, passed a resolution permitting the Associations under their jurisdiction to henceforth at their discretion elect or appoint up to ten per cent of the membership of their managing boards, from members of their organizations not identified with churches recognized as "evangelical." This action permits managing Y. M. C. A. boards to include Roman Catholics, Christian Scientists and Universalists. However, the resolution stipulates that no member of these so-called non-evangelical churches can sit on a Y. M. C. A. executive board, who does not accept what is called the "Paris basis" as their personal declaration of purpose. This basis adopted at the first International Continental World's Conference of the Associations of America and Europe, in 1855, provides that "The Young Men's Christian Association seeks to unite those young men who, regarding Jesus Christ as their God and Saviour according to the Holy Scriptures, desire to be his disciples in their doctrine and in their life, and to associate their efforts for the extension of his kingdom among young men."

This action seems to be in the nature of a compromise between the two parties that have been contending for a long time for and against the larger recognition of the non-evangelical patrons of the Y. M. C. A.

A PROTEST AGAINST FALSE DOCTRINE

Presbyterian Standard

These are days of loose practices in church government, and still looser beliefs in church doctrine. There seems to be rife a spirit of rebellion against established beliefs, the spirit of the free-lance in religion. We are old-fashioned in our belief. Some think us antiquated in our theology, and far behind the progress of the scholarship of the world. Perhaps we are, yet we took vows at our ordination in which we promised to study the peace and purity of the church, and to uphold the Confession of Faith. If it be a sign of unprogressiveness to keep vows, we are decidedly lacking in progress. "If this be treason, make the most of it."

We have long wondered why our brethren of the Northern church permitted a Baptist preacher to occupy regularly a Presbyterian pulpit, and we have wondered still more why they permitted this minister of another denomination to preach doctrines, not only in contradiction of those especially distinctive of our church, but actually in conflict with the beliefs of all evangelical churches. It seems that the worm has at last turned, that the orthodoxy of the great Northern church, which is sound at heart, though afflicted with those whose noise is out of all proportion to their numbers, has at last made its voice heard.

The Presbytery of Philadelphia, everywhere known as sound to the core, has asked the General Assembly to take cognizance of the fact that a Baptist preacher is supplying regularly a Presbyterian pulpit, and using it to preach doctrines contrary to our Confession of Faith. They have in view Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, whose sermon denying every fundamental doctrine of our Confession, has aroused the ecclesiastical world as never before.

The Presbytery of Philadelphia deserves the thanks of both branches of our church, North and South, in trying to expel from a Presbyterian pulpit a man who thus insults the Presbyterian church. We do not believe, however, that any action of the General Assembly will have any more effect than when they called Union Seminary to task.

THE GOSPEL OF THE HEREAFTER

The United Presbyterian.

A timely address on the future life was delivered by Rev. Samuel Horton, a veteran Primitive Methodist minister, at a devotional service in connection with the Federal Council of the Free Churches. One of the greatest of living theologians recently said that "we are not preaching or singing half enough about heaven today," and when Mr. Horton sought to test this statement by asking two or three popular preachers whether they had either preached or heard a sermon on heaven lately, they all made the same reply: "Not for years." Yet there is a universal and intense craving for information and assurance in regard to the beyond. This is why spiritualism attracts so many people, especially the bereaved, who rarely, if ever, gain from it real and permanent satisfaction. There is ample evidence that the world is longing for a gospel of the hereafter, and few pulpits are proclaiming it with certain sound. "Are we," asks Mr. Horton, "failing to recognize that the world is full of sorrow-sick, almost sorrow-mad, people, the best hopes of whose lives lie in some grave on the battlefield or in the depths of ocean? Many of us, need to resurrect the resurrection. The church claims to possess knowledge of the beyond and to have an answer to the cry of the human heart for life after death—why does it not proclaim it more fully and frequently?" Mr. Horton urges that modern pulpits should ring with the message of a glad immortality. May not the absence of that note be the reason why increasing numbers of people are turning from the churches and resorting to mediums, clairvoyants, and mystery men?

THE REAL WORLD WE KNOW NOT

The Journal of Commerce (Chicago)

"Science," says Dr. Steinmetz of the General Electric Company, "does not deal with the real world, of which we know nothing, but with the world as it appears to our senses."

A highly suggestive statement, as is the following question by the same speaker: "But are the conceptions of science really final and all-embracing, or are they limited, holding within a certain range only, and not beyond this?"

We are quoting from an address on "The Place of Religion in Modern Scientific Civilization," in which the scientist held that "belief always must remain the foundation of religion," and that "the negative answer of science is not conclusive on the question of infinity in time and space, immortality, God, etc., and the question" (of the truth of revealed religion) "is still as open as it ever was."

In other words, science and religion are things apart, and neither can be used to prove the truths of the other. And neither metaphysical conceptions of deity, nor scientific conceptions, may be final or conclusive. Meanwhile the man who desires to be and to do right, and who cannot plumb the depths of either scientific or metaphysical knowledge will be safe to follow the counsel of the vehement and energetic Micah—"to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

Why Do You Think the Bible Is the Word of God?
2 Timothy 3:14-17

The Bible claims to be the Word of God. "All scripture is inspired of God and is profitable." The word "inspired" means God-breathed. Every Scripture is God-breathed. This breathing of God upon men qualified them to write the various books of the Bible. The word "breathed" indicates a conscious and forceful movement by which the Bible writers were moved or carried along. This corresponds exactly with the words in 2 Peter 1:21, "Holy men of God spake as they were moved (or carried along) by the Holy Spirit."

In Hebrews 1:1, 2, we read that God "spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets" and also that He has spoken by His Son. In both instances it was God who spoke. He spoke through the prophets in their writings. Such expressions as the following occur more than 3,000 times,—"The Lord spake," "The Lord said," "The Word of the Lord came unto me." There is nothing vague or uncertain in this. It is very different from modern books. Mr. Darwin, for example in his Origin of Species uses the phrase, "We may well suppose" about 800 times. Comparison between "Thus saith the Lord" and "We may well suppose" makes one grateful for the firm foundation provided for faith.

The testimony of our divine Lord in this matter is pointed and powerful. In Mark 7:8-13 He speaks of the utterances of Moses as "the commandment of God" and as "the Word of God." Then again concerning the authority of His own words he declared "I have not spoken of myself but the Father which sent me, he gave me commandment, what I should say and what I should speak" (John 12:49). Once more in His intercessory prayer (John 17:8), we hear Him saying, "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me." It is plain then that God spake in the prophets and in His Son. It is equally plain that God spoke through the apostles and the writers of the New Testament. See Hebrews 2:3, 4 and 1 Thessalonians 2:13. These passages should be carefully studied and their contents noted.

The testimony of Scripture is conclusive that the Bible is the Word of God. We can readily accept this testimony of the Book to itself because its testimony on all other matters is true. Read Psalm 19:7-11.

Evangelistic Missions at Home and Abroad
Luke 24:45-53

The foundations of the evangel of Christ, the factors that enter into it and the forces necessary for its propagation are found in these verses.

The beginning of a life of clear perception, strong convictions and definite usefulness in Christian service may be traced to the gracious work suggested by the words in verse 45, "Then opened he their understanding that they might understand the scriptures." Following this we have a declaration of the great things which the Scriptures reveal, "It behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead." On these two facts the evangel is built. He died for our sins. In His death He met every righteous requirement of the law which we had broken. Every penalty involved in our sinning was met by the Cross and fully settled. "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound, that as sin reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life." Apart from the substitutionary sacrifice of our Lord Jesus Christ there is no evangel, no good news. "He was delivered for our offenses and was raised again for our justification." God raised Him from the dead. His resurrection is an acknowledgment of our justification. This is God's way of saying that the offering of Christ was accepted, and believers in Him justified from all things.

"Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations." This is one form of Christ's commission to His own and it is based on the fact of His death and resurrection. It is these things of which we are witnesses (v. 48). This is the point where social service utterly breaks down. It deals with externals, mere things. Sin is entrenched within the heart and is as a burden upon the conscience. Men have knowledge concerning the condemnation of sin but little do they know about its cancellation. It is Christ lifted up as the sinbearer who draws men to Him, breaks the power of cancelled sin and sets the prisoner free.

One more matter, namely power from on high (v. 49). This is the power of the Holy Spirit convincing, controlling, converting, quickening.

What Are the Rightful Claims of Our Church Upon Us?
Hebrews 10:18-25

There is in this Scripture a three fold exhortation based on three facts. The three fold exhortation is found in verses 22-24, "Let us draw near," "Let us hold fast," and "Let us consider one another." This is the order of spiritual experience. We cannot "consider one another" until we have learned to "hold fast" and we cannot hold fast until we have first learned to "draw near." In drawing near to God faith is strengthened. As the hand of the soul faith lays hold of the eternal world and eternal Word. It learns to hold fast in the midst of stress and storm. By the grace of God realized in experience, faith learns to say, "I shall not be moved." Then it is that the soul is free to consider others. Being sure of God it is freed from self and can minister to others. By this route it arrives at the place of sacrificial service.

The facts on which the exhortation is based are these: First, "there is no more offering for sin" (v. 18). The one offering made once for all is so sufficient that nothing can be added to it. Beware then of thinking that service or gifts or suffering can ever be an offering for sin. Let the Spirit of God speak this to your heart—"There is no more offering for sin." The second fact appears in the words, "Having boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus." Every barrier is swept away by the precious blood of Christ. The believer can now enter with confidence into the holy presence of God, knowing that there is nothing between. The third fact is seen in the words, "Having a High Priest over the house of God." This High Priest is touched with the feeling of our infirmities and ever lives to make intercession. On these three facts we "draw near," "hold fast" and "consider one another."

If your church stands for these things it has a claim upon your time, your money, your prayers, your life. If it does not, it has no claim on you at all.

What Is the Chief Value of a Young People's Christian Society?

I Timothy 6:11-16

"Flee," "follow," "fight." These are the words of counsel and advice given by a Christian veteran of the Lord's army to a younger man on whom the responsibility of leadership was resting.

The chief value of a Young People's Society is that it too, stands for these very things. It aims to put them into practice in the daily life and pledges its members to mutual encouragement and helpfulness in so doing. From what shall we flee? The love of money, the covetousness which undermines faith and pierces the soul with many sorrows. Foes without are as nothing compared with foes within, and among foes within, none are more formidable and deadly than the love of money, and the gratification of desire that its possession leads to. The command is, flee from it, get as far away from it as you can. Covetousness is idolatry. It leads to the worship of mammon and to the demons that are behind it.

The positive side and the safe guard against worldliness and mammon worship is to "follow after righteousness" and the other things mentioned in verse 11. To do this involves a fight of faith. Faith lays hold on eternal things in the light of which the emptiness of selfish gratification is clearly seen and deeply felt. The appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ is mentioned in verse 14. This is part of the eternal verities which faith lays hold of. The glory of that appearing and the glory of the reward He will bring with Him liberates the soul from the glitter and glare which beckon and bewilder the unstable and lure them on to destruction. To nourish faith and inspire to holy living is the great objective and chief value of the Young People's Society.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

The right is reserved to reject controversial questions and others which may be deemed unprofitable to answer. All questions should be briefly, but clearly stated. Personal answers cannot be sent.—Editors.

EVANGELIZATION OF THE WORLD

J. W. P., Graham, N. C.

While it is true, according to Matthew 25:31-46, that Christ will return to execute judgment upon the ungodly, other events corroborate the assertion of Rev. Dinsdale T. Young, D. D. in the article to which you refer. After the Church is removed from the earth other agents will be employed for a brief time to preach the gospel. It is thought, for example, that the innumerable multitude of Revelation 7:9-17 may be largely the result of the testimony of the Jewish remnant described in verses 1-8. There will be saved Gentile nations during the kingdom age as well as the saved nation of Israel.

APOSTOLIC AUTHORITY

H. G. G., Beaver City, Neb.

(1) We do not understand that "apostolic authority" was inherited by anybody. Their authority ended at their death, except that contained in their inspired writings.

(2) According to our understanding of the "Church of God" it does not believe in, or lay any claim to, apostolic succession.

(3) The order of Paul's experiences in Damascus (Acts 9:17, 18; 22:16) appears to be the receiving of his sight, baptism, the infilling of the Holy Ghost, and the cleansing of his sins, yet we cannot positively affirm this.

(4) We see no direct connection between Revelation 12:4, 5 and 1:1.

DIVINE INSPIRATION

W. S. B., Sandwich, Ont.

(1) We do not hold to any mechanical or dictation theory of the inspiration of the Bible.

(2) It is necessary to distinguish clearly between inspiration and illumination. Inspiration is the divine influence that enabled chosen men to make an infallible transmission of the truth revealed to them by God; while illumination is the divine enlightenment of the mind of the believer that enables him to understand the divine message.

(3) The phrase, "all Scripture is inspired of God," does not mean that what is recorded is always true, but it is always profitable. Inspiration as applied to Scripture only refers to the correctness of the record.

(4) The judgment portrayed in Matthew 25 is not the final judgment. That occurs at the close of the millennium.

(5) We recommend that you procure a copy of a Text-Book on Prophecy, by Dr. James M. Gray.

IMMORTALITY

H. W., Owensboro, Ky.

(1) Christ only has within Himself immortality (1 Tim. 6:16), but He is able to give it to those who believe on Him. Only in this passage and in 1 Corinthians 15:53, 54 does the Greek word for immortality occur in the New Testament. This latter passage teaches that the bodies of believers shall put on immortality at the time of the resurrection. In the other passages that you mention (Rom. 2:7 and 2 Tim. 1:10) the Greek word means incorruptible. To be out of Christ means death, but He who has life in Himself imparts life to those who are united to Him by faith. This life first affects the soul, but eventually the body also.

RE-BUILDING OF BABYLON

J. W. R., Mellen, Wis.

Questions: (1) Is Babylon to be rebuilt? If so, when? (2) Is the "Ephah in Shinar" still future?

Answer: (1) Certain features of the destruction of Babylon contained in Isaiah 13 surely never have been fulfilled. For example its overthrow was not as Sodom and Gomorrah (2:19) and it is not an uninhabited place, for a city of 5,000 people exists upon its site to-day. Then, too, the King of Babylon, as described in 14:4, 5, 12-17, has not yet risen. Another consideration is that the future period of Israel's blessing is in connection with a future destruction of Babylon (14:1-3, 7), which would require a re-building of that city. Moreover conditions in Mesopotamia and the Near East on account of the World War indicate great material developments in the region of ancient Babylon and the necessity of another great city there. How soon this will be no one is able to forecast. (2) The vision of the Ephah (Zech. 5:5-11) apparently belongs to the future.

FEASTING AND FASTING

S. A. S., Berne, Ind.

Questions: (1) Should feasting and fasting have any place in the life of the church, or the individual Christian of to-day? (2) Please explain 1 Corinthians 11:5 and 1 Corinthians 14:34, 35.

Answers: (1) As to "feasting" we know that it had a prominent place in the religion of the Jews. It was at the end of the Feast of the Passover that the Lord's Supper was instituted. The early Christians were accustomed to meet for a common meal, to which each contributed, which was followed by the Lord's Supper. So that there can be no scriptural objection against "fellowship feasts" in the church of to-day, especially if a religious tone be given to them.

Concerning "fasting" we must concede that this also is endorsed by the practice of the early Christians (Acts 13:2; 14:23; 2 Cor. 6:5). We find also in an early document entitled Teaching of the Twelve Apostles directions for fasting. It is probable that the church of today would be stronger spiritually by the right observance of fasting. The abuse of it, however, would lead to asceticism, making it a means of salvation, as in the days gone by.

(2) 1 Corinthians 14:34, 35 must be interpreted in the light of 1 Corinthians 11:5, which implies the practice of women praying and speaking in public. The prohibition in 1 Corinthians 14:34, 35 seems to have been because the questioning of women was causing confusion in the religious gatherings (v. 33).

CANON OF THE BIBLE

W. M., East Alton, Ill.

Questions: (1) What council determined the canon of the Bible? (2) Why were some of the Epistles and other books rejected?

Answers: (1) A uniform tradition claims that the Old Testament Canon was determined by Ezra and the Great Synagogue; at all events it was confirmed by Christ. The New Testament canon was a gradual growth. At first some books were acknowledged and some disputed, but by degrees the whole of the present canon came to be generally recognized. The early church Councils simply bore witness to that fact; they did not themselves determine the canon.

(2) In deciding which books should be included in the canon of the New Testament, the history of each book was considered and also its usage in the church. In addition to this external or historical evidence, the internal or spiritual evidence had great weight. Writings inspired of God assert their own "authority" (Heb. 2:12). "The Scriptures by their own weight * * * crushed all rivals out of existence."

BRIEF MENTION

M. A. F., Rock Hall, Ind.

We know of no such passage of Scripture. See John 17:3.

R. E. M., Portland, Ore.

The change in the punctuation in Hebrews 9:14, from a question mark to an exclamation point, would be an improvement.

A. S. C., Westbrooke, Me.

To attempt to name the disciple who walked with Cleopas on the way to Emmaus would be mere conjecture.

W. H. B., Searcy, Ark.

Authorities differ as to the exact date of Christ's crucifixion. Probably upon His fourth Passover, April A. D. 30.

W. B. E., Cherry Creek, N. Y.

The genealogy in Matthew 1 is not intended to be complete; therefore the omissions you mention in verses 8, 9, as also the name Jehoiakim from verses 11, 12.

S. S. P., Hamilton, N. Y.

We do not know who the three shepherds of Zechariah 11:8 are. The idle, or worthless shepherd of verses 16, 17 is usually thought to refer to the Antichrist. Psalms 75:7-11 is a picture of the judgment with which the present age ends.

G. A. H., Chicago, Ill.

In our judgment the efficacy of baptism is not seriously affected whether a person is baptized only in the name of Jesus (Acts 2:28), or, whether baptized in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost (Matt. 28:19).

T. W., New York City.

There is no natural explanation of the coin in the fish's mouth (Matt. 17:24-27). It was plainly a miracle. All explanations have been merely attempts to explain away the miraculous element.

C. H. L., Mansfield Center, Conn.

God is able to fulfil every promise, but He does not always do so in our way. Sometimes His plans include the suffering or even the death of His servants, yet He preserves them. Protection and deliverance do not apply only to the physical life.

V. R., Chicago, Ill.

We are unable either to confirm or to deny the Catholic claim that none of the assassins of our presidents was a Roman Catholic. The claim, if true, would not prove any of them to be Protestants. Neither are we able to confirm the assertion made about Charles Guiteau. It would appear to us that he never had been converted by any one.

Jesus Teaching Humility
Luke 14:1-14

Golden Text:—"God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble." —1 Peter 5:5.

I. Jesus Dines with a Pharisee (v. 1).

Jesus was not an ascetic. He entered freely into the common social customs of the day. We see Him at a wedding, a dinner party, in the home of sickness, and at a funeral. He was truly a man among men. He was unlike John the Baptist in this respect. The Christian's influence is best when mingling with his fellows in all right relations and positions in life, even though selfish and evil minded men are found among them. This does not mean that he should be a partaker of their evil deeds. Jesus in thus moving in all circles of human society showed the divine sympathy. This prominent social function was on a Sabbath day. While Jesus was in society he was not of it. So should the Christian be. Jesus was in a company outwardly courteous but inwardly hostile. Doubtless the motive of the invitation was to find an occasion against Him. This is implied in the statement "they watched Him."

II. Jesus Healing a Dropsical Man vv. 2-6).)

1. Why This Man Was Present (v. 2). There is no way of absolutely determining it, but likely it was part of a plot of the Pharisees to trap Jesus by getting Him to violate the Sabbath rules.

2. Jesus' Question (v. 3). Jesus' question was an answer to the thoughts of the lawyers and Pharisees who were watching Him, for they had not spoken. Before healing this man He submitted the case to their judgment. They were free on the Sabbath day to hold a feast where their selfish pride and vanity could be displayed, but they were horrified that a fellow-man should be healed on the Sabbath. They were silent because their consciences made them ashamed of their heartlessness.

3. Healing the Man (v. 4). While they were in a state of embarrassment Jesus healed the man and let him go.

4. Jesus Rebuked Them (vv. 5, 6). He laid bare their hypocrisy by showing them that their willingness to show mercy to a beast on the Sabbath should induce them to regard as not sinful the relieving of a human being of distress on the Sabbath. They were again silent, for they perceived their inconsistency and inhumanity. Surely man is more than a beast.

III. Jesus Rebukes Selfish Ambition (vv. 7-10).

1. The Occasion (v. 7). He observed that the guests while taking their places at the table chose the best seats for themselves. This is still true of men and women. In the railway cars, hotels, street cars, etc., they scramble for the best places. In the homes even members of the same family will try to get the best food, etc.

2. Instruction Given (vv. 8-11). When bidden to a feast, take the lowest place, lest you suffer the humiliation of being asked to take a lower seat. This is more than a lesson on courtesy or table manners; it is a severe rebuke of that selfishness which fills the human heart, causing it to seek to be ministered unto instead of ministering to others. Unselfishness will express itself in humbly taking the lowest place, esteeming others better than ourselves. The fundamental principle of the philosophy governing the moral world Jesus declares: "Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Those who live humbly and modestly, unconcerned about their own selfish interests, shall receive the very best for themselves. The one who has experienced the redeeming love of Christ will gladly take the place assigned him, faithfully doing his work without effort to be noticed, and courteously recognizing the rights of others.

IV. The True Motive in Deeds of Charity (vv. 12-14).

Jesus takes advantage of this social occasion to teach a great principle. The Jews, like many of the rich today, made social dinners occasions for display. They invited only those whose wealth would enable them to recompense them by inviting them in return, even with the prospect of greater display. Jesus took note of the selfishness thus displayed and set forth to them the right principle, namely, that they should extend their hospitality to the poor and afflicted. All charitable deeds should be done with unselfish motives. Our aim should be to confer benefits not expecting a recompense. Jesus assured them that recompense would be made at the resurrection of the just. This does not mean that friends and neighbors of certain rank should never exchange pleasant hospitalities. Wealth should be used to confer blessings upon the poor and needy instead of ministering to the pride and vanity of the possessor.

The Prodigal Son
Luke 15:11-24

Golden Text:—"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."—Luke 15:10.

The center of interest in this parable is not the prodigal nor his brother, but the "certain man who had two sons." In this parable in a most picturesque and dramatic manner the history of man is portrayed, from his fall to his reconciliation with God. The whole orbit of revelation is swept as it pertains to a sinning race and a pardoning God. He who fails to see the heart of our Father God will miss the purpose of the parable.

I. The Son's Insubordination (v. 12).

There is every indication that this was a happy home. But a devil entered it and stirred up discontent in the heart of the younger son. He became tired of the restraints of home. His desire for freedom moved him to wilfully choose to leave home—throw off the constraints of his father's rule. Sin is the desire to be free from the restraints of rightful authority and for selfish indulgence. It starts out with wrong thoughts about God. At the request of the son, the father "divided unto them his living." Man is a free being. He has been given this freedom by his Creator. God has committed to man His own destiny. Man can go away from God if he wills.

II. The Son's Departure (v. 13).

Having made the fatal decision he went post-haste to the enjoyment of his cherished vision, so he got his goods in portable shape Having thrown off the restraints of his father's rule he eagerly withdrew from his father's presence. This is always the way sin works. Adam and Eve after they had sinned hid themselves. The son could not now stand the presence of his father, so he hastened away. He "gathered all together." When the sinner casts off allegiance to God he takes all that he has with him. He not only wastes his money, but his character is sacrificed.

III. The Son's Degeneration (vv. 13,14).

He had a good time while his money lasted but the end came quickly. The indications are that his course was soon run. From plenty in his father's house to destitution in the far country was a short journey. The sinner is soon made to realize the famine when his very powers which ministered to his pleasure are burned out.

IV. The Son's Degradation (vv. 15, 16).

He had no friends now to help him when his money was all gone, so he was driven to hire out to a citizen to feed swine. It was quite a change from a son in his father's house to feeding hogs in the far country. So it is; those who will not serve God are made slaves to the Devil to do his bidding (Rom. 6:16). How vividly this portrays the history of many men and women about us. And yet it is a picture of the inevitable consequences of sin. In his shame and disgrace he could not even get the necessary food. The coarse food of the hogs was denied him.

V. The Son's Restoration (vv. 17-24).

1. He Came to Himself (v. 17). When he reflected a bit he was made conscious that though he had wronged his father and ruined himself, yet he was a son of his father. In the days of his sinning he was beside himself. The sinner continues in his sin because he is insane. The world calls the sinner who leaves off his evil ways crazy, but in reality he just becomes sane. If we could but get sinners to think seriously of their condition it would be more easy to get them to turn from their sins.

2. His Resolution (v. 18). His reflection ripened into resolution. The picture of his home where even the hired servants had a superabundance, moved him to make a decision to leave the far country and go home.

3. His Confession (vv. 18, 19). He acknowledged that his sin was against heaven and his father—that he had forfeited his right to be called a son and begged to be given a place as a hired servant. The sinner not only should make a resolution, he should confess his sin; for "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

4. His Action (v. 20). Action was needed. Resolution will not avail unless accompanied with action. When the confession is genuine, action will follow. Someone has said that the road to hell is paved with good resolutions.

5. His Reception by His Father (vv. 20-24).

The Father had not forgotten his son. During these years he longed for his return. He must often have looked for him, for he saw him when he was a great way off. So anxious was he for him that he ran to meet him and fell upon his neck and kissed him. So glad was the father that he even did not hear his confession through, but ordered the tokens of honor to be placed upon him, receiving him back into a son's position. Then the feast was made, expressive of the joy of his heart. God is love. Jesus came to reveal God. This parable makes bare God's heart. Every teacher should strive to present this lesson so as to show God's forgiving mercy—His willingness to receive back his wayward child.

The Rich Man and Lazarus
Luke 16:19-31

Golden Text:—"Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."—1 Timothy 6:17.

In this lesson we are afforded a peep into two worlds where we see disclosed extremes of character and conditions. In this world we see a rich man reveling in luxury and a poor man in sore affliction begging at the rich man's gate. In the other world we see the same men with reversed positions—the poor beggar is enjoying the richest blessings of heaven, while the former rich man is suffering the torments of hell. No more graphic picture could be drawn showing the contrast of two lives. These lives were intended to be representative. The rich man descends from the highest pinnacle of worldly enjoyment to the depths of endless misery. The poor beggar ascends from utter wretchedness and misery to the loftiest heights of blessing. The application of this story is as vital today as when Jesus uttered it.

I. Contrasted Lives (vv. 19-21).

1. The Rich Man (v. 19). He lived in a mansion secluded from the common people. He was clothed in costly raiment; his outer garments were of purple and his inner garments of fine linen. This dress was most expensive. He fed upon the richest food that could be provided. No expense was spared to furnish that which would gratify his appetite. Observe that this man is not said to have illicitly gained his riches; neither is any good deed recorded. His sin was to selfishly indulge his appetites without consideration for others.

2. The Beggar (vv. 20, 21). He was laid at the rich man's gate with the hope of getting at least the crumbs from his table. No consideration was given him by the rich man. The dogs of the street were more kind to him than the rich man. Though destitute and helpless the poor man's name is most suggestive. Lazarus means "God is a help." indicating that a godly life shone through his poverty. We learn from these contrasted lives that worldly condition is no sure test of a man's state in the sight of God. Rich men are not all wicked or selfish, and not all poor men are godly.

II. Contrasted Deaths and Burials (v. 22).

1. The Beggar. He was found dead and his body hurried off to a pauper's grave. No notice was taken of it by the world. The only loss to the world was that he was no longer to be seen at the gate of the rich man.

2. The Rich Man. He also died. His gold could not bribe the messenger of death. Doubtless a costly funeral was held, attended by those who moved in his class of society. No doubt great eulogies were pronounced by the officiating priest. Death is the common end to which all classes must come. It is here that the lines of all lives meet.

III. Contrasted Destinies (v. 23).

1. The Beggar. He was at once carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The souls of believers are especially cared for at the hour of death. They go immediately to be with the Lord. Those who live right at the hour of death are set free from this mortal body and are ushered into the presence of Christ. Destinies are determined in this life.

2. The Rich Man. Though he had an elaborate burial he lifted up his eyes in hell, being in torment. When the veil of futurity is lifted we see that the positions of these men are reversed. The poor man is in the company of just men made perfect, because of his godly life while on earth, and the rich man is stripped of his purple and fine linen and cast into hell with all wicked men, because while on earth he only lived for selfish ends. There is a time coming when the inequalities of this life shall be righted.

IV. The Reality and Fixedness of Life Beyond the Grave (vv. 24-31).

1. The Cry for Mercy (v. 24). Dives, which is the Latin name for "rich man," was now willing to claim relationship to Abraham. He is keenly conscious, and the appetites which controlled him while on earth were still with him. Instead of a means of gratification they were now an instrument of torture. Part of the torment of hell will be the cravings of appetite and lust, with no means of their gratification.

2. Abraham's Reply (v. 25). This reply cast the matter back upon the man's memory. He said, "son, remember." The lashings of a guilty conscience will be most real in hell. The only thing to do will be to remember the cause which led to the awful destiny. And there it will be remembered that the doom is just.

3. Their Fixedness (v. 26). Human destinies are fixed by the choices during the life. When one passes out of this life he enters into a state and condition unchangeable.

4. God's Word the All-Sufficient Light (vv. 27-31). Dives now requested that Lazarus go on an errand of mercy to his brethren. He regarded the testimony of a spirit of more value than the Word of God. Many today are more willing to trust the rappings of a ghost than the sure Word of God. Abraham declared that God's Word is sufficient —that those who reject Moses and the prophets would not repent though visited by one who had risen from the dead. The greatest miracles will not affect the hearts of men who reject the Bible. Men will learn the value of a soul when it is too late.

The Grace of Gratitude
Luke 17:11-19

Golden Text:—"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him, and bless his name."—Psalm 100:4.

Jesus is now on His way to Jerusalem where He shall be offered up for the sins of the people. It was fitting that He should pass through the country of the Samaritans, for He was the Saviour of all men. On this occasion He came into touch with a colony of ten lepers, and His healing of them exhibits the condition of human nature and the workings of His divine grace.

I. Their Awful Affliction (v. 12).

They were lepers. Leprosy is a contagious and incurable disease which rots off the members of the body and eventuates in death. It may be unnoticed in the blood of the person for years. It is of such a foul nature that the one thus afflicted was cast out from society. This segregation was in accordance with the Mosaic law (Lev. 13:46). It was a kind of quarantine measure. Leprosy has always been regarded as a type of sin, even at times visited upon people for some sin. Examples, the leprosy of Naaman (2 Kings 5); Gehazi (2 Kings 5); Miriam (Num. 12); Uzziah (2 Kings 15:5), etc. Sin has come into the world and flows from generation to generation through the racial stream, so that all are sinners (Rom. 5:12). Though sin may be hidden, it eventually breaks out and destroys the body. This is but a prophecy of the consequences of sin. Evidences of this are seen on every hand. There is no need of Bible proof of its reality.

II. Their Cry for Mercy (v. 13).

They were in great need. No human help was available. They had somehow heard how Jesus had healed some lepers. Where there is real healing it is bound to be noised about. This aroused faith in them. "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God" (Rom. 10:17). As He came their way they called for mercy. It is the privilege of all sinners to call upon Jesus Christ for mercy. He has healed many, and no failure has been recorded.

III. Bidden to Go to the Priests (v. 14).

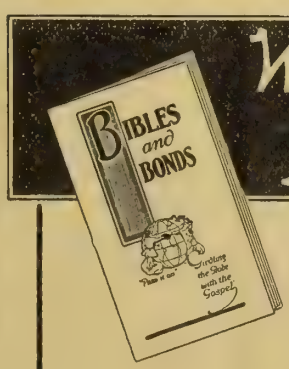
Before the lepers were healed they were to show themselves to the priests, according to the Mosaic law (Lev. 14:1-32). As they went in faith they were healed. While God goes before in the work of salvation, yet He demands of the sinner faith. This faith is the cause of His action. Activity on the sinner's part is necessary so that God's grace can flow into him. Faith expresses itself in action. By this means the divine power and human need are united. The only faith needed is for the sinner to realize the healing power of Christ, and as this is acted upon there is the consequent increase which results in complete salvation. Cleansing is realized through obedience.

IV. The Gratitude of the One (vv. 15, 16).

Perceiving that he was healed of his leprosy, the one turned back and with a loud voice glorified God. He even fell down on his face and gave thanks. The one least expected to show gratitude for this great mercy was the one who sincerely expressed it.

V. The Gratitude of the Nine (vv. 17-19).

Presumably they were Jews. The very ones who should have been most grateful did not show any appreciation. They were content to get much from Christ without giving Him anything. He expects those who experience His salvation to give Him their love and gratitude. It greatly hurts the Lord when saved sinners go off with the blessing of salvation as though they had stolen it. Many take all they can get from Christ and give nothing in return. All the blessings of civilization are ours through Christ, yet how few thank Him for them. The proportion of those who are ungrateful for the blessings which Christ brought is perhaps nine to one. The fact that gratitude was expressed by a Samaritan shows how often we are shamed by the devotion of those less favored than ourselves.



It tells you how you may secure an income that cannot shrink; how you may execute your own will; how you may create a trust fund; how you may give generously without hardship.

It describes the Annuity Bond, a safe, convenient, and productive investment which promotes a fundamental Christian enterprise. Endorsed by all denominations.

"So that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ. . . . But now having no more place in these parts . . . . whensoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you."—Romans 15:19, 23, 24.

Have you taken in the geographical extent of the personal missionary labors of the great Apostle to the Gentiles? Get out a map and trace it for yourself. "From Jerusalem and round about unto Illyricum," he tells us. That means from Jerusalem northward through Palestine and Syria, westward into Asia Minor, back and forth throughout its various provinces, north to Troas, across the Aegean into Macedonia, southward into Greece, and thence northwest as far as Illyricum, on the eastern shore of the Adriatic. Nor was this all, for later on he landed in Italy and reached Rome, and there is good reason to believe that his cherished hope was fulfilled of reaching Spain itself, on the western confines of Europe.

With no railways, no steamers, no modern post or telegraph, much less automobile or aeroplane; without a single one of a score of present day facilities to make travel rapid and easy, but by tedious and toilsome means, involving shipwreck, cold, hunger, perils of robbers and of heathen, and every kind of vicissitude, Paul, almost singlehanded, covered this vast area.

What a record for one man! The combined achievements of a dozen modern missionaries seem small by comparison. And moreover, so fully had he preached the gospel throughout those many lands that he could write with confidence to the church at Rome, "Now having no more place in these parts I will come to you."

Might it not be well for each of us, whether missionary or home worker or private Christian, to ask himself the question: "Over how large a parish can I honestly say that I have 'fully preached the gospel,' so that I have 'no more place in these parts'—in other words, I have so faithfully witnessed for Christ as to be restfully conscious of having discharged my responsibility and being 'free from the blood of all men'?"

How many of us can say it even of our own home, our relatives, our neighbors and daily associates, not to speak of mission fields? What need for a revival of apostolic vision, ambition and passion! May the Lord send it, and right speedily!

After the Famine in Hunan, China

The following items are culled from a September letter from Mr. Hermann Becker, of the C. I. M., who has been in the thick of a desperate fight with famine and pestilence in Western Hunan during most of this year:

"The famine is nearing its end. One can read much about famine, but to be in the midst of starving people and see their agony is worse than anything I can think of. . . . At a moderate estimate, 100,000 people died in this district of starvation, typhus and cholera. The lives of another 100,000 have been saved by famine relief work. Thousands have heard about the Saviour. Hundreds of idols and ancestral tablets have been burned and idol vows broken. Thousands are attending Christian services. Every Sunday we have 1,500 or more at our meetings, and have to divide them up because our chapel is too small.

"This year we have already baptized 124, but none of these are famine converts, as we feel such should be tested a little longer. Our Christians have suffered heavily during the famine, and some have lost everything they had. Thousands of children have died of starvation. We have been caring for 600, half of whom are orphans. We must continue to keep these helpless little ones and look to God for the needed funds. Each child costs $50 Mexican (about $30 U. S. money at present exchange) a year."

Dr. and Mrs. F. Howard Taylor of the China Inland Mission

Dr. Taylor is a son of the late Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, founder of the C. I. M. Mrs. Taylor (nee Geraldine Guinness) is the daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Grattan Guinness. Both families have distinguished missionary records. Early in 1922, Dr. and Mrs. Taylor were captured by brigands in the Yunnan province, and Dr. Taylor was held a captive for over a month. This photo was taken on their recent visit to Chicago, where they were guests of the M. B. I.

The New Open Door in Abyssinia

The news of fresh missionary effort in this benighted country of Northeast Africa is a cause for praise and rejoicing. The ancient Abyssinian church has through the centuries become so corrupted that it can no longer be looked upon as Christian, and Abyssinia's 10,000,000 people are sunk in heathen superstition, ignorance and degradation.

A series of attempts to introduce missionary work, dating from 1844, have ended mostly in failure and exclusion. The only society which has retained any foothold within the kingdom is the Swedish Mission, and its little band of six missionaries has barely held on at the capital in the face of much discouraging opposition. Three years ago, however, an invitation was extended by the Governor of Western Abyssinia to the United Presbyterian missionaries in the Egyptian Sudan on the west, to cross the border and open medical work. Dr. Tom Lambie responded and began work at Sayo and Gore, two small western towns. Word of the good work done there spread abroad and reached the ears of the reigning Prince, Ras Tafari, and last year he sent an invitation to Dr. Lambie to visit him at the capital, Addis Abeda. A fatiguing journey of over a month brought the doctor and his family to the capital. They were received with great courtesy, in marked contrast to the treatment theretofore accorded missionaries.

The result of the visit was that an agreement was entered into for a mission station, including a hospital, to be established at the capital. The Prince gave a plot of land and promised a contribution toward the buildings. More than this, he asked Dr. Lambie, who was coming home on furlough, to bring with him three adopted sons of his for schooling in the United States. These Abyssinian youths are now attending Muskingum College of the United Presbyterian church, and Dr. Lambie is telling throughout America the story of answered prayer and God's working in opening this new door into another destitute mission field. Much believing prayer should attend his appeals for men and money and his preparations for an early return to Abyssinia.

Revolution in Paraguay

The past year has been a time of severe testing to the missionaries and their work in Paraguay, owing to prevailing revolutio there. Unfortunately revolution is so frequent in some Latin American Republics that it may almost be regarded as a perennial feature.

The present revolution in Paraguay has been a desultory affair, not entailing any great loss of life but holding up normal activities, and thus proving ruinous to the country's financial and other interests, and involving much distress to the people.

The I. S. A. M. U. has some seventeen of its missionaries in Paraguay, distributed in four or five centers. For the time being they have been "bottled up" and their work more or less seriously affected. The personal baggage of some of the newly arrived missionaries was lost or looted in the process of being passed through the Customs.

Rev. John Hay, general Director of the mission, and his son Rev. Alexander Hay were shut up for several months in Encarnacion, but latest advices tell of their having been allowed to leave that town for Posadas, Argentina, and to resume their work.

The Advance in Matto Grosso

The Devil, who hates missions as he hates nothing else, and with good reason, has been throwing hindrances in the way of the projected advance of the I. S. A. M. U. into the heart of the unoccupied, savage Indian region of Brazil, in the great State of Matto Grosso. The Paraguay revolution has set back the necessary plans and preparations for the next long-anticipated journey into the interior. Another painful blow was the sudden death of one of the new recruits for that section of the field, Mr. E. O. Steiner, who passed away on November 15 after an operation for appendicitis at Rio de Janeiro.

Such opposition from the enemy is not surprising, nor should it discourage the Lord's soldiers, but only stir them to more earnest prayer and more determined efforts to press forward to those "regions beyond" in the name of their conquering Captain.

Progress in Tibet

The Tibetan Mission of the United Christian Missionary Society, whose leading missionary, Dr. A. L. Shelton, was killed by brigands a little less than a year ago, reports the baptism of twenty-eight new converts. The Sunday-school averages 146 in attendance and the day school 105. Dr. Shelton's widow has just put into Tibetan the first Christian hymnal and a geography and book of Bible stories.

Brief Missionary Items

The North Africa Mission has recently sent forth from England ten new workers to re-enforce its staff of about seventy-five missionaries laboring in the hard fields of Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia and Tripoli, in North Africa.

In West Africa 23,000 adult converts were baptized during the four years of war. Even the marvelous mass movements in India have been equalled if not eclipsed by those of West Africa. In several sections the dusky Africans are pressing Christwards in multitudes.

Newspaper evangelism in Japan is being taken up more and more by the missionaries. As a result of a campaign in one of the provinces of Kiushiu sixty baptisms and hundreds of enquirers are reported. A similar plan has been started in the province of Hiroshima with its one and a half millions of people. Here the gift of an anonymous friend makes it possible to insert articles in the papers for one year and thus reach some 20,000 homes every day.

Lhassa, the capital of Tibet, until recent years so shrouded in mystery and inaccessible, has now actually been connected with India by telegraph, and greetings have been exchanged between the Dalai Lama and the Viceroy of India. This is just another step in the direction of the fuller opening of that long-closed land to missionary work, and praying hearts will "thank God and take courage."

Dr. James M. Taylor has been holding meetings in Quetta, in British Baluchistan. The message so took hold that they secured the largest hall in Quetta for Dr. Taylor's next meeting. One Khan (ruler) was so impressed that he invited the speaker to come to his khanate (dominion) and bring along a missionary for permanent work, offering to help the work financially. What encouragement this is concerning one of the darkest and most difficult mission fields of the world!

THE SERVANT OF CHRIST
John 12:26

Introduction:

Prominence of the servant idea in New Testament teaching: Paul, the bondservant (Rom. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Titus 1:1). James, the bondservant (James 1:1). Peter, the bondservant (2 Peter 1:1). Jude, the bondservant (Jude 1). John, the bondservant (Rev. 1:1). We are not our own but bought (1 Cor. 6:19, 20).

I. The Servant's Responsibility.
"If any man serve me, let him follow me."
Defined (Matt. 16:24).
Demanded.

II. The Servant's Residence.
"And where I am, there shall also my servant be":
Place (John 14:2).
Pleasure (Ps. 16:11).
Permanence (Ps. 23:6).

III. The Servant's Reward.
"If any man serve me, him will my Father honor."
Commendation (Matt. 25:21).
Coronation (2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 22: 3-5).

"I SHALL NOT WANT"
Psalm 23:1

After the truth of the opening clause of this verse is realized in all the fulness of its meaning, it is not strange that the next words should be "I shall not want." "Want" is used here not in the sense of a desire, but of a need, a lack.

1. I shall not want Rest—for "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."
2. I shall not want Drink—for "He leadeth me beside the still waters."
3. I shall not want Forgiveness—for "He restoreth my soul."
4. I shall not want Guidance—for "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness."
5. I shall not want Companionship—for "Thou art with me."
6. I shall not want Comfort—for "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."
7. I shall not want Food—for "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."
8. I shall not want Joy—for "Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."
9. I shall not want anything in this life—for "Surely, goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."
10. I shall not want anything in eternity—for "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

—F. T. Allinson.

A PAULINE PARADOX

"As poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things."—2 Cor. 6:10.

I. How Paul, While Poor Himself, was the Means of Enriching Others.

1. Temporally, as regards the wealth of this world. How has the gospel benefited those countries which have received it!
2. Spiritually, through the present inward wealth of thought, feeling, and enjoyment imparted.
3. Eternally, making "heirs" of glory.

II. How Paul, While Having Nothing, at the Same Time Himself "Possessed all Things."

1. He possessed all things in reliance on the Divine Providing.
2. He possessed all things in having in his little a satisfying sufficiency.
3. He possessed all things in having such mastery over earthly good as to choose to do without it.
4. He possessed all things in a sympathetic enjoyment in the possessions of others.
5. He possessed all things in store of inward riches, and capacity to enjoy the common wealth of God's world. "All things are yours."—X.

THE BIBLE

Whence but from heaven could men, unskilled in arts,
In several ages born, in several parts
Weave such agreeing truths? Or how, or why,
Should all conspire to cheat us with a lie?
Unasked their pains, ungrateful their advice,
Starving their gain, and martyrdom their price.
Then for the style, majestic and divine,
It speaks no less than God in ev'ry line.

—Selected.

THE ASCENSION OF CHRIST

"Risen" (Luke 24:6). "Received up" (1 Tim. 3:16).

1. To the Place of Rest.

"This man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God" (Heb. 10:12). "When he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high" (Heb. 1:3).

2. To the Place of Honor.

"Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour" (Acts 5:31). "Crowned with glory and honor" (Heb. 2:9). "Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion" (Eph. 1:21).

3. To the Place of Intercession.

"Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands . . . but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us" (Heb. 9:24).

4. To the Place of Power.

"This man . . . hath an unchangeable priesthood. Wherefore he is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him" (Heb. 7:24, 25). "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28:18).

5. To the Place of Mercy.

"In all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4:15, 16).

—James Sprunt, in The Christian.

WHATE'ER MY GOD ORDAINS IS RIGHT

"God, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will" (Eph. 1:11).
"All things work together for good to them that love God" (Rom. 8:28).

Whate'er my God ordains is right,
His will is ever just,
Howe'er He orders now my cause,
I will be still and trust;
He is my God,
Though dark my road,
He holds me that I shall not fall,
Wherefore to Him I leave it all.

Whate'er my God ordains is right
He never will deceive;
He leads me by the proper path,
And so to Him I cleave,
And take content
What He hath sent;
His hand can turn my griefs away,
And patiently I wait His day.

Whate'er my God ordains is right,
My Light, my Life is He,
Who cannot will me aught but good,
I trust Him utterly;
For well I know,
In joy or woe,
We soon shall see as sunlight clear,
How faithfully was our Guardian here.

Whate'er my God ordains is right,
Here will I take my stand;
Though sorrow, need, or death make earth
For me a desert land.
My Father's care
Is round me there;
He holds me that I shall not fall,
And so to Him I leave it all.

—Catherine Winkworth.

A DIVINE PECULIARITY

There is a divine peculiarity in the Christian ministry to which a distinguished layman calls attention. This layman is no less a personage than Ex-president Woodrow Wilson. He makes a distinction which is not often considered. He makes the point that a peculiarity about the ministry is, that a man to be one has first to be something distinct and different from anything he must be to follow any other calling or profession. Mr. Wilson says:

"When I hear some of the things which young men say to me by way of putting the arguments to themselves for going into the ministry, I think that they are talking of another profession. Their motive is to do something, when it should be to be something. You do not have to be anything in particular to be a lawyer. I have been a lawyer and I know. You do not have to be anything in particular, except a kindhearted man, perhaps, to be a physician; you do not have to be anything, nor to undergo any strong spiritual change in order to be a merchant. The only profession which consists in being something is the ministry of our Lord and Saviour—and it does not consist of anything else. It is manifested in other things, but it does not consist of anything else. And that conception of the minister which rubs all the marks of it off and mixes him in the crowd so that you can not pick him out, is a process of eliminating the ministry itself.—Herald of Holiness.

"Ye Are the Salt of the Earth"

But the spiritual bankruptcy of "the salt" means the moral bankruptcy of "the earth"!

Does this explain the world's present demoralized condition? ("The darkest period in history," says a great Chicago daily.)

Does it explain the wave of lawlessness sweeping over America and the world? (United States Solicitor-General J. M. Beck calls this, "The Age of Lawlessness.")

Does it explain the enormous increase of crime in the United States? (Four hundred per cent from 1912 to 1921.)

Does it explain the amazing growth of the divorce evil? (A tremendous ratio, reaching in some sections from ten to twenty per cent of all marriages.)

Does it explain the terrible prevalence of social immorality? (Polluting an average of five out of every eight young men throughout the nation, says the health commissioner of a great city.)

Does it explain the growing industrial turmoil? (During the past nine years, ending with 1922, there have been 26,000 strikes, as against 25,000 during the twenty-five years from 1881 to 1906.)

Does it explain the domestic unhappiness, the juvenile delinquency, the lack of parental control, the desire for the frivolous and superficial, the inordinate love of money, the petty thievery and the gigantic robbery, the betrayal of public trust, the disregard of God's holy day, the banishment of the Bible from our public school system, the aversion to restraint of every kind? Does it explain the moral deterioration of multitudes at home, and the growing hostility to Christianity in large sections of the world abroad?

If so, then indeed "judgment must begin at the house of God." If the moral rehabilitation of the earth is dependent upon the spiritual rehabilitation of the Church, THEN LET THE LATTER BEGIN AT ONCE! For judgment of sin and confession of sin on the part of the Church mean purging, and purging means revival, and revival evangelization, and evangelization not only the salvation of multitudes, but the quickening of the moral conscience of the masses.

For the sake of Jew, Gentile and Church of God, the present all-but-extinguished spark of life in the Church needs the united breath of multitudes of intercessors to fan it into WORLD-WIDE LIVING FLAME.

Pray For Revival!

HINTS TO WORSHIPERS

In the vestibule of New York Avenue Church, City of Washington, on the wall facing the main entrance, there hangs a beautifully-framed card containing suggestive spiritual thoughts for worshipers. The card is printed in large letters of red and black type. It is very attractive, and it catches the eye of everyone who is about to enter the church. The matter follows:

On the Way to Church

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."

Recall thy mind from things seen and temporal: fix it on the unseen and eternal.

Speak not of the faults of others: think of thine own. Thou art going to ask forgiveness.

"And him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

On Entering the Church

"The Lord is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him."

Thou art come into the presence of Him unto whom all hearts are open, all desires known, and from whom no secrets are hid. Therefore, humbly kneel before the Lord thy Maker, and pray that, through the indwelling of His Holy Spirit, thou mayest be filled with repentance, thy thoughts be lifted up, and thy desires drawn forth unto God.

"Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer."

"Now have I chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there forever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually."

Fasten thy mind firmly on the holy service: make each word in it thine own. Pray that the blessed Spirit may deliver thee from all coldness of heart and wanderings of mind, that with steadfast thoughts and kindled affections thou mayest worship God in spirit and in truth.

Give heed, with humble mind and open heart, to the lessons from God's Word. To him who preaches, show the helpfulness of hearing; and, for thine own sake, as for those around thee, take part, with hearty voice and reverent manner, in all the outward acts of worship; but make them ever the acts of thy soul.

"God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

When the Service Is Ended

"My house is the house of prayer." "Ye shall reverence my sanctuary."

Remain for a while in silent prayer for thyself, for those who minister and those who worship here, and for all good Christian people.

Be quiet and thoughtful as thou art leaving the church, that the impressions of the divine service may deepen; soon enough will the world crowd back into thy heart. It is God's house, even when prayer is ended.

On thy way home, forget not the solemn presence from which thou hast come, nor what thou hast been doing; and resolve by God's grace to be a doer of His Word and not a hearer only, to love the thing which He doth command, and to desire that which He doth promise.

"We ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

"Thy Word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee."

—Watchman-Examiner.

SACRIFICE, SURRENDER, SELF-DENIAL

"He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." —Matt. 10:38.

"I have nothing to offer you but cold and hunger and rags," said Garibaldi to his followers, and the youths of Italy rose up in their thousands to follow their great leader. Christ is calling us to a Christian life that is going to mean sacrifice, and surrender, and self-denial. "Thou dost lead, and whether the road be rough or smooth, whether it is steep or level, whether it is strewn with roses or hedged about with thorn bushes that prick and pierce; whatever the road is I will follow."—F. P. Wood.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

When Holman Hunt had finished painting that famous picture, "The Light of the World," he invited a brother artist into his studio and asked his opinion of it. The artist looked long and carefully at the painting and his experienced eye noted the wonderful expression of tenderness and patience on the face of the Saviour, the beautiful light shed by the lamp he carried, and the tangle of thorns growing about the doorway, and he said: "It is almost perfect, but you have forgotten one thing—you have not put a handle on the door." "Ah!" said Hunt, "you have missed the meaning of my picture; the handle is on the inside!

THE COMPASSION OF CHRIST

At a railroad station in New Jersey a little girl stepped up to a manacled criminal, and, looking tenderly into his face, said: "Oh, man, I am so sorry for you." It made him very angry, and he tried to strike her. Her mother forbade her to go near him again. But as they all waited for the train the mother's eyes were turned away, and once more the little tot stole up to the wretched man and tenderly whispered to him: "Poor man, Jesus Christ is so sorry for you." He started and gave a low groan and offered no violence. Suddenly the train came, the officers led him away, and the two parted for ever. But years afterwards the man came forth from prison a Christian and an evangelist, and he loved to tell how the compassion of the Lord Jesus from the lips of a little child broke his heart, subdued his spirit, saved his soul. It is not alone our sympathy men want, but His!

THE WATER MARK ON THE LIFE

Looking in an old stamp-album recently, and comparing the contents with catalogue illustrations, I had, first, a big and pleasurable surprise and afterwards an equally big disappointment. I discovered an old stamp, and, after an exhaustive search, found, as I thought, that it was worth £3 10s. Showing it a day or two afterward to an expert, I learned it was worth a very questionable halfpenny! What made the difference? The fact was that there were two issues—one a large one, with thousands of specimens in existence; the other a very limited one, differing from the first by the possession of a cross as watermark. Alas, there was no cross on mine! When held up to the light, the stamp was seen clearly to be devoid of any such marking. When the life and person of Jesus Christ stand revealed by the light of God's Holy Spirit, the cross stands out clear and plain, and he becomes priceless in his rarity and beauty. But when our lives are put to the test, is the cross visible upon them?—The Christian.

WHO MADE IT?

Sir Isaac Newton, a very wise and godly man, was once examining a new and fine globe, when a gentleman came into his study who did not believe in a God, but declared that the world we live in came by chance. He was much pleased with the handsome globe, and asked, "Who made it?" "Nobody," answered Sir Isaac; "it happened here!" The gentleman looked up in amazement at the answer, but he soon understood what it meant.

H. August Hunderup reports: "We just closed what was said to be the greatest meeting in the history of the Arleta Bay Church at Portland, Ore. Among the converts was a man 88 years old. We are now in a very promising meeting with the Wichita Evangelical Church, Wichita, Ore., near Portland."

Peter H. McCarthy, superintendent of the Morning Star Mission, Joliet, Ill., writes: "We have just celebrated our thirteenth anniversary and God has given us the building occupied by the mission. For thirteen years we prayed and God has answered, and we thank Him very much."

Robert L. Selle and A. S. Clark, evangelists, of Winfield, Kan., held a series of meetings in Harry St. Methodist Church, Wichita, Kan., Nov. 5-26, with Rev. H. L. Shook, pastor. The congregations increased from the first service on, with more than one hundred professed conversions.

L. B. Wilkinson, Sparland, Ill., writes: "We closed a revival meeting two weeks ago. Souls were saved and we had a baptismal service on Thursday evening. I have just returned from a great Anti-Saloon League Convention, held in Toronto, Ont. Our town needs a great spiritual awakening."

G. A. DeFlon writes: "Some ten days ago I sent a request for special prayer for the meetings at this place, Courtland, Kan., a very hard field. But God heard and answered prayer, praise His dear name. Tonight, my closing service, I preach on the second coming of Jesus. Then from here I go to Cleburne, Kan."

Ellery G. Aldridge writes from Rensselaerville, N. Y.: "Mrs. Aldridge and I are now on the staff of the Baptist New York State Evangelists and have already had two successful campaigns this fall. We rejoice in the fact that many accepted Christ as their Saviour and several young men and women have been listed in life service."

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Bonney are associated for the season with Dr. O. A. Newlin, president of the Interdenominational Evangelistic Association. Their campaigns this fall have been union meetings in Kirklin, Ind., Wolcott, N. Y., and during December with the Calvary Presbyterian Church, Buffalo, N. Y.

Newell Brothers report as follows: "God gave us a wonderful revival in Columbus, O., with a large number of conversions and many added to the church. Now we are in a campaign at Greensburg, O., and in January we will be at Lansing, Mich., where great preparations are already in progress for the meetings in that city."

John W. Erskine writes: "We have just closed a successful series of meetings at Quincy, Mich. Men, women, boys and girls took a definite stand for Christ. Not only were people saved but several volunteered for some form of definite Christian work. The services were held in the First M. E. Church and we had the hearty co-operation of the Presbyterian and Baptist churches."

"The Nyburgs" evangelistic singers and children's workers, assisted Rev. L. A. Townsend of the Loomis Park Baptist Church, Jackson, Mich., in a three weeks meeting. The church was quickened, 30 decisions were made, eighteen were baptized and taken into church membership with more to follow, and a strong Junior B. Y. P. U. was organized. The meeting closed November 12.

Alexander A. Haggard, following a gospel tent campaign of thirteen weeks in Gastonia, N. C., resulting in 2800 conversions and hundreds added to the church, reports having closed a successful five weeks series in Forest City, N. C. Hundreds confessed Christ and all the churches were strengthened by many additions. On November 13, Mr. Haggard opened another campaign in Louden, Tenn., from where he was to go to Columbus, Ga., in December.

Roy O. Wine writes from Cisne, Ill.: "I closed a two weeks meeting here with 38 conversions. The crowds were large and interest very inspiring. We had a mass meeting the last Sunday that made a great impression, being the first of its kind in this part of the country. The crowd filled the church, some coming as far as twenty miles. I am glad to be able to add some new subscriptions to the MOODY MONTHLY and shall endeavor to add more as it is an encyclopedia of knowledge to the Christian worker."

Jack Cardiff has been helping for some time at the Practical Bible Training School, Bible School Park, N. Y. He says: "I am very busy managing the detail work for the coming of Mr. Sunday here December 18. The demands are so large that we were compelled to get the city armory and hundreds no doubt will be turned away. I speak nearly every noon at some dinner club and last week I was at Syracuse, N. Y., and spoke at the Billy Sunday Club. I will be here until April, then back into the field work again."

Dr. Ira D. Warner, pastor of the First United Brethren Church, Canton, O., writes: "We have just closed one of the greatest revival campaigns in the history of our church, under the leadership of Evangelist Harry W. Vom Bruch and party, of Chicago. Scores were saved and hundreds brought into a closer fellowship with the Lord. The party has won our hearts and we have invited them to return. One entire evangelistic service was broadcasted from station WWB, giving the campaign great publicity. The party next went to Tyrone, Pa."

Harry Dixon Loes and Birdie C. Loes write: "Our last meeting was in Noble St. M. E. Church at Anderson, Ind. Though only two weeks long it was one of the best meetings in which we have labored this year. There were 35 accessions to the church. One of the secrets of the results was organized visitation. We are now in the first week of what promises to be a gracious revival in the Grace M. E. Church at Hartford City, Ind. The membership numbers 500 and there is a warm revival spirit manifest already. We go next to Selma, Ind."

William S. Dixon, Wheaton, Ill., assisted Rev. H. B. Gebhart, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Oakland City, Ind., the early part of November.

The booster choir drew a crowd and filled the two rooms of the church at an early hour. Mr. Dixon spoke to a meeting for men only, where several raised their hands for prayer, and one man surrendered to Christ. He also spoke to mass meetings the other Sunday afternoons, and among other engagements had charge of half-hour devotions at the General Baptist College. The Holy Spirit was very evident in many of the services.

Norman R. Curtis writes: "Since my last report I have held a campaign in the State Penitentiary at Florence, Ariz. This is the first evangelistic meeting ever held in the prison. Eighteen conversions and a changed prison atmosphere are results of the mission. At present I am in a campaign in the Hayden mining district, first in the Winkleman Presbyterian Church, then in the Hayden M. E. Church. These churches are at present pastorless and the whole district has no pastor, and no missionary. This is a difficult district and requires patient, prayerful effort. The Winkleman meetings grow in interest. Next Sunday we are to open at Hayden. Please bear us up in prayer."

Mr. and Mrs. John Imrie have sent us a photograph taken in front of the Y. M. C. A. after the simultaneous meetings of all the churches in Clinton, Mo., Nov. 12-26.

T. D. Franklin writes under date of December 1: "Just closed a blessed meeting at Delphos, Iowa, with a great number of conversions and the church greatly revived. Among the visible results were thirteen families who covenanted to establish family altars."

Edward L. Jeambey writes: "We closed our last season in a blessed meeting in Blue Springs, Neb., at Easter. Then we went to the task of preparing for our Bible Assembly. We were agreeably surprised at a total attendance of 11,000, representing twelve states and eighteen denominations. We were assisted by Dr. Dow. Dr. Stough and other able leaders. We started this season's work in Denton, Neb., in September and are now at Du Bois in our fourth campaign."

Week-Day Religious Education, by Henry F. Cope.

The author is the secretary of the Religious Educational Association and he has presented an exhaustive survey and discussion of the activities and problems of this subject. Thirty-five leaders in religious education who made contributions to a conference in Chicago, have had their papers inculcated into this volume, but carefully prepared charts and a good index has made it a good reference work.

The Tears of Jesus, by Rev. L. R. Scarborough, D. D.

This book contains eight evangelistic sermons of this well known preacher, the first of which, "The Tears of Jesus," gives the title to the book. No one can read these sermons without discovering that they are aglow with the passion of a man whose desire is to win souls for Christ. The reading of these sermons will stir up the same passion within the evangelist and the layman.

125 pages. 7½x5 inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $1.25.

P. B. F.

A Soul with a Sword, by Rev. Alexander G. Lee. Preface by Rev. A. Douglass Brown.

A little book upon five big themes: "Love," "Union," "The Cross," "Prayer," and "The Holy Spirit." These addresses were delivered in England by a missionary while upon a furlough from the firing line in China. They are full of fire and exceptionally strong in their statement of present-day issues and their evangelical and only solution.

129 pages. 6½x4 inches. Morgan and Scott, Ltd., London. 2/6.

G. S.

The Gospel for Today, by Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D.

This book contains thirteen sermons preached recently in the Church of the Open Door, Los Angeles, Calif. There is no uncertain sound in these sermons. The old gospel preached by Paul, Jesus Christ crucified, is the controlling note sounded throughout. Many genuine conversions are reported as the result of this ministry. Ministers who have doubt in the sufficiency of the old gospel should get this book.

The Mission Study Class Leader, by T. H. P. Sailer.

This is a handbook prepared by a professor at Columbia University for the instruction of leaders of mission study classes. It is rich in suggestions for the more thorough preparation and effective presentation of missionary subjects, based upon pedagogical and psychological principles and drawn from the author's own experience. It is obviously a book that will interest a distinctive class of readers rather than the general public.

194 pages. 7¼x4¾ inches. Missionary Education Movement. $1.

The Wisdom and Wit of Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., by May Talmage.

Millions of people of a former generation were thrilled with the stirring messages of Dr. Talmage from the platform and through the press. He possessed a rare imagination and descriptive gift. In this volume his daughter, who was close to her father, makes available a classified collection of his illustrations from his sermons and writings. Public speakers who are looking for a book of illustrations will be interested in this book.

The Restoration of Israel, by J. Llwellyn, F. R. C. S.

By "Israel" the author does not mean the Twelve Tribes, but the Ten Tribes. By "restoration" is meant not the final restoration, but the present restoration. The thing has already been accomplished. This restoration is not to the lands given to the seed of Abraham, but is to "the wilderness," or the British Isles. Those who hold to the Anglo-Israel theory will here find a morsel to their liking. We commend the author for his use of Scripture, but find it difficult to accept his inferences and deductions.

Lives of Great Missionaries for Young People, by Jeanne M. Serrell.

A fresh contribution of distinct value to the growing missionary literature for young people. Some of the choicest bits of missionary biography—instances of heroism and pathos connected with such persons as Livingstone, Paton, Hudson Taylor, Carey, Judson, Coillard and Mary Slessor—are made to glow with reality. The book is instinct with the missionary spirit and cannot fail to stir the hearts of the young for whom it is primarily designed, and of older readers as well.

The Book of Books and Its Wonderful Story, by John W. Lea.

This volume is intended for use as a popular handbook. It is chiefly the story of the production and transmission of the Bible, which was never better or more interestingly told. Not only is there the historical background, which brings to the reader inspiring facts which he ought to know, but his interest is further challenged by numerous pictures and photographs. The text contains more than 100 illustrations, which both illuminate the text and attract the eye. Many things of special interest are contained in this volume which are not found in any similar work.

Motives and Expressions in Religious Education, by Charles S. Ikenberry.

This manual seeks to give expression in religious education its true value, and it will be found very helpful to all teachers in the elementary division of the Sunday-school. The author has made a careful selection of material for worship, singing, hand-work, plays and social service, which he has profusely illustrated with over one hundred pictures and diagrams with Bible models and maps. The songs and hymns arranged with musical score and story will be especially appreciated as a contribution to juvenile hymnology.

304 pages. 8½x5½ inches. George H. Doran Company, New York. $2.

The Historic Faith in the Light of To-day, by B. Colgrave, B. A., M. A., and A. Rendle Short, M. D., B. S., B. Sc., F. R. C. S.

"Facts and arguments concerning the fundamentals of the Christian faith for those with a modern education who think and read for themselves." This characterization of the aim of the book fairly describes its contents. It is a modern apologetic. Some of the technical chapters are "The Riddle of the Universe," "The Credibility of the Pentateuch," "The Verification and the Inspiration of the Documents." The popular and historical chapters however are the more numerous. Well indexed.

220 pages. 8½x5½ inches. Marshall Brothers, Ltd., New York and London. 8 –.

Science: Aid to Faith, by Augusta Gaskell.

This treatise is in manuscript form and deals only with "The Contribution of Biology." The first portion discusses problems concerning the person of Christ, leading up to the problem of His birth. The author then proceeds to show that belief in the virgin birth is not only scriptural, but also scientific. Many quotations here are given from scientists upon the most recent findings in the realm of biology. The author concludes that "to deny the virgin birth today is to be behind the times in science." Though necessarily somewhat technical in places the readers can readily follow the scientific facts as they are presented.

The Bible and Science, by Rev. E. E. Franke.

Friends of science as well as lovers of the Bible will welcome this book. It was never intended that the book of nature should contradict the Book to men. Much of the difficulties that have arisen in the present day have come from a willingness of the masses to be influenced by superficial scientists or surreptitious students of Scripture. It is refreshing, then, to find that the author is not only thoroughly familiar with the Bible but strengthens his position by his numerous quotations from scientists rather than from the popular writers of science. One of the most valuable features of this book which is so generally overlooked by Bible critics is the citation of many references which are in accord with modern science although distinctly antagonistic to the common scientific knowledge of Bible times. This alone should be sufficient to refute present day criticism as well as confirm the verbal inspiration of the Bible.

48 pages. 8x5¼ inches. Published by the author, 573 West 181st St., New York City. Paper, 25 cents.

The System Bible Study, or, The Busy People's Bible.

The titles are somewhat misleading, for this is rather a reference book of classified Bible helps. These are quite up-to-date and are the work of men well qualified for their tasks. Section I furnishes historical and general information. The "Historical Digest," covering 333 pages, is particularly valuable. The map of Palestine shows the British and French mandates. In Part I of Section II one of the interesting and new classifications of Scripture is "Laws of the Bible." Part II of this section deals with three topics: "How to Study and How to Teach the Bible," "The Story Between the Testaments," and the "Differences Between the Versions." "How to Study the Bible and How to Teach the Bible," by G. Campbell Morgan is a most valuable section. The photographic reproductions of the book are especially good. Not only is there a "Harmony of the Gospels," but the "Interwoven Gospels" is one of the unique features, of which there are a number. The book is comprehensive and a great time-saver.

1300 pages. 8¾x5¾ inches. The System Bible Company, Chicago, Ill. In cloth binding, $9.75.

Is There a God? by Rev. Ilion T. Jones.

The author feels that most religious books are in the language of the scholar and preacher rather than in the language of the man of the street, and his purpose has been to present a timely theme with intellectual simplicity. Like many other pastors he has first met the need by a series of sermons from his own pulpit and this has led to the published work. The book is highly to be commended for the extensive research it suggests, and the innumerable references to writers on theism. The chapter on "God and the World" is filled with facts to strengthen faith in a Creator, while the chapter entitled "God and Suffering" contains many inspiring allusions to the success of those who labored under distinct disadvantages. We regret that the author did not see fit to give as much space to the proofs of revealed theology or find in it as much scientific corroboration as in his excellent arguments from natural theology. It was also a pity that he found it necessary to speak disparagingly of William Jennings Bryan and the so-called Fundamentalists, who are no less interested in searching out and presenting evidence to prove the existence of God.

Demonism Verified and Analyzed, by Rev. Hugh W. White, D. D.

The author has had twenty-eight years of missionary experience in China and rests his arguments upon no less than 304 cases observed in his own field, 64 reported by other missionaries and many others incidentally referred to. His personal experiences, his careful observations and his exhaustive review of the entire subject is most illuminating if not convincing. His conclusion is the unquestionable association of evil in all cases of so-called demonism, an apprehension and hatred of the possessed of the name "Jesus" and the remarkable power of the use of that name in bringing relief to the sufferer. While demonism is practically unknown in Christian countries the mass of evidence presented by Dr. White taken in connection with that of Mrs. Howard Taylor in Pastor Hsi and other missionaries in the orient would make it difficult to attribute such malady to other than satanic origin. In fact the author very conclusively argues that this evidence adequately substantiates the Bible doctrine of a personal Devil. The book is well illustrated and arranged and can well be used as an authority, if not as a text-book, upon a fascinating subject.

The Future of the Churches, by Roger W. Babson.

Mr. Babson deals with this subject as an economist and not as a theologian or sincere apologist for the weakness of the church of today. He thinks the weakness of the church is caused by not offering a motive which appeals to men and women. The "reward and punishment" doctrine has been dropped without anything to take its place. The doctrine, "a man will do right because it is right," has never secured and never will secure a following. Such a doctrine is contrary to economic law and the lessons of history. Churches must again preach that the wages of sin is death.

A revival of true religion is the only thing, in Mr. Babson's opinion, that will keep American democracy afloat, and it is at this point that his fallacy with reference to the church emerges—the objective is the salvation of the State. He traces development of the church's influence, first in destroying slavery, then feudalism, then granting to the people the right of worship according to the dictates of their own consciences, and finally political freedom; and at this point he acknowledges a debt of the world to the influence of John Calvin. He says that the present-day work of the church should be to secure the equalization and opportunity for all classes of people, especially the capitalist and labor groups, and this opportunity must be physical, intellectual, material and spiritual. With great fairness he cites the provision of the Mosaic economy as furnishing the ideal principles—opportunity for the family, for the individual with personal ambition and initiative, and especially the prevention of the growth of aristocracy through inheritance, and the establishment of a suitable economic basis for the liquidation of the church's obligation.

Evangelical teachers believe that the pristine power of the church will not be secured by putting into practice more organization, but it will be secured if the individual members of the church become more closely united to Christ by faith. The power of the early church was not in a direction of popular welfare, and just at the moment when the church was inveigled into uniting with the State organically, that moment it lost that power.

It is barking up the wrong tree to urge various reforms, the adoption of certain principles, etc., unless we come to the individual with the message "The soul that sinneth it shall die," and "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Too much has been made of the church as an organization, the need of the day is an insistence on the right action of the individual member of the church, or to put it into safer language, each individual member of the true body of Christ. Ideal results will not be secured by a conquering church as the world defines conquering, but by the realization of the purpose of the church, the taking out of a people for the Lord.

Mr. Babson's book is admirable in certain directions, but does not reach the solution of the problem, and we hardly feel he has studied the problem through.

DEATH OF TRUSTEE WELLS

Mr. Fred A. Wells, a trustee of the Institute for many years, was accidentally killed, November 27. He was standing on the platform of a trolley car when it turned a sharp curve and threw him on the pavement, fracturing his skull, and causing death in a few hours.

Mr. Wells was a member of Wells Brothers Construction Company, known throughout the country as constructors of large buildings, many of them government buildings. He belonged to the Baptist denomination, but his connection with the International and the World's Sunday School Associations as their treasurer, gave him a wide acquaintance and sympathy with Christian work among the young of all denominations and nationalities. He was a very lovable man who made and held strong friendships, and who will be missed by many for a long while to come. He was buried, December 1, from his late residence in Evanston, Ill. Dr. Gray and Mr. Thomas S. Smith were at the funeral service representing the trustees of the Institute.

MUSIC FACULTY NEWS

Alfred Holsworth continues to direct the Institute choir at Dr. Gray's four o'clock service, Sunday afternoons. George S. Schuler was organist during November, in Mr. Fellers absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy C. Latchaw are serving the North Shore Congregational Church, Chicago, as baritone and director, and soprano, respectively.

Foss L. Fellers reports about 400 professed conversions in the meetings held in November at Liberal, Kan., by the E. C. Miller Evangelistic Party, in which he assisted as pianist.

Theophilus Le Baron Bearse, special piano instructor the past year, has been elected a member of the Faculty.

Talmage J. Bittikofer takes the class in public speaking, beginning with the Winter Term, having been trained by Prof. Arthur E. Phillips, who was the Institute instructor so many years. Prof. H. C. Duke supplied this class through the Fall Term, and Mr. Bittikofer now becomes the permanent instructor. Pastor P. W. Philpott of The Moody Church is much pleased with Mr. Bittikofer's services as church chorister.

THANKSGIVING DAY JOYS

Praise and thanksgiving rising from more than a thousand hearts made Thanksgiving Day at the Institute a time of great blessing. So full were the hearts of the happy family that it was almost impossible to close the testimony meeting in the evening, at which Mr. Gosnell presided.

Dinner was served in the dining room and in Keith Hall. The meal was typical of the abundance of blessings showered upon the Institute during the year—every plate was heaped high with (no, not turkey this time) chicken, and all the other good things that delight Thanksgiving Day appetites.

Two hours of real fun followed the dinner. Rev. Clarence E. Benson and Mr. T. T. Lorraine, student athletic instructor, were in charge of the games in the lecture room. Relay races, tugs-of-war, and drawing contests were participated in by students, yes, and Faculty also.

Space is lacking to even name the talented students who provided the delightful musical program in the Auditorium at 4 o'clock. There were eight vocal, organ, and piano solos, two numbers by the Ladies' Double Quartet, and one from a male quartet.

Everybody partook of evening luncheon at 6 o'clock in Keith Hall, including many of the employes of the Institute and their families. About half the great company was served at 6 o'clock and the remainder at 6:30.

Mr. Guy C. Latchaw was in charge of the day's program as chairman of the Entertainment Committee of the Faculty.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT NOTES

During November Mr. Harry D. Clarke led the singing in evangelistic meetings conducted by the pastor in the Central Baptist Church, Columbus, O.

At the close of an evangelistic meeting in Calvary Moravian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., the pastor wrote: "Dr. J. E. Conant made a fine impression here and was a great blessing to us." Dr. Conant is engaged in a meeting in the First Baptist Church, Albion, Mich., and, December 31, he begins a three weeks' campaign in the Memorial Baptist Church, Jackson, Mich.

Rev. George E. Guille gave a series of Bible studies on The Gospel of Our Salvation, and The Finished Work, Exaltation and Present Service of Christ, in the Muskogee, Okla., Bible Conference, Dec. 10-15.

Mrs. D. Carl Yoder, wife of the general secretary of the Cleveland Sunday-school Association, says of Miss Elinor Stafford Millar's recent engagement there: "This has been a gracious week. Nearly, if not quite, a thousand women have been reached through the drawing-room meetings, to say nothing of the crowded Rainbow Room in the Winton Hotel (seating 1,200), last Sunday."

From Cleveland Miss Millar went to a rural community in Ohio where her adaptability under opposite conditions was recognized by the testimony: "We were well pleased with her work; it fitted in splendidly with our union effort."

Miss Millar is attending the annual meeting of mission men in Grand Rapids, Mich., and conducting inspirational meetings in the Union Mission, Charleston, W. Va.

Dr. Henry Ostrom was the leader in evangelistic meetings at the Second Presbyterian Church, Petersburg, Va.

Rev. Gordon C. Watt, M. A., of Glasgow, Scotland, has already been booked for a dozen places. He comes to America in February and will return to Scotland, September 1.

Miss Virginia C. Williams is assisting Dr. Milford H. Lyon in an evangelistic campaign in New Bedford, Mass., commencing December 31, to continue six weeks.

A MISSIONARY START IN PERU

The following letter, received December 6, is from a student who recently left the Institute:

"Apartado 8, Cajamarca,
Peru, South America.

"Rev. and dear Dr. Gray:

"I have been thinking much of the Institute since I left. I may say that I have been with you in spirit especially at the Institute Family prayer-meeting. Though our intercourse was necessarily brief, I look back with pleasure to the few opportunities we had of meeting.

"On the way to Cajamarca I had the privilege of distributing tracts at Guayaquil, Paita, Pacasmayo and Chileti. From the latter place the journey is by mule-pack over the Andes. At an altitude of 13,000 feet it began to rain and it rained, so much so, that when I arrived in Cajamarca I did not have a dry handkerchief in my outfit. Not knowing much Spanish I had an exciting time finding quarters. Praise God I am now settled and have a class of nine young men from the National College, seeking to exchange Spanish for English.

"Will you pray that God will enable me to live the Christ life before these young men preparatory to opening the Word?

Naturally the Friars have been after me for giving out tracts and Gospels of John. Indeed I am just getting over a nasty gash and black-eye, as a result of coming into forcible contact with a cane having a Friar at the end of it. Fortunately I never was good looking, and I think it is better to be handsomely ugly than just commonplace.

"In several out-of-the-way places I have found traces of Seventh-day-Adventism. Thus Satan is hard at work leading from bondage to bondage.

"I ask to be remembered in the Institute prayers with a special request to the Latin American Prayer Band.

"May the blessing of Numbers 6:24, 25, 26 be the portion of the Faculty and the student body and all associated with the school. I am

"Yours in His service,
"Arthur M. T. Moohan, '22."

WHAT ONE AMERICAN LEGION POST IS DOING

Charles M. Alexander Post No. 562, American Legion, located in Chicago, and composed of Christian men entirely, has voluntarily assumed the task (in so far as able) of supplying gospel literature and Scripture "portions" to the service men still confined in U. S. hospitals. Ten members alone pledged $85, and $50 is now paid in for this very important work. All of the members will be invited to contribute.

Already donations of appropriate literature have gone forward to the "boys" in soldiers' homes and hospitals at Chicago; Dayton, O.; Dawson Springs, Ky.; and Asheville, N. C.; and received with expressions of sincere appreciation.

Further, regarding this post, it is interesting to note that several post members are going to the foreign field, as missionaries, and for these the post is paying for a number of Christian magazines of real help and inspiration.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION

Thomas Dakin, a poor pensioner of Greenwich, England, distributed over one hundred thousand tracts every year, and when death overtook him his pockets were filled with tracts having this title, "Are You Prepared to Die?" Many a soul has been won to Jesus through the written ministry placed in the hands and homes of the people. He was seeking to shine for the One who redeemed him from sin and hell by dying for him on Calvary's cross. Now in order to shine for Jesus, you need not be possessed of great natural talents, nor yet have under your hand a large fortune. Oh, no. Just let the light which He has put within shine out and He will use you for His own glory.

A traveler who once visited a lighthouse in the British Channel said to the keeper, "But what if one of your lights should go out at night?" "Never," said the keeper, "impossible, sir. Yonder are the ships sailing to all parts of the world. If tonight my burner went out, in a few days I might hear from France or Spain, or from Scotland or America, that on such a night the lighthouse in the Channel gave no light warning and some vessel with her precious cargo had been wrecked."

There are many households in which the Bible is not read even by those who say they are going to heaven. How to make dollars is of far more importance to such people, and what is the outcome? The children of such homes do as they like, God is not consulted, and His Word has only a place on the center table. The young people are found in the "movie," the theater, and often in the dance hall. There was no one in the home to guide them to Jesus through God's lighthouse, His own inspired Word.

Are you sowing the seed of the Word as you move along through this world of sin, groans, tears and blood? "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. They that sow in tears shall reap in joy, singing."

PREACH THE WORD!

The indiscriminate use of tracts by those whose zeal exceeds their wisdom has led many good people to question their value. It is foolish, however, to allow our prejudice against poor tracts to blind us to the value of good ones, and good ones can be had. The choicest thoughts of the best writers can now be found in leaflet form, and many a soul has been awakened by one of these silent messengers which God has put into the hand at just the right moment.—H. W. Pope.

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

—Longfellow.

Above we present the pictures of three great men born in the month of February. It is well for us to be reminded of these famous men as their birthdays draw near, and consider the common qualifications they possessed, which immortalized their names. Three things immediately present themselves to our minds: a self-sacrificing spirit; steadfastness of purpose; ability to meet a crisis.

Washington brought forth the nation; Lincoln preserved its unity; Moody ministered preëminently to its spiritual life. Of each it can truly be said, "He being dead yet speaketh;" for the ideals of Washington and Lincoln are the ideals of our nation today, and Moody's work goes on through the institutions and movements he founded.

One of these is The Moody Bible Institute, a school for training Christian workers, of which Mr. Moody said, "It seems to me the largest thing I have ever undertaken, and that it is going to accomplish more than anything I have yet been permitted to do."

Someone has well said, "The world of tomorrow depends upon the schools of today," and we might add that the church of tomorrow depends upon the Christian training schools of today.

The Moody Bible Institute affords to Christians an opportunity to leave behind them, likewise, "footprints on the sands of time." This can be done by an investment in its Life Annuity Contracts. Write for complete information.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A LITTLE SONG OF WORK
By Sarah Elizabeth Sprouse

Elijah's mantle fell upon
  Elisha plowing sod;
And Gideon was threshing wheat
  When he was called of God.

To Moses and to David came
  The call when shepherding;
For labor so befits a man
  And dignifies a king.

One day the Holy Ghost, elect
  Of God triune to choose
Ambassadors, poured holy oil
  On Moody—selling shoes!

The Saviour was a carpenter;
  The Roman's nails crashed through
Fine, manly hands that callouses
  Of homely labor knew.

And Paul, Apostle, like his Lord,
  Had learned a trade and stands
An honor to the working-man
  Who serves with honest hands.

And so, with greater gifts of grace,
  O Soul, name thou to bless
The gift of work; its fellowship
  And rugged fruitfulness.

Sunday School Times.

Go back and read again the third stanza in "A Little Song of Work," just above, and then join us in thanksgiving and praise to God for what it says. It will add to the interest with which you will read the other testimonies in this birthday issue to the grace of God vouchsafed to D. L. Moody.

D. L. Moody

There are many souls in heaven and on earth to whom that mighty man of God was made a blessing, but there are two to whom he seems to have brought a kind of immortality. They are Henry Varley and Auntie Cook. Have you ever observed how often their names are mentioned, or their help referred to, in connection with the development of his spiritual life? It happens two or three times in the present issue.

Mr. Varley was the man who simply told him that the world was waiting to see what God could do with one wholly surrendered man, and Auntie Cook was the woman who told him that she and her sister were praying that he might be anointed with the Holy Ghost. Those two utterances in his ears were the great landmarks in his Christian life. They were the voice of God to him which he obeyed. Why not the rest of us?

Mr. Moody is often spoken of as a man of great common sense and it was true of him. But his common sense was never more conspicuously shown than when he took the hints of Henry Varley and Auntie Cook. If, as a witty philosopher said, "There's always room at the top," then there is plenty of opportunity, as well as need, for another D. L. Moody just now. What Christian young man reading these words will put God to the test again?

In the Life of Dr. James M. Buckley, written by Dr. George P. Mains, occur the following question and answer:

"Question: Mr. Moody being an uneducated man, to what was his extraordinary power for winning souls due?

Mr. Moody's Education

"Answer: He was not an uneducated man. He was one of the most thoroughly educated men in this country. You seem to have the idea that education consists of knowledge in the contents of certain books, or of getting a knowledge of them in a certain place. There are few graduates in America that have been out of college twenty years, except professors, who know as much as Mr. Moody when he was fifty years old, or had read more books, or had more ideas clearly defined. Of course his education did not in most cases cover the same range."

The question was asked at a Chautauqua some years ago, and replied to by Dr. Buckley. Dr. Buckley will be remembered as the great editor of the New York Christian Advocate, and an outstanding figure in Methodism for half a century.

We acknowledge indebtedness to the Herald and Presbyter for the following editorial note copied verbatim in this issue which, being that of the month in which D. L. Moody was born, we usually dedicate to his memory:

The Man of a Book

"Dwight L. Moody and his Bible were inseparable. No man of his century did so much by example and teaching to revive Bible study as did he. He had a large, choice library, but the Bible was his one book. For a number of years he made it a rule not to read any book that did not help him to understand the Bible. He believed, as he wrote on the title page of his Bible, 'This Book will keep you from sin, or sin will keep you from this Book.'

"He declared that he had hope of the worst man as long as he would read his Bible, feeling sure that he would turn to God some day. But, he said: 'I am full of fear for the best man if he neglects his Bible. He is almost certain to fall before the enemy. Amid these last days' perils there is no safeguard but in the Word of God.'

"We believe, as a certain writer declares, that 'the most strategic thing a pastor can do is to persuade his congregation to read the Bible'; that 'a Bible-reading congregation is ready for every good word and work'; and that to enlist an entire community in Bible reading and Bible study 'would be betterthan a revival.' Indeed, that would be a revival!"

In another department in this issue will be found a thoughtful editorial from the Chicago Journal of Commerce, entitled, "Party Government Passing." It is a criticism of the primary election system and a plea for a return to the old-time convention, with which we heartily agree. In our judgment there has been a decided slump in political morals and morale since the introduction of the new system, and one which manifests itself most unhappily in sectionalism and group interests as opposed to the general welfare of the whole country. As the editorial indicates, we are rapidly degenerating from a republic into a democracy, we are losing the inspiration and cohesive power of frequent statements of party principles and purpose, and both Republicans and Democrats are going to the polls, when they do go, lacking not only in patriotic enthusiasm, but in that political intelligence which awakens and sustains it.

Democracy in Church and State

We call attention to this matter not only because of its own importance, but because of the analogy it affords to that which is transpiring in the religious world. The breakdown in denominationalism is in point. As Dr. A. C. Dixon said recently in the Maryland Association of Baptist Churches:

> "There has been such a desire to efface all denominational differences that many pastors and churches have ceased to emphasize the special doctrines that called them into existence, and which are now the only good reason for their perpetuity. The result is a loss of power, with a smug satisfaction that what every body believes is the only important truth.

"The revival of a healthy denominationalism is urgently needed. I left China a stronger Baptist than when I entered it, because I believe Baptists hold the truth which China needs to know, and if I had been a conscientious Methodist or Presbyterian I should have had the same kind of conviction."

Testing a College

Recently we heard of a Christian of means who contemplated making a gift of money to a college, and wishing to feel assured of the Christian attitude of the college, propounded to its president the following questions:

"What is the attitude of your teaching staff towards the Bible? Do you accept it as a plenarily inspired revelation of God, both as to the Old and New Testaments?

"What is your attitude towards Jesus Christ? Do you regard Him as co-equal with God and the only Saviour of men through His atoning sacrifice?

"What is your view as to the nature of man? Is he a fallen being in need of salvation, or one who is in an ascending process from a lower form of creation to a higher one? That is to say, do you accept and teach the evolutionary hypothesis, and if so, how far does it qualify, if at all, your answers to questions one and two?"

We commend the above to other Christians contemplating similar gifts.

"Red-blooded He-Men"

Last fall a play was put on in a New York theater entitled, "The Fool," in which a preacher sacrifices a profitable pulpit rather than bow to the dictates of a rich parishioner. Thereafter the rich man goes down and down materially, while the preacher goes up and up spiritually till he becomes an outstanding example of strong faith. The moral intended to be taught is that the preacher is the "fool" who sacrificed everything for that which would profit him nothing. Quoting the dramatic editor of Life, "It might be possible," he said, "to write a play in which the hero followed Christ's recommendations with such faithfulness that he would become rather a ridiculous figure in the eyes of a modern audience of red-blooded, he-men, Americans."

The editor of the Duluth Herald enters the discussion at this point with some observations not usual in a secular daily and deserving of a further hearing. He says:

> "If there is anything vividly clear in what Jesus taught, it is that His ideas were diametrically opposed to those of the world of red-blooded, he-men people."

He then quotes some of His "ideas" from the Sermon on the Mount, and adds:

> "Clearly, the antipathy of red-blooded he-men to the teachings of Jesus, and their ridicule of the practice of those teachings, is natural. That is why Jesus said, 'Ye must be born again.'
> "Red-blooded he-men have had control of civilization for a long time now, not greatly checked by Christianity. What have they been doing with it? Where are their fruits? Are these fruits good? A world of chaos and agony and distress and fear and hopelessness is the answer.
> "It is easy to imagine that the early followers of Christianity had difficulties while practicing what they preached, and that by and by, through yielding to oppression and weariness with martyrdom, they found it easy to establish the idea, still prevalent, that Jesus did not mean what he said, and that what he taught will not work in a human world. Certainly what he taught has not had a fair trial.
> "Have not red-blooded, he-men ideas had a fair enough chance? And have not they had it long enough? Are they not what is the matter with the world?
> "The World War was a very red-blooded, he-man affair indeed."

The Ku Klux Klan

Colonel Mayfield's Weekly (Houston, Tex.), quoted in The Literary Digest, sets down the following as the mission of that organization:

1. "To drive out the bootleggers."

Good.

2. "To bring in clean moving pictures."

Good.

3. "To bring clean literature into this country."

Good.

4. "To drive the Catholics back into their church and keep them there."

What does that mean?

5. "To protect and preserve our public schools."

Good.

6. "To break up roadside parking, and see that a young man who induces a young girl to get drunk is held accountable."

Good.

7. "To enforce the laws of this land."

Good.

8. "To protect homes."

Good.

9. "To be such that to be a Klansman will be greater than a king."

What does that mean?

Here are seven things as to which all the righteous citizens of this land will consent that they are good. They will give this consent without reference to political partisanship, to sect or sex, race or religion.

But why cannot such a mission be carried out without secrecy, without increasing race and religious animosity, and without going about the country in disguise?

What a peculiar people we are indeed!

Prophetic Study

It is not as yet generally known that there has been organized in this country an American society for prophetic study following a similar one which has existed in Great Britain for a number of years. The address of the secretary is Rev. Robert M. Webster, 343 West Duval Street, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., and the executive committee contains such well-known names as Rev. George L. Alrich, Rev. H. W. Bieber, Rev. Thomas M. Chalmers, Rev. Ford C. Ottman, and Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Those desiring further information about the society will be promptly responded to by the secretary.

General Pershing Speaks Out

It was at a patriotic meeting under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce, in December, when General Pershing followed General Charles G. Dawes with a denunciation of home foes and a warning against the growing potency of government obstructionists.

As reported in the Chicago Daily News, he said:

"Right here in your own city only a few days ago an advocate of soviet government received an ovation. Here also a bishop is reported to have said that the way to stop war is to give no money for liberty loans and no men for the army—a downright insult to the five million ex-service men who proved their patriotism on the battlefield and to the millions more in all walks of life who served their country with equal devotion.

"It is as though the Herrin massacre or the secret convention of the communist party of America which was raided by the Michigan constabulary at Bridgeman were not warning enough. We cannot shut our eyes to the activities of the invisible empire of the Ku-Klux-Klan, whose members in office disregard their duty to the public and allow their criminals to go unpunished nor to the contaminating influence of revolutionary propaganda among honest labor as exemplified in the strikes of the last year.

"It is inconceivable that we should lie passively upon our backs and become so engrossed in our own individual affairs or in the pursuit of wealth, that we should continue to neglect our plain duty to establish and maintain law and order."

United States Treasury Certificates

We have received a circular letter from the United States Treasury Department saying that it is estimated that twenty-five per cent of our readers own 1918 War Savings Stamps, and they ask us to urge them to exchange the same for four per cent Treasury Savings Certificates. This exchange can be made at present at any bank or post office. We consider it a friendly act to our readers as well as our public duty to spread this information and to co-operate with the Government in offering this good and safe investment to all who can avail themselves of it.

An Adroit Advertisement to Attract an Audience

Editorial

WE saw it in the Post-Intelligencer, of Seattle, Wash. It had the form of a reading article and occupied about ten inches of space in heavy type, double column, under the heading, "Paragraph Pulpit." There were five parts to it, which might be described as a complaint, a retort, an argument, a challenge, and an invitation.

> "An occasional clergyman," so ran the opening words, "assures his hearers that no man of any scholarly attainments in any university teaches the doctrine of evolution; that the theory of evolution is taught only by a few ignorant preachers who want to destroy the Bible and deny God, and that these preachers are atheists, doomed to hell."

Who is this "occasional clergyman"? Most of the clergymen we know who are evangelical, are telling their hearers the very opposite about the teachers in our universities. They are telling them that the greatest menace to faith is that so large a number of them are doing that very thing, teaching evolution. They are not putting the blame on "ignorant preachers," except in so far as the latter are deceived by such "scholarship" to forsake the Lord to serve strange gods. And as for such preachers being atheists and "doomed to hell," the more serious truth is that by destroying faith in the Bible and in the God of the Bible, they are making atheists of other people instead of striving to keep them out of hell.

> "The actual situation," the writer goes on to say, "is stated by ———— ————, professor of biology at ————, who says, 'there is probably not a single biological investigator in the world today who is not convinced of the truth of evolution. * * * Every year which has passed since the publication of Darwin's The Origin of Species, in 1859, has added to the mountain of evidence which has piled up in its favor.' "

We feel certain that this professor is too enthusiastic. The very day after reading the above in this "Paragraph Pulpit," our eyes fell on a copy of the Dallas News, in which the president of a southwestern university vehemently denied that any teacher therein accepted for one moment any theory that God is not the literal author of the whole universe. He added also, that "no teacher believes or teaches the Darwinian theory of evolution." Two of the teachers were named by him, of whom he said, "They do not teach evolution, and they do not believe in it. They believe the literal word of God as set forth in Genesis."

> "Not only has evolution been accepted by the scientific world, but it has become the background of modern philosophy," said the "Paragraph Pulpit." "Historians are writing their histories on the basis of the development theory. Students of social science pursue their studies on the same basis. There is not a phase of modern knowledge which does not so completely assume the theory of evolution that it no longer feels the necessity of proving it."

With the exception of the first remark as to what the scientific world accepts, which may be easily shown to be incorrect, the other statements of the argument are doubtless true. Evolution is the background of modern philosophy. But suppose it is, what difference does it make to the Christian believer? Philosophy is the search for wisdom and the resulting knowledge of laws which explain facts and existences. But you must catch your hare before you can cook it. What if the facts and existences are only guesses? And evolution is only a guess, a theory, no thoughtful man claims that it is a science.

Lord Bacon said that "A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism, but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to God." The evolutionists have not yet turned the corner, that is all.

And what is true of the modern philosophers is also true of these new historians, the H. G. Wells type, for example. He tells us that our existing civilization owes both its origin and its preservation to the the Bible. If he be right, and we think he is, what then becomes of evolution? According to the evolutionist, the Bible ought to be the product of civilization, but if the opposite is the case, where is the value of H. G. Wells' history based on the other theory? (See Philip Mauro in this MONTHLY, July, 1921.)

> "How long can the church hope to hold the respect of thinking men when leaders of the church pronounce such evident falsehoods with the authority of a supernatural revelation, as we find in these clergymen who proclaim that only fools teach evolution?"

The answer to this challenge depends on what kind of evolution is meant. There is atheistic evolution, and there is theistic evolution. Then again theistic evolution is of two schools. One holds that although God created matter, yet plants came into existence from some property or germ in matter, and animals from some property or germ in plants and then from the simplest forms evolved finally into man. But the other denies this, and maintains that the origin of animal life called for the interposition of God and a new creative fiat.

Now is it a falsehood to say that only fools teach atheistic evolution? Is there not Bible authority for saying that? "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God" (Ps. 14:1); that is atheistic evolution. Christ said that His disciples were fools because "slow of heart to believe all that the prophets had spoken" (Luke 24-25), and that would include theistic evolution of the first-named school at least.

Were there not "thinking men" in Rome when the inspired writer sent his epistle there—men whom he was anxious to win to Christ and see added to the Church? Nevertheless, with the frankness of truth he told them that their religious teachers who were denying the God of revelation in denying the God of nature, "professing themselves to be wise had become fools" (Rom. 1:22).

The sting of the scorpion is in its tail (Rev. 9:19), which being interpreted in this case means that when we came to the end of this "Paragraph Pulpit" we discover its author and his object. He is himself a clergyman, and the pastor of a church in Seattle or its neighborhood, who is desirous, by flattery on the one hand and a vain show of learning on the other, to draw the unwary from orthodox or evangelical churches to his own.

> "The pulpit of ——— Church," he goes on to say, "not only accepts any truth established by the world of scholarship, but attempts to relate these truths to our practical living. People who are looking for a religion which can be made to harmonize with modern knowledge are invited to worship with this church."

We wish to say soberly and in the fear of God, that the pulpit which "accepts any truth established by the world of scholarship," if we rightly understand that phrase, does not represent the church of God but the "synagogue of Satan" rather. There are two passages of holy writ that lead to that conviction, Ephesians 2:2 and 1 Corinthians 2:12-14. And we also wish to say that "people who are looking for a religion which can be made to harmonize" therewith, have no need to look at all, as that religion is already theirs. It was born in them and has never been removed by cleansing grace.

Seattle, in certain features of its civic life, as well as geographical position reminds one of Corinth in Paul's day, and this in turn suggests a contrast between that apostle of Christ and this preacher of the "Paragraph Pulpit":

"And I, brethren, when I came unto you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom declaring unto you the testimony of God," (he was not accepting any truth established by the world of scholarship), "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. * * * And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

And what was his motive in all this? "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God."

But had this man Paul, who sat at the feet of Gamaliel, no scholarship whatever? Did he know nothing at all? Was there no wisdom for "thinking men" in what he spake? His reply is, "We speak wisdom among them that are perfect (full-grown), yet not the wisdom (scholarship) of this world, nor of the rulers of this world that come to naught; but we speak the wisdom of God, wisdom that hath been hidden (R. V.), which God ordained before the worlds unto our glory" (1 Cor. 2:1-8).

History and experience show convincingly that when this wisdom is related up to our practical living—and it is the work of God's Spirit so to relate it up, the fallacies of the world's scholarship cease to allure us. People are no longer "looking for a religion" when they have found Christ!

The Kind of Gospel D. L. Moody Preached

Sermon by Rev. Ben Cox, D. D., Memphis, Tenn.

(After showing a series of stereopticon slides illustrating the life and work of Dwight L. Moody)

MOODY was a man of intense conviction and intense courage of conviction. He believed intensely in the Bible as God's Book. He believed intensely in the reality and power of sin in the world and that the only remedy for sin was salvation, and the only One through whom we could secure salvation was the Saviour; that salvation is by grace through faith. Strongly did he delight in emphasizing the text: "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Moody realized, as we should realize, that death came by sin. There would be no death if there had been no sin. When asked the question, "What about the death of Jesus?" he replied that Jesus died because he tasted death for every man. He bore our sins. He took the sinner's place and therefore became subject to death.

Never Boasted of Holiness

Not only did Moody believe in salvation but in sanctification. Sanctification means, as you know, "Set apart for God's service," and being filled with the Spirit for service.

On a very eventful day in Moody's life Mr. Varley, the great evangelist, said "God is waiting to show the world what he can do with one man who will be fully surrendered to him."

Moody said to himself: "By the grace of God, I will be that man."

From that time he was in earnest prayer seeking a deep spiritual blessing. In the story of his life he tells us that in another city one day walking along the street there came over him the earnest desire to draw aside with God. He went to a friend who lived not very far away and asked the loan of a room which was freely granted. Shut up in this room he got down on his knees and claimed and received the blessing.

Mr. Moody never boasted of his sanctification. The sanctified man does not boast. You may always suspect the people who boast of their sanctification. That bright electric light does not need a tag on it to proclaim the fact that it is shining, and the globe on the top there with a dead bulb does not need a tag to show that it does not shine. You know it by its fruits. The man who has the most of the Holy Spirit's power is the man who will be slow to speak of it; he will let his light speak.

His breadth of back suggests his breadth of mind and greatness of heart.

Calm in Trial

Because of the blessings of sanctification, Moody had sweet calm always and everywhere. Perfectly calm whether he had money or not. Sometimes needing thousands of dollars, and yet perfectly calm through it all. As was the case one day when he badly needed a certain sum of money. He was impressed as he felt, from the Lord, to take a short trip on the train. He got on the train and when the conductor came around for the fare he handed him all the money he had in his pocket saying: "I want to go as far as that will carry me." When he had ridden to the end of his money the conductor informed him.

Getting off the train he stood on the platform a few minutes. It was a very small place. A stranger walking up and down passed by him, looked at him very earnestly and coming back, said,

"Is not this Mr. Moody?"

"Yes."

"Well, Mr. Moody, God has impressed impressed me to give you a certain amount of money."

It proved to be just the amount he needed. He could afford to be calm, could he not?

Not only was he calm concerning provision but also was he calm concerning protection. He had many enemies. Any man or woman who does anything worth while will have enemies. Preaching to a crowded congregation one night he knew there was a man sitting at the door who had come with his pocket full of rocks to cause trouble.

It was a cold night and instead of putting on his overcoat before going to the door, he held it, and going to the man who was his enemy, he held up the coat in front of him, and said: "Please hold my coat for me." Turning around he tried to put his hands in the sleeves. Mr. Moody's enemy became one of his greatest friends.

An Indian poet said recently, "There is no calm in America. This is probably due to your climate. You do not commune enough with the Almighty."

Moody had this calm because he was wholly surrendered to God and communed much with the Almighty.

He Encouraged People

Not only did Mr. Moody stand for salvation and sanctification, but for service. His ideal for service was to follow the example of Jesus who came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many. He served through the Sunday-school. He served through preaching. He served through personal work. He served through the Y. M. C. A. enterprise. He served through the wonderful establishment at Northfield. He served in the Colportage Association. I am inclined to believe that no work Moody did, will do so much for the real blessing of the world as the putting on foot of this enterprise, which gives to the world the cream of spiritual life, literature at a low price. But Mr. Moody served very especially in founding the Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago, as it is now known, with its thousands of students preaching and working all over the world.

In his ministry he believed strongly in encouragement, which means putting courage into men. Moody was very fond of telling the story of a fire in a hotel. After they thought everybody had been rescued they were horrified to see somebody appearing in the fifth story window. The question was asked, "Who will go?" Nobody replied for a few minutes, when a brave fireman stepping to the front said, "I will go."

This brave fireman got as far as the second story. Smoke and flames were coming through the windows. He looked up and then he looked down. They felt that he was going to come down, and a voice said, "Cheer him." A mighty cheer from the crowd went up. He reached the window and came down with the precious human burden.

I thank God Central Baptist Church stands for this sort of ministry of encouragement. Some of you here tonight were present at the anniversary of the noon prayer meeting years ago when we had quite a blizzard. The snow was twelve inches deep. About one hundred people waded through the snow to come to the meeting that day. The next day was Sunday. It was too cold to heat the auditorium and we did not need it anyhow. A few of us met down stairs.

After everybody had gone except brother Porter, the janitor, and the pastor, a man came to the front extending his hand and saying, "My name is R——. Four and a half years ago I heard you preach upstairs. At that time I was virtually a tramp. While you were preaching, I decided to try to make a man of myself. I want to tell you now that I am a pastor of three Methodist churches in Mississippi. I have often wanted to tell you about this but have not had the opportunity." I am glad that man came to Central Church and found encouragement.

Some of you remember a man who came to me a number of years ago. Everytime he stepped you could hear the water in his shoes. He was a fairly well-dressed man, very respectable but very much discouraged and blue. He could not look up. He told me that he had been secretary for a Connecticut trust company. I was a little skeptical and wrote to the company.

They replied, "We suppose you refer to banking. Mr—— was secretary of our Trust Company. He was always honest, sober, reliable, industrious."

We helped him, as did also the Associated Charities. He became somewhat encouraged and went on his way rejoicing. In about two years I received a letter from him: "Do you remember the poor wreck of humanity who came to you about two years ago that you helped? I just want to tell you that I was elected cashier of this bank last Saturday. Ask the noon meeting to pray for me."

Three months later he wrote: "Dear Sir: I send my first quarterly report. The bank is getting along well. Pray for me."

Later on he wrote: "Dear Sir: The president of the bank has been sick and the directors have asked me to take his place. Pray for me."

Still later he wrote: "Dear Sir: I have now moved to—— (Texas town) where the bank has deposited seven million dollars. The first chance I have, I want to come to Memphis to see you. Please pray for me."

Moody impressed the people with the fact that God can use any life which is thoroughly surrendered to him.

And He Loved People

It is very important to know that all of his service was rendered in the spirit of love. That is what made him powerful. I am sure you remember the story of the little fellow who used to walk four miles to Moody's Sunday-school.

A policeman noting this said, "Boy, why don't you go to some of the Sunday-schools around here? Why do you go so far?" "O," said the boy, "They love a fellow over there."

The love method will win, my friends, when all the other methods fail. If you can convince the people that you really love them—that your hand-shake is not simply perfunctory, that your ministry is not simply professional but given in love, you are on the high road to winning them. No matter how fine your building, how eloquent your sermons, how beautiful your music, it will not count without love. As Paul said when he wrote to the Corinthians, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels and have not love, it profiteth me nothing."

Appealing to Sinners

In showing the slides we spoke of the Chicago fire in 1871. Moody as long as he lived never forgot something that happened that night. He had preached a sermon, and at the close of the sermon he urged the people to come next Sunday night deciding the matter. When he saw the city in flames he cried out, "God forgive me for telling them to decide next Sunday!"

Ever after that Moody emphasized the text tremendously, "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation."

Last Sunday night I reminded you that this was perhaps my last sermon. Perhaps your last call. You are aware of the fact that the next morning the city was shocked by the terrific explosion and people were launched into eternity. Several friends came to me that day reminding me of the message of the night before. I repeat right now that maybe I am giving my last sermon. Maybe you are hearing your last call. "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation."

During the recent awful war the British Government suffered a serious disappointment. They had counted on producing a battleship swifter, stronger than any the world had. They spent ten million five hundred thousand dollars on it, and that went much farther than it would now. The armor plate was nine inches thick. The finest engines were installed. They were so proud of it that they named it "Queen Mary."

It went into the awful sea battle with one thousand men on board and in six minutes it was sunk. You may be basing your hopes tonight on something equally uncertain. "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation," not only to believe and find Jesus a personal Saviour but also to take a stand for him.

The War Department reported sometime ago that they had a list of 498,000 slackers. Men who had been registered but had evaded the draft in some way. By death and for other reasons the list was reduced to 174,000. The American Legion demanded that this list be published.

In contrast to this news item is another which tells about a boy who was arrested recently in New York for burglary. I do not like the burglary, but there is something fine about him because we find that he got into the Navy at twelve years of age. He succeeded in making two trips to France. When they learned of his youth he was discharged, but so determined was the boy to serve Uncle Sam that he went to New Orleans and hired a man to become his guardian. Then he re-enlisted under an assumed name.

What a mighty contrast between this boy and a slacker! Nobody loves a slacker. Man has no use for the slacker. Neither has God. In the B. Y. P. U. meeting tonight I was thrilled as one of the members gave an interesting sketch of John A. Broadus, that wonderful Baptist. When but a boy he heard a sermon on the text, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." He made the decision because the preacher repeated the words several times—"In no wise cast out,"—"In no wise cast out,"—"In no wise cast out."

THE BOOK

By Rev. Herbert J. Bryce,
Eldorado, Ill.

There is a beauty in the Word
  Which only Thine, O Lord, can see;
There is a symphony that's heard
  By none, save those who follow Thee.

The pure in heart behold Thy face
  On every page—and hear Thy voice;
There trace the marvels of Thy grace,
  And in Thy wond'rous love rejoice.

With souls restored, they upward move
  Along the way the Master trod,
And in His footsteps daily prove
  The power and mercy of their God.

Moody As I Recall Him

By Rev. John Weaver Weddell, D.D., Morgan Park, Ill.

OUR God is a God of revivals, occurring as they do periodically through the centuries, and when the time is ripe. God raises up men to do His bidding. Strangely but effectually does He move upon the hearts of the men He chooses. So He called Patrick of Ireland in the fourth century, not a monk nor a "saint," but a simple, New Testament Christian, an early Baptist preacher, if you please. So came Knox in 1505, Wesley in 1703, Jonathan Edwards shortly after, and Finney and Jacob Knapp, as God had need of them; and presently Dwight L. Moody.

Two men met on the streets of Chicago, B. F. Jacobs and D. L. Moody.

"Jacobs," said Moody, busy at his Y. M. C. A. duties, "I've been making a study of Abraham. There was a man who set out to follow God, not knowing where he was going nor where it would lead him. I'm going to make that man my model."

And he did it, and set a multitude of feet (Abraham means "The noise of many feet") journeying heavenward.

Shortly after, this humble but eager seeker after souls, heard Henry Varley, of England, say, "The world has yet to see what God will do with the man who is wholly consecrated to Him."

And D. L. Moody bowed his head, and said, "God helping me, I'll be that man."

And such a man he became, startling the world with what God wrought through him. It is the only way to explain his life. It was not in the blood, it was not in his training. God plucked up a willing tool and did His own gracious work. He will do it again.

Personal Reminiscences

Dwight L. Moody was full in his work when these eyes first beheld him. It was after he came back from England in the end of the seventies. The writer came in from Morgan Park Seminary—it was a great school of the prophets then—to see this unwonted thing—a man who had gone across the water after the Chicago fire to wait for his new church building, and also to get some souls for his own new and glorious King, and who had set the old country on fire. Moody had to go to London before Chicago really knew him. But now we were all ready and alert to study this phenomenon; our theological professors and all recognized it. It was the Lord's doing and it was marvelous in our eyes.

What Did We See?

It was on the temporary platform of Farwell's big wholesale house near Jackson street. A blunt, plain-spoken man flung himself upon the people. Bible in hand, swiftly, sharply, he brought out the truth and hurled it at the men before him without fear or question, and with wonderful effectiveness.

I notice my world's Encyclopedia pitifully says (they know no better), "Moody was a Bible student, but not a theological or Bible critic." Thank God! We found it so—we callow theologues—and we learned a lesson we never forgot. Take the Word and believe it and pronounce it, if you want to get results.

My second glimpse of Moody was in Bible Institute days. His Chicago Avenue evangelistic plant had been erected, and as a junior on the Baptist Standard staff, your humble servant was called upon to report those great meetings of his when he led the ministry of Chicago and the northwest into Bible study and soul-winning endeavor.

It was great work. Questions and answers, wit and wisdom of a sanctified sort, flashing glimpses of the inner heart of the Book and its cogent applications to the souls of men. Some of us got a bent and burden there we have never gotten over—the Bible as revelation rather than literature, a quiver of arrows to be hurled at the enemy; every text a lariat to be thrown out to catch men. God be praised! What a Book!

Mr. Moody at twenty-five as City Missionary in Chicago.

Putting Young Theologues to Work

Another time was later on in my Philadelphia pastorate. A company of us younger ministers went down to Wilmington to look on at the great tabernacle meetings there. But there was not much looking on. The sharp-eyed evangelist descried us.

"Here, you men" (it was in the busy after-meetings, I shall not forget it), "you take that group yonder," and "You take this," and "There's a man for you." And so we were set to work, and we learned what an inquiry meeting of the Moody sort is like. It is first aid for the wounded of the Lord, a clinic for souls.

At Northfield I had my fourth experience, an experience that was repeated. Ah, those Bible conferences! They brought us close to God and close to the inner meaning of our ministry. Men of Scripture gift on the platform—Gordon, Meyer, Morgan, a galaxy of them. The stocky, alert evangelist in the midst.

Did you ever see his work? Did you ever study a Moody program? You don't know what is coming next, either on the platform or in the house. But every man must be ready with the best he has to give. And as the Spirit moves, the summons comes and blesses miraculously both speaker and hearer.

"Father, I think, had little idea how this thing was going to come out," said W. R. Moody, his son and biographer, to me as we later moved about among the score of buildings on the Northfield campus. "He just went ahead as he was given opportunity, and added piece to piece till under God's providence, which he was seeking to follow out, this whole hilltop came to be what you see it."

It was the way Moody used the gold that came to him, mainly from the Gospel Hymns, and the grace and grit God imparted to his praying, persevering servant. Heaven grant us another like him!

Sankey Halted the Farmer

We must not forget Sankey, the man who, humanly speaking, helped to make Moody, and the Silas, whose songs and praises in the initial dungeon days brought down the house and broke the fetters in old England and Scotland, hindering barriers, both inside the church and without.

I heard him sing his "Ninety and Nine" on the church steps at Northfield, where, one time lifting his voice over his little organ (and what a voice), he halted a proud, obstinate farmer, plowing rebelliously on the other side of the Connecticut, and brought him penitently to the altar! It was the way he captured two continents and taught a multitude how to sing for Christ and win trophies with the voice of melody.

Association from time to time with the Moody colportage work (I am one of those who thank God for this popular extension of the Moody literature and feel much bereft when I cannot attend Founder's Week at the Institute in Chicago) has deepened my appreciation of Moody's wide-spread influence on current church life. We have not gotten beyond him. Pray God we never may.

Through these hands have passed of late a mass of old-time manuscripts which is intended to help keep alive Moody's two great central appeals: "God is love," and "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will ye die?" May these twin messages ring clear in the preachment of today!

Moody gave us really no new propaganda. He called us back to the apostolic teaching that every saved man is a witness for his Saviour and his Lord. This was born of his observation and experience and his seizing and being seized of the Word, as it reads.

Personal Evangelism

A country lad, sent to Boston, Edward Kimball spoke the invitation savingly in his ear, and he went to Chicago, not so much to sell shoes, which he was well able to do, but to tell the tidings directly to others, on every side. Personal work! It is the efficient evangelism of all times and places.

Two sufficient things Moody knew: the Word, and the Spirit. Everywhere he went he was digging into the former. He would go any distance to learn more about it. His first two trips to England were on this special quest.

And God rewarded abundantly this man of God, as he will recompense, past all telling, his true servants everywhere who search His Book.

But with the illumination of the Spirit which came to him when, led by two praying women, he went aside to seek the full anointing of the Holy Ghost, he was led out into an unction of insight and freedom of interpretation that made all men to sit at his feet for biblical knowledge and evangelistic power.

Moody and Beecher

It was the old-fashioned conviction of a lost world and a saving gospel that stirred Moody's soul. Beecher went to hear him and came back saying: "That man believes this world is a wreck, and he must save as many as he can off the wreck before it goes down. If I believed that, I'd preach as he does too."

Would to God, that with the mighty eloquence for winsome things that characterized the Plymouth preacher, he had believed it. And would to God all men believed it and acted upon it, "For unless ye repent," Jesus said, "ye shall all likewise perish."

It was this fear and faith that gave us Dwight L. Moody; and his life and influence abides with us still and ever shall.

The Alleged Paganism of Paul

By Professor A. T. Robertson, D.D., Louisville, Ky.

PAUL continues to puzzle some modern critics. He began his public career in Jerusalem as the champion of Pharisaism and the persecutor of Christians. He ended it at Rome as the martyr for Christ at the hands of the Emperor Nero. He was once the pride of Gamaliel and the hope of orthodox Judaism against the new heresy that had sprung up within Judaism to the dismay of both Sadducee and Pharisee. He came to be the apostle of Christ to the Gentiles on a par with the twelve apostles. But how did Paul come to make such a theological somersault?

The answers have been many, but the only one that meets all the facts is his own explanation which he always gave without variation and which Luke tells three times in the Acts of the Apostles. Paul claimed that he saw the risen Jesus whom he therefore accepted to be the Christ of Jewish promise, and hope and the Redeemer of men of every race. But this explanation rests upon a miracle in Paul's experience, and some scholars reject every miracle. But Paul is a miracle of grace. Something turned his whole career completely around and he never changed again.

Did Paul Retain any Elements of His Old Judaism?

He certainly did, for he argues at length in Galatians and Romans that Christianity is the true Judaism, the real Israel, that Christians are the true children of Abraham, the children of faith. Paul brushed aside current Pharisaism with its narrow nationalism and its hope of a political Messiah, and found in the Old Testament the promise of a spiritual Messiah for all believers of any race, and proclaimed Jesus to be that Messiah and that Saviour. This is the new Judaism called Christianity that has conquered the world, and that is what Jesus Himself taught as seen in the gospel.

Did Paul Take Any Pagan Elements Into His Theology?

It is just at this point that a sharp conflict is going on among modern scholars. There are those like Sir W. M. Ramsay who hold that Paul was a thorough Hellenist in his training and culture, a student at the University of Tarsus, and familiar with much of the current Stoic philosophy and with Greek poetry. It has been shown that Paul quotes from Menander, Epimenides, and Cleanthes (and Aratus). In The Expository Times for July, Professor J. Rendel Harris argues that Paul quotes a proverb from Pindar in 2 Timothy 2:7. On the other hand Principal A. E. Garvie denies that Paul had any extensive knowledge of Greek philosophy or poetry, and finds no strong mark of Hellenism in his culture which remains essentially Jewish. Ramsay only contends that Paul had Greek culture without the bias of Greek philosophy.

How the Destructives Interpret Paul

But a new school of critics now insist that Paul at heart is more pagan than Christian or Jewish. In the June Expositor, of London, Dr. Maurice Jones has a luminous article entitled "Paul the Pagan," in which he ably refutes this new interpretation of Paul. These critics find that "in the depth of his being is Paul the pagan" and hold that "the real essence of Paul's religion and teaching" is pagan. Dr. Jones says, "Germany, through Bousset, Brückner, Böhlig, Heitmüller, Reitzenstein; France, through Loisy; the United States, through Lake and Jackson; and Canada, through Morgan (to mention only the most prominent representatives of this critical school), have all contributed in varying degrees to the chorus of voices which acclaim the discovery of Paul the Pagan." Amazing as such a claim may be, yet it is made in all seriousness by some men who pose as men offering the last word in modern scholarship.

It is undoubtedly true that Paul was familiar with Greek culture and philosophy to some extent. He employs some of the phrases of the Stoics and some of the words found in the mystery cults like the Mithraists and the Gnostics. These new interpreters of Paul pick out these words and make them the central point in his theology instead of the mere verbal fringe on the circumference.

Christ Is Christianity for Paul

The cross, and the cross alone, explains all for him. Paul did now and then employ the phraseology of the pagan mystics to set forth certain of the aspects of Christian truth. But these are mere illustrations. The versatility of Paul has misled these modern critics who are not able to see the whole and to see things in due proportion.

Paul fought the Judaizers, who endeavored to fasten Pharisaic ceremonialism and sacramentalism upon the Gentile Christians as is seen in Galatians and 2 Corinthians. So he fought the Gnostics with their degrading view of the person of Christ, and their pagan rites and ceremonies as is seen in Colossians. Paul's true conception of paganism appears in Romans 1 and 2. In Colossians he holds up to ridicule these Gnostic philosophers with their rites and initiations.

A Tragedy of Interpretation

To find Paul presented as an exponent of the very thing that he denounced so earnestly is a tragedy of interpretation. The simple truth is that Paul's interpretation of Christ calls for acceptance of his real deity. Some men are seeking to push Paul aside as a misinterpreter of the Jesus of history by the claim that Paul adopted the pagan myths and mysteries and deified the man Jesus and brought into the simple gospel of Jesus the sacramental mysteries of Mithra and of Isis. The whole perversion is ably answered by Professor H. A. A. Kennedy in his St. Paul and the Mystery Religions. Meanwhile it is enough to go to the epistles of Paul themselves which answer the modern misrepresentations of him. He was all things to all men only in the good sense of that phrase. He was and is Paul the Christian if ever the world has seen one. He gloried in being the slave of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Andover-Harvard Merger

By Ernest Gordon, Author of Adoniram Judson Gordon, A Biography

ANDOVER Seminary was, for the chief part of the nineteenth century, the great bulwark of evangelical religion in New England. Its faculty were men of extraordinary ability and piety. Professor Park was undoubtedly the greatest American theologian after Edwards. Professors Stuart and Shedd and Austin Phelps were worthy co-workers. In his sixty-seventh year Professor Stuart read all the tragedies of Aeschylus to detect idioms throwing light on New Testament Greek. His Christian fervor was as profound as his scholarship; "I ask for no privilege on earth," he wrote, "but to make known the efficacy of Christ's death, and none in heaven but to be associated with those who ascribe salvation to His blood."

A Great Nursery of Missionaries and College Presidents

"Cut down the tree! All we care for is its shade! Abolish creeds! All we care for is character!" was Professor Park's caustic comment on the familiar liberal slang. But the fruits of Andover were worthy of the doctrinal tree that bore them. It was a great nursery of missionaries. Adoniram Judson, troubled in faith went to Andover to get light and got it. The Schaufflers, Riggses, Binghams, Goodriches, Greenes, Herricks, Goodells, Barnums, who were the glory of the American Board, got their training at Andover. Andover bred presidents of colleges, professors in theology, secretaries of great societies such as the American Board, the American Education Society and the American Home Mission Society. The American Tract Society was organized at Andover; also the American Temperance Society. Its alumni promoted education, did the work of evangelists, proved themselves able and useful pastors.

Then Came the Blight of New Theology

The life of Andover seminary seemed to shrivel. It found itself unable to recruit students, and as a last resort was moved to Cambridge in the hope of attracting men from the student body of Harvard. In vain. The last act of the tragedy was played last September when the old evangelical seminary was merged into the essentially Unitarian seminary at Harvard. The joint student body is about fifty!

One would say "a marriage of corpses" and leave it there if it were not for one thing.

That is, that this merger represents, in the judgment of the writer, one of the most glaring violations of trust that the country has ever seen.

The Hollis professorship at Harvard, founded for the training of divinity students in "orthodox theology," was perverted to Unitarianism in 1805. In order to prevent a second bitter experience of this sort the founders of Andover fortified their new divinity school with every safeguard it could devise. Samuel Abbott, one of the original group, revoked a bequest of $100,000 made to Harvard because of its violation of the Hollis trust and turned the money over to the new seminary. In his will he stipulated that every professor should make a solemn declaration of his faith in the fundamental gospel of Christ. "If at any future time, which may God forbid, the trustees should become so regardless of these, my regulations, as to choose or continue in office a professor whose principles in divinity shall not be orthodox in the sense aforesaid . . . my will is that the salary be forfeited to the South Parish in Andover."

The Original Andover Creed

Every professor in Andover was obliged to be "a consistent and orthodox Calvinist." "He was to subscribe every five years to the Andover creed. Here are some of the articles:

2. I believe that the Word of God contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments is the only perfect rule of faith and practice.

4. That in the Godhead are three persons, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, and that these three are one God, the same in substance, equal in power and glory.

12. That the only Redeemer of the elect is the eternal Son of God who for this purpose became man and continues to be God and man in two distinct natures and one person forever.

14. That agreeably to the covenant of redemption the Son of God, and He alone, by His suffering and death has made atonement for the sins of all men.

16. That the righteousness of Christ is the only ground of a sinner's justification, that this righteousness is received through faith, and that this faith is the gift of God so that our salvation is wholly of grace.

33. That I will maintain and inculcate the Christian faith expressed in the creed by me now repeated . . . in opposition not only to atheists and infidels but to Jews, Papists, Mohammedans, Arians, Pelagians, Antinomians, Arminians, Socinians, Sabellians, Unitarians and Universalists . . ."

I suppose there is not a single professor in the merged school today who would put his hand to this creed in its entirety.

The legality of the merger is before the courts and I have read carefully the legal brief for the complainants. That which was true of the original foundation is true of subsequent bequests. Again and again in the establishment of chairs and of scholarships the evangelical character of the institution is insisted on. Mr. Samuel Hitchcock, in giving a large sum, asked that "none who in the judgment of the faculty and trustees of the institution hold or express doctrinal views in any essential points inconsistent with this creed be allowed to enjoy the benefits of this endowment." A second gift of $50,000 from Mr. Hitchcock was received by the trustees with the promise that "he may rest assured that our board will most gladly and faithfully hold the same in grateful trust in accordance with its desire."

How the New Merger Runs

"The continuity and distinct existence as an institution of Andover Theological Seminary shall be maintained." So runs the phrasing of the new merger. And then it continues with what seems like almost mock seriousness: "The president and fellows of Harvard College and the trustees of Andover Theological Seminary shall join to form a non-denominational theological school with a single faculty, roll of students, administration and catalogue."

Where then is the distinction between evangelical Andover and Unitarian Harvard? Does anyone imagine that the new seminary will resemble the Andover of Professor Park's day? Or, that the donors down through the nineteenth century would see in this action anything but unabashed misuse of their gifts? What is actually in view comes out in the following clause:

"Each corporation in determining whether any chair on its foundation shall be filled or left vacant will endeavor so far as practicable to take such action as may best contribute to the symmetry and efficiency of the school as a whole." The theological symmetry aimed at, we may be sure, will not be evangelical in the sense of old Andover, nor will it in any degree approximate to it.

It was a Harvard law professor, Simon Greenleaf, who, after declaring that by article 12 of the Andover constitution every professor is required to subscribe a declaration of his faith in the gospel as expressed in the Westminster Confession, added: "These requirements the trustees have no power to dispense with in regard to any professor . . . The sole question is what did the founders mean by the words which they have used, and in this sense, and this alone, every professor must make and subscribe the declaration, or else he cannot as an honest man make it at all."

Some Lessons From the Incident

"This seminary is indeed consecrated to Christ and the church. It is guarded by all the ramparts which paper constitutions and legislative acts and contracts can erect . . . It is possible that a day may come when these lecture rooms and this library will be converted into instruments of hostility to the truth, and this chapel and this pulpit be occupied by men who deny the Lord who bought them. Then the prayers and tears and vows of this day will testify against it, and God will inscribe in broad characters on the walls of this temple, 'the glory is departed.'" So wrote Professor Stuart.

What lessons should one attach to the story of Andover's fate?

First, theological liberalism is little dangerous if unendowed.

Secondly, theological liberalism rarely endows itself; the convictions of its adherents are not ordinarily deep enough to reach the pocketbook.

Thirdly, the downward evolution of Andover is being followed by other seminaries in the United States.

Fourthly, if any evangelical Christian feels inclined to contribute to theological endowment he should remember the German proverb, "Only the greatest calves choose their own butchers."

The Question of Endowments

The whole question of endowments is one which should give Christians pause. It is of course possible to endow enterprises and institutions without fear of perversion. There is little danger from theological liberalism in missions to malarial Africa or in the fetid cities of back China. No Modernist will ever undertake colportage for the Bible Society in fanatical Ecuador, and there is a whole series of neutral enterprises, hospitals and the like, for safe investment.

But, generally speaking, is endowment the method of Christ for His church? Are not Christians to serve their own generation in the expectation of His coming without regard to later generations? The medieval church was wrecked on endowments and foundations. Its institutional life came finally to reek with immorality. Is not the modern church as much endangered by endowed unbelief as the medieval with endowed immorality?

Anyway one should remember Norris, the Andover founder, packing ten thousand silver dollars in firkins and dedicating it to God for the education of men as foreign missionaries, and then think of Professor Lake of the new "undenominational" school at Harvard who, as far as one can judge from his Ingersoll lectures, does not believe even in personal immortality, and Professor Emerton who, in his Unitarian Thought, is content to speak of our blessed Lord as a sinner!

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, A Demonic Disguise?

By Rev. John G. Reid, Yakima, Wash.

ON PAGE 1387 of the Christian Century, of November 9, 1922, Dr. Cleland B. McAfee of McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago, speaking of the numerous Bible institutes, allows himself to use the following language:

"The head of one of them made a sermon of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick the theme of a closing address, representing Dr. Fosdick as one of the disguises which the arch-enemy of souls takes in these degenerate days of waiting for the Lord.

"Now Dr. Fosdick, as a disguised demon is simply not a success." (This we concede. We should have said, however, "Dr. Fosdick as a disguise for a demon is not a success. He does not sufficiently or effectually disguise!")

"But what is apt to be the spirit of young people whose chief instructor thinks in such terms of his Christian brethren?"

The Answer is Short and Sufficient

Neither the speaker referred to, nor any one, would for one moment entertain the idea, much less make the charge, that Dr. Fosdick was consciously acting as a disguise for the arch enemy of souls, or was a demon in disguise.

Dr. Fosdick is too well known, and too favorably known along other lines than those upon which on that occasion he allowed himself expression, to admit of the entertainment of such a thought of him.

We are fain to believe that, in that unfortunate sermon which has brought him such undesirable notoriety, he spoke without due consideration of what his utterances involved.

Be that as it may, a certain Simon Bar-Jona, by his Master, surnamed "Peter," did, upon a certain occasion, under pressure of strong emotion, give utterance to a sentiment so contrary to the divine thought, so opposed to the divine plan, and so antipodal to the sacrificial spirit and purpose of his Master, so dangerous as a reinforcement of temptations against which his Master had constantly to contend, that Jesus turned and rebuked him and said unto Peter—to Peter, mark you!—

"Get Thee Behind Me, Satan!"

Why apply so harsh an appellation to the disciple he knew to be passionately devoted to Him, loyal to the core, ready to "go with him to prison and to death"? Because, back of the utterances of Peter's lips he discerned the "control," and that Peter was (for the moment) "one of the disguises which his arch-enemy assumed that, if possible, he might catch off his guard and humble the Son of God."

Dr. Fosdick may be all that his warmest friends and staunchest defenders would claim, and after reading other writings of his, I am prepared most heartily to assent.

This, however, is not inconsistent with the patent fact that he "fell into the snare of the Evil One," and came perilously near to "denying the Lord that bought him," as did this same great and honored apostle.

This, to touch upon no other point in the address, he did in his defense of those who, denying His virgin birth, deny His supernatural origin and nature and demote our blessed Lord (and his) who "was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death," to the level of the illegitimate child of a simple Jewish girl.

In view of the twice repeated statements of Matthew 1:18 and 25 and that of Mary herself in Luke 1:34 (to cite no others), if He was the son by ordinary generation, legitimate or illegitimate, of Joseph, then He was only a man,—no more than any other son of Adam.

He was not, He could not, be what under oath (Matt. 26:63, 64; Mark 14:61, 62; Luke 22:70) He said He was—the Son of God! Compare John 9:35-37; 10:33-36; and other passages of similar import.

"He had need" (indeed) "first to offer for his own sins," (Hebrew 7:27) of deception, of perjury! I have not the hardihood to say "I would not believe Him under oath."

Used as a Smoke Screen

No. Our controversy is not with our brother Fosdick, of whom "we are persuaded better things, though we thus speak;" but with the Past Master of cunning who, taking advantage of our brother's entanglement in philosophic and rationalistic speculation, merely used Dr. Fosdick as a smoke-screen—a disguise (all too transparent, however,) under which to further spread the deadly poison of Antichrist (1 John 2:22, 4:3).

This, however, is no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into (eis) an angel of light; therefore it is no great thing if his ministers (demons) also be transformed as (hos) the ministers of righteousness (2 Cor. 11:14, 15).

Remembering Peter, let us "be fair to Fosdick" as the Continent urges, and pray for him, "if peradventure God may give him a change of mind (metanoia) unto the recognition (epignosis—a full knowledge) of the truth, and that he may awake sober out of the snare of the devil" (2 Tim. 2:25, 26—in the Greek) in which too evidently he is enmeshed (2 Kings 6:17-20).

And "when thou hast turned again, establish thy brethren" (Luke 22:32, cf. 1 Pet. 5:10).

ORTHODOX METHODISTS ORGANIZE TO OUST HERETICS

The protest against "modernism" is now being voiced in unofficial Methodist journals. The Texas Methodist, one of these journals, is published at Ft. Worth, which is also headquarters for the conservative movement among southern Baptists. The American Methodist League is the conservative body which seeks to organize northern and southern Methodists into a fighting group. Rev. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, is president; Rev. W. C. Nixon, of Detroit, vice president; Rev. G. W. Ridout, of Wilmore, Ky., corresponding secretary, and C. C. Valade, of Detroit, treasurer. The following is a statement of principles: "Methodists who dance, play cards, attend theaters and horse races, are not eligible to membership in this league. It is the purpose of this league to propagate and defend the original doctrines of Methodism, and to oppose the desecration of the Methodist church buildings by turning them into show houses and places of amusement and play. The Methodist league will vigorously oppose destructive criticism of the Holy Bible in its various forms, but especially in Methodist pulpits, schools and literature."

The Revival Among the Fishermen

By Rev. James Deans, Oakland, Fla.

LAST summer I spent two months in Scotland, and while in that bonnie land of heather and hills and braes, it was my privilege to get a great welcome, especially from the Church of Scotland in the Borders.

While there I visited the fishing village of Eyemouth, in Berwickshire, twice. Eyemouth has figured very much in the limelight because of the revival that has this last year touched Scotland. It was my privilege to visit with these converted fishermen, to stay with them over night, and to speak in their meeting. Quite a number of Eyemouth's inhabitants, and a large percentage of those converted, are distant relatives of mine, whom I have known for the last thirty years. I believe therefore I can speak with authority anent just what has taken place.

Fanaticism Absent

First, there is no fanaticism among these men. To those who possess only the natural heart, they do not seem understandable. This is expected, and as it should be. They possess something which the natural man does not. These fishermen never had as great a grip on themselves as they have now. They have a self-control they never before possessed. They have a higher sense of duty, and a sweeter expression of love. They also possess an enthusiasm never before theirs. They are living wells and the life-giving substance cannot help but bubble up. Their enthusiasm knows no bounds, yet everything is done in decency and in order. There is no confusion. The Spirit of God, however, is left very much to do the ordering. The spirit of invitation is abroad and desire to give testimony to the things God has done, is very great.

Touched by the Higher Life

The revival among the fishermen is a mystery. You can investigate all you desire, but you finally run into vacancy. You cannot account for it on human grounds. You come up against the supernatural, and by this way only can you account for what has happened. These men are indeed reformed. Many who were drunkards and cursers, are now neither, and they are living testimonies. But these people are more than reformed, they have been regenerated. Jesus is their theme.

Jesus said, "I am—the life." The only way you can account for this revival is by saying that Jesus in His higher life has touched their lives, and lifted them up. It is the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus that has made them free from the law of sin and death. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." It is the law of biology, as Drummond says, worked out in spiritual things—Jesus' life has touched human lives and they are now new creatures.

We who have been touched by this higher life know whereof we speak. We were born again. And others also have had this gracious visitation given them. Lying in front of me is a letter from Montreal. The author has given me permission to use it as I see fit. Here it is:

Typical Scottish Fishing Smacks

"Dear Sir and Brother: I have been reading your very kindly references to Gala, Scotland, and all about your visit to that grey, clean, and pretty town on the Borders,—also my native place. So being a servant of the meek and lowly Jesus whose name is so very precious to me, I thought I would just write you a few lines.

"I think I am a generation older than you, having been born in 1851. I remained in my native town till 1879, having learned the Scotch woolen trade.

"In those days there was much drinking done in business circles—so I learned to know of its terrible hold and loved it better than life. It caused me to leave my native town, and after wandering here and there I settled for a while in Leeds, Yorkshire, but soon the old habit got me again. I joined temperance society after temperance society, and eventually found my feet in old Galashiels without friends or money, a wreck from the accursed stuff. My dear old mother sent me to Canada just to get rid of me.

"After some months of travel I found myself in Montreal, a homeless man. Sitting one night in one of the squares, homeless, friendless, and with hardly any boots on my feet, I got an invitation to attend a Y. M. C. A. meeting.

"I said, 'That's the place for me.'

"When I entered they were singing that dear old hymn, 'I was a Wandering Sheep.' As I listened to the hymn, heard the Word read, and listened to the preaching how Jesus came to seek sinners, I realized that meeting was made for me. I accepted Him (Jesus) and became a new creature in Him. That is how He is so precious to me.

"Then began a life that was wondrous to me. The Lord gave me a humble job, prospered me till He put me in business, and what is better than all, a soul-winner.

"After being fifteen years in business he enabled me to return to Scotland ten years ago, having gained a competence that few men reach.

"We are told in the Word of God, 'In all thy ways acknowledge him and he will direct thy path'; and 'Him that honoureth me, I will honour'; and 'If any man lack wisdom, etc.'—all these has He fulfilled in mp life in no uncertain manner.

"I think I am the only man outside the regular converts, that was ever a leader in dear old Water Street Mission, Jerry McAuley's, where I labored after business hours for fifteen years; and in many other places God has wonderfully honored me in winning precious souls to Jesus our blessed Redeemer.

"I am the owner of a large block of flats in this city which brings me a handsome income, and I have many interests regarding the kingdom. I shall be pleased to hear from you at your leisure. With Christian love and best wishes,

"Yours faithfully, * * * *"

Now that letter tells what a great host of us know—that it takes a higher life to touch ours before we can get that new life. We cannot touch that higher life, that higher life must touch us. We can use the element of faith and cry and cry, but when we have done this, we have done all. Jesus has already stooped down, but He is also stooping down continually touching some heart, and claiming it as His own.

Please notice that our friend has become wealthy. God always takes care of His children better than the Devil does, as Billie Bray, that wondrous servant of God, testified, after Satan had thrown it in his teeth that his Father had given him poor crops.

Not only by the power of Jesus has he become a dear and respectable citizen of this life, and also of the next; but his citizenship above keeps a song singing in his heart. The coming again of Jesus is something wondrous, and so he sings:

"Lo! the blessed Saviour
Coming with the clouds;
Lo! the dead in Jesus
Casting off their shrouds;
Now, no more the night is
Where sin and Satan dwell;
Sing out in glorious anthem:
All's well! All's well!"

God's Wonderful Thoughts

By Rev. Howard W. Pope, D.D., Chicago, Ill.

THE most remarkable thing which God has given to man is the ability to think. Take that away and there is little left to the man. He may still be able to see, hear and talk, but if he is not able to think, he is not much above the lower animals. God intended that what we see with our eyes, the brain should think about and tell the tongue what to say. We can travel around the world in a moment of time, and even soar to other worlds and return, without our absence being noticed. People who have narrowly escaped drowning, testify that all their moral conduct for a lifetime passed before them in an instant.

Thought can be expressed in the form of words, music or other kinds of art. Christ is called the Word of God, because He is the expression of God's thought. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." I think that we may say with all reverence, that Christ is all there is of God and even more. He is God plus man, for He took upon Himself the nature of man which God does not have.

We never exhaust the meaning of even one of God's thoughts. We may feed upon it for a lifetime, and even then we have only just begun to understand it. An illustration may make my meaning clear.

The Prophet Habakkuk's Experience

The prophet Habakkuk lived in times not unlike our own. Everything around him apparently was about as bad as it could be. The prayers of the righteous seemed to avail nothing, and everybody was discouraged, including the prophet himself. He resolved to have a season of waiting upon God. He said, "I will stand upon my watch, and will wait to see what He will say unto me." He did not have to wait long. Soon the wireless sparks began to fly and God directed him to record certain things. Perhaps the most important of all the thoughts revealed to him was that which is contained in the words, "The just shall live by his faith."

The effect upon the prophet was electrical. He saw at a glance that his duty was not to right all the wrongs of the nation himself, but to trust God, and wait patiently for Him to work out His plans in His own way. This conception lifted him out of his despondency and made him a new man in a moment. He closes his message with these ringing words: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vine; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

Habakkuk's Influence on Paul

What the effect of Habakkuk's message upon his day and generation was we have no means of knowing, but coming down several hundred years, we find that the same great truth, "the just shall live by faith," gripped the soul of the Apostle Paul, and led him to write his famous epistle to the Romans which has been called the most profound piece of religious literature in existence. The epistle is simply an exposition and application of the same great truth which we have been considering. Even then, Paul had not exhausted what he had to say on the subject, and so he wrote the epistle to the Galatians, which presents another aspect of the same truth.

From Paul to Luther

Consider what the effect of these two epistles has been upon your own life and the lives of all who have ever read them, and you see how Habakkuk's message is broadening out in its fruitage. Coming down to the time of Martin Luther, we find that he first saw the words, "the just shall live by faith," when he was in the monastery at Erfurt. The truth lay dormant in his mind but did not get down into his heart. But one day when he was cl'mbing up what was known as Pilate's staircase in Rome, on his knees, the Holy Spirit opened his eyes to see its real meaning, and he saw at a glance that salvation is not to be earned by good works but accepted as a gift through faith. "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God" (Eph. 2:8). Springing to his feet, Luther rushed down the staircase, and turned all Europe upside down with this same inspiring truth—the just shall live by faith.

"Glory Be, For I Can See!"

Two years ago, when I became entirely blind, I thought that my usefulness on earth was practically ended, except as I could bear a little quiet testimony here and there, and devote more time to the ministry of intercession. But God has infinite resources at His command of which we know nothing. When in the hospital a few months ago for the sixth operation on my eyes, I awoke one morning with the words, "Glory be, for I can see," in my mind, and on my lips. I realized that this was not true, for I knew that I could not see a bit more than before. In fact, I think the bandages had not been removed from my eyes. However, I took it as an indication that God intended to restore my vision in His own time and way.

As I lay on the bed I thought out a few verses, and when I returned home, I wrote them on my typewriter, which I have learned to use by the touch system. I sent the verses to a paper, and they were accepted for publication. I sent another poem, and the editor published it and requested more of the same kind. Thus encouraged, I continued to produce them, often at the rate of three or four a week. Some were returned, of course, but on the other hand many were published, and many more have been accepted for publication by various weekly and monthly periodicals, and several editors have graciously asked for more.

The thing which amazes me about the whole matter is, that I should be able to write even a single verse, for all my life I have been utterly unable to make words rhyme. A few months ago, I would as soon have undertaken to sail an airship, as to write a poem of any sort, though prose writing was comparatively easy. I know nothing at all about poetry, and indeed have never been a great reader of it. I call these verses, "Jingles," and faulty as they are, God seems to use them to comfort some sad hearts and to inspire others, and I am very thankful to Him who has made it possible.

And so, as I sit in darkness, I try to cheer others as I am able, and to illumine the pathway of those whose darkness is deeper than my own, pointing them to the Light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

Do You Hear the Music?

What's the use of waiting until you die,
Or the Lord appears, to take you on high;
Why not tune your heart while here below,
And enjoy heaven's music as you go?
Why not enjoy the rustle of trees,
The babble of brooks and the hum of bees;
The song of birds and the stillness of night,
And the sky all sparkling with bright starlight?

Each city of size has its radio key,
With its S. O. S. and its K. Y. E.
A glimpse of the world—an entering wedge,
And various items of knowledge.
So tune your machine, and hear what they say,
And you'll be kept busy from day to day,
Absorbing the news, digesting reports
Of matters vital, and also of sports.

There's music enough let loose in the air,
To drive one to drink, or to dark despair;
Or to fill one's soul with wildest delight,
And turn all his darkness into light.
There's knowledge enough to fill your brain,
And fill it over, again and again,
With its story of war, and crime and sin,
Till your mind grows weary, taking it in.

There are market reports, news of the day,
Great conventions, and all that they say,
Discov'ries of science, researches of schools,
Knowledge increasing, and also the fools;
The k'ng of Greece or the Pope of Rome,
Has just been killed, or is sick in his home;
Russia's decided to pay her debts,
A new war is raging 'twixt drys and wets.

We are surely living in marvelous days;
God is unveiling His wonderful ways.
Attune your minds, and open your eyes,
And you'll often receive a glad surprise.
We are only learning to use our ears,
And hear the songs God has sung for years,
And taste the joys that He has prepared,
And which we long ago might have shared.

Yes, the air's full of music, and if we
Were only in tune, would delighted be;
The voices of nature, its laughter and tears,
The joy bells which God has kept ringing for years;
The sob of contrition, the penitent's voice,
Which causes the angels to joy and rejoice.
All these come down to us from above,
The gift of God, through Redeeming love.

The Gospel Singer

By Professor George S. Schuler, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

SINCE the gospel singer plays no small part in the success of a religious service, it is well to note what constitutes such a singer. The conception of the general public upon the subject is sometimes surprising.

For example, some would say that a gospel singer is one who sings gospel songs. This can hardly be the whole truth, for many sing gospel songs because of the pleasing music, or because the song may be popular, having been sung at some recent meeting.

Mr. Alexander told of an experience in a public dining room. The proprietor recognized him, and at a convenient time the orchestra was instructed to play the gospel song "We Journey to a City," which had become popular at that particular series of meetings. Having a "catchy" tune, the patrons joined with the orchestra by either humming or whistling the chorus. It may have been that some few persons knowing the words sang the song, but hardly because they were vitally interested in the message which the song was designed to bring.

Again, some would say that a gospel singer is one who sings gospel songs as solos. Again this is not always so. A man may assume the role of a hero in a play and yet not be a hero in fact; but when acting the part he may be successful in the impersonation of the genuine.

Only God can correctly define a gospel singer, and yet of those nearest to the subject and best able to judge, the opinion seems to be that a gospel singer is one who sings the gospel, rather than one who sings about the gospel, which is another matter. D. L. Moody preached the true gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, whereas not a few other preachers preach about the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, with little profit either to themselves or their hearers.

The gospel singer need not necessarily be an accomplished musician. If this were so, the world's great musicians, by changing the text of their work from the secular to the sacred, would become gospel singers. This, however, is not the case. The gospel singer should be as musically equipped as possible, but be ever mindful of the fact that it is the power of the Holy Spirit, and not that of a musical equipment, which gives the gospel song its life-giving power.

Again, if the gospel singer depends upon a beautiful voice, the result will be that the people will remember the voice and forget the message.

Opera and oratorio singers move audiences with their beautiful voices, only to have the people retire in the same condition spiritually as they entered.

Not so with the gospel singer, for many have gripped the congregation so that at the conclusion of the singing eyes were moist and not a few of the hearers were moved to accept Christ. The gospel singer may be the mouthpiece of God despite the fact that he is not in possession of a beautiful voice.

A strong personality oftentimes is a detriment to the work of the gospel singer. Everybody seems drawn to one in possession of this attribute, but the bringing to the fore of a striking personality invariably overshadows the uplifting of the Saviour. The gospel cannot be sung to the accomplishment of its purpose unless the singer has first been imbued with its life-giving power. The regenerated, and the unregenerated gospel singer are persons apart.

In conclusion, the gospel singer has a place nearly as important as that of the preacher. Many persons will not hear the latter, yet the former is able to bring the message to them in song. Therefore let me say to the gospel singer, strive to cultivate the voice you now have to the best of your ability; see to it that your musicianship is not left undeveloped, for we labor for One who is worthy of our best. The servant in the parable who had only one talent was censured for not improving the little he had.

A CALL TO NATIONAL REPENTANCE

The Witness Committee of the Reformed Presbyterian church has issued a call to national repentance, in connection with which they say:

"While the great World War was raging, this Committee prepared literature urging national repentance for national sin as the way to gain the blessing of God on our army and so win the war. The war was won, but the results have not been what we had hoped. This failure is due, we believe, to the fact that no repentance for our sins is to be seen as yet. The need is still here, so this call is still in order. May we not commend this subject to your attention.

"President Lincoln was a great advocate of national repentance. He called for repentance in time of war. It is needed now to bring peace among all classes, to prevent war and to lead our nation into obedience to the will of God.

"As Charles G. Trumbull has said, 'The war was not the failure of Christianity, for no nation has yet accepted Christ, but the failure of a civilization that had not enough of Christianity to save it. We cannot have peace without submitting to the Prince of Peace.'

"Present conditions call for repentance almost as loudly as did the World War. Should we not preach the duty and privilege of nations to come to Christ Jesus, the Saviour and King of nations, for the forgiveness of sin and the blessings of His favor?"

THE HEBREW FIELD OF EUROPE

The Russian Bible Society Monthly says, that it is estimated that the present number of Jews in the world is 15,430,000. About three-fifths of this number of Jews are to be found in Russia, Poland, Ukraine, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Greece, the countries forming the main part of our foreign field. Over 9,000,000 Jews are in this field, and therefore, the task of evangelizing them is one of the chief objects of the work in Poland, with 3,300,000; Ukraine, 3,300,000; Russia, 900,000; Roumania, 650,000; Czecho-Slovakia, 450,000; Lithuania, 250,000; Jugo-Slavia, 200,000; Greece, 120,000.

Providing for Our Soldiers

By Rev. Clarence H. Benson, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

A MAN past middle life preached a sermon through the columns of the Chicago Daily News. He was not a minister. In fact he did not have any intention of preaching a sermon. He was thinking merely of himself as he wrote his pathetic appeal for employment. It is only our fear that the application may be lost that we are calling attention to it. It appears that at present there is plenty of work in Chicago. But it is the young men who are in demand. This pitiful remonstrance was from a man past fifty who had tramped from office to office only to hear the stereotyped words, "Sorry, but we have no place for men of your age."

While this sad incident was fresh in our memory we picked up a letter from the United States Veterans Bureau of Washington. It likewise contained an appeal. Because it was addressed to the young men who in a few years will be entertaining the same difficulty in securing employment, we are led to make the application. The unemployed man of advanced age is not the exception. Statistics tell us that fifty-four out of every one hundred men starting out in life will in forty years be dependent upon their relatives or charity. Why, then, do not our young men think ahead, look ahead, plan ahead? Why do not our young men prepare for that inevitable period of old age?

An Unparalleled Opportunity

The government letter stated that during the war, special provision had been made for the insurance of some 4,500,000 young men and women engaged in active military and naval service. Approximately three billions of dollars' worth of insurance was taken out. These policies that the government provided were by far the best that have ever been written in the insurance world. The War Risk Act permitted all our soldiers and sailors to take out insurance for any amount from $1,000 to $10,000, upon payment of an exceptionally low premium. The bill further provided that within five years after the close of the war this term insurance might be converted into any one of six forms of permanent life insurance with liberal features, large benefits and low premiums. In a word military and naval service entitles the youth of our day to an unparalleled opportunity to provide for death, disability and old age.

Four years of the period stipulated by Congress for converting these term policies into permanent insurance have passed. Only a mere fraction of the four and a half millions endowed with war policies have applied for permanent insurance. Unless vast numbers come forward and make application during this final year not only the foresight but also the judgment of our American youth must be called into question.

The Bonus Problem

This is interesting for the light that it throws upon the perplexing bonus problem. No one denies that adequate provision should be made for our war veterans. No matter how great the sacrifice it is our duty to compensate those who represented us at the front. But the problem is not only how this money is to be provided but also how it is to be dispensed. Indeed, it is a serious matter to put billions of dollars into the hands of our youth if they are to be indifferent to what is probably the greatest investment that a government has ever afforded its public servants. Nor is this all. It was Dr. Cuyler who said, "What a man receives in the daytime he puts into his pocket, but what he spends in the evening he puts into his character." And Babson, the statistician, points out that character building is the great outstanding fundamental of prosperity.

The question that arises in our mind is whether the government could not do infinitely more for the character and prosperity of our young Americans by investing their bonus in land or insurance than by tempting them with currency in an atmosphere of extravagance. Much of the poverty of character in these days has been brought about from the excess of money and time that we have placed at the disposal of our young people. As Babson points out: "The great educator of the previous generation was not the school house but the wood box. Parents who have not a wood box for their children to keep filled or chores to keep them busy are unfortunate." This conclusion he has probably reached from the present day statistics which reveal the fact that ninety-five per cent of our wage earners systematically spend their money as fast as they earn it. There is also a national significance to this. Ezekiel wrote, "This was the iniquity of Sodom, pride, fullness of bread and abundance of idleness." So Sodom fell. So Babylon fell. So Rome dated her decline from the hour she ventured to feed her idle citizens from the public crib.

A Good Time or a Good Character?

Can a true American patriot be more interested in giving our coming generation a good time rather than co-operating with it to build up character and citizenship? Do we want our war veterans in later years to become a public charge, or do we want them to be respected, prosperous citizens? We believe we have a tremendous obligation to perform for our soldiers and sailors. But can we discharge that obligation by tossing a few dollars to those whom we have surrounded with wanton prodigality and unbridled extravagance? Can we expect them to rise above the temptations of the day and adequately and wisely invest the gift we confer upon them?

The Infallible Word

By Miss Sophia M. Brower, Plainfield, N. J.

When, through the dusk of evening gently falling,
We gaze upon the wonders of the night,
The myriad stars, each one its course pursuing,
Show forth in splendor their Creator's might.

By day we look upon the fields of plenty,
The shining sun, the gently falling rain;
And who but God, the loving food Provider,
Could bring perfection to a single grain?

We gaze upon the flowers, rainbow tinted,
That for a little space our senses please;
They fade, but Solomon in all his glory
Was not arrayed like e'en the least of these.

We look upon God's handiwork and marvel,
And, with the Psalmist, cry, "What, what is man
That Thou, O God, art mindful of his comfort
And for his every need dost wisely plan?"

Oh, can it be that one whom God created,
Whose mind is as the merest grain of sand
Compared with all the farthest stretch of heaven,
When named with Him who formed the sea and land,

Dare such an one gaze upward to Jehovah,
And then deny His well-beloved Son,
Refuse the sacrifice Christ made for sinners,
And set at naught the pardon that He won?

Dare such deny the words by prophets spoken,
And holy men who wrote at God's command,
Because they cannot comprehend their Maker,
And fail His purposes to understand?

His well-beloved Son, God hath exalted,
That, at His precious name all knees shall bow
And every tongue confess Him Lord forever;
E'en those who will not give Him honor now.

And, of His holy Word the Lord hath promised
"It shall not to me void return again,
But prosper in the thing whereto I send it,— Accomplish what I please in hearts of men."

Lord, seek these wayward souls that sin against Thee,
Drop from blind eyes the scales that mar their sight,
And, as the Saviour's touch brought perfect healing,
Do Thou, for them, turn darkness into light!

The Moody Bible Institute's Special Summer Course, July 5-August 3 Inclusive, 1923

THE experiment of last year's Special Summer Course for the benfit of pastors, teachers and Christian workers generally, proved so satisfactory that the Institute gladly announces a similar course to be given July 5-August 3, 1923. Not only did the attendance last year surpass expectations, but the testimonies of students from many parts of the country, at the close of the course, included such expressions as the following:

"I hadn't the slightest thought of coming to the Institute for my vacation. I had planned something else, but this vacation was God's vacation for me, and I cannot tell you how thankful I am that I have been privileged to come here and take the Special Summer Course."

"It is so wonderful to be in a place like this where all the people you meet are for Christ. God sent me here to find myself, and I am going back home with the ambition to be a soul-winner."

"I never was in such a place in my life. The first week I was here I could hardly eat or sleep. The place just gripped my heart and soul, and I am going to come back to enter as a regular student."

"I have received more than I expected from the Special Summer Course, and regret that the announcement of it did not reach school teachers more widely. I hope that another year the news of the course may go to teachers all over the country. If many of them could carry back what they received here, think of the great work that would be acccomplished with the children!"

"What I have received here will mean a great deal in my work. The fellowship and Christian love manifested are delightful. I hope many more from St. Louis will be here next year."

The list of special instructors who will supplement the Institute's regular teaching force for the 1923 Summer Course—not all at the same time, but as the program provides, includes the following: Rev. A. T. Robertson, M. A., Th. M., D. D., LL. D., professor of New Testament Interpretation and Biblical Introduction in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

Prof. Robertson is in the forefront of specialists on the Greek New Testament. Among his books are The Student's Chronological New Testament, A Grammar of the Greek New Testament in the Light of Historical Research, Luke the Historian in the Light of Research, The Preacher and His Greek Testament, Practical and Social Aspects of Christianity, etc. One of the subjects for Dr. Robertson's addresses will be "Types of Preachers in the New Testament—Apollos, Mark, Stephen, Thomas."

Rev. W. H. Griffith-Thomas, D. D., formerly principal of Ridley Hall, Oxford, Eng., and also of Wycliffe College, Toronto, Ont. Dr. Thomas is recognized on both sides of the Atlantic as a Bible teacher of the first rank. His subjects will be announced later.

Rev. George Shannon McCune, D. D., for many years a missionary in Korea, now acting president of Huron College, S. D. Dr. McCune's subjects will be: "Korea Chosen to Evangelize the Orient," "A Nation Despised on Earth, Glorified in Heaven," "Casting out Devils Today," "Christ's Coming the Vital Hope of the Korean Church," "Jesus in Korea," "The Prisons as Preaching Posts."

Charles Calvert Ellis, B. D., Ph. D., known to Sunday-school teachers the country over by his weekly contribution, "This Week's Teaching Principle," in the Sunday School Times.

Dr. Ellis is vice-president and professor of Education in Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa. The following are his subjects: "What is True Religious Education?" "The Religion of Modern Religious Psychology," "The Function of Christian Education," "What is Teaching?" "Teaching Principles Applied," "The Educational Message of Some Great Christian Teachers."

Rev. S. B. Rohold, scholar and Jewish worker, author of The War and the Jews. Mr. Rohold has recently returned after two years spent in Palestine and will tell of present conditions in the Holy Land, speaking on such subjects as "The Zionist Pioneers," "Palestine Under the New Regime, with a 'Son-of-the-Exile' as High Commissioner," "Modern Developments in Palestine," "The Religious Situation in Palestine," "The Significance of the Times," "What is Judaism?" (of particular interest to students and ministers), etc.

Rev. P. W. Philpott, who recently became pastor of The Moody Church, Chicago, following a twenty-six years' pastorate in Hamilton, Ont., which began with thirty-five members and grew to 1,500, with Sunday night theater meetings in recent years, of more than 3,000. Mr. Philpott declined a call to the pastorate of Tremont Temple, Boston, before coming to Chicago. He will lecture on pastoral evangelism.

Mr. E. S. Lorenz, the veteran composer and music publisher, whose subject will be identical with the title of his book, Practical Church Music.

The distinguished theologian, Rev. Thornton Whaling, D. D., LL. D., professor of Systematic Theology in the Louisville Seminary of the Southern Presbyterian Church. Dr. Whaling had an extensive experience as a pastor, and for many years was president and professor of Didactic and Polemic Theology in the Columbia (S. C.) Theological Seminary. Books from his pen include The Church and Education, Jesus and Christian Doctrine, Questions in Theology, etc.

A detailed schedule of the instruction to be given by the various members of the Institute Faculty will be announced later, though it may now be said that Dean James M. Gray will teach evolution in the class of Modern Apologetics and that the subject of rural evangelism will be handled by Rev. C. P. Meeker, director of the Institute's Practical Work Course, who has been especially fitted to lecture on it by his experience in many successful rural campaigns.

For students desirous of muscial instruction, special classes in notation and conducting will be formed to assist beginners, so far as such classes are justified.

Recitals will be given on Monday evenings in the Institute Auditorium, in which qualified Summer Course students will participate; also a concert by regular and special students on the last Monday evening of the term.

A BIBLE FOR THE BLIND

This picture shows a Bible for the blind printed in American Braille by the American Bible Society. It requires 19 volumes, weighs 150 pounds, and costs $75 to produce.

The small volume held by the young lady contains a number of selected passages, such as the twenty-third Psalm, the fourteenth of St. John, the thirteenth of I Corinthians. It is available in New York Point, and Revised Braille. It weighs only one pound, is small enough to be put into a man's overcoat pocket, and sells at a very small price. It is published by the American Bible Society and is the first such volume ever produced. The blind, as a rule, cannot meet the expense of these books, even when offered at cost. The Society depends upon the gifts of Christian people to make possible this service of love. JOHN WANAMAKER

Late in September Mr. Wanamaker was taken with a severe cold which continuously baffled the skill of his physicians and which finally resulted in his death December 12. Mr. Wanamaker was in his eighty-fifth year and never ceased to plan for a bigger and better tomorrow. One of the last messages he sent out from his sick chamber was optimistic and full of encouragement as follows: "In spite of the great disorder in the world, God still loves His people and is preparing a better day for them."

He was elected in November, 1919, as chairman of the World's Association Executive Committee, and on October 14, 1920, was elected president of the Association at the Eighth World's Convention held in the City of Tokio, Japan.

His life is his lasting memorial. For more than a generation, the narrative of his early struggle and his triumph over difficulties has been held before countless young Americans as an object lesson and an incentive to the practice of the virtues he appraised most highly—application, concentration, enterprise, originality, ambition, honesty, self-confidence and dependability.

He was a believer in religion of the practical sort and in its every day application. He gave generously of his time and his resources in building organizations that promoted programs of character-building. Indeed it might be said of him, his business as a merchant was incidental, for so devoted was he to his church and Sunday-school interests that to those who knew him well, these seemed to be of first importance. The famous Bethany Sunday-school he started in the shop of a cobbler by the name of Kinkaid, February 14, 1858, with twenty-seven members. To this organization, which later had a membership of 5,000, Mr. Wanamaker was most devoted. He was seldom absent from its session. While serving as Postmaster-General in President Harrison's cabinet, he traveled from Washington to Philadelphia every Saturday night in order to attend Bethany on Sunday, and returned to his post of duty on Monday morning. It is said he traveled over 60,000 miles to render this service. Out of the Bethany Sunday School grew the Bethany Temple Sunday-school and also the John Chambers Sunday-school, the latter named after his first pastor, the Rev. John Chambers, who received Mr. Wanamaker as a boy into the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Wanamaker was indeed a merchant prince, but he was more than that. He was a prince of God, and while his leadership of the world's Sunday-school forces, as president, was of short duration, it was long enough to impart the spirit and vision of attempting big things for the Kingdom's sake.—World Wide Sunday School News.

THREE ATTENTION-CHALLENGING PARAGRAPHS

I. Is Revival Needed?

From an Editorial in the "Moody Bible Institute Monthly" of December, 1922, quoting with emphatic disapproval the following paragraph from a Sunday School monthly of one of the greatest denominational houses in the world: "Man once walked on all fours and climbed like the monkey. Like the monkey, too, he had a natural coat of hair and had no need of clothes. It was by covering the body more and more with clothes that mankind gradually lost the hairy covering."

"Would you wish your little child to receive such instruction in the Lord's house?" pertinently inquires the editor of the Moody Monthly. Reader, would you?

II. Is It Coming?

From a recent utterance of Dr. A. H. Carter, editor of "The Bible Witness," Great Britain: "What means these empty colleges and theological halls in our great university centers? What means the ever growing number of independent Bible Schools and Colleges in all parts of the land? What means the marvelous development of Bible Leagues and Bible Unions in all parts of the world? What means the steady oncoming of a great Revival movement that threatens to surge its way over the sandy foundations of Modernism? If this is not the work of the Spirit of God, what is?"

III. How and Where Must It Begin?

From a private letter written during December, 1922, by a Bible teacher whose publications are known not only throughout America, but the world (quoted by permission): "Many are praying for 'a revival in the Church,' but I have not heard one pray for 'a revival in me,' or to be shown their own sin. . . . When God revives me, the souls I touch will be saved, and just so others. Will you not pray for me? I have brought only one soul to Christ in two weeks. Do not I need revival? Am not I on the down-grade when I have to make such a confession as this? My heart cries out to Him, Forgive me my sins. May the Holy Spirit reveal them to me, and cleanse me from them in the precious blood of Christ."

Revival Is Needed! It Is Coming! It Must Begin in Me!!

What Other Editors Are Saying

The purpose of this department is to give the views of editors of periodicals, chiefly religious, on matters of interest to our readers. In publishing what they say, we are simply endeavoring to give information with no intention of endorsing or repudiating the views printed, although from time to time, comment may be made upon them in our editorial pages.—Editor.

MINISTERS' WIVES ORGANIZING

The United Presbyterian

Ministers' wives occupy a position that is not easy to fill as most people know. The wives of Lutheran students at the Lutheran Theological Seminary of St. Paul, have recently banded together for study that they may become informed in the things which will be necessary to them in their new relation. The wives of Methodist ministers in the Chicago area are organized. Many other groups are forming. It looks as though we might soon know the real function of the minister's wife.

A BAPTIST CHAMPION

Herald and Presbyter

Declaring that the Baptist faith faces danger of dissolution by the encroachment of infidelity in the theological seminaries where the principles of the Christian religion are supposed to be taught, Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church of New York City, in a recent sermon called upon Baptists throughout the country to turn upon those men who, he said, are departing from church tenets, and cast them out of the denominational colleges. He read excerpts from writings and addresses of certain college and seminary professors, dealing mainly with denials of the supernatural attributes of the Bible and attacks upon the credibility of certain parts of the New Testament. Among those mentioned as having offended in this respect were Prof. Henry V. Vedder; Prof. Spencer B. Meeses, and Prof. Frank G. Lewis, all of the Crozer Seminary; Prof. William Newton Clark, of Colgate Seminary; Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, President of Brown University; Prof. William F. Bade, of Berkeley Divinity School, and Prof. C. B. Smith and Prof. Shailer Matthews, of the University of Chicago Divinity School. Dr. Straton is well known as a conservative defender of the faith. And he is not alone. There are evidences of a nationwide revolt against the brazen rationalism of our day.

PSYCHOLOGY AS A TOY

The Christian

The continued appearance of books on psychology, and its application to religion and the Christian life, is a singular phenomenon. The science of psychology is comparatively new, and a number of men are treating it as children treat new toys. They have forgotten all else for the moment.

This attitude is anything but wise; it may, indeed, become positively mischievous. The whole of truth does not yield to any one branch of knowledge. We ought to know so elementary a fact as that by this time. Yet recent history shows that even clever men may become very lop-sided in their thinking. Geology, biology, and physiology have been run to death as weapons against the gospel; now it is the turn of psychology. But as the rest have failed, so will this last. No sane man today believes that any true science can be other than friendly to the faith of Christ. History justifies that belief. But at present it is represented by some that psychology will prove to be the final solvent. So they said of the others.

Youth especially needs to be on its guard against these exaggerated claims, which have no basis in fact. The attempt is being made to explain conversion, and all the Christian experiences, in the terms of nerves; the Spirit of God is simply eliminated. Worst of all, and verging upon blasphemy, is the attempt to explain our Lord in a similar way. We must be wary of these sophisms, which, after all, are no more than the opinions of men who have become over-enthusiastic for a new science.

MIXED CENTURIES

The Tribune (Chicago)

The king and queen rode to parliament in a gilt coach. George V. entered the chamber of the house of lords as Henry VIII might have done, with heralds, equerrys, and the great officers of state, the earl marquis of the garter, the lord great chamberlain, and the Marquis of Salisbury carrying the great sword of state. The peers were in robes of scarlet and ermine, the judges in red robes, and the bishops in white lawn. The Black Rod carried the summons to the House of Commons.

Then the king read the official speech, to which he had been permitted to add one line. The commoners returned to their chamber and a Scottish communist rhetorically waved the red flag of Sovietism, called the royal procession a tomfool show, and warned the government that the communists would deal with it as Cromwell had done. Cromwell would have wrung his neck, but that is another story.

All the time the London jobless were marching the streets in an orderly demonstration, demanding that they be permitted to lay their needs before Prime Minister Bonar Law, who refused to see them. In no other country is the complete medieval pomp of iron fisted monarchy so scrupulously preserved. In no other country is a titular ruler so guarded against interference in the affairs of state. And in few, if any, other countries could a member of the national legislature threaten the government with the ax of Cromwell and be subjected to nothing more than a request from the speaker to moderate his language.

PROTESTANT DEFINITENESS

Christian Advocate

The Lutheran of October 26 had a most suggestive editorial with the heading, "A Need—Protestant Definiteness." The writer is evidently persuaded not only that Protestants are irked by grooves and seats of authority and have a wonderful fecundity in populating the world with mere whims, but that Protestantism as represented by the evangelical churches is too much disposed to cater to those whims. The writer says pointedly in one of his paragraphs: "Nothing has done more to weaken Protestantism than the disposition of churches and pastors to make a bid for popularity by catering to the whims of people. It is this that has made Protestantism a synonym for libertinism. It is this that has greatly cheapened church membership and impaired the influence of the church. To this must be traced the lack of respect and reverence for both the minister and the church, which is widely prevalent among Protestants. The church needs to stand for something definite. It needs to know its own mind. It needs to teach the people that it is not for them to choose what liberties they shall have as members of Christ's body, but that the church is here with her 'Thus saith the Lord,' to teach them what they owe to God and to make them feel that they are responsible to Him. Over-indulgence is the fault of many churches as well as of many foolish parents."

There is something in these statements that must strike a note of reproachful assent in the minds of those who study religious conditions. To us it is an appeal for Protestantism to hold valiantly its custodianship of the divine oracles, to vindicate masterfully its mission as the mouthpiece of divine authority, and to resist — sacrificially, if necessary — the temptation to make those compromises which human nature from the very beginning has been prone to demand.

A SECULAR WORLD VIEW

Herald and Examiner (Chicago)

Four years ago, from the battle lines in France, there came the glad tidings of the armistice. After the long, dark night of the bloodiest war in human history, there rose at last the dawn of peace.

Who will ever forget the unbounded joy with which that news was acclaimed by the millions of soldiers in the cold mud of the trenches, and by the anxious hearts that had waited and watched in millions of homes on both sides of the Atlantic?

No wonder that that first Armistice Day in 1918 was marked by a jubilation such as the world had never seen before. Peace had come—the peace for which all mankind had prayed since the first cannon had thundered in the storm of war, four long years before. * * *

Four years have passed since that jubilant November day in 1918. All Europe is in chaos. Germany lies in ruins. Russia, once a vast empire, suffers in pestilence and famine; Austria is broken and bankrupt; from the Rhine to the Bosphorus no government is secure—from the Rhine westward the instability is contagious. * * *

"Give us this day our daily bread"—never in twenty Christian centuries has that prayer been sent to heaven with such fervor and despair by the starving millions—starving amid the fields which once were the granaries of the world.

It is a cry of anguish such as the terror of war never brought forth. But politicians and financiers debate, and famine, pestilence and death ride in the wntry winds that sweep across the steppes.

How To Use Model Patterns.

More than one half of the women of this country make their clothes at home. They can now master designing and fitting quickly and easily. Practice is essential but the new way is fun.

The first thing necessary in garment making is to get the lines of style wanted of any make of model pattern. This pattern will fit a perfect figure as intended. There are no two faces alike and no two branches of trees alike, and no two figures of persons alike, so it is in reason to suppose the model pattern must be changed to fit different individuals.

This system consists of twelve copyrighted lessons, each lesson illustrated separately showing changes to be made in model patterns to fit different forms without changing lines of the model patterns. Bear in mind you design your new pattern in a few minutes to fit any form. The lessons take you step by step until you are an expert. The fitting of the new pattern is proved by actual measures taken of individual to be fitted.

SLEEVES. All garment makers know changing patterns to fit different individuals makes the armhole small or large and the model sleeve pattern will not fit the new armhole. The sleeve lesson shows how to change the model sleeve pattern to fit the new armhole and also explains about fulness and setting in the sleeve. It shows you how to draft a sleeve pattern by the armhole and explains all details making sleeve fitting very simple.

What you will want now is to avail yourself of the opportunity to know more about these lessons by writing for them.

"When we find a man meditating on the words of God, that man is full of boldness and is successful."

Noted Authorities Say:

"There is nothing that so stimulates the mental faculties as diligent study of the Bible. There the soul of man touches the mind of God. The greatest thoughts in the world enrich the mind and enlarge the soul."

England's great statesman, William E. Gladstone, writing to the University of Edinburgh, said: "All the wonders of Greek civilization heaped together are less wonderful than is the single book of Psalms."

Makes You Think Carefully

"To write what you think causes you to think. Putting your thoughts on paper is a practical and powerful means of producing a systematic and logical arrangement of your views and opinions.

"And here is the basis of education by correspondence: It makes you think carefully."

Praise From Graduates

"I am glad that I had the courage to begin when the outlook was not favorable for the continuance of the course, for it has been of great value to me and I have thoroughly enjoyed it. I gladly recommend the Synthetic Course to every Sunday-school teacher and every lover of Bible truth."

"I finished the Scofield Bible Course about three years ago, and, as a minister, I find it has been of greater value to me in preparing sermons, teaching Bible classes, and in the Sunday-school work than any other training I have ever had, though I spent four years in college."

"I received more practical and helpful knowledge in regard to Bible doctrine than from any other course of study I have ever taken. The teaching is purely biblical and not perverted by any sectarian prejudice or colored by any ism. I feel that every Christian would be much better fitted for service in any capacity if privileged to take a course of this kind."

"For nearly twenty-five years I have served as president of a home and foreign missionary society and have been engaged in other branches of Christian work. I desire to say with special emphasis that this is a course (Practical Christian Work) every worker ought to take. It deepens the spiritual life and prepares for every good work. I have longed for such a course for years."

Lessons from the Psalms
Psalm 145:1-21
(The Testimony Psalm)

Dr. Tholuck's introductory note to this Psalm will suggest some helpful divisions. "It is an easy flowing psalm of praise, the effusion of a grateful heart. Verses 1-7 denote the strong impulse of the Psalmist to engage in the praise of the Lord. Verses 8-13 praise the mercy and goodness as well as the glory and government of God. Verses 14-20 show His mercy to the afflicted and to His children and to a certain extent to every living thing. Verse 21 reverts to the thought of verses 1 and 2."

This Psalm is indeed the overflow of a grateful heart, a heart conscious of the majesty and might, the greatness, goodness and graciousness of the Lord our God. This sense of the worthiness of God is an essential quality for worship. The soul of the writer is evidently moved by the knowledge and the memory of God's great kindness and this becomes the theme of his song. It will be profitable for all who participate in the study and discussion of this Psalm to take paper and pencil and make a list of the things that are stated in it concerning the Lord. Seek to discover what He is in His essential being as seen in verses 3, 8, 9, etc.; what He does in verses 14, 15 and following; what are His titles as for example in verse 1. Then after collecting your data proceed to classify all that you have discovered, then compare one thing with another and you will be able to "rejoice as one that findeth great riches." The language of verse 21 will become your own.

What is the secret of such grateful praise as this Psalm contains? Is it not the heart experience of the saving grace of God? What else could produce it? Could an unsaved man write such a song as this? Could a divided heart do it? Could a worldling do it, even though he professed to be a Christian? The answer is, "No." For such a song as this, whole heartedness is required and such a heart as was desired by the more modern hymn writer when he wrote,—

"Oh, for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free,
A heart that's sprinkled with the blood
So freely shed for me."

$500,000 for Improving Our Community. How Should We Spend It?
Genesis 4:9

It is better to be concerned with the investment of that which we have rather than that which we have not. Nevertheless we may draw on our imagination perhaps without getting hurt by the collapse of air castles. There will be a difference of opinion as to the method of spending such a sum of money as suggested by our topic for community improvement. What constitutes improvement? Shall it be temporary or permanent? Shall it be material or moral improvement? Shall it take into consideration the present generation or the coming one or both? Ought the money to be spent in educational activities? Have not church leaders during the last twenty-five years made the awful mistake of substituting an educational program for the regenerating work of the Holy Spirit? Should not some of this money be devoted to purely spiritual purposes? Was Mr. Bryan right when he said that a man's usefulness to a community was measured by his spiritual power? The discussion of such questions as these would be altogether in order under this topic, and would tend to stimulate interest. Finally, let it not be forgotten that our use of money determines largely what we are and what we are to be. It is a correct index of the character that now is, and the character that is yet to be developed. It indicates whether we are selfish or selfless, whether we are gratifiers of self or our brothers' keepers.

The stewardship of money is as important as the stewardship of time. It increases our accountability before God. To whom much is given, much shall be required. The love of Christ, the indwelling of His Holy Spirit, the vision of Calvary, and the cleansing from covetousness which that vision affords, are all necessary to enable us to use wisely and well that which God has committed to our trust.

What Are Some Temptations to Lie, and How Can We Overcome Them?
Proverbs 12:17-22

The first and greatest temptation to lie is found in the statements of Jeremiah 17:9, "The heart is deceitful above all things," and Mark 7:21-23, "Out of the heart proceed covetousness and wickedness." The human heart is a deep pit out of which comes abominable things, but being unholy we do not detect the corruption and badness of it. Yet in the sight of an absolutely holy Being such as our God is, the natural heart is as described in the above mentioned Scriptures. The only overcoming power at this point is the operation of divine grace known as "regeneration" or "the new birth." Nothing avails but a new creature (Gal. 6:14, 15). In this new life or new creature the Holy Spirit dwells (2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 4:6; 1 Cor. 6:19-20).

Another temptation to lie might be found in the universal habit and disposition to put the blame over on the other fellow. In the day when sin came into our world Adam excused himself and said, "The woman thou gavest to be with me, she did it." Since that time the mean and miserable habit of excuse making and self-justification has been one of the most prominent traits in human nature. It is simply moral cowardice. We are tempted to lie in order to shield ourselves from blame. The tendency can be observed in all stages of life from childhood to old age. How can we overcome this? Only by the power of God through watchfulness and prayer. "Lord be quicker than the temptation," so prayed a man of God in battling at this very point.

Lessons from the Psalms
Psalm 91:1-16 (The Refuge Psalm)

The ninety-first Psalm is perhaps the most familiar of all the Psalms to the people of God. It may be regarded as one of their chief possessions. It expresses the same spirit and attitude as one of our modern hymns,—

"God hath given me a song,
A song of trust;
And I sing it all day long,
For sing I must."

This Psalm is a song of security based on the almightiness of the Most High. The profession of security is, of course, one thing and the realization by faith is another. Commenting on this Dr. Tholuck says, "Though there is nothing more common than for men to profess that they are under the protection of the Most High, yet there are but few who really believe what they profess. This Psalm invites us to consider what this profession implies. No power in heaven or on earth can prevail against the Most High, for He is almighty. Men who are under His protection may discard all their fears." Rev. Mark Guy Pearse writes in similar strain, "God not only saves us from our foes but he saves us from our fears. We sometimes laugh at the silly fears of our little ones who magnify their fancies into dreadful evils. Think then what our silly fears must be in the sight of our God and how dishonoring since he has given us such assurance to encourage our trust. God offers to drive away our fears. He laughs at the threats of His enemies but never at the fears of his children. Surely here is the very completeness of all gentle love that not only guards us from our foes but offers to quiet our foolish fears."

There is very little need of analysis or exposition. The Psalm is sometimes presented as a chorus in which the leader or precentor on the one hand, and the choir on the other hand, both have their parts. One writer suggested the following which will be found suggestive in studying the Psalm:

Verse 1—The Precentor
Verse 2—The Choir
Verses 3-8—The Precentor
Verse 9—The Choir
Verses 10-13—The Precentor
Verses 14-16—The Precentor and the Choir.

For life is gladder when we give,
And love is sweeter when we share,
And heavy loads rest lightly too,
When we have learned to bear.

Practical and Perplexing Questions

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION

U. K. L., Seattle, Wash.

This subject was treated in our November issue, but our brother from Seattle calls our attention to page 44, line 28, of Mrs. Eddy's book, where she asserts that "His disciples believed Jesus to be dead while He was hidden in the sepulcher, whereas He was alive." Also upon page 45, line 32, and page 46, line 3, it is asserted that he had not died.

USING MOTION PICTURES

C. E. L., Lebanon, Pa.

Question: Is it wrong for a church to own a stereopticon and motion picture machine, if only educational and religious pictures be used?

Answer: Not wrong if the professional dramatist has had no part in them, and provided they are not used merely as a substitute for religious services. The Sunday use of these pictures, however, should be confined wholly to religious subjects.

PROPER APPAREL AND ADORNING

H. N., Chicago, Ill.

Question: What application has 1 Timothy 2:9, 10 to present day modes of wearing the hair and dressing?

Answer: What Paul here condemns is immodest and "loud" apparel, together with ornaments, excessive finery, and all extremes of hair-dressing. Christian women of today, as then, should dress "modestly and quietly," but becomingly. Certain modern styles of wearing one's hair (or, that of some other body) would fall under the condemnation of the Apostle Paul. But we should be governed somewhat by the customs of the day in which we live.

PRESENT AND FUTURE STANDING OF ISRAEL

J. M. M., Oakland, Pa.

Question: What does Romans 11:21-27 teach concerning Israel?

Answer: Verses 21 and 22 teach that Israel is at the present time rejected nationally. Individuals may be saved (v. 5) and become members of Christ's church, but as a nation Israel is experiencing the "severity" of God instead of His grace. Verses 23-27 teach that God is to deal nationally and graciously with Israel some time in the future—"after the fullness of the Gentiles is come in." This time is further and more especially designated to be when the "Deliverer shall come out of Zion." He it is who "shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob."

Instead of the commentary you mention, we would recommend the Critical and Experimental Commentary.

UNDENOMINATIONAL, OR UNION WORK

E. L. D., Hopewell, Va.

Organic church union is in many ways desirable, if only it could be accomplished without the surrender of fundamental Christian truths. Likewise "united" instead of denominational work is attractive, but this also has serious drawbacks. Since we do not have "organic union" it is a loss both to the pastor and to his work not to be linked up with some great denomination. Upon the other hand denominational work is no barrier to the usefulness of either pastor or church, if the work is a work of power and in the Holy Spirit (1 Thess. 1:5).

ALL THY HOUSE

E. L., Battle Creek, Mich.

Questions: (1) What is meant by the salvation of the household? Genesis 7:1; Acts 11:14; 16:31. (2) When was Cornelius saved?

Answers: (1) In the case of Noah we know who were included in his "house"—eight souls in all. But who were embraced in the household of Cornelius and of the Philippian jailer we cannot positively affirm. No doubt the adults of his immediate family and possibly servants. By inference there may have been children also, but of this we cannot be sure. The Holy Spirit was given to those who believed (v. 17).

(2) Cornelius was a devout man, one who feared God, who gave alms and prayed to God (Acts 10:2), yet he was conscious of something lacking (v. 6). In our judgment he was not a saved man until he received the gift of the Holy Ghost (v. 45).

A QUESTION FOR MISSIONARIES

H. M. W., Ouagadougou, Haute Volta, French West Africa.

Question: Is it scriptural for foreign missionaries to receive into church fellowship natives who have shown good evidence of repentance and of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour, but who have more than one wife?

Answer: We are informed that the practice upon the mission fields greatly varies. Some missions do not receive as members persons who are involved in polygamy, while other missions feel that allowances ought to be made. The local situation may determine in some instances. Through much prayer such matters have been happily adjusted in individual cases.

Bishop and deacons were to have only one wife (1 Tim. 3:2, 12) and some have inferred that non-official members might have more, in other words, that in that transition period some latitude was allowed in this matter as in the case of slavery.

CHRIST'S TEMPTATIONS AND OURS

R. E. A., Chicago, Ill.

Questions: (1) Were Christ's temptations exactly the same as ours? (2) Did He not have greater resources and was it not easier for Him to resist, seeing He was without a sinful nature? (3) If so, were the three temptations in the wilderness the strongest Satan had to present?

Answers: (1) "Tempted in all points" does not mean necessarily that His temptations were in exactly the same form as ours, but that every part of his nature was subject to temptations similar to ours. (2) He had the resources of God to fall back upon, but so do we. His sinless nature probably made it easier for Him to resist, but the temptation was none the less real. Adam also possessed a sinless nature, but he knew to his sorrow what it was to be tempted. The very sensitiveness of Christ's nature may have made the struggle all the more bitter. Since Christ "suffered, being tempted," He is able to sympathize with us and deliver us. (4) Knowing the adroitness, cunning, and long experience of Satan, we need have no doubt that the three temptations presented to Christ in the wilderness were the very ones best calculated to cause His downfall.

BRIEF MENTION

E. E. V., Great Falls, Mont.

Yes, the ability to do the "greater works" comes through the gift of the Holy Spirit.

H. T. C., Centralia, Ill.

The phrase "in the day of his preparation" (Nah. 2:3), may possibly refer to the Day of Jehovah, but more probably to the conqueror referred to in verse one.

J. L. E., Gouverneur, N. Y.

The "spirits," referred to in Luke 11:24-26 are evil spirits or demons. The man is dispossessed of the unclean demon but he returns, and finding the soul still empty (not Christ-possessed) he brings other evil spirits to dwell there.

P. F. P., Milo, Iowa.

The brief reign of Antichrist precedes the millennium, for he and his followers are judged by Christ when He returns to establish His Kingdom (2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 19:19-21).

L. R. M., Moberly, Mo.

If a friend is offended because reproved by you, although in a spirit of love, it would be well to make further effort to remove every cause for any misunderstanding.

J. F., Chicago, Ill.

The meaning of Hebrew 10:26, 27 is that if we willingly continue in sin, in deliberate defiance of God, not availing ourselves of the atoning sacrifice of Christ, there is nothing for us to look forward to except judgment and fiery indignation.

C. G. G., Brunswick, O.

No way of salvation is revealed except through the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ bore our sins in His own body on the tree, and through His stripes we are healed. There is only one thing for the sinner, who hears of Christ, to do, and that is to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ."

W. T., Sand Lake, Mich.

(1) The years of Revelation 20 are the same as ours. (2) We see no reason why conversions may not occur during the millennium, if sin be present. (3) Send to the Moody Bible Institute Colportage Association, 826 N. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., for all evangelical literature

H. L. S., Chicago, Ill.

One objection to making the genealogy in Luke that of Joseph is that this would make Heli his father, instead of Jacob (Matt. 1:16). This difficulty is removed if we translate "son-in-law", instead of "son," and believe that Joseph's name is here substituted for Mary.

F. V. G., Victoria, Vancouver's Island.

There is no spiritual benefit in the use of the individual communion cup or in the use of the common cup. Opinions may differ as to the more sanitary value of the individual cup, but when partaking of the cup at the Lord's table, we do well if we forget the manner of its serving and think only of what it symbolizes.

J. W. R., Grinnell, Iowa.

Serious consequences may follow the yielding of one's will to that of another. It gives occasion to evil spirits. Therefore our advice is against hypnosis as a recourse for healing. Self-hypnosis is different.

E. R., Los Angeles, Calif.

The statement in Revelation 21:2 is that the "New Jerusalem" was seen in the process of descending from heaven. It is not stated that the city actually descends to the earth. Yet the kings of the earth have access to it (v. 24), and since verse 3 declares that God will then tabernacle with men, it seems a fair inference that the New Jerusalem will be upon the new earth.

"WHOSOEVER" AND "WHATSOEVER"

These two precious words were often found on the lips of our Lord Jesus Christ. "Whosoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die," and "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do."

"Whosoever" is on the outside of the gate and lets in all who choose to enter.

"Whatsoever" is on the inside and gives all those who enter the free range of all the treasury of grace.

"Whosoever" makes salvation free. "Whatsoever" makes salvation full.

The Spirit of Prayer
Luke 18:1-14

Golden Text:—"The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." —Psalm 51:17.

I. Men Ought Always to Pray (v. 1).

Prayer is absolutely necessary to the spiritual life. It is to the spiritual life what breathing is to the physical life. Men ought to pray under every variety of circumstance,—in times of sorrow and burdens for strength to endure; in time of joy and success for grace to behave aright. Prayer ought to be persisted in even when the answer is not immediately seen. "All men pray at times; to the Christian alone belongs faith-filled and persistent prayer." God hears and answers prayer even when we do not understand the mysteries of delaying.

II. The Urgent Prayer of a Widow (vv. 2-8).

The picture here is of a helpless widow who was being cheated out of her property rights, coming to a godless judge for redress. Her only means of getting help was to prove the justice of her claim by her persistence. Even this did not gain access to his heart, for he feared not God nor regarded man. He complied with her request to get rid of her. The point here is not that God is like this unjust judge that He can be teased into compliance, but rather the teaching is by contrast. If such action can be secured on the part of a godless judge by persistence, how much surer will the help of God be given to his elect who cry unto him day and night! The helpless widow pictures the church in this age suffering the deprivation of her rights. It is not the church praying for vengeance upon her enemies, but suing for the possession of her rights by virtue of her covenant relation in Christ. The inheritance of the church will be actualized at the coming of Christ. This is why the truth concerning the coming of Christ is so vital to Christianity, and why such disastrous consequences follow the loss of the "blessed hope." Every prayer offered by the church will surely be answered. The apparent delay in the vindication of the church may dishearten some and cause others to mock (2 Pet. 3:4). Jesus' question should be a solemn warning against allowing apparent delay of the coming of the Lord to crowd out our praying. Though many may give up we should be assured that genuine faith will abide, and that the divine promise concerning the coming of Christ shall be fulfilled.

III. The Prayer of the Proud Pharisee (vv. 9-12).

1. He Took a Striking Attitude (v. 11). The Jewish custom was to stand while praying, but the word "stood" implies the assumption of an ostentatious position. He was self-righteous and trusted in himself.

2. He Prayed with Himself (vv. 11, 12). He used the name of God, but it was really a soliloquy. He pretended to be thanking God when really he was rehearsing his own goodness—complimenting himself. His whole thought centered in himself, he congratulated himself for his morality (v. 11). He thanked God that he was not as other men are, such as extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as the publican who was standing afar off. One who has been kept from these gross sins ought to be grateful to God but should not set himself above his fellowmen because of it. He congratulated himself for his religious merits (v. 12). He fasted twice a week and gave tithes of all he possessed. He thus informed God that he did more than what was required, implying that God was under obligation to him.

IV. The Prayer of the Humble Publican (v. 13).

In striking contrast with this supposed saint stood the publican whose shame kept him from even looking up to heaven, beating upon his breast as a sign of anguish of soul, crying out to God to be merciful to him, a sinner. He took his place as a sinner and called upon God for mercy.

V. Christ's Testimony (v. 14).

He declared that the publican went away justified rather than the Pharisee. The one great and urgent need on the part of men is a confession of sin and a willingness to cry unto God for mercy.

Jesus and Zacchaeus
Luke 19:1-10

Golden Text:—"For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19:10.

I. Jesus Passing Through Jericho (v. 1).

Jericho is noted as the stronghold of the Canaanites, which was miraculously delivered into the hands of Israel in response to their faith (Josh. 6), and also for the faith of Rahab which saved her from destruction with the city (Heb. 11:30, 31). It was thus noted as a city where faith and unbelief played against each other. It was fitting that Jesus should pass through Jericho. Faith and unbelief again were manifested. Two notorious sinners, Rahab and Zacchaeus, were saved at Jericho.

II. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4).

1. His Object (v. 3). He sought to see who Jesus was. Though perhaps prompted by curiosity he eagerly sought Jesus. He doubtless had heard of Jesus' kind treatment of publicans, so was prompted to see what kind of a man he was.

2. His Difficulties (vv. 2, 3). (1) His infamous business (v. 2). He was a tax

Wade Smith Comes Back

"Say, Fellows—" by Wade C. Smith, was one of the most captivating of "boys' talks" on the Sunday-school lessons ever published—it ran every week in The Sunday School Times a year or two ago. There was deep regret on the part of many when this gifted Southern writer was obliged, because of ill-health and overwork, to lay it down. And now he has taken it up again! This real genius of lesson exposition, whose pen-and-ink pictures on the lessons, "The Little Jetts," are endearing him to multitudes of children and grown folks the world around, not only continues "Little Jetts" in each issue of The Sunday School Times, but also his article for teachers of boys, every week. It is packed full with the most intimate, every-day knowledge of boy life and boy episodes.

Mistakes of Higher Critics

The articles during the past year in The Sunday School Times by Prof. Robert Dick Wilson, of Princeton, have been "high explosives," in their legitimate counter-attacks against the anti-Christian campaign of the destructive criticism of the Bible. Dr. Wilson is going on with this writing for

The Sunday School Times

He will bring together a number of typical and inexcusable mistakes of the critical school, so that Sunday-school teachers and pastors, and other "ordinary" students of the Bible, like the rest of us, may have at hand, easily usable, the facts of Bible scholarship to answer the charges of the critics. This is but a part of the Times' contributions in the field of Bible scholarship, in which such other conservative authorities as Sir William M. Ramsay, Professor A. T. Robertson, Professor W. H. Griffith Thomas, and President Melvin Grove Kyle, are enriching its columns.

When a Sunday-School is Sound

Seven years ago a new Sunday-school was begun "somewhere in America." To-day the "main school" enrolls 1690 members, and the average weekly attendance during even the summer months of 1922 was one thousand. All but a few of the teachers in the main school are trained. Every Sunday morning the teachers and workers meet for prayer. One of the classes in this school seeks to cover every town in that county, visiting every street and every home, giving out Gospels and tracts, doing personal work, and ending the day with a street meeting—this is done every Sunday afternoon. Every worker in this Sunday-school is required to sign a sound statement of Bible doctrine. Through the various departments of this Sunday-school within a period of six months during 1922, over five thousand persons confessed Christ as Saviour. It looks as though "orthodoxy" were really practical and successful, does it not? The story of this school will be told in full in The Sunday School Times early in 1923.

collector of the Roman government. The very fact that a Jew held such an office under the hated Romans would make him extremely unpopular. Then since he was rich, it was evident that he had practiced extortion in collecting the taxes. By virtue of his traitorous act in accepting such an office from the Romans and his extortion in collecting taxes he was ostracized from society. Therefore, when Jesus came along he had a hard time, as the people thrust him aside. Many men and women have a hard time in coming to Christ because of their unpopular business relations. (2) His shortness of stature (v. 3). He was too small to crowd his way through to Jesus, and being hated by the people they had thrust him aside, no doubt with taunts and jeers. (3) His persistence (v. 4). He ran before the multitude and climbed up into a tree. What he lacked in stature he was determined should be made up by the height of the tree. Zacchaeus was of that choleric temperament which knows no defeat. Obstacles placed before him he brushed aside and those he could not brush aside he climbed over because he had set his heart upon the goal. Desire must be translated into action if one be saved. Though Zacchaeus' legs were too short to enable him to see Jesus they were long enough to run past the crowd and enable him to climb the tree. It was somewhat undignified for this rich man to climb the tree, but his soul was so desirous to see Jesus that he cast his pride to the winds. Many a man is kept from Jesus because of his pride. Those who sincerely desire to see Jesus shall succeed.

III. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. 5, 6).

While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him. This is always the case. When desire is stirred up in a heart to see Jesus, Jesus is seeking that one. When Jesus saw him He commanded him to come down from the tree and declared His intention to go home with him. Zacchaeus got more than he expected. Jesus called him by name. He did not utter a word which would humiliate Zacchaeus. Jesus knew his heart's desire and dealt accordingly with him. All souls who earnestly seek Jesus shall be found of Him. How wonderful His grace, that regardless of one's past life, that Jesus will receive him as a friend and enter into fellowship with him! Zacchaeus quickly responded. He came down and with joy received Jesus. He acted wisely in that he did not hesitate. A moment's indecision and waiting would have kept Zacchaeus from Jesus—from Jesus and salvation. Many lose their souls through indecision.

IV. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10).

His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he had reached the ground. It does not take Jesus long to save a soul.

1. What the Crowd Said (v. 7). They said just what they say today when sinners come to Christ. They call to mind the man's former sins. They also reproached Christ, saying that he had gone to be a guest with this notorious extortioner, the tax collector. That for which they reproached Jesus was His glory. His supreme mission was to save sinners (v. 10). Jesus came not to condemn us, but to save us; not to shame and destroy us, but to save from sin and reconcile us to God our Father.

2. What Zacchaeus Said (v. 8). His conversion was thorough. It took hold upon his heart. His new life was begun with resolution and restitution. He dedicated the half of his goods to the poor. The man who a little while ago was a grafter was now a generous giver. His conversion got hold of his pocketbook. His determination to make restitution wherein he had wrongly exacted taxes shows the genuineness of his conversion. While God forgets the past of a sinner when he comes to Christ, the sinner who is converted will seek to make right all wrongs be they unkind words or unrighteous deeds. Sorrow for sin is not enough when restitution is possible.

3. What Jesus Said (vv. 9, 10). "Today is salvation come to thy house." The publican was now a child of God, a son of Abraham. Salvation is a present reality when one receives Christ.

The Parable of the Pounds
Luke 19:11-27

Golden Text:—"He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much."—Luke 16:10.

The purpose of this parable was to correct the misapprehension of the disciples as to the immediate establishment of the kingdom. They were on the way to Jerusalem and they thought that immediately upon their arrival there Jesus would begin the exercise of His kingdom rule. It is to be noted that Jesus did not correct them for believing in the reality of the kingdom, but for believing that it would immediately appear. Christ taught the disciples the reality of His coming and the setting up of a real kingdom, but indicated that there would be a long delay after His ascension before He would return. This parable was to make clear, and to show the personal responsibility of his servants during His absence.

I. The Absent Lord (v. 12).

He pictures His going back to God as a nobleman going to receive a kingdom. This was a common occurrence among them. They knew how some of the Herodian family had thus done—had gone to Rome and secured their appointment to rule over Palestine. Jesus ascended on high to receive from God, the Father, a kingdom. He will return when the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. Let no one mistake the certainty of His return, though the time be unknown, and the event delayed. Though the interim of His absence be lengthened out, He will surely come again.

II. The Distribution of the Pounds (v. 13).

These pounds represent Christ's gifts to His servants. When Christ ascended He gave gifts to men (Eph. 4:7, 8, 11, 12). To each servant was given the same amount, showing that to all a certain gift has been given and therefore all will be held responsible for its use. The distribution was made by the sovereign. The servants did not choose as to whether they would have a gift or the amount of the gift. It was also a purposeful distribution. They were to put their gifts to use during His absence. What the noblemen demanded was faithfulness. The pounds were to be used for the master, not for the selfish enjoyment of the servant. Our business is to use all our gifts for Jesus Christ.

III. The Rebellious Citizens (v. 14).

They hated him and sent messengers after him, notifying him of their refusal to be subject to him. This pictures the unbelief of the Jews after Christ's ascension and their repudiation of His rule. It also pictures the unbelieving world in its hatred and rejection of Christ. How wicked is this world—how violently it hates Jesus!

IV. The Accounting (vv. 15-27).

1. Its Certainty. Christ will surely bring everyone to account for the use made of his gifts. It is appointed unto men once to die, and after that the judgment. Men may go on in proud unbelief and rebellion, but God never forgets. He has appointed a day in which He will judge the world (Acts 17:31).

2. Time (v. 15). It will take place when Jesus comes back to the earth. At that time He will summon His servants and reckon with them. This will take place when He has received His kingdom. He will receive His kingdom when he asks the Father (Ps. 2:8). That He delays His asking is His long-suffering mercy, extending grace to as many as will receive Him as Saviour and Lord.

3. Rewards Given for Faithfulness (vv. 16-19). (1) The first report (vv. 16, 17). The pound had gained ten pounds. He did not say "I have made ten pounds," but "Thy pound hath gained ten pounds." He recognized the Lord's ownership. To this the Lord replied by commendation. He praised him and promoted him. He was made ruler over ten cities. (2) The second report (v. 18). In this case the pound had gained five pounds. He did not get the Lord's commendation for he had not done so well, but he was appointed to a place of rulership over five cities. The reward in each case was proportioned to faithfulness during the Lord's absence. The principle of reward was shown to be that faithfulness in very small things prepares for larger responsibilities. This principle finds application all through life and will doubtless obtain throughout eternity.

4. Judgment upon the Unfaithful (vv. 20-27). (1) His report (vv. 20, 21). This report was entirely bad. He had not put the pound to use, but laid it away throwing the blame upon the Lord. He asserted that the character of the Lord was such as to produce fear. Men are failing today in their service because they have wrong conceptions of Christ. (2) Condemnation (vv. 22, 23). The wicked servant is judged out of his own mouth. His excuse increased his guilt. He is called wicked. He doubtless regarded himself as unfortunate. To fail to use our opportunities to serve Christ is the basest wickedness. In the judgment the sinner's excuse will be his undoing. (3) Stripped of the pound (vv. 24-26). To fail to use one's gifts means to lose them. One of the losses of the next world will be the deprivation of what we have now. (4) Warning (v. 27). Those who reject Christ, refusing to submit to His authority shall share the same deprivation as those who are unfaithful in His service.

Jesus Teaching in the Temple
Luke 20:19-26; 21:1-4

Golden Text:—"Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's."—Luke 20:25.

The popularity of Jesus after the triumphal entry greatly troubled the rulers of Israel. He met their wicked challenge as to His authority in such a skillful way as to place them under condemnation for their unbelief. This condition was accentuated by the parable of the householder (Luke 20:9-18) which made it clear that the wicked husbandmen represented them in the murderous plot against Him, and that their schemes would result in their utter undoing.

I. The Question of Paying Tribute (20:19-26).

1. Spies Sent to Entrap Jesus (v. 20). These men were too cowardly to do this themselves, so they employed underlings to do their mean work while they hid away. This diabolical method is employed today in political and religious life. Many times questions are raised under the guise of sincerity, when the real purpose is to do mischief.

2. Wicked Flattery (v. 21). They complimented His truthful teaching, His impartiality and courage. They certified to His faithfulness even to that extent that He would face Caesar himself. This compliment was true, though insincerely given. Back of this flattery was the base purpose to destroy Jesus. Many today praise to the face in order to stab in the back.

3. The Cunning Question (vv. 22-26). "Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar or no?" At this time the Jews were galling under the yoke of the Roman government. To have answered this question either by Yes or No would have involved difficulties. To have answered Yes, would have conveyed the impression of endorsing all that the Roman government did. To have answered No, would have at once brought him into conflict with the government. It is not always an easy matter for a Christian to determine his right relation to civil government. Christ's reply to this question properly understood and applied is the final word on the subject. Until the civil authorities demand that which is a violation of God's law we are bound to render unto them obedience. Render unto Caesar the things that are due him within the realm of the rights of government. But while Christ's answer sets forth their duties to civil authorities, He used the occasion to impress upon them their duties to God. Render unto God the things that are God's. Man bears the image of God. Therefore he should honor and serve Him. Since he enjoys God's protection and care, it is his duty to own allegiance to Him, yield his life to Him in service, worship and praise. Everyone who enjoys the benefits of civil government is obliged to pay the taxes which are necessary for the support of that government, and everyone who receives God's favor is placed under a like obligation unto Him.

II. Jesus' Estimate of Gifts (21: 1-4).

1. Jesus Watching the People Giving (v. 1). He was greatly interested in observing the way the people cast their gifts into the treasury. Perhaps there is no more vital index to one's character than the way he behaves before the Lord's treasury. Jesus sits over against every treasury and knows every dollar cast into it. He knows how the dollars come and how they go. No trickery can deceive Him. He not only knows this in the church, but He knows it in the business world.

2. The Rich Gave of Their Abundance (vv. 1, 4). They no doubt gave much but in proportion to what they had left their gifts were small. The size of the gift is not primarily to be measured by how much it is, but how much has the giver left.

3. A Widow Gave Two Mites (vv. 2, 4). In value a mite was less than a cent. Though the two coins were of small value themselves, they represented her all—not merely her surplus, but her living. Let no one deceive himself by pretending to give the widow's mite, for to give the widow's mite means to give everything.

4. Jesus' Verdict (vv. 3, 4). He declared that she had given more than they all. Jesus looks into the heart and estimates our gifts not by their size but by the motives prompting them.

"And He must needs go through Samaria"—John 4:4.

Was it a geographical "must needs" hat took Jesus that day through Samaria on His journey from Judea to Galilee? No, it was not. The easy and natural route lay by the Jordan valley on the east, while the route the Master took was a rugged, toilsome, mountain road. We are told that "Jesus being wearied with His journey sat thus on the well." We glean further from the narrative that he was hungry (v. 8), thirsty (v. 7), and feeling the force of the noonday sun in a tropical land (v. 6).

No, that was not a geographical, but a compassionate "must needs." He had seen in vision that poor, sin-defiled, yet hungry-hearted Samaritan woman, and with a heart throbbing with love for lost souls He "must needs" go that way, at whatever added cost to himself, to reach and save her.

Have you not noticed that little word "must," as it runs through the earthly life of the man Christ Jesus? "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" "I must work the works of Him that sent me," "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also"; "The Son of man must suffer . . . and be killed, and rise again." That "must" tells us of a compelling power all through our Saviour's life—the power of devotion to His Father's will and passion for souls. His whole life was controlled by a single purpose, and He set His face like a flint toward its accomplishment.

Is there any "must" like this in our lives? Have we the same fixed purpose, the same impelling power gripping and guiding us? Or, is our life merely one of easy drifting with the current, and is our activity but the following of the line of least resistance?

What need today for more forceful lives, set to a lofty purpose for God, and held firmly thereto in the face of the many temptations to compromise which a soft and easy-going age presents! The mission fields supremely need such men and women. The Boards are seeking them. They are all too few and hard to find.

WILL YOU PRAY THIS PRAYER?

"Stir me, Oh! stir me, Lord, till all my heart
Is filled with strong compassion for lost souls,
Till Thy compelling "must" drives me to pray,
Till Thy constraining love reaches to the poles
Far North and South, in burning, deep desire,
Till East and West are caught in Love's great fire."

A member of the American Presbyterian Mission, Tabriz, Persia, sends home a vivid picture of fanatical worshipers during the Moslem month of mourning which is observed by a certain Moslem sect in Persia in commemoration of the massacre of Hussein, grandson of Mohammed, near Kerbela in Mesopotamia.

The Editor of this Department in the Costume of a Bedouin Arab Chief. Photo taken on his visit to the Near East three years ago. Note the sword, the long muzzle-loading musket and the two large pistols thrust into the girdle.

The ceremony takes the form of a great parade, each ward of the city sending about one hundred men. Each group starts in its own section of the city, and all finally meet in the open square in front of the governor's palace. The idea seems to be that the more bodily pain the participants suffer, the greater will be their reward in the world to come. With this in view they conceive the most gruesome tortures to inflict upon themselves.

First comes a group of breast beaters, stripped to the waist, who chant in unison and beat their breasts incessantly for several hours until they become black and blue and often bleed. Next comes a chain gang, also bared to the waist, carrying in their hands scourges made of chains, with which they beat their own backs, first over one shoulder, and then over the other, until the blood runs. Then one sees men with padlocks locked through the flesh of their breasts, and others with hooks similarly inserted, and also wearing crowns of spikes pushed down into their heads. Perhaps the most gruesome of all are the head cutters, dressed in white and with shaven heads. These carry sharp swords, and as they march along they swing the swords up over their heads and gash their scalps until the blood flows down over their white garments. Many of these men drop from loss of blood and not a few die. The spectators are usually dressed in black and have a paste of ashes on their faces. They weep and wail as the devotees pass by, and catch their own tears in peculiarly shaped bottles, believing that every tear shed for Hussein will turn into a precious jewel for them in Paradise, and that with these jewelled tears they may ransom themselves from their sins on the last day.

The writer adds: "This description cannot convey to you the awfulness of the ceremony, nor the fanaticism of the devotees, but it will give you some idea of the tremendous odds against which we are fighting."

FRUITS OF CHINESE FAMINE RELIEF

Dr. C. E. Scott, a well-known Presbyterian missionary of Shantung, China, who took a most effective part in the relief of famine and flood-sufferers in North China, a year ago, writes concerning the encouraging opportunities and results growing out of that terrible calamity. One paragraph of his letter reads: "During these weeks I have preached many times to crowds of villagers on the threshing floors—two or three hundred at a time, seated or squatting or standing in the open winter air, all respectful and apparently interested. In one crowd was an old widow whose nephew, the head of her family, had beaten her hands almost to a pulp, so that she could not hold her Bible. This was the reason alleged by the nephew, who irrationally hated Christ. I washed her dirty hands and salved the skin-broken and welted places with mentholatum. Never before have I been able to get in touch with so many village headmen. They came in delegations to see me. They are friendly and cordial. I preached the straight gospel to them and gave them tracts."

A CHANGED LIFE AND ITS INFLUENCE

In Kavirondo, Kenya Colony, East Africa, where the C. M. S. is at work, there has been a noticeable movement toward Christianity. Perhaps the greatest factor in bringing this about has been the example of the remarkably transformed lives of those who were already Christians. The C. M. S. magazine tells the story of one of these converts, Mulama, half-brother to the paramount chief, Mumia, who on his baptism relinquished eleven of his twelve wives, thus completely reversing the custom of the land. For about two years after this, the tribe had before their eyes this striking, and to them, strange example. Their chief sought honor not in a large harem, but in walking justly and righteously before his people. His decisions in the native courts of law were no longer to be bought, but every case was settled on its merits. He gave his people an entirely new conception of what home life meant and delighted to do honor to his wife.

BAD GOVERNMENT IN THE NEW HEBRIDES

The missionaries in this far-away group of South Sea Islands are crying out against the wrongs and injustices which prevail under the present "Two Masters" government of France and Britain. They are at times obliged to wait as long as five months for letters from home, because these letters are left to haphazard after they reach the capital of the islands. The inter-island steamer calls at mission stations only at long and irregular intervals, and apparently leaves letters just anywhere to suit its convenience. Provisions also are subject to the same hazard and delays, often causing real privation. Furthermore, the existing laws are not enforced, so that even the natives ridicule the idea that they are governed at all. Firearms and ammunition, although specifically prohibited, are freely sold to the natives. The demoralizing liquor traffic, also prohibited, goes on as if there were no law. A writer in an Australian newspaper expresses himself vigorously on the state of chaos that prevails in the islands, and declares that there is no group in the Pacific worse governed than the New Hebrides.

A STRONG DOSE FOR THE "MODERNIST"

A Christian chief in the New Hebrides was being ridiculed by a "modern" European for his implicit belief in the Bible. The chief listened without comment to the boasted superior knowledge of the Bible detractor, but when the critic had finished he quietly replied: "If it were not for my faith in the Bible your body would be in my cooking oven, and I should be feasting on you tomorrow."

THE UNFINISHED TASK IN PERSIA

Dr. R. E. Speer, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, wrote from Persia on his visit there in 1922: "One thing has been a wonderful revelation to us, and that is—the appalling extent of our unaccomplished task in Persia. This whole field of northern Persia has been left to our church for missionary occupation. There is little hope that any one else will come in to aid in its evangelization. Across this whole stretch of 560 miles east and west, and an equal distance north and south, there is not a single resident Christian worker save at Teheran on the west and Meshed on the east. Passing eastward one crosses plain after plain dotted with villages in most of which the gospel has never been preached.

A FORCEFUL DEFENSE OF THE BIBLE

The story is told of a Christian chief in the New Hebrides who was being ridiculed by a "modern" European because he (the chief) read and believed the Bible. The chief after listening quietly to the boasted superior knowledge of the Bible's critic surprised him with the following reply: "If it were not for my faith in the Bible your body would be in my cooking oven, and I should be feasting on you tomorrow!"

PARTY GOVERNMENT PASSING

Chicago Journal of Commerce

Since the advent of the primary election system of nominating candidates for public office the country has not only seen an increasing weakening of party ties and numerous revolts from party authority by the voters, but also as a natural result representation in the House and the Senate of different parts of the country by senators and congressmen devoted first and principally to certain sections and interests, rather than to the welfare of the Union as a whole. We have, to a very considerable extent, cherished groups devoted to labor, to agriculture, and to other classified interests regardless of all else, and often in economic conflict with all other interests, and seeking through political acts, unfair advantage over them.

Is this "the first dawning" referred to by Washington in his Farewell Address of "attempts to alienate portions of our country from the rest," and to "enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts"?

However that may be, our national trend has been more and more toward a shift from the representative form of government for our parties to the methods of a democracy—that is, to the selection of candidates from United States senators down to county officials, by direct vote of the people, as in a pure democracy instead of by conventions composed of selected representatives of the people, as in a republic.

It occurs to us that in this general change of party methods, compelled by law in most of the states, is to be found the root from which has developed the decay of party loyalty which plainly threatens to change our Government from one party to one of groups and "blocs," each loyal to certain interests rather than to the general welfare of the whole Union.

Under the convention system of nominating party candidates we had progressive selections of delegates from the people to choose candidates after careful counsel and comparisons of fitness. The people of a township or ward selected delegates to a county convention, which in turn nominated men for county office and selected delegates to represent the county in senatorial, congressional and state conventions. The higher the office, the higher the grade of intelligence of those in both parties who selected the candidates—and we may fairly say, the better the candidates selected. But under the primary election system we give in our party affairs equal power to the most ignorant and unfit voter with the capable and intelligent citizen. Inevitably the standards of official representation have been greatly lowered by this free play for prejudice, passion and ignorance in a party's government. Demagogues could wish no better system on which to ride to power and continue in power.

THE MORALS OF TODAY

Rev. William J. Dawson, D. D., the widely known pastor-evangelist of England and the United States, the author of many books—several on English literature, and now pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Newark, N. J., has written an article for the December 14 issue of The Christian Century entitled "Our Changing Morals," which bristles with statements of the most ominous character, and from which we quote the closing words:

"Our school children today know more about the sexual instincts and their perversion than our grandparents knew at eighty. Are they the better for the knowledge? I cannot pretend to think that they are. I would not venture to say that they are less moral; possibly in knowing more of evil they are better guarded against it; but it is not a good thing to be sophisticated at sixteen, and there is tragic truth in Landor's lines—

'And modesty, who, when she goes,
Is gone forever.'

"The position, as I see it then, is this: for large sections of society the ancient sanctions of conduct have disappeared. Marriage for many persons is merely a system of consecutive polygamy. In any fashionable hotel, women, well-born and not ill-educated, can be seen, who in dress and behavior ape the manners of courtesans. Parental restraint has been relaxed, and indeed all forms of restraint. The idea of having a good time is the one gospel that is popular, and if it leads to gross license there is no public opinion to rebuke it. The church, not only in great cities, but even in small-town communities, plays an insignificant part in shaping public sentiment. Puritan ethics are despised as antiquated. Puritan virtues are stodgy. The one passion is to be emancipated, and in the process not only are many unjust fetters justly flung aside, but also the nobler restraints which made for plain living and high thinking, for balance and sobriety of thought, for dignity and equipoise of character. Nor can we dismiss these things as a passing phase of human conduct; it has gone on too long and is indicative of a deliberate revolution.

"Will the tide run its course and turn back, flowing as far as it has ebbed? No man can answer that question. But one thing is certain; unless all past history deceives us, the dissolution of moral bonds has always been the precursor of those castastrophes which have destroyed empires, plunged mankind back into barbarism, and overthrown the civilization built by the immortal sacrifices of patriots, saints and martyrs."

CRY FROM THE DEPTHS

"Out of the depths."—Ps. 130.

I. A Sad Condition (v. 1). "In the depths."

What a havoc Sin and Satan have made. Every step a sinner takes is downward.

II. A Solemn Part (v. 2). "Who shall stand?"

Here we find conviction. The heart and conscience are at work. Who shall stand in that day? Good works do not cover up the past. There is "no difference," for all have sinned.

III. A Saving Truth (v. 3). "Forgiveness with thee."

The best news ever told out to a sinful world. Be it known unto you all.

IV. A Sound Foundation (v. 7). "Plenteous redemption."

The slave emancipated. The price paid. Not silver or gold; but His most precious blood.

V. A Steadfast Faith (v. 5). "His Word."

"How do you know you are saved?" is asked sometimes. The only answer is, "I have His Word for it."—Samuel E. Dutton.

MOSES' CHOICE

"By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharoah's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God" —Heb. 11:24-26.

I. His Renunciation.

(a) What He Renounced.

1. Princely Honors. Few things are more attractive than honor. Ease, time, health and even life are forfeited for it.
2. Court pleasures. Those things which gratify the senses, minister to selfish desires.
3. Kingdom riches. Treasures and grandeur of wealthy empire, for ages the most distinguished nation.

1. At maturity. When most capable of rightly estimating them and after years spent in their midst, conscious of their great attractions.
2. When in position to enjoy them. In the zenith of manhood with carnal reason arguing strongly and not in the decline of years.

II. His Choice.

(a) Of Associating with God's People, in preference to rulers, statesmen and princes—absurd to eye of sense, but not to faith.

1. Wisest companions. Their wisdom heavenly in origin, saving in influence, and invaluable in price.
2. Most honorable companions. King's children.
3. Useful companions. "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise."
4. Companions forever.

(b) Of the Afflictions of God's People. God's people enter the kingdom through much tribulation.

(c) Of the Reproach of Christ. As Abraham's seed they were expectants of the Messiah, worshipers of the true God and despised for it.

III. The Principle Which Influenced Him.

"By faith." Believing the promise and what was revealed to the patriarchs, he estimated rightly the things of this world.

He was aware honors, pleasures and riches were:

1. Unsatisfying in their nature.
2. Uncertain as to possession.
3. Evanescent in duration.
4. Often evil in influence.

By faith he esteemed them not, but looked to the recompense of reward graciously promised by God, though future, yet certain and eternal.

1. An Act—"Study."
2. A Purpose—"to show thyself approved unto God."
3. A Product—"a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."
4. A Result—"rightly dividing the word of truth."

D. L. MOODY ON GENESIS 3:9

"And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?"

A man once said to me, "How do you know that God put that question to Adam?"

The best answer that I can give is, Because He has put it to me many a time. I doubt whether there has ever been a son or daughter of Adam who has not heard that voice ringing through the soul many a time. Who am I? What am I? Where am I going? So let us put the question to ourselves personally, Where am I? Not in the sight of man—that is of very little account; but where am I in the sight of God?

PHOEBE

Romans 16: 1, 2

Notice a few characteristics of this good woman, of whom the Apostle writes with evident admiration and regard.

1. Kindness of heart. She was noted for her kindness and sympathy; she had evidently won the affection and regard of her poorer brethren and sisters at Corinth.

Some of the new converts were probably very poor indeed. Some of them were probably slaves, and had to bear trial, persecution, and unkindness, because of their new faith in Christ Jesus.

In Phoebe they found a friend ever ready to sympathize with them, ever ready to comfort and help and cheer them in the midst of their trials and sorrows. Paul could indeed say of her, "She hath been a succourer of many."

2. Generosity of Disposition. She was always ready to show hospitality to her poorer brethren and sisters in Christ, fellow-believers, fellow-converts in the Christian faith; willing always to help them, and to be of any service to them, so that they might "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Paul well knew and admired her generous disposition, for he says: "She hath been a succourer of many and of myself also."

3. Joy in having this valuable and precious Epistle committed to her care by the Apostle and of having the honor of taking it with her from Corinth to Rome. The Apostle also writes words of commendation, requesting the Christian converts at Rome to receive her. How gladly they would do this when they knew that Phoebe was a sincere and true friend of the Apostle; and what joy Phoebe would have in delivering the messages sent by the Apostle to them, and in helping and encouraging these new converts in the Christian faith!

"REDEEMING THE TIME"

One hour spent in meditation
On the Book of books divine;
One hour spent in contemplation
Of its messages sublime,
Helps the work of transformation,
Aids the Master in His plan
To effect the restoration
Of His chief creation—man.

One hour spent in earnest pleading
At the Father's mercy-seat;
One hour spent in simply waiting
At the Saviour's blessed feet,
Or, in seeking for the lost one
On the hard, bleak hills of sin—
That will help in re-creation
Of the Master's life within.

Do not while away the moments,
Unimproved let time pass by,
Acting as though hours and minutes
Later on would backward fly;
Time once passed there's no recalling,
And life's hours at best are few,
Help the Master then in bringing
His lost image back to you.

—H. J. Bryce.

D. L. MOODY SAID—

I have traveled a good deal, but I never found a happy backslider in my life. I never knew a man who was really born of God that ever could find the world satisfy him afterward. Do you think the prodigal son was satisfied in that foreign country? Ask the prodigals to-day if they are truly happy. You know they are not. "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked."

* * *

Joseph Parker of London uttered something that I thought was splendid in regard to the thirty-fifth of Isaiah, where it says: "Sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Take up an old dictionary, he said, and once in a while you will come across a word marked "obsolete." The time is coming, he said, when these two words, "sorrow" and "sighing" shall be obsolete. Sorrow and sighing shall flee away, to be no more. Thank God for the outlook!

LIVING EPISTLES

"Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men."—2 Cor. 3:2.

The church never knew Christ after the flesh; the only Christ the church knows is the Christ that the world rejected, and is now in heaven; and therefore the church should be in entire abstraction from the world, to manifest what its Head is. And thus the church should be Christ's epistle of commendation. Note the force of the word "epistle." The world ought to see what Christ is in you, as the law was seen written on the tables of stone, a living epistle, "known and read of all men." And the character of our walk will be greatly deepened, according to the extent we are realizing what His grace has done for us, and has called us to.—J. N. Darby.

THE UPLIFTED SAVIOUR

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John 12:32

From this saying of our Lord three facts emerge:

I. The first is, that the lifting up of Christ upon the cross was a necessary condition of man's salvation. That this is what our Lord primarily meant there can be no doubt. "This he said, signifying what death he should die," John says. Nor does John's interpretation stand alone. Our Lord Himself had said to Nicodemus, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of Man be lifted up," and the serpent was a type of the Lord, not as one holy, harmless, separate from sinners, but of the Lord as the sin-offering, the Righteous One made sin, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him. In other words, the "lifting up" of our Lord evidently meant not only His death, but His death as bearing our sins in His own body on the tree. And this He declares to be the necessary condition of the drawing of all men to Himself. Man, then, needs atonement. He is not only diseased, but guilty; not only meriting pity, but worthy of blame; not only a traveler fallen on life's highway, but a rebel and a breaker of his Maker's laws. It was not that Christ chose the path of death as one path of many. It was the only way, if man was to be saved. Law must be honored, justice must be satisfied, eternal right propitiated, before eternal mercy could have its way. If the Lover of men desired to people His heaven with Adam's fallen sons He must take their place, bear their blame, and die their death. If He did this, and only if, He could draw all men unto Him.

II. It was a necessary condition to men's salvation that Christ should be "lifted up" in gospel preaching. That there was this double meaning in the phrase He used seems clear. It is linked, as we have seen, with the story of the serpent in the wilderness; and the condition upon which healing came to the dying Israelite was that he should "look and live." But if he was to look, the object of his gaze must be visible. Hence the pole, the lofty standard on which hung the serpent of brass. So is it with the sin-poisoned race. The Saviour must be made visible ere salvation can be obtained. "Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved; but how shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Is the full force of this realized? What are we doing in the matter?

III. The third fact is one to hearten. If Christ be lifted up, men of all conditions shall be drawn to Him. Somewhere throughout the world the Holy Spirit will work as human lips shall proclaim the story of redeeming love. "If I be lifted up"—that is the necessary condition, "I will draw all men unto me"—that is the certain result.—E. Poole-Connor.

Truth Illuminated

By Shafts from Various Quarters

FAITH

Faith is more than a mental decision; it is a surrender of the will. It is more than a verdict; it is the execution of the verdict. It is of momentous importance to remember that the very core of faith is motion—a movement of the will toward the holy Lord. The act of faith is the yielding of the personal life to the God who is revealed to us in Jesus Christ our Lord. And the life of faith is the constant repetition of that act of surrender until the repeated acts become an attitude and every choice and will in life is stamped with the pleasure and fear of God.—J. H. Jowett.

GODLY CHARACTER COUNTS

A retired minister some time since was pruning one of his apple trees. He suddenly became dizzy, and fell a short distance to the ground. His wife, looking out of the window, saw him on his knees. "Father," she called to him, "why are you doing your praying out there?" It is well known that the minister's devotional life was carefully nurtured. The wife did not think there could be any other explanation of the fact he was on his knees, than that he was praying. The lesson is surely one to be emphasized. It means everything—the way our friends instinctively interpret our actions.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PRESENT POSSESSIONS

Most men have the experience of boomers who hurried into the free lands of Oklahoma. They waited patiently in rain and cold on the border until the day appointed for entrance, and then there was such a rush that the trains could not accommodate them. But after a few days the trains were just as unable to accommodate those who were hurrying to get out of the barren territory. Their dreams of happiness became a nightmare of disappointment. And so men wait and work on the borderland of wealth or fame, until the time arrives when they are permitted to enter upon what they have longed to attain, when lo! they find that their pleasure was more in the pursuit than in the possession. Not a few have the experience of poor Tarpolia, who agreed to let the Sabine soldiers in through a gate of Rome if they would give her the things on their arms; and with their golden bracelets they flung their shields also upon her, and crushed her to death. The possession of gold often brings with it the weight of care and responsibility, which crushes the life out of its owner. Not so the riches of grace and glory which every Christian may have. Like the Queen of Sheba, so far from being disappointed, we often feel that the half was never told.—A. C. Dixon.

On invitation, forty pledged themselves to more careful spiritual training of children and a greater recognition of God in their homes. Mr. Dixon assisted Rev. H. B. Gebhart, the pastor of the Presbyterian church. He next went to assist Rev. W. R. Johnson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Galveston, Tex.

Rev. Norman R. Curtis writes: "Am in the midst of an interesting meeting at Hayden, Ariz. Meetings are held in the M. E. church, which for months has had no pastor. The need in Arizona is great. The people are hungry for the gospel. Nearly 5,000 people in this district have no Protestant minister."

G. A. DeFlon writes: "Since September 24, when I started my work in Kansas, I have had four meetings and I am glad to say God has been with us and blessed us in the salvation of lost souls and many of God's children have been blessed. In January I start my work in Nebraska, at Red Cloud."

Walter G. Waltermire, Peoria, Ill., called at the MOODY MONTHLY office recently. He said, "It is now some 18 years since I have been a student in the Institute. I have been, during the past year, in 22 revival campaigns. Have recently moved to Peoria, Ill., from where I will continue my work."

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Vinaroff report their meeting at Great Bend, Kan., opened with great power from God. On the first invitation eight persons accepted Christ. The church was packed to its capacity every night for the first week. They were helping Evangelist W. D. Hamilton. The meetings were held in the Methodist church.

A great spiritual blessing resulted. The party next went to Marlow, Okla., in a union tabernacle campaign which started off with splendid spirit.

Rev. Luther Arthur, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Huntington Beach, Calif., writes: "This church feels it has been greatly helped by the two weeks evangelistic services just conducted by Rev. Harry O. Anderson. Many souls have been saved and others have had their zeal renewed. In the nativity service twenty-two states and three foreign countries were represented. Truly if the gospel is preached in California it reaches the world."

Dr. and Mrs. Lau report having just finished their fifth year of evangelistic work among the mountain people of eastern Kentucky. God has greatly blessed this work in the saving of many souls, and a good number of Sunday-schools and churches have been organized. Their next work will be in Florida, making their headquarters at Auburndale.

S. D. Goodale reports having closed a very fine meeting at Selden, Kan., December 17. There was an unusual awakening among church members and many outsiders were reached and brought in. In several cases whole families came out for Christ. They were next to begin a union meeting at Ord, Neb., during January.

O. R. Lamper, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Lucerne, Ind., writes: "We have just closed a fine two weeks meeting here with the Prestons helping. The church has been greatly strengthened and a goodly number of souls were saved. Mr. Preston spoke on the closing night. He gave the story of his life as an actor, and the account of his conversion with telling effect. The church and community have been greatly blessed."

T. LeRoy Muir writes from Starlight, Pa.: "Have just returned East from my trip into Arizona, and am conducting an old-fashioned revival here. The revival fires are lighted and souls are being saved, including prominent men and women. My next effort will be in Dayton, O., and will be in the nature of a follow-up campaign to the Billy Sunday Tabernacle meetings. My headquarters are at Roxbury, N. Y."

During the late Fall Rev. D. L. Cole, an evangelist of Los Angeles, Calif., a former student of the Institute, and whose good work is best known in the South and West, concluded a most successful revival meeting at the Norwood Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala. As a result of this meeting great and lasting good was wrought, and a genuine revival was experienced in the hearts of the people. Mr. Hugh Ellis, senior member of the well known law firm of Ellis and Matthew, who had practiced his profession there for twenty-one years, was converted and recently gave up his law practice, and is now a student at the Institute in the Bible Course. He is preparing to enter the ministry next November. Mr. Ellis joined the North Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, last November. Also, as a result of Mr. Ellis' coming he has brought 140 new subscriptions for the MOODY MONTHLY.

WHEN THE STUDENT VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT WAS BORN

A stirring account of the wonderful early days of the Student Volunteer Movement, which had its inception under the fostering care of Mr. Moody, was given by Mr. Robert P. Wilder, general secretary of the movement, in an address to the student body early in December, in which he traced its mighty development from that day to the present.

Later a letter from Mr. Wilder was received by Dr. R. H. Glover, director of the Institute's Missionary Course, which contained a paragraph from a letter written by Dr. D. B. Towner to Mr. Wilder in 1909, reading as follows:

"How marvelously He has used the boys that met for that first college convention at Mt. Hermon. I count it a great honor to have been present and to have met these men of God when they were dedicated to the Christian world, and to have watched their development and borne them up to God in prayer as they have been doing His work so faithfully and well."

Syllabus for Old Testament Study, by Rev. John R. Sampey, D.D., LL.D.

This book consists largely of scholarly outlines and analyses of the books of the Old Testament and they are remarkably well done. The Most Wonderful Story, by Amy Le Feuvre.

The simple story of our Lord's life upon earth has been well arranged to interest the very little ones. While the book has been written for parents to read to children of three to four and upward, the beautiful illustrations, clear type, and intensely fascinating manner in which the story is told, admirably adapt it for placing in the hands of the boys and girls of the Junior department for their own Sunday reading. For primary teachers who want material to assist them in the art of story telling, no better life of Christ could be provided.

Out for Character. Twenty-six of our leading clergymen, college presidents, physicians and other recognized authorities, have each addressed a brief, pointed appeal to the young men of our day in a most attractive manner. The prevailing text might be said to be "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap," and the commanding conclusion is that a man's greatest enemy is himself. The chapters were written to warn men and women of the penalties of evil living and are especially timely for the loose and lawless period through which our young people are now passing. Every teacher and leader of the young will find a vital use for this book.

Church Street, by Jean Carter Cochran.

This unusual book by the granddaughter of the well known religious book publisher of a former generation, Robert Carter, does not disappoint those looking for the pure and interesting in literature. The editor of the Outlook speaks of this book as an antidote for Main Street, and Zona Gale in the Yale Review says that it is the forerunner of the American novel of tomorrow, which will portray the beauty of commonplace living, as the novel of today uncovers its ugliness.

The book is sketchy, but it gives a view of Christian home life in a New Jersey village that is most refreshing. May the day soon come when such books displace the prurient fiction of the present.

The Annotated Bible—Daniel to Malachi, by Rev. A. C. Gaebelein, D. D., Editor of Our Hope.

The many readers of Dr. Gaebelein's books will be gratified to learn that he has now completed The Annotated Bible through the Old Testament and nearly completed it through the New Testament. The broad analysis he has made of each of the books is of great value to the Bible student, and this particular volume is enriched by an introduction on the authenticity of Daniel, brief indeed, but sufficiently comprehensive for the purpose. Dr. Gaebelein's interpretation of the prophets as a whole, is a task for which he is better fitted than any contemporary American author whom we happen to know.

An Introduction to Mahayana Buddhism, by W. M. McGovern, Ph. D.

This book is designed as a guide to Buddhism for cultured readers and students of comparative religion. It deals more particularly with the so-called northern school of Buddhism (Mahayana), prevalent in China, Japan, Nepal, Tibet and Mongolia, as distinct from the southern school (Hinayana), which flourishes in Ceylon, Burma and Siam. The doctrine, philosophy and psychology of Buddhism are successively discussed, followed by a brief history of the religion, its founder and its later sects. The author is lecturer on Japanese and Chinese in the School of Oriental Studies at the University of London.

Science and Supposition in Evolution, Geology and Astronomy, by D. A. Sommer.

The writer distinguishes between supposition and fact in the sciences indicated in the title. He has made a careful study of the works of Darwin, Le Conte, and Young, and quotes statements from these scientists wherever a theory is implied rather than an actual law. His argument would have been strengthened if he had been familiar with the more recent writings of George McCready Price and the latest contributions in the field of astronomy, since present day research in both geology and astronomy presents a constructive as well as destructive program for the overthrow of evolution.

A Brief Bible History, by James Oscar Boyd, Ph. D. and Rev. John Gresham Machen, D. D.

This book of joint authorship undertaken by these two well-known professors of Princeton Seminary, representing respectively the Old and the New Testament departments will be a valuable help as an introductory history in a teacher's training class. The purpose is to present a brief survey of the historical books of the Bible while the questions at the conclusion of each chapter adapt it especially to class work. Fifteen lessons are given over to the annals of the Israelites and twenty-three to the life of Christ and the development of the church.

The Career of a Cobbler, the Life Story of William Carey, by Margaret T. Applegarth.

In presenting this fresh little volume Miss Applegarth adds a real gem to her many fascinating missionary stories. It is altogether unique in its style—a dialogue between two Hindu friends in which one tells the other the life story of William Carey in terms of Hindu thought and expression. At the start the listener shows his proud contempt for the cobbler, but after frequent ejaculations of surprise and disapproval he gradually yields to the spell of Carey's wonderful life, and finally he is completely conquered and kneels humbly with his friend in supplication to the God of the great white "Sahib."

Parenthood and Child Nurture, by Edna Dean Baker, M. A.

The author has compiled this work from the pages of her rich experience as president of the National Kindergarten and Elementary College. As it is a book especially prepared for a parents training class it should perform an effective service in this day when so much of our juvenile criminality is being traced to the home. Certain it is the parents need to be instructed in the task of child training, and if churches and Sunday-schools have not already an organized class for this purpose the young parent may be greatly benefited by a private reading of this book. Its scope includes the physical, mental, social and spiritual life of the child from birth to twelve years of age, and it contains some helpful suggestions regarding songs, stories, and other material suitable for the child.

The Master's Method of Winning Men, by Rev. Dwight Mallory Pratt, D. D.

In writing the above book Dr. Pratt has made a most helpful contribution to the rapidly growing library on personal evangelism. It bears transparent evidence that he was not only a keen reader of human nature, but also a masterful and enthusiastic soul-winner himself. The book is well adapted to stimulate interest in the subject which it treats. It is written in the popular rather than the technical style, and presents the subject from the point of view of psychology and character analysis. Students and teachers of the subject will find this book richly suggestive in the many personal experiences and types of character dealt with.

The New World of Islam, by Lothrop Stoddard.

This volume, by a Harvard professor unusually conversant with world conditions, follows closely upon his book entitled The Rising Tide of Color. Both books contain much that challenges thought. The present volume is a masterful review of the whole situation in the Near and Middle East under such headings as "Pan-Islamism," "Nationalism," "Economic and Social Changes," "European Imperialism, Bolshevism," etc. The book appears most opportunely at this time when world politics are focused upon the Near East as the storm center of the world, and its reading will contribute much to a broad understanding of the issues involved and to a true appraisal of a situation of peculiar gravity fraught with tremendous liabilities to the whole world.

Building a Successful Sunday School, by Rev. P. E. Burroughs, D. D.

This is a compliment to the former excellent book, The Present Day Sunday-school from the pen of the same author. Dr. Burroughs writes from a careful study and large experience in Sunday-school work and in this volume he has sensed some of the problems that arise in adapting organized Sunday-school methods to old church buildings. The chapters devoted to "Housing the Sunday-school" constitute a valuable contribution to the smaller schools who are endeavoring to make use of modern methods. A large portion of the book is given over to Sunday-school extension and the author's orderly and unique method of presentation will be appre-

What Will Take Place When Christ Returns? by F. E. Marsh.

This book received from Madame Labouchere, of 20 Grand Rue Montreux, Switzerland, is by a well-known author of the highest evangelical type.

He says that as there are twelve gates of pearl in the walls of the New Jerusalem, so there will be at least twelve events to take place when Christ comes back. All twelve events are interesting, but "The Prophetic Word Will be Verified," "Israel Will be Vivified," "The Earth Will be Beautified," "Christ Will be Satisfied," seem to be the most striking. The verb in each of the things is given in an alliterative style, as suggested by the titles referred to.

This book is particularly for the believer who longs for the realization of his hopes in connection with the return of the Lord.

Church School Administration, by E. Morris Fergusson.

The author has had years of experience in various types of Sunday-schools and in addition has been dealing with superintendents in Sunday-school conventions for about thirty years. His work is a valuable contribution to the study of our rapidly changing church school. He has not overlooked the situation and need in the small Sunday-school of the rural and frontier field but presents a program of advance that may be adapted to every size and condition of school. The historical introduction which characterizes each chapter will be particularly illuminating in explaining the circumstances which have evolved the highly organized departments of religious education from the one-room Sunday-school of the last generation. The final chapters on The Yearly Program and The School's Religion make this work unique and distinguish it from others of its kind, while the appendices and index make it a valuable reference book.

His Glory, by Rev. Grant Stroh.

What an hour of contact with the things of God is given in the perusal of this brochure! It is not a hurriedly written essay, nor is it a disquisition on the great theme which should frighten the busy Christian of the age in which we are living. The subject will likely interest few but the spiritual, but to them this small volume brings into view something that is not of ordinary conconsideration—"His glory."

"Christ's Pristine Glory," "Jehovistic Glory," "Incarnate Glory," "Present Glory," and "Kingdom Glory," give the subjects of the five chapters of the book. In our day of flabby theological thinking, when God is represented to us as a spineless being, how strengthening it is to have such a statement as this: "Absolute holiness is the characteristic which above all else distinguishes God from all of His creatures." The book is saturated with Bible teaching, and at the end of each chapter there is a group of passages of Scripture that have been used in that particular chapter.

We would to God that such booklets had the appreciation of tens of thousands of Christians, for thereby would the life of the church be uplifted and Christ's glory be manifested among men.

The Crescent in North-West China, by G. Findlay Andrew, O. B. E.

Notwithstanding the fairly extensive literature on the Moslem world there has been until very recently a great dearth of information about the Moslems in China, variously estimated all the way from five to twenty millions in number. The present admirable little volume, therefore renders a valuable service by its most interesting and instructive account of the Moslems of the most northwesterly province of Kansu, which is the stronghold of Islam in China. The author is a missionary of that region who has an intimate knowledge of the people about whom he writes. His tactful influence did much to prevent a Moslem uprising in Kansu during the Great War, and in recognition of his services the British Government conferred on him the Order of the British Empire. Mr. Andrew estimates that Kansu Province alone has three million Moslems, divided among three classes—Arabic, Salar (Turkish) and Mongolian. They present a field of peculiar difficulty to missionary work, as indicated by the almost utter lack of avowed converts as a result of years of labor by several devoted missionaries. The author pleads for larger effort and particularly for men who know Arabic and are familiar with Moslem peoples, to be set aside for exclusive work in that region.

The Life of Andrew Murray of South Africa, by Prof. J. Du Plessis.

As biography constitutes one of the richest veins of literature, so biography itself has been distinctly enriched by the addition of this life story of one whose spiritual influence has been more profoundly felt the world around than that of any other man of his generation. Andrew Murray lives in our thoughts along with Augustine, Thomas à Kempis and William Law. The blessing disseminated by the divinely touched pen of this South African saint can never be estimated. A great host of his spiritual children in every quarter of the globe, and from every walk of life, will rise up and call him blessed. The present large volume, written by one of his intimate colleagues in South Africa, presents a vivid portrait of the man Andrew Murray, and a complete sketch of his life work as pastor, ecclesiastical leader, educationalist and missionary statesman as well as author. To many readers who have known Andrew Murray only through his devotional books it will be a surprise to find that he was not only a man of prayer and saintliness, but at the same time a man of action and practical affairs.

The interest and value of the volume are further increased by twenty-one illustrations and a full list of the books and tracts written by Dr. Murray, reaching the almost incredible number of two hundred forty. Most of these were published both in English and in Dutch, and some of them in as many as fifteen languages.

Hunter Corbett: Fifty-six Years Missionary in China, by James R. E. Craighead.

Few missionaries in China have labored so long or won so great and deserved distinction as this stalwart Presbyterian who, three years ago, laid down his armor and entered into heavenly rest. His life story is told by his son-in-law, and what a story it is of early pioneer hardships, heathen persecutions, sad bereavements, sore trials and tests of faith, out of which came glorious victories and wonderful results!

Hunter Corbett will always stand out as a shining example of the evangelistic type of missionary. His long career was marked in an unusual degree by able and incessant preaching, extensive itineration and untiring zeal in personal work. His gifts and activities covered a wide range and he was at once organizer, evangelist, pastor, teacher, translator and writer. And withal he was a most effective deputational speaker at home, and during one furlough was accorded the rare honor of being made moderator of the General Assembly of his church. He lived to see remarkable results of the labors of himself and his colleagues. When he entered Shantung in 1864 there were barely twenty Christians in that province of 29,000,000. When he died in 1920 there were 32,478 communicants and catechumens.

China needs more missionaries of the Hunter Corbett type today when the trend is so strongly toward educational and social work rather than aggressive evangelism.

Grace, by Lewis Sperry Chafer.

This book deals with the deep things of God. The author has also written He That Is Spiritual, a book that aroused many a careless Christian and gave him to understand that he is not terrestrial or celestial, but spiritual.

In the book under consideration we are still in the realm of the spiritual. The truly spiritual Christian will find very little with which he is not in the most perfect agreement in the chapters on the seven fundamental facts of grace, the three divine motives in grace and the three principles which cannot co-exist with grace, nor will many find fault with the teaching of the safe-keeping in grace.

But when we come to the life under grace there is much that may arouse questions as to the author's conclusions at certain points. In the author's insistence on the doing away of the law of Moses and the law of the kingdom, there seems to be some ignoring of the evils that have come from antinomianism, as illustrated in the life and history of the Reformation church. If the law that belongs to the realm of grace were made more prominent it would seem to be something to be desired, for the author does not ignore such law, but is so obsessed with the idea of grace that he seems to ignore it.

The distinction between the law of Moses, the law of the kingdom and the law of grace, is most admirable, and clarifies the whole subject of law in a way that is practically new and withal obvious. With this author the law of Moses is utterly gone; in the sphere of grace the law of the kingdom has no place; the decalogue, the moral law, as laid down in the various legal provisions of the early history of Israel and the Sermon on the Mount, and the laws that really pertain to the kingdom that as yet have manifestation, do not obtain in the kingdom of grace. Anything that implies the energy of the flesh is offensive to the author; everything is of the free will and choice of God.

As to the things that are done away, the Sabbath is one that is selected for careful consideration, and at this point an unanswerable argument against the legalism of Seventh Day Adventism is made, yet there is a reproof of earnest Christian people who are insisting on a better observance of the Holy day.

It is hardly proper to say that the book is an answer to every form of modernism, for modernism is hardly in view at all, unless legalism is to be so called. The book is necessarily somewhat controversial, but is to be commended on that account in these lackadaisical days.

NEW PASTOR'S COURSE APPRECIATED

The Dean is receiving a number of letters of appreciation from the students in the new Pastors' Course for the work of the first term, recently completed. They all pronounce the course a success, and predict a bright future for it in the history of the Institute.

DO YOU WANT SUCCESS?

Dr. Gray's message, "Do You Want Success?" written originally for the Bible Success Band, has been translated into the Chinese and Korean languages. It reads as follows:

"Some good people think vaguely that the prosperity and success promised in Joshua 1:8 are to be realized only afar off and in some shadowy way in heaven. Or, if the words are at all associated with the present life, it is only in a "spiritual" sense, by which is meant something still shadowy. It does not occur to them that the context speaks of physical battles won, nations conquered, cities inhabited, fields tilled, harvests gathered, families multiplied, and all that.

"In other words, the thought that God knows and is interested in the course of our lives at this moment, and that there is any direct and intimate relation between obedience and success appears too material to be true.

"But this is atheism, though it is not meant to be, and it does the greatest injury to ourselves.

"Sometimes we excuse our unbelief by saying that the words in Joshua are an earthly blessings which the true child of God requires, that will not come to him who observes 'to do according to all that is written' in His Holy Word."

"To know and obey God's Word is the secret of physical health; is the secret of true knowledge, and of real mental development; is a means of getting along in the sense of pounds, shillings, and pence; promotes family happiness, and it brings honor to men. One can name no Old Testament promise and do not belong to New Testament Christians. But are they not paralleled by I Timothy 4:8, 'Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is?'

"The first promise that ever gripped the writer as a youth was Proverbs 3:6: 'In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.' It was staggering. It could not possibly mean what it said. He went around it as a kitten does its first saucer of milk. By and by he tasted it, and he put it to the test, and body, mind and soul have been nourished by it ever since.

FALL TERM GRADUATION EXERCISES

The evening exercises of Graduation Day, December 21, drew an audience which filled the Auditorium. They were marked by the deep interest and manifest presence of the Spirit of God which always characterize such occasions in the Institute. Somehow each always seems the best yet. There was a thrill and a sense of heavenly power and blessing that stirred the deeps in many hearts.

The address by Rev. Aquilla Webb, D.D., pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, Del., was practical, helpful and stimulating to an extent rarely heard,—a narrative of his experiences as an evangelistic pastor in St. Louis, Philadelphia and Wilmington, where in each case the church had never known what it was to have a gospel invitation given in the Sunday evening service. Before accepting his calls to the pastorate he always made it a condition that he should have a free hand in the evening services. The success which crowned his labors in each case, he regards as a demonstration that similar results are possible in any church, no matter how cold and formal its condition may be.

Dr. Webb mentioned having heard, as a Harvard student, a lecture in Boston by Dr. Gray, which so impressed him that thereafter he attended every one of the season's series; also that he had read every book from Dr. Gray's pen as issued.

"We live in a day of steadily increasing apostasy," he said, "but I venture to affirm that regardless of how many other Christian schools may depart from the faith, Moody Bible Institute will stand fast. When I hear that Moody Bible Institute has fallen away I shall give up myself, but not until then."

Doubtless Dr. Webb's address will appear in a later issue of the MONTHLY.

In the absence of Mr. Henry P. Crowell, president of the Institute, the diplomas were presented by Dr. Gray, who also read a letter from the class secretary, saying, "We the Senior Class of December, 1922, feel that we are unable to express our appreciation of God's goodness in permitting us to attend The Moody Bible Institute.

"We wish to thank you and the other members of the Faculty for your kind interest in our welfare and for the inspiration we have received from the example of your consecrated lives.

"We will, in all probability, soon be scattered to the four corners of the earth, but no matter where we may be placed, we shall look back with deep gratitude and appreciation to the blessed times together at the Institute.

"Please accept the accompanying pledges to the amount of $10,400, payable in annual instalments within twenty years, with our prayers for God's blessing on the Institute."

At the class exercises in the morning very commendable addresses were given by Mr. Raymond Fortna, representing the men, and Miss Elvira Christopherson, for the women.

Following the reception to the graduates given by the Faculty and Business Staff in the afternoon, dinner was served in the dining room, Dr. Gray presiding. Mr. Robert Stanley Hoy, on behalf of his fellow graduates, presented the class picture. The response was made by Dr. Gray, on behalf of the Board of Trustees and the Faculty. The good fellowship and hilarity of the occasion was greatly enjoyed by all:

The list of graduates follows:

CORRESPONDENCE DEPARTMENT ITEMS

Staff-Captain Bertram C. Rodda, 120-130 W. 14th St., New York City, Salvation Army Territorial Headquarters, writes:

"I have only returned to America recently after an absence of over three months during which time I visited every country in Europe in the interests of our work. I was pleased to meet a Moody Bible Institute student in London who has the largest weekly Bible class in the British Isles—possibly the largest in Europe. I refer to Commandant Tom Blower of the Clapton Congress Hall Corps, who ministers to two or three thousand Bible class members in his main auditorium every Monday night. His Bible classes are a feature in London religious life."

Commandant Blower completed the Synthetic and Scofield Courses by correspondence, his grades being high, and the courses completed in less than the usual time.

The employees in the Correspondence Department recently sent two contributions of 50,000 and 17,100 marks respectively to Mr. Paul Umlauf of Berlin, Germany, teacher of a class of boys in Bible study by correspondence. Mr. Umlauf wrote that many were without fuel or food and that thousands were likely to starve this winter. Already Mr. Umlauf has sent to the department an itemized account of the expenditure of the first 50,000 marks, showing the greatest care and frugality, and also sent the written receipts of the merchants from whom the various purchases were made. No report of the use of the second contribution has been received as yet.

Two Institute students, Briggs P. Dingman and Edward Godt, are in correspondence with two Christian German boys in Berlin, Gerhard Kroll and Erich Frommke respectively, to help them in their English and keep them in touch with the life and spirit of the Institute. These boys are in the class taught by Mr. Umlauf, and with others frequently hold evangelistic meetings on the streets and elsewhere.

The Gospel in Print

William Norton

THE WONDERFUL INFLUENCE OF A TRACT

Early in 1819, while waiting to see a patient, a young physician in New York took up and read a tract on missions which lay in the room where he sat. On reaching home he spoke to his wife of the question that had arisen in his mind. As a result they set out for Ceylon, and later India, as foreign missionaries. For thirty years the wife, and for thirty-six years the husband, labored among the heathen and then went to their reward. Apart from what they did directly as missionaries they left behind them seven sons and two daughters. Each of these sons married and with their wives and both sisters gave themselves to the same mission work. Already have several grandchildren of the first missionary become missionaries in India. And thus far thirty of that family—the Scudders—have given 529 years to India missions.

TRACTS AS SOUL-WINNERS

"Editor The Presbyterian:

"For centuries past, tracts have been the means of leading multitudes to Jesus. The following illustrates their value (by God's grace):

"John Bunyan's heart was touched by a little leaflet which helped him to decide for Christ, and his matchless book, The Pilgrim's Progress, has circled the globe.

"A lady handed a cabman a tract; he threw it into his cab, laughing; but he afterwards read the tract, and as a result passed from death unto life.

"Mr. D. L. Moody had half a million tracts distributed at the World's Fair in Chicago. Doubtless many are rejoicing in heaven today as a result.

"The mother of Dr. J. Hudson Taylor left a tract on the table, and his heart was touched, and his feet turned heavenward. That was the good fruit that came from that tract (by God's grace). And, oh! what a blessing Dr. Taylor was to China.

"Tract distributors, take heart and carry on your good work.

"Arthur Meachen."

There are books that heal and books that hurt. Books are keen-edged tools for good or ill. Scarcely anything has greater power to soil the mind and soul than evil book or periodical. Happy the person who puts a good book into circulation.—Samuel W. Purvis.

The plainest row of books that cloth or paper ever covered is more significant of refinement than the most elaborately carved sideboard. Give me a house furnished with books rather than furniture. Both if you can; but books at any rate! —Henry Ward Beecher.

ARE YOUR BOOKS "WORKING"?

The average Christian believer has many good books and pamphlets that are at rest—not being used. With a little effort and care, the important message of many of these might be released for prompt reading on the part of others—and then be returned. Some persons make such a ministry a special and personal responsibility and are rewarded in the knowledge of spiritual transformation in lives more than in verbal expressions of appreciation. Give your books more readers!

What we gather of earthly goods we leave behind; what we gain in moral and spiritual character we keep forever.

"December 19, 1922.

"MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY:

"We desire to return our thanks and appreciation to the editorial staff and the readers of the MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY for their splendid co-operation with us in our efforts to serve the suffering Christians of Russia.

"God has been gracious and enabled us to distribute about $20,000 for famine relief, for Scriptures and evangelistic purposes. Three shipments of warm clothing and shoes have also been sent into Ukrainia for distribution by our own representatives, and another shipment is being forwarded to Moscow by the Russian Red Cross, which will make the distribution according to our instruction and in co-operation with our own representatives.

"We have made arrangements with this same society to open a feeding station for 500 children. This will be located at Alexandrovsk, Ukrainia. There was little harvest and food is very difficult to obtain owing to the trouble in the Straits leading to the Black Sea. Relief work will be started at once through cabled instruction and other feeding stations will be opened if necessity requires and the funds come in.

"It seems very necessary at this time also to take upon our hearts the destitute Christians and children of Central and Eastern Europe. For instance, Armenian refugees have poured over the border into Bulgaria, in all their want, disease, hunger and despair. There are said to be from four to eight families living in the same room and children born in such surroundings or on trains without bedding, food or clothing.

"Contributions of money may be sent directly through the treasurers of the American Christian Relief Mission, Col. E. N. Sanctuary, 156 Fifth Ave., New York, or Mr. Edward A. Steele, 219 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, Pa. Donors should state whether the gifts are for famine, for distribution of Scriptures or for evangelization work, and where they are to be used, unless they desire to leave it for us to decide.

"Warm clothing or shoes in good condition may be sent to American Christian Relief Mission, c/o American Friends' Service Committee Store Rooms, 1521 Cherry St., Philadelphia, where it will be packed and sent to the field.

"Director.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Christ died for us,"—Romans 5:8.

So have many. All those who have paid their lives to the injured laws of their country have died for us. But shall we rank the death of Christ with such deaths as these, noble and self-sacrificing as they were?

Cut from the Loaf

Paul said to the Philippians, "If I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy and rejoice with you" (2:17). This was noble and self-sacrificing too, but was Paul crucified for them, or, for us?

Nay, "it is Christ that died" (Rom. 8:4). A death peculiar and pre-eminent was His, infinitely so. What was its design?

Some say it was to confirm the truth of His doctrine by the testimony of His blood, and to suffer, leaving us an example that we should follow His steps. This is true, but is this all, or even the principal part of the design?

What saith the Scripture? He died for our sins, and to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. He died as a ransom, a sacrifice, a substitute. He redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us. He once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God (Matt. 20:28; 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13; Heb. 9:26; 1 Pet. 3:18).

Exclude this explanation of His death and the language of the Bible becomes embarrassing and unintelligible. Exclude this, and what becomes of the legal sacrifices? They are shadows without a substance, prefiguring nothing. Exclude this, and how are Christ's sufferings to be accounted for at all? He had no sins of His own, therefore if He did not die for the sins of others, where is the God of judgment? Shall such a God do after this manner, slay the righteous with the wicked? Exclude this, and how can we meet the conscience burdened with guilt? How wipe away the tear of godly grief?

Nay, "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities" (Isa. 53:5); and the all-sufficiency and acceptableness of His offering of Himself on our behalf was evinced by His being discharged from the grave and received up into glory.

"Jesus my great High Priest
Offered His blood and died;
My guilty conscience seeks
No sacrifice beside.
His precious blood did once atone,
And now it pleads before the throne."

—Abridged from Jay's Morning Exercises.

The editors of the MONTHLY find fresh interest in its make-up every month because of the comfort and instruction they obtain from the necessary reading of the contributions sent to its pages, and also because of the comfort and instruction they may be able themselves to contribute to their growing constituency of readers.

Our Easter Issue

This month they would call attention to the unshaken testimony of a veteran witness to "The Gospel of the Crucified Christ," Dr. Goodchild, of New York, whose topic is timely for Good Friday, which falls in this month. They would also call attention to the beautiful article of Rev. Mr. Diehl on "The Body of Jesus a Test of False Teachers," beautiful, not so much in rhetorical adornment, as in that which is of greater value, simplicity of statement and adherence to truth. Young pastors will find in the latter a fine suggestion for an Easter sermon, and it might be well indeed, if some should preach it just as it is, with due acknowledgment, of course.

For cogent argument on a subject of widest interest we commend Rev. Mr. Briggs' "Why I Believe in Eternal Life," and for the experimental side of the same truth, no one should fail to read the meditation on Colossians 3 by Pastor Wood. But perhaps bereaved hearts will find the most ready solace in the simple and quiet idyl, "The End of the Journey," by one of the travelers. Mr. John E. Moyle, of Burlington, Ont., its author, has printed it in leaflet form, but we have his permission to use it in this number.

The page headed, "The Poet Contemplates Good Friday and Easter," will also meet the deeper need of not a few.

The poetical contributors to our pages remind us of the birds in winter. The songsters know just where to find the tree that has the piece of suet hanging on it or the window-sill which holds the friendly bread crumbs, and so our versifiers know that they are welcome here and hence fly hitherward from near and far. We are sorry only that lack of space forbids us using more than a third of the poems we receive, and that our exchequer forbids the monied compensation which in many instances we should love to pay. But if any fair proportion of our readers extract the sweetness from the songs and sonnets which we ourselves enjoy, then their gifted authors have a reward they greatly value.

Mr. E. O. Sellers, of the Baptist Bible Institute, New Orleans, tells of a gang of street boys who attracted the attention of the workers of the "Good Will Center" by hectoring a partially intoxicated man during an open air meeting in that city.

The Story of the Crucifixion

When the workers entered their mission the boys, nearly a score in number, brought the drunken man into the hall, thinking either to break up the meeting or prolong their fun, but in response to the gospel appeal, the man accepted Christ and made public profession of his faith.

In order to catch the attention of the boys, the young woman leader offered to tell the story of the crucifixion, when the Holy Spirit seized upon the hearts of the members of the "gang" who with rapt attention listened to an almost verbal recitation of the narrative.

The following week they returned, this time taking the foremost seats. But now their purpose was not fun nor to create a disturbance. They came with a request that "their story" might be told, and once more they listened with marked attention.

For weeks now this has been repeated with all the members of the "gang" present and always demanding "their story." Some of the boys have induced their elders to attend and hear the story retold, and with each succeeding week there seems to be a deepened interest. They check up now upon any detail of the story that may through oversight be overlooked.

The whole experience with this crowd of boys, most of whom have either no religious background or else a perverted one, is noteworthy, and another illustration of the attractive and unconscious disciplinary power of the Word of God.

We have recently received a letter, representative of several indeed, which asks a question of such importance and wide application just now, that we esteem it desirable to reply to it in our editorial columns rather than in the Department of Practical and Perplexing Questions.

Separating from the Church

The writer says that there is so much unevangelical preaching in our pulpits that it is incumbent upon those who believe the Bible to be the Word of God to know just when they should leave a church which is teaching error, or whether they should continue to attend.

Furthermore, if such should separate themselves, what course should be pursued with reference to public worship in case the community has no evangelical church? It is a case where the number of separatists will be so small as to make it unadvisable to start another church.

In our judgment, withdrawal from the membership of a church because of dissatisfaction in any case should be a last resort. Before it is done earnest and continued prayer should be made for the pastor that he may be brought to a knowledge of the truth, while the aggrieved member himself should search his own heart as to whether he is holding the truth in love. If the offense persists, however, the next step should be to bring the situation to the attention of the church officials, specifying the particulars in which the pastor is not preaching in accordance with the accepted doctrines of the church. If the officials are faithful they will bring the matter to the attention of the pastor, who, if he be a conscientious man, will either change his preaching or resign his pulpit; and if he be not conscientious, it ought to be so apparent to the whole membership as to make it uncomfortable for him to retain his position.

Of course other possibilities suggest themselves. For example, a class for true Bible study might be inaugurated from the membership of the church to meet at some hour not conflicting with the stated meetings of the church or Sunday-school, and if no competent teacher should be available for such a class, a Correspondence Course might be followed.

Where one is living in a city the situation is not so acute because of the larger number of churches in some of which spiritual nourishment is likely to be found, but in a small community the problem is a more difficult one. Therefore in the latter case our advice would be to not sever connection with the church unless conditions are extreme, and even then to try to worship and work temporarily at least in some other church until the time arrives when one can make his influence felt in his own church again. Moreover, always it should be kept in mind that one's own church may greatly need his help and that one has a duty to perform to it.

The Georgia Baptist Convention

We are surprised at some of the comments following the action of the Georgia Baptist Convention in demanding "that those laborers and capitalists who are members of our churches, regardless of what unions or super-authorities may say, settle their differences in harmony with the teachings of the New Testament."

One secular sheet thinks it is "startling," and another regards the theory as weak. By the "theory" is meant the penalty, that "laborers and capitalists" refusing to abide by the rule shall be excluded from the church.

Why not? we beg to inquire. The Literary Digest, from whose informing pages we gather the facts, astonishes us by remarking that this is "the first effort in modern Protestant history in this country to try excommunication as a means of enforcing the teachings of Christ."

Has our great contemporary been caught napping? Excommunication is not practiced in Protestant churches to the extent that it ought to be, but it has not ceased to be exercised as a means of enforcing the teachings of Christ. Moreover, if there ever was a time when it needed to be employed it is now, and if there ever was an occasion it is that presented by the ungodly conflict between capital and labor.

Why should the capitalist condemned by the teaching of the fifth chapter of James continue to be fellowshipped in the Church of Christ? And why should the laborer condemned by some of the things that took place during the coal and railway strike of last summer continue to be fellowshipped?

Here is a fine field in which the Federal Council of Churches might profitably work. Instead of giving so much thought to the operation of coal mines and railroads and civil government, suppose it should turn its attention to purifying our church rolls, what widespread results might follow! Excommunicate a few Protestant and Catholic profiteers and labor leaders, make a public example of them before the church and the world, and it will be bringing Christianity into society and politics in a wholesome way.

One secular contemporary says, "The strength of the church lies in putting religion into the hearts of men." This is true, but religion means the fear of God, and that fear is a weapon placed by the authority of God within the power of the church to exercise in His name. Therefore we say God bless the Georgia Baptist Convention!

A Village Prays

Our readers must have been interested in the newspaper reports of the prayer-meetings of the little hamlet by the name of New England, N. Dak. Last spring, as the story goes, after four years of heart-breaking failures, the farmers and their families assembled and joined reverently in prayer for the divine protection of the newly planted crops, and in the autumn they again gathered to return thanks for the answer to their appeal. Pastors of Catholic, Congregational, and Lutheran churches led the thanksgiving service which was held in the school-house.

A secular contemporary in commenting upon this unusual event improves the opportunity to pat humanity on the back. "What an assurance it gives," the editor goes on to say, "What an assurance it gives of the persistence, of the humility and the faith that have built up the race and guided its conquest of a new world!"

Rather should we say, "What an assurance it gives of the faithfulness of God who waits to be gracious unto us, and who says, 'Call upon me in the day of trouble; and I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me'" (Ps. 50:15).

The editor says, "We are still at heart the same people which began our history on this continent with the kneeling pilgrims at Plymouth, the thanksgiving Catholics at St. Mary's, and the reverent Protestants at Jamestown!"

Really, how flattered God must be to have a fine people like us on this continent! If He desires such little attentions as He received at our hands three hundred years ago or less, all that is necessary is for Him to withhold something from us that we very much need, and lo! it will be seen that we are the same people we always were, just as good as ever. We will pray to Him once more, and if He answers us, we will thank Him, if we do not forget.

A Body Blow to Evolution

An open letter in the Century Magazine, "addressed by the biologist to the statesman," contains the following (the writer is Mr. Albert Edward Wiggam);

"The first warning that biology gives to statesmanship is that the advanced races of mankind are going backward; that they are biologically plunging downward; that civilization as you administer it is self-destructive; that civilization destroys the man that builds it; that your vast efforts to improve man's lot, instead of improving man, are hastening the hour of his destruction; that the brain of man is not growing; that man, as a breed of organic beings, is not advancing.

"Lest you may think I merely wish to alarm you, let me urge you to glance at the chart of your own national biology. The army mental tests have shown that there are, roughly, forty-five million people in this country who haven't any sense.

"Another warning of biology is that your philanthropy and your noble-hearted, but soft-headed, schemes for ameliorating the conditions of life without at the same time improving the quality of life have failed, and will fail to improve the race, and are, in fact, hastening its deterioration."

"The Deadline of Doctrine"

A few months ago our MONTHLY contained an article, "The Deadline of Doctrine Around the Church," being a reply to Dr. Fosdick's "Shall the Fundamentalists Win?" which has met with such strong and encouraging approval from so wide a circle as to justify particular mention.

University and seminary professors, pastors of different denominations, well-known missionaries, and laymen distinguished in the business and political world, have sent in their thanks and commendations, and in many instances contributions of money to defray the distribution of the article in pamphlet form. That which they have written is one of the most hopeful signs we have seen of an awakened conscience in the church, for which long supplication has been made by many.

Following are some of the comments that were made, and which are quoted not in fleshly conceit but to strengthen faith and testimony:

"The summary of the argument and testimony on the virgin birth is convincing."

"It contains just the information the church needs at this time."

"It will be an anchor to many unstable souls."

"Sober, strong and convincing."

"Its tone is admirable and its contentions unanswerable."

"It meets the whole position of the incursion and does it fairly and convincingly."

"It is wonderfully clear and good."

"Rendered a great service."

"It is hard to conceive how anything could be added."

"To the mind at all spiritually enlightened it is entirely satisfactory."

"A symposium of truth in a nutshell."

"The best presentation of the truth that I have seen."

"It certainly answers him completely and according to the Scriptures."

The Gospel of the Crucified Christ

By Rev. Frank M. Goodchild, D.D., Pastor, Central Baptist Church, New York City

DURING a ministry now growing to be a long one, it has been my habit on the Sunday night before going on my vacation always to preach to my people on the saving power of the Cross. That is always my theme, but on that night I make it emphatic. I have always had a consciousness in going away that I may never come back, and I have always wished my last message to be the very heart of the gospel.

Of what the heart of the gospel is I have no more doubt than the apostle Paul had, and Paul was so sure that he said if anyone, even if an angel from heaven, preached any other gospel than the one he preached, he should be execrated.

Now we have a nation literally filled with a spiritual malady of preaching some other gospel than that of the Cross. You remember in the epistle to the Galatians Paul speaks of the offense of the Cross, and in the epistle to the Corinthians he says to some the preaching of the Cross is foolishness; and remember when you read those epistles they were written within twenty-five or thirty years of the time when Jesus Christ died! So early in the Christian history we find those to whom the Cross was an offense. The preaching of the Cross made the Jews angry; it made the Greeks scoff; and it made the Romans smile.

Compromising Preachers

There are always some preachers ready to accommodate their utterances to the demand made on them, but Paul was not of that sort. He said, "The message that God gave me to speak, that will I speak." He spoke the Word whether men liked it or not.

I have always felt that Paul's form of preaching should show the folly to some men of preaching politics, for a sermon on politics never converted a soul. Some men preach social economy, but the pulpit given up to social discussions is not the one that brings whiteness to the soul black with sin. Some preach on current events, and forget that an event that occurred 1900 years ago on "a green hill far away" determines and gives significance to all events of the present.

In spite of Paul's habit in preaching there was a falling away from the preaching of his theme on the part of some even in his day. There was another falling away from the preaching of the Cross in the days of what was called "Moderatism" in Scotland. We find a falling away again in New England Congregationalism, when a large body of Congregationalists went over to Unitarianism, and they were not content to go out with their faith and get a start for themselves, as they did in Scotland, but they tried to hold the meeting houses and other property given to those who believe in the preaching of the Cross.

We need not be surprised, then, if we pass through such a period again in our day, and the trial is on us surely. Hymns about the atonement are very few indeed. "There Is a Fountain Filled with Blood," and "Alas! and Did My Saviour Bleed," are too coarse to satisfy the present time, and so they have been eliminated. That is the reason why, when we furnished our new house of worship, we chose a hymnal published thirty years ago because it sets forth the faith in unmistakable terms. Our hymnal glorifies the Cross of Christ as Paul did.

A Creed on a Church Tablet

In Paul's day men suggested other ways of salvation, and they are suggesting other ways now. It is being done in pulpits called Christian, and in seminaries founded to defend the Christian faith.

I was walking on North Broad Street, Philadelphia, not long ago, and passed a church where was set up a tablet on which was given the church's creed. Two things were insisted upon. Christ was a teacher and an example, and that was all. Not a word further about Jesus Christ. How much of a gospel is that? Let us look at it.

The first statement is that Christ saves us by teaching us the truth. He knew more about God than anybody else. He has revealed God to us as one who loves us, and if we live according to His teaching we shall come to the end of life in safety.

I suppose that one who does that for us is in some sense a saviour. I suppose he is. Sitting on the piazza of my summer home in Rhode Island looking east, we see the Point Judith light, and the Block Island light, and the Montauk Point light, and we get from time to time the flash from the light at Watch Island. The men who erected those light houses, showing the places of danger along that coast, and the way to safety, I suppose are in a sense saviours. But for them many a mariner would have found a watery grave.

In that fashion some say Jesus Christ saves you and me. He has revealed the truth, teaching us how we should live and the way in which we should walk, and if we are obedient to His revelation we shall reach heaven in safety. If that is all Jesus Christ has done for us He is not the only Saviour. Men were not dying for lack of teachers when He came. Almost all that Jesus Christ said had been said in some fashion before by the Old Testament prophets. Even the thing that we have regarded as the specialty of Jesus Christ—the teaching that God is love, that had been given to men before He did it. The Old Testament is full of that. I wish that the men who form theories of the Old Testament now and then would sit down and read the Old Testament and find out what is really there.

Moses declared the truth of the need of love; the prophets did; all the line of holy men through whom God communicated His will to men; and some of these men, so far as I can see, did more in making known God's will to mankind than Jesus Christ Himself did. The words that actually fell from the lips of Jesus Christ would not make, I suppose, more than twenty pages of the Book that lies before me. If salvation is to be wrought for us by simply giving us the truth, why are not those men who did so much of that presented to us as redeemers of men and saviours of sinners?

Christ More Than a Teacher

Paul was a great teacher, but Christ was more than a teacher. When Paul was in the presence of other teachers he was always ready to answer questions, but when Paul was in the presence of Jesus Christ he fell on his knees and heard Him with as much humility as the woman who bathed the Master's feet with tears of penitence.

When the Corinthian church split into factions, and one said, "I am of Paul," and another "I am of Apollos," a third, "I am of Cephas," and a fourth, "I am of Christ," as though they were all teachers and nothing else, standing on the same level, Paul turned on them and cried out in indignation, "Was Paul crucified for you, or were you baptized in the name of Paul?"

O no dear friends, men may talk about a mere revelation of truth saving us, but the apostle Paul looked to something else. He gloried only in the Cross of Jesus Christ, and I have always had a feeling that the apostle Paul knew something about what the meaning of this Cross was.

More Than an Example

Now about this other thing on the tablet. It said Jesus Christ saves us not only by giving us the truth, but by showing us how to live the truth. Not only by pointing out the way in which we should walk, but by walking in it Himself and bidding us follow Him.

He is our example, to be sure. He said once, "I have given you an example that as I have done you should do." And I can see that one who has gone before us and shown us the way in which we should walk and helped us to walk in it is in a sense a saviour.

When we were in the White Mountains some time ago we wished to climb Mt. Lafayette, and the hotel keeper besought us to take a guide. He said sometime before a man had gone off alone to make the trip and they never saw him again. In such a case the guide who leads you in the right way is a saviour to you from suffering and perhaps death. But for him you might drop into some pitfall and your bones be left to bleach in the forest wilderness.

Men say in some such way as that Jesus Christ saves us. He sets us such a fine example of right living, of efficient service, and holy dying that by closely following in His footsteps we can get to heaven at last.

Well, what do you think of that? To what degree does that sort of a gospel meet your needs? Alas for me if my salvation depends on that, I am not merely in danger of falling, I am already fallen! I am not merely in danger of being lost, I am already lost, and need an arm long enough to reach down where I am and lift me out of my lost estate.

Follow His example! Walk in the divine footsteps! Why there never was in this world anybody else in the least like Christ. For more than thirty years He walked in the midst of sinful men, and made Himself the friend of publicans and sinners and yet took none of their stains on Him. When He left the world He was still pure and undefiled. Who else can do that?

O men and women, the one and only way of salvation is not in those ways that men talk about so much today, but through atoning blood. We are redeemed not with corruptible things, but by the precious blood of God's Son. God's Son died in our place and by His death we live. That is the gospel. There is no other gospel than that, and He who misleads men by proclaiming some other gospel deserves to be execrated.

Substitute for this gospel of the crucified Christ the gospel current today, the gospel of turning over a new leaf and saving self. There is no message in that that would convict a man of sin, or cause him to look to the Saviour above.

A Story of Christmas Evans

One hundred and twenty-five years ago Christmas Evans was preaching in Wales. He was one of the greatest preachers the world has ever had. He preached a sermon on the Gardarene demoniac which I will remember as long as I live. He was ungainly in figure, blind in one eye, had thick, coarse, black hair, but oh, my soul, how Christmas Evans could preach! The throngs that heard him fairly went wild.

Christmas Evans never preached a sermon but high as heaven above all other names he set the name of Jesus Christ, and over all the guesses of men always the Word of God as the one and only way of salvation. Men and women, I would rather be able to preach as Christmas Evans preached than to be elected president of the United States.

Well, Christmas Evans came at last to die. How would you expect a man like that to die?

Hear him as the chariot of fire with the convoy of angels stops to take him in. He thought he was back in the pulpit with the congregation in front of him. He said, "I am leaving you. Fifty-three years I have labored in the sanctuary and this is my comfort, that I have never labored without blood in the basin."

This man preached before Baptist Associations one hundred and sixty-three times, and never once without laying the emphasis on the power of the blood of Christ. When he was dying, with the very last breath, waving farewell to those standing by, he cried out to the angel charioteer, "Wheel about coachman. Drive on! Drive on!"

And so he went up into glory, and so I should like to go if I might choose my way of going. My last words about the blood, my last words a tribute to the only Saviour—Jesus Christ.

The Body of Jesus, a Test for False Teachers

By Rev. S. R. Diehl, Plymouth, Pa.

"AND when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me" (I Cor. 11:24).

One of the most stupendous verses in the whole Bible is John 1:14, "And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth," God incarnated on earth among men, God clothed upon with flesh and blood!

And we are not permitted to lose sight of that body. Our attention is directed to the fact that God prepared the body of Jesus: "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee" (Ps. 2:7). And again, "Wherefore, when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifices and offering thou wouldst not, but a body hast thou prepared me" (Heb. 10:5).

During the World War each soldier wore on his person a small medal on which was stamped his number. No matter what might happen to the lad, or to what unit he might be attached, his identity could not be lost. In a similar manner, God has marked the body of His Son, so "that he who runs may read." From the manger to the cross the itinerary is traced with definite and accurate steps. In the very shadow of the cross our Saviour instituted the Lord's Supper, with the deeply significant words, "This is my body which is broken for you, this do in remembrance of me." Whatever else of tender meaning the sacrament holds for us, it keeps before us, in a vivid way, the body of Jesus.

How Minute the Evidence!

How precise is the information concerning the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord! His body was nailed to the cross, and placed between two malefactors. Then to hasten death, the soldiers came to break their legs, "but when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water." He was actually dead.

Dr. R. A. Torrey in Is the Bible the Inerrant Word of God? makes this comment: "What I wish you to note here is John's statement that 'blood and water' came out from the pierced side of Jesus. This statement of John proves two things. First, it proves the genuineness and minute accuracy of the story as here recorded; secondly, it proves that Jesus was really dead. While John tells us that he 'saw' 'blood and water' flow out he does not tell us why. John did not explain what he saw simply because he did not know the explanation himself. There was not a man on earth at that time, nor for sixteen centuries at least, that knew the explanation of that fact. The physiological explanation . . . is this, the Lord Jesus died of 'extravasation of the blood,' or what is commonly known as a broken heart, just as predicted in Psalm 69:20. The one who dies in this way throws out his arms (of course Jesus' arms were already stretched out on and nailed to the cross), utters a loud cry (Jesus cried, 'My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?') and the blood flows from the ruptured heart into the pericardium, the sac surrounding the heart. There the blood stands for a short time, and then separates into its constituent parts, serum (or water) and clot (or red corpuscles or blood). When the soldier pierced the pericardium with his spear the blood and water gathered there flowed out. This is the scientific explanation of the recorded fact. Once more science simply confirms Scripture and utterly annihilates the swoon theory."

In His death we do not lose sight of the body. Joseph of Arimathea having received permission of Pilate, took the body of Jesus, and together with Nicodemus wound it in linen clothes and anointed it with spices. It was then placed in a new sepulcher, closed with a great stone, sealed with the Roman seal, and about it the Roman sentinels stood guard.

Three days later that seal was broken, the stone rolled away and the tomb was found empty. To the anxious inquirers at the grave, the angel answered, "He is not here, for he is risen." After this for forty more days the risen, crucified Lord mingled with His disciples; He taught them; He ate with them. "To whom he also showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3).

The Plumbline of Theological Thinking

Why does God thus keep before us in His Word the body of Jesus? It is the test of the genuineness of our blessed faith. What test must I apply to my religion? What shall be the plumbline for my theological thinking? The body of Jesus. "Hereby know ye the spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God; And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of Antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world" (1 John 4:2,3).

Apply this test to the many spurious "isms" and cross-theological systems which, like so many mushrooms, spring up over night, and their condemnation is self-evident. Christian Science cannot meet the test. The Christ it proclaims is an invisible, incorporeal, impersonal idea. "The virgin mother conceived this idea of God and gave to her ideal the name Jesus" (Christian Science and Health, edition 74, 1893, page 334). Jesus was therefore simply the ideal of the virgin. Who ever heard of the Lord's Supper being celebrated in a Christian Science church?

Neither can a Unitarian minister, if he is honest say, "This is my body, which is broken for you."

Russellism cannot meet the test. It denies the pre-existence of Christ. There was a time according to Russellism when He did not exist; He was not the eternal, uncaused and unbegun personality, but was therefore created by God. Russellism claims Jesus had no existence before He became incarnate in the babe of Bethlehem. This makes Christ a liar when He said, "Before Abraham was, I am" (John 8:58).

How It Refutes Eddyism

Again if we view the body of Jesus in the light of the resurrection we shall see too, that the above mentioned creeds go astray. The Word of God teaches that the very body of Jesus that was nailed to the cross, and that was laid in Joseph's tomb, and that was gone from the tomb when visited by the women and the disciples on the first Easter morn, was raised from the dead.

But Mrs. Eddy denies the resurrection of Jesus, for to her religion, Jesus never died, but was "hidden" in the tomb, and simply re-appeared to the disciples in "ideas." "Our Master re-appeared to His students: that is, to their apprehension: He rose from the grave in the third day of His ascending thought" (Christian Science and Health, edition 74, 1893, page 490). "Resurrection (is) spiritualization of thought, material belief, yielding to spiritual understanding" (Same edition, page 572). Hence the resurrection is not the rising of His dead body, but the spiritualization of His thought.

Russellism claims that at the resurrection of Jesus, God created a spiritual Son, and the old body of Jesus "went up in gas" (Bible Study, Vol. 2, page 129). These perversions of Scripture do not meet the test of the body of Jesus, and, "They went out from us because they were not of us" (1 John 2:19).

Our chief concern however in this particular connection is to note the great divergence of teaching concerning the resurrection of Jesus in the supposedly safe and orthodox circles.

The issue is vital. "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God: because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins" (1 Cor. 15:12-17).

Where Liberalism Errs

Modern Liberalism says, "Yes, we too, believe in the resurrection of Jesus, but not a resurrection of the body of Jesus. His resurrection was a spiritual resurrection, or the rising of His spirit."

We are told by modern Liberalism that the actual issue concerning the resurrection of Jesus is whether we believe in the reality of the spiritual world, and that the manner of the resurrection is not important.

But a resurrection of the spirit of Jesus but not of His body—is in reality no resurrection at all. It was the body of Jesus that died. His spirit did not die and therefore could never have been raised. Listen to the words of Peter (1 Pet. 3:18): "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but made alive in the spirit." Jesus was "put to death in the flesh," that is His body.

And how about the spirit of Jesus? We have the answer in Acts 2:29-32. The spirit of Jesus was never laid in Joseph's tomb, "He" i. e. Jesus Himself, His spirit, went into "hades," but "His flesh," that is His body, which was all that lay in the tomb, was preserved from "corruption."

The body of Jesus is, therefore, in His incarnation and resurrection the spiritual test of the trustworthiness of our faith. It is the divine stamp upon the "spirits" which are of God.

"Beloved believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world."

Try them by the body of Jesus.

THE BIBLE CONFERENCE AT SCRANTON, PA.

By E. B. Buckalew

More than twenty churches of Scranton, Pa., co-operated in the union Bible conference held in the auditorium of the Jackson Street Baptist Church, January 28-February 2, 1923.

The speakers were Rev. Robert Dick Wilson, D. D., of Princeton Theological Seminary; Rev. A. L. Lathem, D. D., pastor, Third Presbyterian Church, Chester, Pa.; Rev. Herbert W. Bieber, D.D., pastor, Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.; Miss Elinor Stafford Millar of the Extension Department staff, and Rev. L. W. Gosnell, Assistant Dean of the Institute.

The opening session occurred on Sunday afternoon, January 28, when Mr. Gosnell spoke on "Keynotes of a Bible Conference." Thereafter at 3:00 and 7:45 each day regular sessions were held. The place of meeting was on the "West Side," and the attendance came largely from that section of the city. Miss Millar conducted women's drawing-room meetings in homes in the central city.

The subjects of the addresses and studies and the impressions created are stated clearly in the resolutions offered at the closing session by William J. Hand, one of the leading attorneys of Scranton, an elder of the First Presbyterian Church, and unanimously adopted by a rising vote of the large congregation. The resolutions follow:

Resolved, First, That we record our gratitude and praise to God, our Father, for the privilege and opportunity brought by this conference to deepen our knowledge of His Word, and the practical help it has proved in making us more efficient in His service.

Second, That we express our thanks to the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago and in particular to G. H. Meinardi, the field organizer, for the excellent program arranged for the conference.

We note (1) the wise emphasis placed upon teaching the Bible to the young in the summer Bible school so ably presented by Dr. A. L. Lathem, of Chester, Pa.; (2) the inspiring Scripture and devotional messages of Miss Elinor Stafford Millar; (3) the powerful Bible preaching of "The Gospel of the Grace of God," by Dr. H. W. Bieber, of Bala-Cynwyd, Pa.; (4) the scholarly marshalling of the determining evidence bearing upon the integrity of the Old Testament Scriptures by Dr. Robert Dick Wilson, of Princeton Theological seminary; and (5) we observe with particular commendation how the actual study of the Scripture text was made the central feature in the exposition from day to day of the Epistle to the Philippians by Rev. L. W. Gosnell, the Assistant Dean of the Institute.

From our experience in this conference we record our conviction that such a wholesome, sane and well-balanced conference, is an invaluable contribution to the spiritual life of the church of Christ and to the greatest need of the times in which we live, viz., a genuine revival of Bible Christianity, and it is our hope that another such conference may be arranged for this city next year.

Why I Believe in a Life Hereafter

By Rev. George L. Briggs, Virginia, Minn.

THE final decision in the affirmative of this important question is made by my attitude toward Jesus Christ. I believe He knew what He was talking to his disciples about. He spoke of giving account of our words in the day of judgment. He said He was going to prepare a place for His followers. He spoke of His own resurrection and proved to His disciples that He had risen from death. They saw Him go up into heaven.

2. I see in nature a plan and design that show preparation and culmination of one form of life into another form under different conditions. The seed brings forth the grain-stalk. The worm changes into the butterfly. The seed and worm both die to give place to the new life. But the seed and the worm did not by chance evolve from the ground. Each after its own kind goes through its cycle of growth according to its laws incorporated in it when its original was created. That the cycle of growth may include many modifications but there is no proof that it can be modified beyond certain fixed limits.

3. The hunger and need of the lower animals are supplied. There is protection against enemies and the cold of winter. Food is supplied also for the hunger of our bodies and material and faculties are furnished us to form and build protection for them. Our minds think over the facts of nature and feed upon the principles and truths found concerning the working of things in the organic and inorganic worlds, as found in the explorations of science. It is reasonable to suppose that the hunger of the soul for companionship, communion with one who understands all, who is always just, and who at the same time is merciful, and loving and true always, which qualifications we have found in our experience that no human being can supply, and we are convinced must be supplied by God Himself,—it is illogical to think that this hunger has not its reality to supply it when these other hungers and needs have their supply. Life is indeed a mockery if this be so.

4. If the soul can have communion with God in this life (which of course can only be by following the conditions which He has arranged, just as we cannot eat or breathe anything we wish to and live), the presumption is that after physical death there is life with Him. The serious question then comes, In what sort of condition will the soul be if it is not in harmony with God? "It is appointed unto men once to die, after that the judgment." "He hath appointed a day in which he shall judge the world by him whom he hath ordained."

5. All the nations of the world show by their customs that the conviction and expression of the belief in a life hereafter is universal and deep-seated, just as is the belief that there is a God.

6. The resurrection of Jesus is proved beyond doubt by the Bible record. The internal evidence of its genuineness is overwhelming. It is proved by other history that Jesus lived and was crucified and buried and that His tomb was empty. Either friends or enemies took the body away. His friends doubted that he was alive and he had to prove it to them. His enemies did not take his body because it was the very thing they tried to prevent by sealing the tomb. Paul's life and his work established historical facts. He was a well-educated man, with an unyielding will except when convinced of the truth, and though a Jew he did not believe that the claims of Jesus were true, but that His disciples were dangerous fanatics. But God met him on the way to Damascus to kill and imprison those deluded followers of the Nazarene. He saw a light from heaven. He heard the voice of Jesus. For the first time he met a spiritual Master worthy to command his obedience. His life can be explained in no other way except by taking as a fact that the resurrection of Jesus was proved to him without a doubt. He himself recognized that all his work for the gospel amounts to nothing if that is not true.

"If Christ be not risen," then is our preaching vain and your faith is also vain. If you will read the fifteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians you will find his argument based upon the evidence that convinced him So far as he is concerned all is empty and void, and sin has no remedy if this is not a fact, that Jesus Christ is living. "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable."

7. Take the Bible as a whole, it has earned and kept its place as a reliable book of history so far as important events are concerned. In many of the unimportant details little, if any, have been found wrong, the intent of the writers is always found right. Small detail which has been disputed has been corroborated, some in doubt for years has finally been proven correct by the modern excavation of sites of ancient cities and towns. It does not claim to give all the events of ancient and modern history. Because it gives a certain part of history and shows the working of certain principles it is all the more reliable. Take the New Testament; its persons and events are well substantiated.

The resurrection of Jesus was never disproved by His enemies. Scientific and literary research have examined and torn apart every clue in order to prove the Bible not to be the Word of God. The trend of modern scholarship is to accept it as reliable. We should take it so until it is proven otherwise. Jesus Himself is His own witness in the heart of the believer. Just as He promised, He through the Spirit makes His presence known to us. We know and bear witness to the fact of a risen Saviour, or else we are deceived, and our hope is vain and we are yet in the power of sin. But we are delivered from the power of sin. God gives proof to the honest, searching soul that Jesus lived and died and was buried and rose again according to the Scriptures.

ABOUT MUSSOLINI AND FASCISM

Our illustrious friend, General Ricciotti Garibaldi, the only surviving son of the great Italian hero, sends us a few lines dealing with the problem of Fascism. His thoughts are somewhat similar to those we expressed in this paper and which were reproduced by the Literary Digest in its issue of December 23, 1922. The opinion of General Garibaldi is a veritable treat to our readers and we are more than pleased to give it publicity, thanking our illustrious friend for his valuable and magnificent contribution.

"I have read an article, in your interesting journal, The Newcomer, on the present Fascism in which you conclude by saying that 'Italian friends are anxious and perplexed about it,' " writes General Garibaldi.

"Pray allow me a few words of explanation which may be useful. My father used to say that the great virtue of the Italian people was its great amount of practical common sense, and it has always shown it by finding remedies of its own for the great and continued blunders of its directing classes.
